BOAT 'GATE CRASHER' FALLS INTO RIVER

Windsor, Ont., June 10—(CP)—There's a wiry and saddey lad in Windsor today who will think twice before attempting to "gate crash" again. The unidentified youth tried to board a moonlight excursion steamer last night without a ticket and fell into the Detroit river. He managed to swim to the dock, climb up and scamper away before police could stop him.

TORONTO STOCKS—CLOSE

Toronto, June 11—The buying urge registered a sharp slump in the final session of the week on the Toronto stock exchange today, prices failed to hold Friday's closing level.

Trade in the senior golds dwindled into small volume and were not revised to any important extent. Losses in medium price issues were limited to about 5 cents. Pamour, Pickle Crow, Preston, Moneta, Lapa, Cadillac, Oro Plata, Powell-Rouyn, Central Patricia, Perron and Lelitch weakened a few cents while Malartic, Lead Cockshutt and McWitte were up.

Smelters was about the only strong spot in the base metal group. Noranda and International Nickel posted losses of fractions up to 1/4 and Sherritt, Alberta and Wallc Amulet were unchanged to narrowly lower. Golds were steady in price and slow in action.

Walker's common dropped Friday's gain of 2-4 and Distillers Seagrams held unchanged. Steels, foods and combination issues were higher. Narrow gains predominated in the western oil list.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

The strength in New York on Thursday, when the Canadian markets were closed, was reflected locally yesterday and several appreciable advances noted. The announcement that the United Kingdom would place orders for armaments in Canada amounting in all to over $200,000,000 over the next few years was another very constructive development.

In connection with the latest development, it should be borne in mind that even if the orders placed with Canadian companies by the British Government are on a cost plus basis, it will mean a considerable impetus in employment and consequently an improvement in many lines of business. In addition, the Dominion Government intends to embark on another housing development which should stimulate industry to no small extent.

All in all, there is ground for optimism, particuary if one feels that Canada will this year harvest a good crop. The news from business has been poor for so long a time that it is felt that most of the unfavorable factors have been eliminated. An optimistic attitude towards the market for the medium-term appears reasonable and for the first time in some months an increased public interest in the market has become perceptible.

Noranda has been a good actor in recent markets and the company's substantial interest in Waite-Amulet has become valuable in recent weeks as a result of the latter stock's rise from around $1.50 to close to $5.00. Noranda Mines seems as attractive a medium as any for a common stock investment in the event of a turn for the better in business later on in the summer or in the fall.

The copper situation which has been unsatisfactory recently, can change very rapidly in the event of any general improvement. Noranda has not been unduly affected by the adverse market conditions for copper since the beginning of this year—as indicated by the company's record earnings for the first quarter of this year and the declaration of a $2 a share dividend, largest individual payment in the history of the company for the first half. There are also interesting possibilities in the huge gold production of the company.

Entertain Mothers With Tea, Play

The Sewing Room at Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School was the scene of an interesting informal gathering yesterday afternoon when girls of Grade One and a number of Technical Girls entertained their mothers at a tea and exhibition of work. The girls, who were hostesses, were the honour recently finished as one of their sewing projects and looked very smart in their trim aprons.

About the Sewing Room which was graced with a profusion of flowers were exhibits of smocking and cross-stitch, exquisitely worked in bonnets and children's fine frocks. The tea table was centred with Spring blossoms and was presided over by Mrs. P. C. MacLaurin and Mrs. I. Asma. Refreshments had been prepared by the girls under the direction of Miss Grout, while Miss McPherson was in charge of arrangements for the delightful affair.

Following tea, the guests were invited to the Auditorium where a "five-minute" play, written and directed by Kathleen Morrison was enacted by members of Grade Nine. The comedy was very interestingly worked out and showed definite promise. It concerned the trials of a modern young couple and an aunt who had a "chaperone" complex. Those taking part were Ruth McQuaig, Jean Mills, Margaret Mary Lu Lazier as the Mother; Jean Mills, Father; Kathleen Morrison, the Girl, and Annabel Kempston the Boy.

LITTLE REPUBLIC

The Last Election.

Phaha, June 11 (AP)—Czechoslovakia made ready today for the last of Sudeten Germandom's elections in an atmosphere of military preparedness and under cover diplomatic manoeuvres.

There was widespread conviction that the turning point in the little post-war republic's future relations with her German minority and neighboring Germany would come in the next few days.

A member of the Czechoslovak army's general staff, Major Rudolf Brod, is to represent Prague at the national defenese yesterday warned that any invader would face a chain of machine-gun nests along our border.

LONDON OFFICE

slightly. Pictures moved on the wall.

All newspapers were deluged with telephone calls. Thousands fruitlessly tried to get a week-end line. There were unaware of the tremors, which left no casualty by those remaining indoors.

The earth shocks were felt in Brussels, Capital of Belgium and across the English Channel.

The Weather Bureau seismograph registered a shock at 11:50 a.m. (6:50 a.m. E.D.T.). The centre of the disturbance was estimated at 200 miles from here.

Paris reported a severe shock at 11:57 a.m. which sent people running from their homes. No serious damage was reported immediately.

Furniture Moved.

Numerous instances of upsetted furniture moved by the shock. Several persons in a Cinema theatre balcony stopped exactly at noon.

The shocks were felt chiefly by occupants of flats and storeys above ground.

The staff of The Canadian Press felt the building. In Tudor street, away gently, the building seemed to sway for several minutes. There appeared to be two distinct shocks which first were noticed when pictures knocked, after which a slight movement of walls was visible in the office which is on the third floor.

J. J. Shaw, west end store seismologist, at his home in Wimbledon said it to record at 11.59 a.m. The shocks apparently were not in keeping with tenuity and duration in different parts of the city.

Police Blotter

Falling to gain entrance to the home, burglars entered the garage of Mrs. Jane Bell, 19 Dufferin street, and stole Mr. James' new Chevrolet sedan shortly before 2 a.m. today. Hearing disturbances within his premises Mr. James arose early this morning to find his automobile stolen. The vehicle was bearing Ontario motor license number 6-J-769. Local police were summoned by the complainant, where investigation it was revealed the robbers had first tried to gain entrance to the home, failing in so they broke into the rear garage and subsequently used Mr. James' automobile out to the street before starting the vehicle. The car has not been recovered recovered at noon.

Shoplifters were reported active in the city this week at Doyle's Drug Store, Front St., where certain goods had been stolen. Mr. Doyle informed the police the person is a well-known make, were taken from a window display card. Mr. Doyle was of the opinion that the pens were not all stolen at the same time but at different intervals police reported today.

Authorities are still placing poster stickers on the windshields of motor cars left parked in the downtown area over one hour and thereby violating the city ordinance regarding parking in those zones. Summonses will be issued to ten delinquents apprehended violating this bylaw yesterday.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

How to Control Swarming of Bees

Natural swarming is not compatible with honey production therefore every beekeeper is well advised to stop any attempt his bees may make to satisfy this instinct, states C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist. The best place every colony should be given ample room for brood production and honey storage at all times as this aids in keeping the swarming instinct subordinate to the storing instinct. In addition, each colony should be examined every seven days throughout the swarming season. The first sign that swarming is being prepared for is the presence of eggs or larvae in queen cells, and as soon as these are discovered the beekeeper must confound the beekeeper must immediately destroy the brood chamber and replace it by a brood chamber containing only worker combs. This will destroy cells in a super. Find the queen on the removed brood combs and replace her in the brood chamber. Then destroy all queen cells. Two days after the brood chamber has been put on top of the brood combs in with her. Place a queen excluder over the brood chamber and the honey supers above it and then on top put the upper brood. Meantime the brood and destroy all queen cells containing eggs or larvae. Repeat examination seven days later.

(2) When eggs or larvae are found in queen cells remove the queen cells. Ten days later again destroy all queen cells and introduce a young laying queen. The main objection to method (1) is that the old queen is left with the colony and may induce further preparations for swarming. Against the objection to method (2) is the fact that the colony temporarily overcome these two objections the Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has been testing a method which combines (1) and (2) and which has given fairly good results. The procedure is as follows:—Eggs or larvae are found in queen cells they are destroyed and a queen reared from the colony as in method (2) should be exercised in its use.

At the same time all the combs containing brood are raised to an upper super (see fig. 1). The lower brood chamber is filled with empty drawn comb and a young laying queen introduced to the colony in this chamber. Thus the colony is treated for swarming and requested at the one operation.

Cabbage Maggots Attack Many Plants

Cabbage maggots attack such plants as cabbages, cauliflowers turnips, and radishes. The adults, which are two-winged flies, lay their eggs on the stems of the plants about the time the European plum first comes into bloom. Cabbage maggots can be controlled by using the corrosive sublimate, according to the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture. The corrosive sublimate may be prepared at most seed houses, and when used is diluted in water at the rate of one ounce to 10 gallons. As the solution loses much of its strength when brought into contact with metals it should be mixed in and applied from glass, earthenware, or wooden vessels. The point is very important.

Two or three days after the cabbage and cauliflower plants have been set out in the field, or garden, the solution should be poured over the stems and around the base of the plants, using about half a cupful for each plant. Care should be taken to wet the stems thoroughly as well as the soil immediately surrounding the base. Two subsequent applications, should be made the second seven days after the first application and the third seven days later, making three treatments in all. It is important to make the first application early, as the success of the control depends very largely on this point.

In the case of radishes, the solution should be poured over the rows at least three days after they appear above ground and a second application made a week later. The radishes must not be treated when they are nearly ready to be used, as the practice may be very dangerous to the buyers. In view of the fact that corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison to human beings and to animals great care should be exercised in its use.

Hogs Can Be Sold as Carcasses At Grading Centres in Canada

It should by now be generally known that hogs may be graded and sold as carcasses at all grading centres in Canada. Carcass grading has become quite general in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, as well as many other districts. About 40% of all gradings in the province of Ontario was on the carcass basis. A somewhat smaller percentage is graded dressed weight, and the this system is rapidly becoming popular with the producers of top quality hogs.

Many farmers are surprised to learn of the wide variation in dressing percentage of "yield" between different lots of hogs. There is practically always a spread of 10% within any carlot shipment and often, more. This means a difference of 20 lbs. carcass weight between two 200-lb. hogs, or about $2.80 at present prices. When sold on live weight both hogs bring the same—the 80% hog being $1.30 to the 70% hogs.

If farmers experience any difficulty obtaining their premiums kind ly write to W. H. Gordon, Federal Department of Agriculture, Canada Packers Limited, Peterbargh, Ontario.

Some good lots of hogs were sold on Grading June 11th, are as follows:

Butter Production Increases 5.2 Million Pounds Over 1937

TORONTO, June 11—Canada's butter output last month jumped 4.3 million pounds over that of May, 1937, to bring the total increase for the first five months of the current year to 5.2 million pounds, according to figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics yesterday afternoon. The production held aboutsevren for the month, but was down 1.7 million pounds for the five-month period. Reflecting sharp increase in the make of butter, receipts as of June 1 bulged 3.8 million pounds over the year ago figure, while cheese stocks were up 2.4 million pounds and cold-storage eggs of 1.3 million pounds.

Butter produced during May amounted to 29,005,028 pounds, as against 24,756,472 pounds in the same month of last year. For the year to date production swelled to 71,673,248 pounds, which compares with 66,502,948 pounds in the same period of 1937. The May make of cheese totalled 11,471,559 pounds, a drop of only 38,127 pounds from the 11,509,686 pounds manufactured in May of 1937. Total production for the five-month period was 15,124,981 pounds this year and 16,850,272 pounds last year. Cheese held in cold storage as of June 1 reached 2,075,854 pounds as compared with 9,231,194 pounds a year ago, while stocks of cheese on hand were reported as 22,232,468 pounds against 19,903,278 pounds on June 1 of 1937. Cold storage eggs numbered 7,-942,463 dozen, as against 8,348,648 dozen a year ago.

Prices leaned toward lower levels for butter on the local produce markets yesterday, as other lines were generally steady.

Although some points refused to sell No. 1 solids below the 26½c mark on the butter market, most sales were recorded at ½c under this figure. Storing of country creameries was alleviating any excessive pressure on receipts, and offerings were not burdensome to dealers. Ontario solids were quoted at 26½c to an asking price of 26½c for No. 1 grades and 24½c to 25½c for No. 2 grades.

The egg market presented a steady undertone, as continued light arrivals of fresh receipts met good reception. Undergrades in the graded lots were in fair demand, and prices were unchanged to 1c lower. These grades eased slightly. Graded shipments cleared readily at 24c for grade A-large, 23c for medium, 21½c to 22c for Bs and 20½c to 21c for C grades.

Cheese traded quietly at unchanged prices.

PRICES RULE STEADY AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, June 11—Prices ruled steady on open produce markets yesterday. Butter was 24½c to 25c for No. 1 in cartons at jobbers, with lots to retailers 26c for No. 1 solids, 25½c for No. 1 prints, 25c for No. 2 solids and 24½c for No. 2 prints. Receipts: Two hundred.

Graded egg shipments in cartons or less were 26½c a dozen for A-large, A-medium 23½c, B 23½c and C 21½c to 22c. Receipts: 485 cases.

PUNITIVE ACTION UNLIKELY BY BRITISH GOV'T

Thief Snatches Purse With $2,000 Cash at Windsor

PURSE IS SEIZED AS SECRETARY IS GETTING INTO CAR

Mrs. L. C. Richards on Her Way to Bank to Deposit Money

MAN'S TRAIL LOST

$2,000 Said to be Just Estimate of Amount Taken

Windsor, Ont., June 13—(CP)—A thief snatched a black leather bag containing $2,000 in cash, and several checks from Mrs. L. C. Richards, secretary of Phillips Meat Markets, Ltd., Windsor, shortly before noon today as she was getting in her car preparatory to taking the money to a downtown bank. The "snatcher" then jumped on the running board of a blue colored sedan driven by another man and the car disappeared around a corner.

The East End of City

The robbery occurred in the southeastern section of the city, seven blocks from central Windsor. Police traced the car to the southeastern limits, then lost the trail. Descriptions obtained of the two robbers were sketchy. They were said to have been unarmed.

The cash stolen was in small bills and change, and officials of the meat market said the $2,000 figure was merely an estimate as there was no record of the actual amount.

Mrs. Richards had just left the Phillips' office, which is upstairs over one of the firm's markets, when the man rushed up and grabbed the bag.

ABITIBI POWER BOND TRUSTEES LOSE THEIR APPEAL

Ontario Court of Appeal Upholds Judgment of Justice McTague

RIPLEY PLAN

Judge Held Sufficient Number of Shareholders Had Not Approved

Toronto, June 13—(CP)— The Ontario Court of Appeal today upheld a judgment of Mr. Justice C. H. McTague denying the motion by the Trustees for the bondholders of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company Limited asking approval of the plan of reorganization of the company as proposed by A. P. Ripley, chairman of the bondholders' representative committee.

Mr. Justice McTague Jan. 17, rejected the plan to sell the company's assets to a company to be formed because he found the Judicature Amendment Act, 1925, Ontario under which the motion was brought was not applicable to Abitibi, the company being Dominion.

Sufficient Did Not Approve Plan

Mr. Justice Hodgins, without ruling the Ontario legislation nitra vires, said it could not be applied to insolvent companies as they were governed by federal legislation.

The judge held a sufficient number of shareholders of the huge power and pulpwood empire of the company had not approved the Ripley plan. He commented that if a higher court reversed his judgment on applicability of the Ontario legislation, the motion still would fail because of this.

QUADRUPLETS ARE BORN IN ENGLAND, 3 BOYS AND GIRL

Babies Born to 29 Year Old Wife of Liverpool Teamster

ALL ARE WELL

Doctors Saw Four Infants Before Birth by Means of X-ray

Liverpool, England, June 13—(AP)—Quadruplets were born today to Mrs. Esther Taylor, 29, wife of a teamster.

The babies—three boys and a girl—were healthy. The Taylors have four older children.

The quadruplets were born in Walton Hospital, where doctors some weeks ago saw the unborn infants by means of X-ray.

Mother is Inexhaustible

A large medical staff attended the birth. As soon as they were born they were placed in cotton wool and put in an incubator which will maintain an even temperature of 80 degrees.

Physicians planned to feed them first on white of egg and perhaps a few drops of boiled milk.

The birth will cost Liverpool taxpayers, £200 ($1,000) — minus Mrs. Taylor's husband can pay. Her drugs of treatment had been made at the hospital for the antitoxin fund.

Mrs. Taylor, frail and fair-haired is one of a family of 13. Her own previous children, three boys and a girl, range in age from four to 11.

At present Britain's best known baby of babies are the Miles quads, now more than 3 1-2 years old. They also are three boys and a girl—Ernest, Paul, Michael and Muriel.

BOMBINGS RESULT OF INTERVENTION HOUSE TO BE TOLD

Prime Minister Chamberlain Returns From Whitsun Weekend

NEW NOTE TO FRANCO

Chamberlain Likely to Compare Situation to That of Bilbao

By PAUL-LOUIS BRET

Copyright, 1938,

By The Havas News Agency

London, June 13—(CP-Havas) — As Prime Minister Chamberlain returned today from Hampshire, where he spent the Whitsuntide holidays, it was predicted the British government will take no punitive action to stop the bombing of British vessels in Spanish waters.

Parliamentary circles believe the Commons will be told tomorrow that the bombings of British ships in Spain are the result of foreign intervention in the Spanish fighting, and that therefore the best hope of ending them is through success of the efforts of the non-intervention committee to secure the withdrawal of foreign "volunteers."

New Message of Protest

At the week-end it was said this view would not prevent the sending of a new communication of General Franco, emphasizing the views of the British government.

In answer to questions from Clement Attlee, Labor leader, and other opposition members, Mr. Chamberlain is expected to say the present situation is analogous to that when British ships were bombarded off Bilbao.

At that time Anthony Eden, then Foreign Secretary, held that those passing a blockade did so at their own risk, and that the British government would protect British vessels only on the high seas.

HIGH COST OF CONSTRUCTION, TAXATION BLAMED

Property Owners Attack Luxury of Building at Less Than Cost

TOO GREAT SPENDING

Toronto, June 13—(CP)— The "artificially high cost of construction" and the "crushing burden of land taxation" are the main reasons for "the high cost of housing and the failure of the building trades to enjoy a revival," the Ontario Property Owners Association declared today.

Robert Forsyth, K.C., Toronto, president of the Association, gave the group's views in a letter to Finance Minister C. A. Dunning protesting housing financing proposals announced recently by the Finance Minister in the House of Commons. The Association seeks an interview with Mr. Dunning's aide to explain their stand more fully.

Mr. Dunning's proposal, advanced June 8, was for a new housing act with loans up to 90 per cent of the lending value of the new house with the Dominion government absorbing 25 per cent of that value and the lending institution 75 per cent.

Members Approve Letter

Executive members of the association met here Saturday and approved the letter. The Association claims to represent 1,000 property owners in Ontario.

"Canada is not able to enjoy the luxury of providing houses at less than cost any more than it can provide railways at less than cost," said Mr. Forsyth, in his letter. "There is no shortage of homes at cost. There is and always had been a shortage of things at less than cost."

Mr. Forsyth said that "provision for houses at less than cost can only make private enterprise more reluctant to undertake building."

He then went on to say that the association did not believe "any permanent solution can flow from an attempt to evade the plain consequences of spending more than we can ever hope to receive."

"Is not the solution of the problem to be found rather in a restoration of conditions which make possible the private ownership and development of land?" the letter asked.

British Warships Unlikely to Leave Upper Yangste on Jap Demand

Shanghai, June 29—(CP-Hsua) British quarters today said Great Britain would disregard Japanese demands that British naval vessels be withdrawn from the upper Yangtze River in view of the hostilities now underway in the zone.

These sources said no British gunboats had received orders to change their positions on the Yangtze between Wuhu and Hukow. On the contrary, gunboats now at Wuhu and Kuikiang have been ordered to remain at these points, it was added.

Rear Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet, is reported to have rejected the Japanese demands and announced United States gunboats would maintain their patrol in this region of the river.

Says Japan Systematically Trying To Poison Chinese People with Drugs

Geneva, June 13—(AP)— The League of Nations opium committee today heard a Chinese spokesman accuse Japan of turning Manchukuo into "a vast arsenal of narcotics" from which, he said, opium was distributed throughout China.

Dr. Victor Hoo, China's Minister to Switzerland, made the charge.

"Japan is systematically trying to poison the Chinese people with drugs," Dr. Hoo declared. Japanese military authorities know this situation and encourage it."

NAZI ATTITUDE IS DEMONSTRATED BY SUDETEN GERMANS

Czechoslovakia Faces Most Momentous Decision Since Foundation

DISCUSSIONS TUESDAY

By WADE WERNER
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Praha, Czechoslovakia, June 13—(AP)—With the overwhelmingly pro-Nazi attitude of its 2,500,000 Sudeten Germans clearly demonstrated by the polls, this 20-year-old republic today approached what may be the most momentous decision since its foundation.

Czechoslovaks were not surprised when Konrad Henlein's Nazi-supported Sudeten German party polled an estimated 90.2 per cent of the total vote in German districts yesterday in the third of three Sundays of municipal elections.

They were more concerned with the outcome of discussions on the troublesome minorities question which will start tomorrow between the government and the Sudeten German party.

Yesterday's elections passed quietly, the only serious disorder being at Mannheim-Schonegrun where five policemen and nine Henleinists were injured when police dispersed a victory parade.

In Czech regions pro-government parties gained substantial majorities, which were interpreted as a vote of confidence in Premier Milan Hodza's government.

ADELARD GODBOUT LIBERAL LEADER

Re-elected to That Position at Convention of Quebec Liberals

Quebec, June 13—(CP)—His standard of leadership renewed, Adelard Godbout, former Premier and head of Quebec Liberals for two years, started today direction of a province that is the head of the Liberal party of the province.

The 45-year-old agriculturist who called himself a "humble but faithful Liberal soldier" was unanimously confirmed in the Liberal leadership by the party's provincial convention which ended today on Saturday.

Godbout first took over the reins of leadership in 1936 after the resignation of Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Agriculture Minister in the Taschereau government, the one-time farm-school teacher led the Liberal government of the province and fell with it in the 1936 general election two months after he became premier.

Program Outlined

Before the convention selected Godbout to lead the party again, he outlined a program whose direction he was given, it included approval of a vote for Quebec women in provincial elections, a Liberal caucus of the legislative council, the province's upper house.

Edouard Lacroix, Liberal member of parliament for Beauce County, who had announced some time ago a week ago he was to be a candidate for the provincial party's leadership, did not file a nomination at the convention.

He declared in a statement to newspapermen "I could not commit myself to support the successful candidate, as the convention would have me do."

FIRE DAMAGE AT CHICOUTIMI

Nearly All Scholars Away on Holidays as School Burns

Chicoutimi, Que., June 13—(CP)— Fire of unknown origin swept through the Commercial Academy of Chicoutimi early today, causing heavy damage to the brick and wooden structure that housed this northern district's main school for boys.

Only two grades of pupils, trying their term-end examinations, were in the building when the blaze was discovered in the university. Members of the other classes finished their examinations last week and were on holiday.

Brother Leonien of the Marists Brothers who operated the academy, raced into the chapel, and saved the Holy Sacrament. Priests and teachers helped also to save many decorations from the chapel and schoolrooms.

CLASHES HEARD AT HYDRO PROBE

Macaulay Charges Provincial Gov't. 'Tapped Hydro Till of $40,000,000

Toronto, June 13—(CP)—Clashes between Liberal and Conservative members of a committee of the Ontario legislature marked resumption today of a legislative investigation of affairs of the Ontario Hydro-Power Commission.

During examination of W. R. Pettit of th eCesar-Hudson Company, Hydro auditor, Leopold Macaulay, Conservative leader in the legislature, charged the provincial government had "tapped the Hydro till" in 1935 and 1936 of $40,000,000.

Declares THE Not Taxed

The charge brought J. H. Clark, Liberal member for Windsor-Walkerville in his turn, to his absolute protest. "The Hydro till was not tapped," he declared. "You're making statements like that for the newspapers."

Mr. Macaulay had asked what bonds or other Hydro liabilities the commission was obligated to pay the government from 1934 to 1936. Mr. Pettit replied there were no repayments in 1934 or 1935 and but that $8,000,000 was due in 1935.

Says Money Was Spent

"Then it boil, down to this," the Conservative House Leader said. "The government had $8,000,000 coming for that period but they dipped into Hydro for $40,000,000."

Mr. Pettit denied $40,000,000 had been paid to the government by the commission in the 1935-36 period, but could not say until he checked commission ledgers how much had been paid. He admitted under questioning by Mr. Macaulay that payments of money and three bags full of merchandise. Entrance was gained by smashing a roof window and clambering down the elevator shaft.

Surprised as he was sitting in a chair in the garage adjoining the store, Charles Ladds, Windsor, the night watchman, told police he was bound with heavy cord and that a heavy sack was pulled over his head. A rope was tied about the dog's head and he was tied to Ladds' foot. Then, with the Canadian Shepherd, made no attempt to molest the intruders, Ladds said.

While two of the men ransacked the store, the third stood on guard over Ladds.

"He had me sit on an orange crate and said if I didn't keep still he would knock me off," Ladds said. Every now and then he'd push something hard in my ribs as though he carried a gun."

While waiting for his companions, the thief watching him said they had been "kicked off" jobs and had to do something to keep from starving," Ladds told police.

Why the Weather?

Lightning! How should one conduct one's self in a thunderstorm to reduce the chances of being struck? If in a building, stay there, preferably in the middle of a large room; or even better, descend to 1st cellar. Keep away from walls, fireplaces and stoves. If caught in open seek shelter in the largest building available, preferably one of metal or steel framed. Keep away from isolated trees, wire fences, hilltops, open fields and small sheds to exposed positions. It is best to seek a low area or depression in the ground, a deep valley or the lee or underside of a cliff, lying prone. For the comfort of those who do not like lightning, it may be said that the number of fatalities from lightning is insignificant compared with those from other accidental causes.

New Douglas Bomber Able to Fly To Europe, Back Without Refueling

Santa Monica, Calif., June 13—(AP)—A land plane, capable of flying to Europe and back without refueling, is a guarded military secret today at the Douglas Aircraft plant.

In a small, isolated hangar, its windows blacked out with white paint, piecemeal construction has begun on the first of the formidable bomber—the army's newest bid for air supremacy.

Aviation circles are confident the new Douglas, when completed, will span almost 250 feet from wingtip to wingtip and weigh about 160,000 pounds.

That would be nearly twice the wingspread and thrice the weight of any land plane ever built before.

If adapted to peacetime use, the plane would be in the 100-passenger class of airliner.

Five-Day Week For World-Telegram

New York, June 13—(AP)—A new contract between the World-Telegram and the Newspaper Guild of New York covering hours, salaries and commercial departments became effective today.

The contract calls for wage increases for about 200 of the approximately 350 persons covered by the agreement.

Editorial works have been under contract since April, 1937, but the new agreement is the first to include office employees.

The Guild has also signed a contract with Daily Mirror covering editorial and commercial departmental workers.

The World-Telegram, in a statement, said the contract does not include a guild shop for either department. It provides a five-day week, specifies hours and working conditions and fixes minimum wages.

NO LONG DETOURS ON FAULKNER HIGHWAY

Motorists travelling in the northern part of the county over the week end report the Faulkner Highway north of Milbridge slated last week to be closed for repairs is now open for traffic.

Although men and trucks are busily employed in the work of construction this in no way impedes traffic. Only two small detours are encountered between Madoc and Bancroft with the remainder of the highway reported to be in excellent condition for vehicular traffic.

TEN PESO BANK NOTES AGAIN NUMEROUS

Stopping at a gasoline station on No. 2 highway just west of Trenton yesterday afternoon a reporter for this paper was told by the proprietor that all along the highway service station men have been particularly alert against accepting any of the numerous Mexican bank notes which have been evident recently. The ten peso notes bear a striking resemblance to the Canadian $10.00 bill and have been successfully passed as such, it was reported.

Latest addition to the Belleville City Council, Alderman S. L. Howell, who takes the place of Alderman Ray Carr, who resigned his seat recently prior to removal from the city, was officially sworn in at the city hall this morning by City Clerk Wilfrid Holmes.

Interviewed this morning, the new alderman stated that he was prepared to do his best as a member of the council. Perhaps I may say that I will take the stand of a certain citizen who when elected stated that he intended to take the middle road between longevity and political frailty," the new alderman smiled.

PURSE IS SEIZED

Flagon Nearly Pulled Off

"He nearly pulled one of my fingers off," Mrs. Richards said. She said she ran after the car and saw it travelling at a terrific rate of speed, up a narrow alley.

Arthur Girard, 20, Windsor, a bystander told police the "snatcher" was between 30 and 35 and wore dark clothes. He was of medium build in stature and wore a dark suit, he added. The disclaimed purse was found on a vacant lot on the north side of the city by the public works department. Ridley Street was the first treated, followed with Alice, Shelley, Dundas, Octavia and Catherine. About twenty men on gang-labor work will be employed for some weeks on the work.

Warning that the sweeping necessary might cause sufficient dust to ruin newly painted work on homes on streets where such cleaning is being carried on was given by the city engineer this morning. A request was made to defer this painting until after oiling was completed.

Try Delicious Beef "Birds" As a Nourishing Main Dish

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Beef Birds Boiled Potatoes

Beet Greens

Radish, Lettuce, Onion Salad

Whipped Cream Cake Iced Tea

Beef birds are old standbys that are good, nevertheless, and "fill the bill" when we're not sure just what to serve. Do try the whipped cream cake. It's swell!

Today's Recipe

BEEF BIRDS.—Have round steak cut into individual servings as nearly the same size as possible, one-fourth to one-half-inch thick. Cut celery stalks into lengths the size of the meat, or slice onions over it. Place in center of meat, slice and roll. Fasten with toothpicks. Dredge rolls with flour and brown in hot lard. Add one-half cup water, season with salt and pepper, cover tightly and let cook slowly until done, about one hour.

WHIPPED CREAM CAKE.—One cup sweet cream, two eggs, one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla, one and one-half cups flour, two level teaspoons baking powder. Whip cream until firm, drop in eggs one at a time, and whip until light. Add sugar, salt and flavoring and beat well again; add salt and vanilla; whip in flour and baking powder, using wire beater. No time for beating is necessary or the cake will fall.

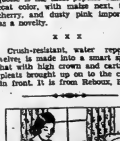
Suit Blouse Important Item

Florence George

By Central Press

A SUMMER suit is important to every woman—for all the early and occasional parties of her life. Summer suits of lightweight wool and cotton materials or linen, are so smart looking as any spring, autumn or winter suit could be.

And the reason you choose to wear with the suit is just as important as the suit. It either adds to or detracts from the attractiveness of the whole costume.



With a well-tailored suit with double-breasted jacket in white tropik, Florence George, film actress, wears washable blue crepe tailored collar into a short-sleeved model with a bow at the crepe and three pearl studs supporting the details. One inverted pleat at the centre back stresses comfort.

Style Whimsies

One coat shop reports that turquoise is the most popular summer coat color, with snake next, then cherry, and dusty pink important as a novelty.

Crush-resistant, water repellent velvet, is made into a smart sport hat with high crown and cartridge pleats brought up on to the crown in front. It is from Reboux, Paris.

A housewife says she keeps plenty of plain brown wrapping paper on hand to go with the generous synthetic silk, necklaces and other materials that sometimes call for the like. Iron the articles through the paper.

Canadian Fiddlers

Mayor Bone Talks on Education, Taxation And Property Owners' Problems

Guest speaker at the regular weekly luncheon of the Kingston Kiwanis Club at noon today, Mayor Jamieson Bone of this city devoted his talk to matters concerning the city with the City of Belleville, which municipality, he declared, served the ideal purpose of being typical of the majority of cities and towns of the Dominion as affected by present methods of administration.

Mayor Bone in his remarks gave an explanation of the difficulties faced by younger residents on their start in world.

"History reports that Nero "fiddled" while Rome was burning, and historians of the future will certainly relate how the governments of this continent did likewise, and how disastrous was the result, which is even now upon us.

"My talk today deals largely with Belleville conditions, but these same conditions apply more or less to all our Canadian Municipalities so, the situation is really a National disgrace.

"All that come to him who waits" is a well known untruth. We have been waiting for prosperity here in Canada for nigh twenty years, with the possible exception of the years 1926-29. In my opinion the country has been going down hill for a great many years, and the pace seems to have accelerated considerably during the past few months. There is now no end to pussyfooting and I propose to tell the people the truth as I see it, and let them judge for themselves. If the country is going to be saved from chaos remedies will have to be applied at once, and not as Premier Hepburn suggests "After the Rowell Commission makes its report" which will probably be sometime next year.

Real Estate Taxation

"We have already shown, and many Rowell Commission briefs agree, that Real Estate taxation has reached and even surpassed, the point of diminishing returns. The building and allied trades are absolutely dead—choked off completely by taxation. This situation could be changed overnight by reducing Municipal taxation, and hence rents who are fast becoming revolutionaries, which could be put to work at once. How can it be done? Well a glance at your local, or our Solid's city budget, with which I am more familiar, shows that the property owners and they alone (about 19 percent of our population) must raise $190,000 this year—and this year $190,000. for education. This is an iniquitous charge and must be reduced. We have already tried to show that free education should cease at 18, and the examinations should be such that a child of average intelligence might pass. That Art, French Authors and similar subjects are a waste of time and money for the "average" child who is going into the transport, banking or almost any other line of business. That boys at 14, 15 or 16 should start work, and the day and evenings THOSE SUBJECTS NECESSARY TO THEIR CHOSEN LINE OF WORK and those only. If a bricklayer, he must study brick construction; not art, Agriculture and Latin. If a bank clerk, he should study the be applicable to Bills and Notes, also Arithmetic, Algebra, History of Banking, The Bank Act and so on, but he will not need Chemistry, Physics, Geometry, so why waste his time and our money? Numerous employers tell me that they would rather learn quickly, and frequently by 20 are earning enough to marry, and have learned a trade or business. Boys commencing work around 20 they say, are too old, too indolent and too high priced. They best years have been wasted and they are unable to find any employer to train their Latin, Greek, Art, etc. are of any use. In this every-day world four years of butter or cheese making or carpentering, seems to be worth more than four years of Latin and Greek. Therefore thirty or forty thousand dollars could be chopped off the taxes here, to the everlasting benefit of everybody—the mills. Look over the records and you will find, indeed you know yourself, dozens of men who left school at 14 and have made a great mark in life. The Rhodes Scholars. Canada has produced 22 of them and not a single one of them has ever acquired distinction—not one case to even prove the exception to the rule. Too bad but don't admit it, hardly anybody does! And Ramsay knew whereof he spoke!

How to Cure For Parks

"Then we charge the property owners $2,000. for Parks. We have really no parks out a few acre plots. Upkeep should be $1,000., or even less. Siemens could look after them and listen for the bell at the same time. This money goes down the perennial Belleville Round Sink Hole—another ½ mill.

"P.O.S., grants, $1,500; Hospital (for indigents $10,000; Belleville Arena $500; Tourist Camp $500; Municipal Band $1,200; Children's Aid $6,000; Bank Interest $7,800; ..... Board of Health $4,500; Contingent (a few hidden charges for T.B. patients, families with large girls, etc.) $4,500; Agricultural Society $500; O.W.V.A. $1,000; Memorial Park upkeep $1,000; Library $6,000; Market $3,300.

"Now these are all very nice things to come money to, but they come to another 8 or 7 mills. Is there any good reason why, if 15,000 Belleville people want these things, the only 1,500 people should pay for them?

"Another fallacy is that we must pay for the extravagances of past City Councils. Our total budget is $600,000, and education takes one third of it namely $200,000. It is a well known government crime like most of our other charges, and not a past extravagance. Then people think that we are getting $1200.00 a year at 45, when High School teachers get $1700.00 to start at 35. I mention them both at once because they perform similar services. They both put the fire out in your home, and in addition the Collegiate loan $17,000. of this year may be left in your son at 18.

Utilities Profits

"In Belleville our Public Utilities make a handsome profit of around twenty to thirty thousand dollars, and this after reducing electricity charges by over 60 percent since 1928. The Hydro Commission unceremoniously took $17,000. of this from us last year. The Utilities profit is made from the whole 15,000 people. Surely here is an opportunity for the property owner to contribute to something, Children's Aid, Library, Indigents or something of the kind. But no, he prefers to spend only the other fellow's money, and the Property Owner is so low enough to put up with it. Here is another 2 mills.

"In order to provide for our Sinking Fund Bonds, the law says we must put aside every year for 20 years, enough money, which being invested at 3 percent will in 20 years redeem said bond issue. Very good indeed. But in Canada we have always obtained 4 or 5 percent on these investments and as a result we have enough in 18 years to redeem these bonds. But our City Council are unwilling to take a firm stand in this matter and refuse to assess for the bonds already provided for. They insist on carrying out the cock-eyed law that says keep on charging the taxpayer even after he has liquidated the debt. As Mayor I can tell you I'd go to jail first. Another 2 or 3 mills could be saved here.

How to Start Building Boom

"A building boom of modest proportions could be started overnight if some of these charges were either taken off property or cut off altogether. Immediately a 10 percent saving of $15,000. could be made in "Relief" charges and we would be assuring the country for Architects, carpenters and plasterers. Few would be found I am certain, for most of them have died of old age or starvation waiting for prosperity to arrive in the usual way and without urging. Another 3 mills.

"There is your tax rate cut in half, but I know, you feel you could not stand that much prosperity. It would be too great a shock. and the Bible says "We must await" and we surely will. I can do my own doing.

"With a cut of 10 to 30 mills in Belleville as suggested herein, we could easily afford to construct some very necessary public works and civic improvements. We should build flood control dams, a new wing on the hospital, a new isolation hospital, new fire hall combining two ancient ones with the antiquated police station, a new sewer on the market, build a sewage disposal plant—a boon of no mean proportions. Besides which our property owners could immediately buy some bacon and eggs, and a new pair of pants, a new radio, car or washing machine. I am sure you can almost feel the old prosperity wheels turning already, and all this without any "loan" other than "horse-sense-loan", but it cannot be done without effort on the part of everybody.

Mayors' Association

"Your Mayor should join and take an active part in both Mayors' Associations, the Ontario Mayors' Association and the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities. The Ontario Mayors do not represent those liberal, Tories and other politicians who have been and still are "The Curse of Canada," but two or three million citizens. All they have to do is to take a firm united stand on any subject that will be proper and just for their legitimate demands. Besides that you should form a Property Owners' Association and stand up for your downtrodden selves. Unite with the Ontario Property Owners' Association and demand your rights, to earn as much as the bond buyer on his investments. Don't stand by and let him pay $100. taxes while you pay $5000. on $100,000. investment. It is colossally unfair and unjust. We are out to help you, and we ask you to help us help Canada back to sanity and prosperity, which is easily within our reach.

"I firmly believe that National Government alone, Federally and Provincially, is necessary to accomplish these reforms, and failing that the Colonial office or the Nazis will have to take things in hand. Becoming Nazis would of course be terrible. Almost as bad as remaining the way we are."

PROSPECTOR FINDS PLANE, 8 BODIES

Airliner Crashed on Mountain Peak on March 1st Last

Yosemite, Calif., June 13—(AP)—A young gold prospector who followed a "hunch" led the way today to wreckage of a storm-crashed Transcontinental Western Airlines ship which vanished with nine persons aboard the night of March 1.

The shattered plane and the bodies of its occupants lay near the top of 9,000-foot Buena Vista peak, 18 air miles south and east of Yosemite Valley ranger headquarters. The region is 90 miles east of Fresno.

H. O. Collier, 34, a mining prospector from Fresno, told Chief Ranger Forest Townsley he found the ship Sunday morning. Eight bodies were scattered nearby, said Collier.

"I had a hunch the ship was up there somewhere," he said.

"Last Tuesday I left Fresno to do some prospecting up around Bass Lake, but there was a lot of snow and I couldn't get much done.

"Then I started out to hunt for the plane.

"I found it about 200 feet from the top of Buena Vista peak on the south side. Apparently the plane did not burn, but it was badly broken up and bodies were scattered about the slope."

What price SPACE MR. ADVERTISER?

Space in a daily newspaper possesses a power that is lacking in the lineage of other advertising media.

It is not only more economical . . . which is a matter of easy computation . . . it is not only more flexible, it is not only more timely and rapid, but also it is the advertiser's unfailing point of contact with the mass market and every spot market of the Dominion of Canada.

The Daily Newspaper possesses a power by means of which an advertiser, who knows how to use it, can reach and move to action all or any part of the Canadian consuming public.

In this North American continent there was spent during 1934 in the columns of the daily newspapers more than $500,000,000. The strongest of all supplementary media was used to the extent of $114,000,000. Why?

Because for prompt action on sales plans . . . for quick consumer influence at minimum cost . . . for willing co-operation from the retail trade, the daily newspaper is today, as it always has been, the outstanding and most economical basic advertising medium.

ADVENTURERS IN FRENCH CANADA

From their home in France have come to Canada the sister and daughter of Louis Hemon, the author who immortalized the "habitant" of French Canada. Mlle. Marie Hemon, the sister, and Mlle. Lydia, Hemon's daughter are on an adventure to the land which Hemon described in "Maria Chapdelaine," for Hemon did not write many letters from Canada and they knew little of his life here and what he thought about the country. Mlle. Marie said that the letters were in most part couched in ironic vein and that he used to try "to scare us a little, but we knew he was having fun when he would write that the country he lived in was only partly civilized."

They have the true spirit of adventure and when nearing Newfoundland, they thought of Columbus on his discovery of America, and experienced deep feeling.

On Sunday a monument was unveiled at Chapleau, Ontario, to Louis Hemon and they were present. They plan to visit the Lake St. John district, officiate at the opening of a monument at Peribonka in the solid white washed frame house that was the home of "Maria Chapdelaine."

This must be a real adventure to these two women who have crossed the ocean to the new world to find the type of character and the scene of the story Louis Hemon immortalized. They are thrilled with the adventure and the scenes associated with the author.

KIDNAPPING

Brutality of kidnapping is something the average citizen cannot understand. Perhaps only those who have studied the criminal can approach an appreciation of the depths of the sordid mind which would engineer and carry out a kidnapping. In the cruelty of the jungle and in wild life, when lower life is preyed upon by others, there is nothing of the devilishness and baseness which go into the makeup of the kidnapper. Awful examples have been known in the United States recently, which have stirred the civilized world.

In some quarters there is a feeling that there should be a survey of those who are evidently throwbacks to a state far worse than original savagery so as to take care of those who might develop into kidnappers.

ANGLO-SAXON TRUE SPORT

Hamilton Spectator contrasts the even nature of the Anglo-Saxon in sport with the excitement and injuries and fights which mark so many of the athletic meets where some other races are concerned. The Spectator says:

"There is a widespread idea that organized sport is a sort of monopoly of the English-speaking people.

"We confess that such a prevailing belief is not without cause, and it is unfortunate it might be easier if we heard more about the playing fields of Europe than the battlefields, and, sadly enough, when we do hear about sport abroad it is usually linked with some fight over rules, or protests as a result.

"Now and again when we read about athletic antics o fthe 'foreigner' it is over some such incident. The fact that everyone Americans like their game was revealed lately to us by pictures of highly damaged players being taken off the field. Italy and France, who have trouble enough diplomatically, have the same violent troubles with their soccer games, and lent troubles with their soccer games, and how long a post-war period had to lapse before it was safe for Berlin and Paris to cross in athletics—which they frequently do—we do not know.

We had no idea Soviet Russia went in for these things until a journalist who was fed up with routine politics described the huge throngs that went to horse races and football games over there. Then came another shock when it was revealed that the largest crowds that attend any sport exhibition in the world—larger than the crowds that watch British soccer, which again are much bigger than the best United States rugby can produce—are at baseball games in Japan.

"Organized sport spreads for good or for bad over the world, and it might be quite a cue to national characteristics. It may lead also to more 'human" understanding.

For in one field the Anglo-Saxon still holds a virtual monopoly. Whether he has a more pitiful temper or a greater patience is not for us to say. But the statisticians have shown that 60 per cent. of the golf of the world is played in the United States, and 30 per cent in the British Empire. The remaining 10 per cent is played very largely by expatriates from English-speaking countries. That can be taken for what it is worth."

LITANY OF THE LITTLE BRETHREN

From stall and byre, from shed and pen;
From copse, and trap-infested fen
Our prayers arise, in wordless cries.

From burning heat and bitter cold;
From hunger, thirst and pain untold,
Deliver us!

From binding thong and callous knife;
From cruel rack and pain-filled life,
Deliver us!

From smell of blood and needless blow;
From shambled death, so cruel, so slow,
Deliver us!

From gripped steel jaws, and tortured night,
With trapper's club at morning light,
Deliver us!

From lash and blow, from curse and jerk;
From bedless night and endless work,
Deliver us!

For justice, kindness, love and peace;
For gentle hands, and quick release
We pray (for succor comes so slow!)
To Man, the only God we know.

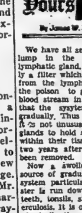
We have all seen children with a lump in the neck—an enlarged lymphatic gland. The gland is really a filter which filters out poisons from the lymph and then allows the poison to go back into the blood stream in small amounts, so that the system can absorb it gradually. Thus in infected tonsils it is not unusual for these swollen glands to hold some of the poison within their tissues for as long as two years after the tonsils have been removed.

Now a swollen gland can be a source of gradual poisoning of the system particularly if the young-ster is run down, had infection in teeth, tonsils, sinuses, or has tuberculosis. It is often of help to him physically therefore to have gland come down to its normal size again.



If the gland is broken down it is usually removed by surgery, but naturally the surgeon or surgeon does not like removing any lymph glands because every gland has a needlessly removed weakens by just so much the ability of the system to protect itself against and infections. However it is a serious mistake to allow enlarged glands to cause such inflammation of the surrounding tissues as to make it necessary to remove parts of muscles with the possibility during operation of injuring important nerves and bloodvessels."

When the gland is actively inflamed—adenitis—causing pain or distress, [illegible] of the X-ray is now being used and Drs. Samuel Surwitz and Sidney H. Zuckerman, University of California, report their experiences in the Journal of Pediatrics.

"Sixty-two children with acute cervical adenitis—inflamed glands in the neck—were treated with small doses of X-rays. Resolution complete or practically complete in fifty-two cases while in nine there was no amelioration. In a group of 21 properly controlled patients in hospital who were treated by X-rays, 17 were discharged cured to 19 treated by other measures. Pus formation resulted in only 2 of the 21 cases treated by X-rays and pus formation resulted in 7 of the 10 treated otherwise."

"The X-ray treatment is a most valuable aid to the treatment of acute cervical adenitis in children. It is the method of choice in all patients with marked glandular swelling."

I am speaking of the above series of cases written for this high standing journal because there are some physicians who have not had such satisfactory results from X-ray treatments.

PARODIST CONSUL-GENERAL

Sir Gerald Campbell, the British Consul-General in New York, has earned a reputation as one of the wittiest after-dinner speakers in America. He has just scored a major hit with a parody of Longfellow's "Psalm of Life". He recited it to members of the Lotus Club, which in New York roughly corresponds to the Savage. The occasion was the club's dinner to Mr. John Barbirolli, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra's British conductor. Straying from musical matters into the political field, Sir Gerald's peroration was as follows, as reported by the London Daily Telegraph:

"Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but a Nazi threat,
While the rest of mankind slumbers
In a cold and troubled sweat.
Are our great men all behind us?
Have we no more heights to climb?
Telephotographs remind us
Gooscetops mark the march of time."

It brought the house down.

MAY NOT FINISH BUSINESS IN TIME

Prorogation May be Later Than The End of June

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Parliament did not prorogue today whether the House of Commons and Senate will get through their business in time to prorogue at the end of June—the government's pending legislation and parliamentary session. It is believed every effort will be made to finish the session before the Conservative National Convention, opening July 7.

But an imposing amount of work stands in the way of early prorogation. The government's housing bill must be pushed through. Justice Minister Lapointe has 50 amendments to the criminal code down for consideration and a monetary reform debate may arise on the government's bill to make the Bank of Canada wholly government-owned.

Then there is the budget, to be brought down Thursday by Finance Minister Dunning, and the consequent debate. The belief is it will contain no tariff changes because current account. Immediately your balance goes up to $1,100 —$1,000 of it being derived directly from a loan.

It is upon governments alone to determine a nation's monetary policy. Differing conditions of debt and trade may make what is wise for one country unwise for another.

Printing "tickets" — as currency has been called in some sections — entirely out of step with production would make everything you buy cost you more. A Canadian woman living in Germany during the last country's inflation in 1923 had to pay 65,000,000 marks for an overcoat, and later 1,000,000,000 marks for a postage stamp!

The business of commercial banking is something to be considered by itself, apart from central banking.

Commercial bank takes deposits. There are two kinds of them. For convenience, call them "savings" and "current". Say you are a workman, or a farmer. After you've paid your living costs out of your wage, or out of the proceeds of your crop, you have some dollars left over. Because you do not want to spend them at once you deposit them in a savings account.

That is a savings deposit.

As distinguished from this is the "current" account. Say you are a merchant. You have expenses to meet day by day and therefore always carry a balance in an account against which you issue cheques for your business needs.

That is a current account.

Let us say you have $100 in that account and you need $1,000 to meet some bills. You borrow it from the bank.

You give the manager your note and he places $1,000 to your credit as a deposit in your

YOUR BANKER CANNOT PERFORM MIRACLES

There would be more banks than grocery stores all over Canada if banks could perform the miracle of "creating" the means of payment out of nothing.

It is easy to confuse these two things:

(a) The business of commercial banking, and

(b) Control of a nation's monetary system.

Commercial banking has to do with the safe-keeping and lending of money and credit.

Control of a monetary system is a matter of national, governmental policy.

Chartered banks finance production and commerce.

Monetary policy in any country is a matter for the national government itself, either directly, or through a central bank.

The Dominion Parliament established Canada's central bank in 1934 — the Bank of Canada. Its purpose was declared by Parliament in the very first paragraph of the Act of Incorporation, as follows:

"To regulate credit and currency in the best interests of the economic life of the nation, to control and protect the external value of the national monetary unit and to mitigate by its influence fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices and employment so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action, and generally to promote the economic and financial welfare of the Dominion."

It is for governments alone to determine a nation's monetary policy. Differing conditions of debt and trade may make what is wise for one country unwise for another.

Printing "tickets" — as currency has been called in some sections — entirely out of step with production would make everything you buy cost you more. A Canadian woman living in Germany during the last country's inflation in 1923 had to pay 65,000,000 marks for an overcoat, and later 1,000,000,000 marks for a postage stamp!

The business of commercial banking is something to be considered by itself, apart from central banking.

Let us say you have $100 in that account and you need $1,000 to meet some bills. You borrow it from the bank.

You give the manager your note and he places $1,000 to your credit as a deposit in your current account. Immediately your balance goes up to $1,100 —$1,000 of it being derived directly from a loan.

It is unlike a savings deposit in this respect: You intend to spend it at once. You immediately issue cheques against it.

You borrowed the money for business purposes, prepared to pay interest because the transaction was a profitable one to you. Soon most of the thousand has been paid out.

For most of the rest of the term of the loan your deposit is at its lowest. Then, before your note is due, you gather money in many ways. Up goes your deposit to its peak again.

Then you repay. Your deposit abruptly drops back to say your original $100—plus the profit you have made, by the use of the borrowed money.

No matter whether bank deposits are savings or current, your bank must keep on hand cash reserves adequate to meet any demands from day to day.

When its loans are increased, not only is more cash paid out—as was the case with your $1,000 loan; but your bank's cash reserves also become lower in proportion to total deposits.

A bank must not unduly expand its lending operations, for then its cash will fall below the proportion which experience has shown to be necessary to meet the day-to-day demands of depositors. That is why bank reserves is an automatic check against excessive lending.

Your bank cannot know just when you will walk in to withdraw your deposit—but it must be ready to pay you, in full, in cash, when you do turn up.

NAZI ATTITUDE

is preparing to hand to Benlein's representatives tomorrow precise proposals designed to satisfy at least some of the Sudeten German demands for more self-government in Sudeten districts.

Whether the Benleinists will be content with mere concessions, however, remained a vital question, another question causing equal anxiety among diplomatic observers was how the non-Sudetens would react to any attempt by the government to make sweeping concessions.

As far as can be judged by an outsider the attitude of the Czech citizenry seems to be that the refusal has demonstrated its willingness to fight for its existence and can count on the great democracies—France and Britain—to help it against an invader.

France Will Aid

(France's former Premier Pierre Flandin said in a speech at Vienna, France, last night the Daladier government was prepared to order mobilization to aid Czechoslovakia if she were invaded by Germany. He warned the danger of war was increasing in Europe and urged members of the Democratic Alliance party to oppose war unless France herself were attacked.

His speech brought an immediate reply from Pierre Cot, Radical Socialist former Air Minister, who told the national congress of Republican reserve officers at Chambery:

("To say that not one French soldier should expose his life for Czechoslovakia, means that not one English soldier should shed his blood if France were attacked. Collective security is the foundation of French security.")

(At Berlin, Germany, Rudolf Hess, Hitler's general representative, accused Czechoslovakia of being a menace to the peace of Europe. He asserted the republic was in a condition "practically akin to a state of war."

Point Anne

Point Anne—On Thursday evening, June 9th, a number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. John Darlington met at their home to spend a social hour with them prior to their departure to their new home. When all had gathered Mr. and Mrs. Darlington were asked to come forward and Rev. W. T. Keough read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Darlington,—

Very soon you will leave us; you will meet strange people, but not old friends and exact yourse'es to conditions much different to those in which we knew you. We hope that one thing will remain steadfast in your hearts and that is the memory of our friendship. Mr. Darlington, you have been a valuable superintendent in the Sunday School and your services will be greatly missed there.

And you, Mrs. Darlington, have been a faithful member of the Women's Association and your help will be greatly missed. Hence we ask that you will cherish the gun memory of bygone and close friendships from through the years and that you will accept this floor lamp as a memento of the pleasant times we have spent together.

(Signed) Your Friends and Neighbors of Point Anne.

Mr. Darlington made a reply, thanking them for the gift and recalled the happy associations with them and expressed the hope that all would meet with them again in their new home.

Rev. W. T. Keough then spoke of the assistance Mr. Darlington had always given and of the hospitality in their home in which both Mr. and Mrs. Darlington had always made him a welcome guest. All then joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant chat and singing with Mrs. Jay Murphy at the piano. Following a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and Mrs. Fred Whitehead. The guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Darlington Godspeed and happiness in their new home.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. Most constipation you don't diddle around with make-shift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are it's simple if you eat only what meal people do: bread, butter, coffee, tea. If that's you don't get enough "bulk." And you need "bulk" in a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body—it was a real "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, you can get a crisp crunchy wonderful cereal in Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and you'll have the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

I Go to the Races

By MARTIE RAMSON

Have you ever thrilled to the frenzied cry of fifty thousand voices? Fifty thousand throats yelling in unison, "They're off!"

Fourteen thoroughbreds, constitutes the finest breeding in the country, off on pursuit of the largest purse of the turf. In just a second or two over the two-minute mark one of the fourteen will be acclaimed the winner of a hundred thousand dollars. I could scarcely control my mixed emotions at the thought. A hundred thousand dollars to the winner, and here I stood . . .

This was the race that fifty thousand enthusiastic racing fans paid upwards of a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to witness. The five preceding races were of little interest to them. Every one there myself included, was "Santa Anita Handicap" minded.

I hadn't the opportunity of seeing the entries parade around the paddock. That privilege had been denied me. Why? Well, you see— but more of that last later.

I felt they come up the track on parade. They are going to walk to the seventh pole and then back to the starting gate. They were going to run magnificent for the crowd. The crowd that has placed close to fifty million American dollars on the outcome of the race. I glanced up at the tote board. "Win, place, show pools," "show pools," figures, numbers and more figures. I often wonders who started the erroneous propaganda about this being a time of depression. Waiting for the return of the horses to the starting gate, I let my gaze wander around the beautiful Santa Anita track. Truly this is the finest and most beautiful track in the country.

Ahead, not far distant, lay the picturesque Sierra Madre range, forming the track on three sides, forming a natural amphitheatre for the beauty of the valley below. Orange groves, with their blossoms, the immediate vicinity of the park, and the gaze wander around the beautiful, lovely Alhambra blossoms, one was filled with associations far removed from his present surroundings.

Through the megaphones came the words, "They are coming to the starting gate," which awakened me from my reverie. Like all, or all others, immediately sought out number eleven, Discovery, Mr. A. G. Vanderbilt's three to one favorite. Calmly and serenely, almost haughty, he bore approaching the gate. Dancing and prancing, almost mocking his rider, Pensonality apparent. Then came number nine, Top Row, proudly strutting and tossing his head in defiance of those who gazed upon him. Soon I was conscious of an almost awed murmur. On every one's lips came the whispered, "Look, that must be Whooper." And, indeed, it a horse was deserving of such comment. His sleek jet black hide covered seventeen hands or mighty forefinish. As he made his flight ferent way to the post every muscle ripped through his gleaming black coat. In the parlance of the track, Whooper looked fit to win. He was the "horse to beat," and to me it did not look as if beating him would be an easy task.

Only a moment did they linger at the barrier. Then the cry of "They're off," and the cracking of whips mingled with the shouts of the jockeys, the fourteen outstanding thoroughbreds in the country started on their mile and a quarter journey. A journey that would end with a pot of gold in the horse that reached it first.

At first they rounded the turn at the first quarter eight of the fourteen horses were bunched. It was hard to distinguish which was which, and the distance separating them was so small as to be inconsequential. In the back stretch Anucar, the horse that beat Ruggedo, took the lead, with Top Row, Whopper and Discovery closely following. From nowhere behind came Time Supply and, as they rounded the turn into the home stretch, it settled down to a four horse race.

Top Row came thundering down the stretch. Fifty thousand pairs of eyes glued to the cavalcade of galloping horses. Anyone went up. "Where's Discovery?" The throngs were shouting. As they realized that Discovery the odds on favorite, realized by a fortune, was nowhere somewhere in the rear.

The horses were nearing the finishing line. Anucar is in the lead. Rosemount is right behind, with Top Row and Whopper in third place and both gaining fast. Top Row is now next and neck with the leader. Discovery is forgotten. Look. That jockey riding Top Row. He's leaning out of his saddle. He pulls the saddle lovel on Time Supply who comes up to the rear. Anucar is making a bid for the first position. As Top Row edges a nose in front of Time Supply. Top Row swerves in front of the horse, jostling Time Supply against Anucar, who in turn is pushed by the impact against Whopper and Rosemount.

Cries of "Foul, foul" went up from the crowds. Every one was in an uproar. Every one but the judges. They announced the winner as Top Row. Even I became indignant. Top Row angered me with his neighbor. None knew for sure, if any one did not the ideal of a heated discussion when suddenly somebody tapped me on the shoulder with "Come on, you, get those bottles picked up. You ain't gettin' three dollars a day to watch the races."

"O.K., boss" I replied as I wended my weary way picking up coda and beer bottles, thankful that my territory was near to the finishing line.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"The Kid Comes Back"

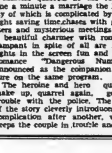
"Dangerous Number"

"The Kid Comes Back", a romantic melodrama of the prize ring starring the sensational new star of "Kid Galahad" and "Submarine D-1," Wayne Morris, is the feature presentation scheduled for the Belle theatre screen (Tuesday), and Wednesday, matinee daily.

Morris a big, blonde lad with a "million dollar smile", has risen from an unknown to stardom almost overnight, on the strength of his work in the two pictures mentioned above. "The Kid Comes Back" is his third starring vehicle and it is said that his work is in this even better. West Coast critics have hailed him as the "most likely to succeed" find of the year.

The picture is an exciting story of the pitfalls which hinder aspirants for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Morris is supported by two outstanding players June Travis and Barton MacLane the former of course being the one with whom Morris supplies the love interest.



"Dangerous Number" Unusual"

Marital quarrels at the rate of one a minute a marriage the legality of which is complicated by daylights saving time,chases with gangsters and mysterious meetings with a beautiful charmer with romance rampant in spite of all are highlights in the screen fun and thrill romance "Dangerous Number", announced as the companion feature on the same program.

The heroine and hero quarrel, make up, quarrel again, get in trouble with the police. The plot of the story cleverly introduces one complication after another, which keeps the couple in trouble and the audience in roars of laughter. The climax comes when the bridegroom drives his bride into a river when she is wearing one of his own silk creations, manufactured from a cloth that is soluble in water. You'll laugh, whether you believe that such material exists or not. "Dangerous Number" is the sum total of good, laugh-provoking entertainment.

TWILIGHT
DGrp

Spirit of Twilight, through your folded wings
I catch a glimpse of your averted face.
And rapturous on a sudden, my soul sings,
"Is not this common earth a holy place?"

Spirit of Twilight, you are like a song
That sleeps, and waits a singer—like a hymn
That God finds lovely and keeps for Him long.
Till it is chored by sureoled cherubim.

Spirit of Twilight, in the golden gloom
Of dreamland dim I sought you, and I found
A woman sitting in a twilight room
Full of white flowers that moved and made no sound.

These white flowers were the thoughts you bring to all,
And the room's name is Mystery where you sit;
Woman whom we call Twilight, when night's all
You lift across our Earth to cover it.

Psychologist Urges Families to Talk Things Over

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

A NUMBER of years ago, Dr. John Studebaker, then superintendent of schools of Des Moines, Ia., and one time president of the department of superintendence of the National Education association, conceived the idea of public forums free to all youths and adults, where everyone would have the opportunity to express his opinions and beliefs, on problems of the community and nation. He thought of the forum as a good type of adult education for the public schools to sponsor. Furthermore, he believed it to be a good means of furthering ideals of democracy, bringing back the practice of the old New England town meeting—I hope you regularly listen in to the program of the Town Hall Meeting of the Air.

Dr. Studebaker has believed, as you no doubt believe, that the best hope for the preservation of ideals in a republic is for the citizens of a community to talk things over in an orderly fashion, when inevitably the virtues of the rational frame of government make themselves evident.

Accordingly, Dr. Studebaker was allotted a grant, while superintendent of schools in Des Moines, from one of the foundations, with which he set in operation in that city his ideas of the public forums, and the success of the enterprise exceeded his fondest hopes.

After Dr. Studebaker became United States commissioner of education with strong approval from educational leaders, and professionals, he prevailed upon his official superiors to assign federal funds for him to put on demonstration public forums in various centers throughout the United States.

Established Forums

Accordingly, in the first half year, 1937, such public forums were established in 17 centres, chiefly in the larger cities. The hope of Dr. Studebaker has been that those communities which were given the free demonstration public forums would—continue these forums later under the supervision of the local board of education, and be financed locally. Most of the centres of 19Z are doing so. From January to June of this calendar year, these demonstration public forums will have been conducted in smaller cities from 5,000 to 40,000.

Leaders of the demonstration forums have been sought out and selected on the basis of their professional attainments, and wide experience as forum leaders, being borrowed temporarily from the university or other centres of activity with which they are permanently connected.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if most parents would practice with each other and their older children the principles of the fine forms of talking things over without getting mad about it?

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY
For Central Press Canadian

When planning a tree about the home grounds, consideration should be given to the factor of whether the tree is to be purely ornamental or whether its purpose is to furnish shade, and whether it is to stand alone or have shrubs planted beneath it.

Figure 1 of this Garden-Graph shows a type of tree such as the English beech, purple beech, Japanese maple, black gum and European linden, the lower branches of which should never be trimmed off. With this type of tree the lower limbs should be allowed to grow naturally, for the beauty of the tree lies in an effective spread of the lower limbs.

Figure 2 shows a high branching type of tree such as the elm. With lower limbs pruned off as the tree grows, this eventually makes an ideal shade tree and one under which shrubs can be grown.

There are also other trees whose lower branches should never be removed because of the beauty of the foliage, or flowers and fruits they bear.

Weather-Proofing Skin Necessary Beauty Rite

Must Protect It From Sun, Wind, Dust

MILIZA KORJUS....takes good care of her lovely complexion.

By HELEN JOLLETT

BECAUSE OF the ravages of sunlight, harsh winds and atmospheric dust, the complexion has a "hard row to hoe", if you let it go its own way. It is bound to look weathered.

There are local attentions that will bring grand rewards—scrupulous cleanliness of the outermost surface, first massage and daily lubrication.

Two creams are necessary, one of light consistency like cold cream to use for the removal of make-up, and to combat sunburn and a heavy emollient for skin feeding and to ward off wrinkles. One is for daytime use, the other for the beautifying period before going to bed.

Friction then is well. Facial muscles need exercise and about all they get is the gentle mauling when oily cosmetics are applied. Use an upward, outward stroke as the finger tips until the skin surface glows.

What about your elbows? Maybe you never look at them. But others see them.

After the bath at night, dig the elbow into a bowl of cream. Let it lie dry on and massage briskly with coconut oil. The flesh on the elbow is coarse and wrinkled and is nearly always in need of attention.

Women who wear glasses should see that they are properly adjusted. Wearing may change the outline of the bowl; the nose piece may not be just right. Unless eye glasses are properly fitted vision will not be perfect. And poor vision brings reddened eyelids and turkey tracks. It's worth looking into.

Enjoy healthful Wrigley's Gum daily for its invigorating goodness! It's a quick pick-up — hits the spot. Relieves fatigue and calms the nerves. Aids digestion too!

Boy Tells Lies About Sweetheart

Girl Seeks Advice on Putting Stop to Untrue Tales

By VIRGINIA LEE

ONE OF MY correspondents has been engaged to a certain young man. She accepted his ring more out of pity than love, for this lady's family is very nice, but the boy himself works with others who drink to excess, and when he has had a few drinks he becomes "sullen and sarcastic". Her father advised her to break the engagement, but the youth won't stay put. He comes to her home frequently, hoping she will take him back.

He is very jealous and if he gets an idea this young woman is interested in any other man or hears their names linked, he seeks the person out and tells stories about the girl which are far from the truth. Recently he has shown jealousy of a new girl friend of the woman he claims to love, and is now telling lies about her, which my correspondent fears will harm her reputation.

Deserves Thrashing

"What can I do to prevent him from making a good girl lose her reputation and from making him turn friends against me?"

You cannot keep this man from talking, of course, my dear, but do you suppose he will be believed? He deserves a good thrashing, and possibly if your father or brother administered it it might help. Such bullies usually are cowards. However, that seems like "doing evil that good may come."

I think the only thing you can do is to have it definitely understood among your friends and acquaintances that your engagement is at an end, and that anything he may say about you is said out of pique and spite. If his jealous spite includes this young woman who is not well known and whose reputation he may smirch, maybe it would be well not to see so much of her until this affa:' blows over.

No wonder you could not really love such a character. Too bad you encouraged him and even accepted his ring. He seems to be about as low-down a specimen of humanity as one is likely to meet in a lifetime. I don't believe such a person can permanently hurt the reputation of a girl who is known to be good and who has good family background.

S.: Dear child, I'm afraid I could not make much out of your letter. Sorry you have been ill, and do keep calm and quiet until you are back to normal.

x x x

"DEAR MISS LEE: When I'm with a boy and he talks to me I never have an answer for him, and when there's silence I can never think of anything to say. When I go home, though, I think of a lot of answers I could have given, and a few things I could have said. Why is this, Miss Lee? Is it because I am stupid or is something else? I am 17 years old.

"BELL."

It is just because you are young and shy, Bell. It certainly does not show stupidity. I tell you what to do. When you are not with a boy, but are planning to go out with one, think up a lot of things to talk about, and then talk about them when you are with him instead of thinking about them after you have been out. We all think of the bright answers we might have made after we get home or the next day. It is like the fisherman's biggest fish that always gets away. If you keep on going out you will get over this shyness in time and gain the necessary poise.

Pot Luck Buns

To one cup chopped rhubarb add one cup sugar. Let stand until sugar dissolves, boil 20 minutes. Pour into bean or cookie crock with cover. Add fruit as it comes in season—pineapple, strawberries, other berries, etc. Always add hot fresh jam to crock and stir well. This will keep for a long time and you can use it alone if you prefer. Do not add any water; if fruit is dry let stand until sugar dissolves.

Vitamin Deficiency In a Balanced Diet

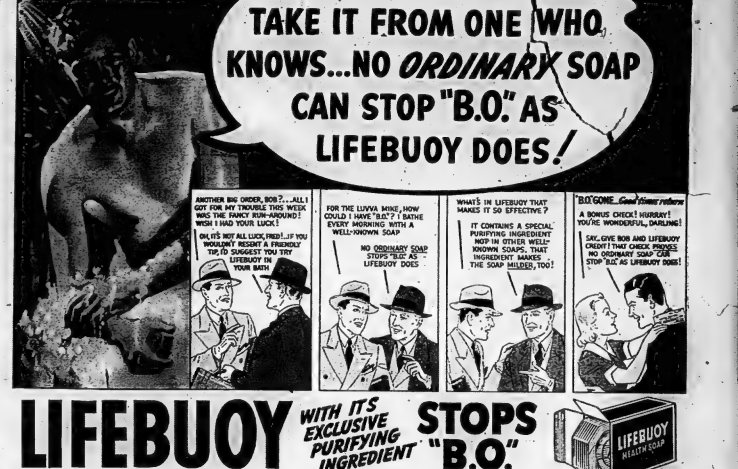
Elements May Not Be Present in Large Enough Quantities in Food

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

DOCTORS ARE likely to make fun of vitamins. I heard a doctor say the other day that he felt certain that vitamins would never be used by the medical profession were it not for the persistency of the publicity given them by drug firms. This, however, is not quite fair. More and more, vitamins are being recognized as factors in obscure disease.

Two vitamins, of course, are absolutely necessary in infant feeding—one, Vitamin C in the form of orange and tomato juice, and two, Vitamin D, in the form of cod liver oil or irradiated milk. Vitamin C prevents scurvy and Vitamin D prevents rickets.

In middle and old age, it is becoming known that the body may not absorb vitamins as well as in young adult life. It must be remembered that although vitamins may be present in the diet, they may not be present in large enough quantities and digestive disturbances of some kind may prevent their absorption, so vitamin deficiency may be present even on a balanced diet.



Lists Deficiency Causes

Haden lists the following causes of vitamin deficiency: (1) Vomiting or diarrhea; (2) pregnancy and lactation; (3) impairment of absorption from the digestive tract on account of anemia, heart, disease or the presence of certain substances, such as mineral oil in the intestines; (4) fever, alcoholism or excessive use of tobacco may impair the appetite enough to cause a vitamin deficiency.

An excess of starches and sugars in the diet may prevent utilization of Vitamin B. It has been pointed out within the last year or two that Vitamin B is likely to be insufficiently used by the body after the age of 30, and also that people of that age instinctively avoid foods which contain Vitamin B.

The standard and crystalline forms of the product are better absorbed and utilized than the natural product in the food. Vitamin D occurs in the yeast and cereals; these are the common foods which contain the largest amount.

Middle-aged and elderly people are also likely to need Vitamin D in artificial form. The brittle bones of the aged may be due to a deficiency of Vitamin D in the diet. Old people are also likely to use milk and cream, which is the best natural source of Vitamin D. They are also not likely to go into the sunshine, and the effect of sunshine on the skin is to produce Vitamin D in the body.

Girl Wins Honors at College

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

MOST OUTSTANDING girl of the class of 1938. This is the title given to Miss Daphne Carnochan, of Detroit, senior at Albion college, Albion, Mich.

Miss Carnochan was elected out of a class of 127 young women.

She was recently elected to Phi Gamma, local honor society; with standards comparable to Phi Beta Kappa.

She is also a member of the Women's Self-Government association board; and, as a Kappa Delta, she represented her sorority on the Panhellenic council.

Miss Carnochan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Carnochan of Detroit.

Garden on Parade

A five-acre tract is set aside in the New York World's Fair for 1939 for the creation of lovely gardens and will be christened Gardens on Parade. There will be 50 miniature gardens here, each a separate unit, under the direction of a non-profit organization with the support of many garden groups.

Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt of Glen Cove, L. I., and New York is the head of this project. She is widely known through her work for gardens and conservation.

Plans for the World's Fair garden will be worked out as a naveak: Each of the 50 gardens being separated by hedges or shrubbery.

Summer Suits Are Smart, Useful and Cool Looking

Cotton, Linen Used in These Lovely Models

By LISBETH

ELIM YOUNG'S summer suits for slim young things—girls with long coats, or short or medium and have pleated skirts or plain, narrow ones. Best suits that are so gay and young and cool looking that they make the world seem bright.

Two pictures of such suits are used to illustrate this article. Right, for wear in the city, at business, shopping, snatching a hasty lunch—all day long and all summer—is the natural green-check cotton with its single front closing, short sleeves, pleated skirt revers and collar. It is washable and has a scarf.

It is inexpensive, and you can splurge on accessories, if splurge you must.

In Shaggy Linen

Rather more expensive but so very good looking is the other model which is a two-piece dress of natural-colored shaggy linen with a circlet of colorful flowers in applique. It is a stunning "little number", as they say.

This suit and dress are equally good for week-end visits and may be topped by lightweight wool coats for traveling.

A recent fashion show in New York showed some interesting trends in fashion designing. It was given by the students for the Cooper Union Day Art school. There was a five-in-one costume designed by one of the students. Miss Emmabelle Cook of Hasbrouck, N. J. It was invented for a "young lady invited for a week-end of unknown activity". There was a backless blouse, a sports skirt, short bolero jacket and flower-print beach cape.

If the wearer removes the cape a sports costume of skirt and backless blouse is shown. The addition of a bolero jacket makes the costume suitable for town.

For afternoon the skirt, and blouse are turned inside out showing the print side. For dancing the cape becomes a full-length skirt. And if the evening is cool, the bolero jacket is worn completing the ensemble.

"Peasant Pleating"

An evening dress of white net in the same showing had "peasant pleating" around the waist. This type of pleating is so called because it has been adapted from the work of the peasant women in central Europe.

The effect which looks new is obtained by pulling many thin threads through a ribbed material. This type of pleat will hold its shape under all sorts of conditions, and retain its crease after dry cleaning. Madeline Leddy of Jackson Heights, L. I., was the designer of this dress.

Another interesting dress was made by Mary Cahill of Port Jervis, N. Y., who used modern taffeta to make an evening gown which was inspired by a medieval suit of armor. Clever these young designers!

FACTS AND FANCIES

Summer Curtains

Many of us like to give our windows a new look for summer. We like the cool look of a crisp chintz or linen, or the practicality of the smart new cottons that are sun and tub-fast. If you like to sew, you will be surprised at the curtains you can turn out yourself. For a standard window, one width of 36-inch fabric is enough for each drapery. For a window about 50 inches wide, use a width and a half, and so on. For the length measure from the top of the casing to the floor, allowing for seams and heading. If your house is well shaded, you need not line summer draperies, but it gets strong sun, line them to protect the fabric.

A decorative and inexpensive summer curtain Good Housekeeping studio suggests is of plain white voile, with a draped valance of plain chintz, both trimmed with the same ball fringe. For a standard window you will need three yards per valance. The valance is hung on a cornice board.

Nut Fondant

Two cups pulverized sugar, one-half cup milk, one-fourth teaspoon cream of tartar, one tablespoon butter, two-thirds cup nut meats, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla. Cook sugar, milk, cream of tartar and butter until a soft ball is formed in cold water. Remove from fire and allow to cool, then beat until thick and creamy. Add nut meats and vanilla. Shape into loaf. Place in refrigerator and when stiff enough slice and wrap in waxed paper.

SELECTION OF BECOMING CLOTHING IS VITAL TO ATHLETIC-TYPE GIRL

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

IF YOU HAVE a square, athletic figure you probably really haven't an ounce of fat on you, but you may look plumper in your clothes than another girl who is really a lot chubbier.

This is usually because you have a figure without a definite curve in waistline, and you are not conspicuously large in the bust and hips. So it behooves you to choose your clothes with a great deal of care. If you pick the wrong things your figure will look just as feminine as you could wish, and you will have to worry about those muscles giving you an Amazon-like appearance.

Before selecting your summer wardrobe think over these things. They will help your clothes bring about those lovely curves so ideal. Tunics that reach to the knee and are slightly fitted at the waist help to give you the curved look that is needed there. Sleeves that are full at the shoulders, and that cut shoulders, make your waistline seem correspondingly slim.

If your bust is low and not too large you can lift the line by wearing jabots, frills or bows over your bust, but don't let them continue down to your waist. They will make you look larger there. Always wear belts that are the same color as your dress or coat. A belt that is wide in front and narrower at the sides also wears inside becomingly in the back will help to give your thinnish waistline a slender appearance.

Barbara Stanwyck

When you get suits or coats have your jackets about fingertip length. Capes of this length or a little longer may be flattering in light summer materials if they are dark in color and are worn over a dark dress.

Neckline Important

Your neckline is definitely important. It should not be particularly high or severe. A V-neck is becoming and takes away from the square lines of your figure.

It is a pretty good general idea to stay away from the really severely tailored suits and coats. They will tend to make you look a bit too stocky, masculine side. But don't go in for being excessively fluffy. This kind of costume may make you look awkward, and it is particularly certain to give a slightly dowdy effect.

Small or medium sized prints in some of the clever modern designs, or in gay flower designs are most becoming, as are all soft, rich materials that will drape gracefully. Don't wear your skirts too narrow, and avoid straight tailored blouses or jackets because they will make your kind of a figure look like a box. Flaring or full skirts that are wide below the hips will give a very flattering line. They are ideal when worn with a well-fitted blouse of the same color.

Yanks Shave Another Game From Lead of Cleveland While Giants Hold Margin Over Clubs

Yankee Mentor of Red's Enters Hall of Fame With No Hitter

DETROIT GAINS

Wins Three Over Week-end For Best Showing of Any Team

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

Babe Ruth, the supreme satisfyer on heavy hitting, recently remarked that some time the Yankees would all start hitting at once and smear all under the opposition. Cleveland Indians must be about ready to admit that the Babe was right.

The Tribe still holds the American League lead, but there is cause to believe they're lucky that one game in New York was rained out. As it was, they wound up their eastern tour by dropping two straight to the Yanks and are only 1 1-2 games ahead as they return home to face the eastern clubs again.

The Yanks got going as a team for a 1-6 victory over the Indians and Bob Feller yesterday before 43,761 customers. The Tribe got off to a four-run lead against Charlie Ruffing in the second, but Rufus the Red nullified that himself by batting a homer in the same inning. Then he went on in a duel with Johnny Allen until Johnny was fitted for Feller as the Yanks threatened his one-run lead.

Going into the ninth Red Dickey drew a pass and Joe (Flash) Gordon, the rookie second sacker who has been one of the "hitless" Yanks most of the year, smacked one into the stands for a game-winning home run.

The only western club in the American League to come out ahead was Detroit, which whipped Washington 12-13 in yesterday's "break" game to sweep the series and finish with a 7-6 record.

National League

In the National League New York Giants, who dropped into fifth place and then regained the lead split yesterday's twin bill at St. Louis. The—season's biggest crowd at Sportsman's Park, 39,141 saw the Giants sail through to an 8-4 victory then go down 4-1 as Bob Weiland gleaned a six-hitter to beat Carl Hubbell.

Meanwhile Brooklyn broke even with Chicago and has compiled the best record of any touring eastern club, seven victories and three defeats. A nine-run rally that blasted Van Mungo in the fifth gave the Cubs a 9-3 opening victory, but Fred Fitzsimmons replied with a four-hitter and Ducky Medwick's homer with bases full helped him win 6-3.

A four-run homer started the Chicago Cubs on the way to a victory over St. Louis Browns 8-3 and 1-0. Johnson hit it in the first inning, another in the seventh to tie it in seven runs. In the five-hit nightcap Bud Thomas gave Brownie only one hit. Rain rained out the Pirates-Reds game after St. Louis scored twice.

Ernie Lombardi Victory

Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher, celebrated the year in a role as the Reds rallied to defeat Boston 5-4 in 10 innings. Sammy Risco's homer with the runners crammed The Sunday "curfew" law stopped their second game in the second inning.

Adding to his homer-run roll of honor, Rudy York and Charley Gehringer contributed to Detroit's 10-run rally against Washington, that put the former over Mickey Walker's ninth-inning four-bagger enabled the Chicago White Sox to take Boston Red Sox 6-5 after losing Bonton Red Sox 6-5 after losing Boston Red Sox 6-5 after losing Boston Red Sox 6-5 after losing Boston

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY
For Central Press Canadian

A bird bath in a garden should be decorative as well as practical. On the other hand, the bird bath in a small garden does not want to be so ornamental as to "stick out like a sore thumb," as the saying goes. A bird bath should fit into and become an appropriate part of the surroundings.

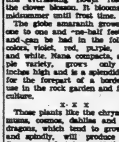
This Garden-Graph shows an informal bird bath, suitable for a rock garden or wild garden, which can be cut or chiselled into the top of a boulder.

As a general rule birds are more at home when the bird bath is near the ground. In such cases, however, be sure the planting about the container does not provide a lurking place for bird enemies.

Many annuals stop blooming if seed form, and for that reason keep watch from now on to prevent this, especially in the case of sweet peas, nasturtiums, snapdragons, and others which form large seed pods.

Boulder bird bath

Summer and winter flower



If you are interested in growing a flower that serves both for summer and winter, plant Gompbera, commonly known as globe amaranth. It is decorative for summer use in the garden, and it produces strawlike, everlasting flowers, which when cut and dried retain their beauty for use in the house in winter bouquets.

As shown in this Garden-Graph, this everlasting flower resembles the clover blossom. It blooms from midsummer until frost time.

The globe amaranth grows from one to one and one-half feet high and can be had in the following colors, violet, red, purple, yellow and white. Name compacta is a purple variety grows only eight inches high and is a splendid plant for the forepart of a border, for use in the rock garden and for pot culture.

X-X-X

These plants like the chrysanthemums, cosmos, dahlias and snapdragons, which tend to grow long and straggly, will produce more flowers and last longer if they are pinched back so as to produce a bushy growth.

Living porch screen

When are great aids in covering unsightly places. They are also useful in providing shade for a back porch. There are many varieties of vines to choose from, but in selecting a vine be sure you get the right variety for your soil, shady location as the case might be. Some vines do well in shade, while others thrive only in the sun.

This Garden-Graph illustrates the use of a vine known as Dutchman's Pipe. This vine is perennial and one of the best for screening. It has large, round handsome leaves and produces yellowish-brown flowers, which grow in the shape of a pipe, hence the name of the vine.

This vine is very resistant to fungus disease and insects. It can be grown in sun or shade, and it will even thrive in the midst of city smoke and dirt. It often grows to a height of 30 feet.

Because of the rampant growth of this vine, it should have plenty of nourishment in the form of fertilizer added to the soil at the time of planting or during its summer growth.

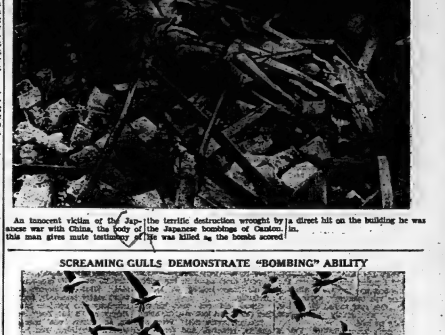
JAPANESE BOMBERS RAIN DEATH ON CANTON



Japanese bombers reaped a harvest of death and destruction when they rained bombs on Canton daily for 13 days. The toll of dead and wounded was estimated at 3,000, most of whom were non-combatants. The ruins of a scene in the western residential section of the crowded metropolis of southern China is shown here as laborers search the ruins for bodies.

An innocent victim of the Japanese war with China, the body of this man gives mute testimony of the terrific destruction wrought by a direct hit on the building he was in. He was killed as the bombs scored

SCREAMING GULLS DEMONSTRATE "BOMBING" ABILITY

A typical scene at Three Sisters, a promontory near the tip of Queens's Cape peninsula. Clouds of wheeling, screeching gulls and gannets are shown practicing an efficient art that the gods of war have improved upon with disastrous results for humanity. The birds dig shellfish in the sands, fly aloft with the prize and drop it on the rocks below to crack the shell. There are lazy birds, too, who prefer stealing from their fellows to digging their own food. These lazy ones frequently snatch the prizes in midair as they drop towards the rocks below.

REGULATE VACATION ACTIVITIES OF CHILD

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

PLEASE LET me offer some suggestions for the family of growing children. Plan a program for the child's day while he is home during the summer. It may be well to induce the children over six years of age to help plan these, to write down the plans and display them where they easily can be seen.

Although regularity may not be so imperative as during school days, some regularity will be desirable.

Let each child be assigned some responsibilities. Do likewise if you take him on a trip, having each one responsible for packing or unpacking definite parts of the equipment. Even if there is domestic help at home each child should have some specific duties he cannot escape. As a rule, most of these jobs had better be done early in the day when they are easier to perform and are done.

Don't act two children at the same job at the same time. Let them take turns. Have the boys as well as the girls wash dishes, scrub, sweep, dust, wash or iron; have no argument about it.

Plan ways for the older children to take responsibilities such as shopping, planning or even preparing a meal. Now and then mother should take an afternoon or weekend off, leaving the "men age boy or girl to look after things as best they can. Even the opportunity without too much hoeing, mow youths will measure up remarkably well.

Some Free Time for Child

The program usually should provide several hours each day when the child will be free to do about as he pleases so long as he is physically and morally safe. You should know where he is, of course. Encourage the children to play in some out-of-door fun, often going with them under "ken agree to parks and other play places. And summer is a good time for frequent family picnics.

In a family with very young and older children, let the older assume considerable responsibility for the younger, though not letting the younger always be a tag-along. Have the older often read to the younger, even to the baby. Go with the younger children who can read to the nearest library and encourage them to borrow books to read. Try to induce the older child to cultivate a summer reading program.

In the early afternoon there should be a period for a few hours of rest and quiet, when those who care to do so may sleep, loll about or read, no visiting playmates allowed, the children home.

Summer is a good time for some children to take music lessons and do regular, systematic practice. Where a few children, indeed, whose school program in the winter is heavy, or who are of a "nervous temperament," have decided to take music lessons in summer only, or not at all.

Crossroads

by Kathleen Norris

And yet it was easy enough to understand what Peter had done. This warmly, friendly little man had come into his desolate, winter room in a Philadelphia boarding-house in days when he had been weak and ill and lonely; she had been cheery and companionable; she had fallen in love with her patient. Through her, Peter had visualized a life of home and friendship and love.

Bestowed in sickness, to Gloria's society, again happy in the possession of his clothes, his ease and loneliness slipped like a cloak from Peter. Gloria saw it. and she handed Ethel Shaw a kind that Ethel's feelings changed correspondingly. Peter was no longer the shabby, unsuccessful husband against whom Gloria must build an armor, a wall of alienation. Laughter came back to him, courage and confidence. Ethel, during her dutiful daily visits, could only look on in bewilderment.

"Is she going to get a divorce or isn't she?" she demanded of Peter.

"I don't know!" Peter answered in a state of blissful indifference.

"Well, I think maybe Gladys and I'll start for Hollywood Monday," Ethel said, inviting praise. Peter made none. "I'll write you from there," she added. "I guess you'll be down, won't you?"

"I don't know!" he said. "It's all so—different."

"Do you hope she'll make it up with you?" the woman demanded resentfully.

"I don't know.... No, I hardly can hope that!" Peter answered after thought. "What would I come for me is beyond anything I can say in words," he said. "It's just that any of this was hurting you that I'd feel—I'd never forgive myself."

"No," said Ethel, a little gruffly, "I can see how it is. She's different from what I thought. But you can tell her this for me, Peter," she added, with a little spite; "I'll bet you she'll get married, you'll marry some one else. Jimmy will have a daughter, all Gloria and that's all she cares about! She's just started what up to the last few days she can't have Jimmy and this she can't have Jimmy and everything else, too, and she doesn't know how to work it out....... a't know how to work it out....... Well," finished Ethel, "I guess this is the hour to have it out up. I'll see you tomorrow, anyway."

His fine eyes smiled up at her. "You're an awfully good sport, Ethel," he said.

"I don't know whether I'm a good sport or a fool!" Ethel muttered, departing.

She encountered Gloria in the hall: "I think Miss Moulton and I are leaving for Hollywood, Tuesday," Ethel said with dignity, "I'll see you sometime to say goodbye."

Gloria raised inquiring eyebrows. "You'll not, with Mr. Peter, dear? Is he going to Hollywood, too? If he wanted to go down south," Gloria said.

Ethel put her chin in the air as she walked by. "I haven't the slightest idea what his plans are," she said magnificently.

Gloria looked after her as she walked away, shaking her head slightly in bewilderment and wonder. Then she went in to see Peter's room.

He was alone. He opened his eyes and smiled at her, yerking his head toward the chair beside his bed.

"Gloria," he said, with an effort that brought a rush of dark color into his pale face, "how did I throw you down?"

"Throw me down?" she could only repeat stupidly.

"I never meant to," Peter said. "I didn't know I had, until I received your letter asking for a divorce. Oh, I knew," Peter hastened to say, "I knew you were too much smarter than I. But it didn't seem to matter. He stopped short, floundering.

Gloria looked at him in silence; she knew that she must help him to say.

"I mean—we loved each other once, you and I," the man said simply, tears suddenly in his eyes. "And I thought that, anyway—haven't husbands and wives been like this that, I mean? One succeeding, and the other—not so good. It wasn't that that hot you to me, Gloria, we AT 11 wasn't just—just the money, just the success—"

"No, of course not," she said thickly, quickly.

"Dr. Pitcher, Glory," Peter went on, "he's—he's going a long way, isn't he? You're going to marry him, aren't you?"

Her serious eyes, narrowed under the level brows, searched him.

"I knew you were," he said, "Do you love him, Glory?" he asked rather sadly.

"Well—" she murmured, with a flush and a shrug.

"You do, of course. Sql Inez, you're just the right age for him. You'll begin to look about you—no matter how happy you are, Gloria—you're young. You'll begin to look about you and say 'What have I do? Here am I, express, self, not Karl Pitcher? You're not going to be happy, merely chatting, you can't be. And what I thought

His was looking at her appealingly. He stopped, in a little differently at the expression on her face.

Gloria's eyes were fixed on space; she was surprised that Peter could see her, as well, or at least could read one side of her nature as well. It was like him that she would ever tire of being Karl's beautiful and silent satellite, that it was strange in Peter to express a doubt of it.

"What I thought," he repeated, "was that perhaps, if I got a job with the broadcasting company and believe in San Francisco, and I believe I could, and if you started some day with little scenarios for them—and you could so much better than most of the girls that have to use—that maybe—" He stopped short again in the middle of his plans looking at her expectantly.

Gloria did not meet his eyes. Her thoughtful look was far away.

"No, of course not!" Peter said quickly, rebuffed. And for a full moment there was silence. "Well, Glory," he began, "I'm very sorry, hesitatingly, yet resolutely, "but I couldn't have children, some day. Would you consider—I don't suppose you'd consider giving me a child?"

Gloria could only stare at him, palling. Her breath failed her.

"I know how that sounds," he said quickly, "but it's so bad for them to be handed back and forth, Glory. And I'd live for him. I'd have nothing else!"

"But, Peter," Gloria said, rallying a little from the shock, "I'm not going to ask you. A little fellow that age belongs with his mother—and his needs require routine. I've been thinking of it seriously," Gloria went on, "and I don't see how it would be sensible to make any changes in this at all, for Jimmy. I'm trying to be fair to everyone, Peter, but especially to him. Why Peter, less things in Jimmy are, for a few years at least!"

"For one thing!" Peter said steadily, his hand withdrawn from hers now, "Pitcher isn't the ideal stepfather, Gloria."

The words struck her like a blow. This was carrying matters into her camp indeed! "How do you mean?" she managed to ask.

INSTALMENT XI.

"Mind you, I respect Karl enormously as a scientist, and I know he loves you," Peter went on. "But he's jealous of you now, Glory. Any one can see he. You'd still feel you wanted to give Jimmy his supper, you him to bed. That's just the time Karl would be home, wanting you. It'll be all right for a while. But you couldn't give Jimmy what you're giving him now, I could."

"I can't see it," she said.

"I think of my son, growing up in another man's home," Peter said. "And I know that however kind Karl tried to be to him, what-ever things he did for him, he'd never understand him. He'd never really want him around—a man does.

Glory was stricken speechless. This consideration had never once occurred to her. That Ethel would be completely inadequate as a mother she had promptly decided. Also she had considered Peter's qualifications, dearly as he loved his son and experienced as he was in handling Jimmy. But to have her own position shaken was strangely shocking.

"A child belongs with his mother," she persisted, groping for conviction.

"Well, but I had so much the care of him as you did, some more, when he was a baby," Peter argued eagerly.

"You mean you want me to give him to you and Ethel?"

"Not Ethel, she's out of it."

"How do you mean?"

"I mean that that wasn't ever—serious," Peter whispered. "Glory, I know you've planned what she thought would please me, how we talked of it yesterday; that's over."

"But you don't mean that you can manage him alone, Peter?"

"Man have, Glory."

"I won't give him up," she said.

"You could trust him to me, I should think," Peter persisted. "By the time you come back from Reno I'll have made all arrangements for him."

"You think it's fair to him to shift him back and forth?"

"I don't see what else we can do. We both want him."

"I want mine!" Gloria said, with an unhappy laugh. "My child—part of me. We've never been separated."

She stood up, walked to the window. After a moment she left the room without giving him a backward look.

On the following afternoon Ethel came over to say good-by. She had fifteen minutes alone with Peter; when she came out of the sickroom she looked troubled.

"Good-by, Mrs. Rudd, and thank you both for your kindness to me," Ethel said politely. "I only hope I haven't made trouble for you."

"Not at all," Gloria answered.

"You certainly have a hard thing to do, Mrs. Rudd," Ethel observed; you do some one's going to be unhappy. I'm sorry for Peter, but Dr. Pitcher's out in the cold, and if you do, Jimmy's the one!"

"Peter's thinking more of your plan, too," Gloria said, trying for a friendly interest. "Really, I'm not too bad when things all happen at once this way, Ethel. I'll be calm and collected, you'll surely see him."

"You say that, but you think I'll marry Karl," Ethel said, shrewdly.

Gloria flushed a little in resentment. "I assure you I hadn't thought of that side of it at all," she said coldly. "I've come here, I've had nothing to do with this—with any change of plans," she said quickly.

"Oh, yes, you have," Ethel said, her color flushed. But she did not elucidate her meaning. "I know that I'll not see him again," she said. "But that doesn't mean he won't marry somebody, and that somebody who won't be as kind to Jimmy as I've been!" She went on, as Gloria made a gesture, "I know you did everything. You had Peter and a home and the baby—that wasn't enough. You were so smart you had to have money, too; you had to show what a good business woman you were! And now you want to take him, and get and marry some one else—and you'll get away with it," Ethel rushed on, in a fury that trembled with angry tears. "You'll get away with it, and no one will think you're a disperior woman. Jimmy'll grow up thinking that his father is much smarter than his father."

"I never tried to interfere with your marriage, Ethel," Gloria said. "That's not what I'm talking about," Ethel answered, with contemptuous patience. "I wish you good luck," she said, over her shoulder. "Not that you'll need it. Your kind don't need luck. You take what you want and get some one else pay." She crossed the hall-way to the open door, and Gloria followed her and stood looking after her as she descended the steps and got into her car.

Moving slowly back to the office Gloria sat down and stared into space for a little while, her mouth working oddly and her elbows on the desk and her head in her hands. Once started, there was no stopping. The tears continued to flow; she finally had to escape to her room.

She threw herself on her bed; lay there thinking. Her tears had stopped; the eyes were dry and with thought.

"Dr. Schiller and Mr. Petrie, Mrs. Rudd," some one said at the door. "Mother's in hospital, they said."

"Oh, yes!" She started up. "Tell them I'll be down in five minutes," she said through the couch through her hair, powdering her nose. Her eyes were red; no help for it. She descended, to find two men waiting in her office. She knew who they were and what they wanted. Mr. Petrie, who was evidently very rich, and Dr. Schiller—she had corresponded with both of them in the past few weeks.

Their business concerned a new hospital to be opened in Salt Lake City. They had the main building already waiting, but there must be additions and changes. The superintendent would have a large apartment to herself, many perquisites and privileges, and a salary of $6,000 a year.

Gloria told Tony and Kitty about it later that day. The spring afternoon had closed in with a soft, swift rain; the Raggleys, Gloria and Jimmy were settled beside a comfortable wood fire.

"And they want you to go to Salt Lake City?" Tony asked.

"It's so funny, Glory," Kitty said, "that even you have one plan all laid out, in this life, you're apt to be offered another!"

Gloria thought to herself that here Kitty and Tony hung no threat of separation from the children they adored. They were safe here, the four of them.

"So you could have been the superintendent of a big new hospital?" Tony asked musingly. Kitty had gone to the kitchen, taking Jimmy with her.

Gloria roused herself with a little start. "Tony was not looking at her. "Could have tried it anyway," Gloria said, listlessly.

"You'd have made a go of it."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because you're the sort who is bound to make a success of anything you try."

"I don't seem to make an special success of living."

"To this," said nothing.

After a while Gloria added mostly, "I'm a bad deal for some one."

"You certainly are," Tony agreed glancing up.

"What to do?" she persisted.

"Hope that there's a better time ahead, perhaps," Tony suggested lightly.

"Which you don't think likely?" she asked, in a quick, sensitive voice.

"I've always thought there was something dangerous in the smugness," Tony said, "of doing things to be happy."

"But that's nonsense!" Gloria protested. "Every one does things to be happy!"

"And almost every one is unhappy," Tony said.

Gloria looked at him, frowning, hunched back at the fire. "We're not talking the same language," she said coldly.

"I'm sorry. You're an unlucky woman, Gloria," Tony presently said. "You're born between two worlds for women. You're better than normal mind; you've got executive ability and charm and sensitive that have nothing to do with the old-fashioned woman's life. But then with them you've got the fundamental appetites, too; you want love and home and children. Well, you're just one of luck! Only one part out of a thousand can combine love for home, closeness to the children, with business and success; happy husbands and fathers aren't the men you hear about. One in a thousand can combine the two; not one woman in ten thousand can! You can't have everything, Glory."

"But through divorce, you mean!" Gloria asked, her head slowly blazing. "You mean I ought to wait for Peter to die!"

"I mean, I think, that you have to give up happiness to get it."

"You don't like Karl," she said simply.

Their business concerned a new hospital to be opened in Salt Lake City. They had the main building already waiting, but there must be additions and changes. The superintendent would have a large apartment to herself, many perquisites and privileges, and a salary of $6,000 a year.

Gloria told Tony and Kitty about it later that day. The spring afternoon had closed in with a soft, swift rain; the Raggleys, Gloria and Jimmy were settled beside a comfortable wood fire.

"And they want you to go to Salt Lake City?" Tony asked.

"It's so funny, Glory," Kitty said, "that even you have one plan all laid out, in this life, you're apt to be offered another!"

Gloria thought to herself that here Kitty and Tony there hung no threat of separation from the children they adored. They were safe here, the four of them.

"So you could have been the superintendent of a big new hospital?" Tony asked musingly. Kitty had gone to the kitchen, taking Jimmy with her.

Gloria roused herself with a little start. Tony was not looking at her. "Could have tried it anyway," Gloria said, listlessly.

"You'd have made a go of it."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because you're the sort who is bound to make a success of anything you try."

"I don't seem to make an special success of living."

To this," said nothing.

After a while Gloria added mostly, "I'm a bad deal for some one."

"You certainly are," Tony agreed glancing up.

"What to do?" she persisted.

"Hope that there's a better time ahead, perhaps," Tony suggested lightly.

"Which you don't think likely?" she asked, in a quick, sensitive voice.

"I've always thought there was something dangerous in the smugness," Tony said, "of doing things to be happy."

"But that's nonsense!" Gloria protested. "Every one does things to be happy!"

"And almost every one is unhappy," Tony said.

Gloria looked at him, frowning, hunched back at the fire. "We're not talking the same language," she said coldly.

"I'm sorry. You're an unlucky woman, Gloria," Tony presently said. "You're born between two worlds for women. You're better than normal mind; you've got executive ability and charm and sensitive that have nothing to do with the old-fashioned woman's life. But then with them you've got the fundamental appetites, too; you want love and home and children. Well, you're just one of luck! Only one part out of a thousand can combine love for home, closeness to the children, with business and success; happy husbands and fathers aren't the men you hear about. One in a thousand can combine the two; not one woman in ten thousand can! You can't have everything, Glory."

"But through divorce, you mean!" Gloria asked, her head slowly blazing. "You mean I ought to wait for Peter to die!"

"I mean, I think, that you have to give up happiness to get it."

"You don't like Karl," she said simply.

"I admire Karl," Tony replied. "He's going to be a great man. I don't love him as I do Peter."

"And I wouldn't be happy as the wife of a great man, when I happen to love!" Gloria continued.

and Thurlow—Mr. and Mrs. W. Holmes, Sidney, visited with Mr. and Mrs. A. Keene on Sunday.

Miss Ileen Robinson is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mitchell.

Miss Doris Atkins is staying with her grandfather, Mrs. Barnum, this week.

Mrs. Hutchinson spent a few days over the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Hill.

Mr. Frank McCabe and son Jack and Mr. Jaynes spent a couple of days this week with Mr. and Mrs. A. Keene.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins spent Tuesday with Mrs. John Latta, Cecil and Kenneth, at Demorestville.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Bowers and girls, Point Anne, spent Sunday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. S. Bowers.

A very pleasant time was spent on Friday evening, June 3rd, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Mitchell, when over two hundred friends and neighbors assembled to honor their daughter, Miss Laura Mitchell, and Mr. Kenneth Brush, shower before her approaching marriage to Mr. Kenneth Brush, of Sidney.

There were several present from Stine where she lived before moving into our neighborhood a few years ago which showed the high esteem they held for her. There was a sort program consisting of solos, duets, reading and instrumental music after which the following address was read by Miss George Connors:

June 3rd, 1938.

Dear Laura and Kenneth,—

We, your friends and neighbors have gathered at your home this night, feeling we could not allow this event of your life to pass by without some tangible evidence of the high esteem in which you are held by your friends in this community.

We have recognized in some degree your high character and unassuming manner has won the highest esteem and confidence in our friendship circle. The ties of fellowship and service which have grown through the years of your life amongst us, are by no means the easiest to sever. We gaze and feel keen tonight combining duty and pleasure, like the great friend whose presence in our time means us winsome, understanding and loyal.

It's because of a wedding at the Mitchell home that we've assembled here tonight.

Laura Shirley is the bride,
Good, dainty and neat,
Kenneth Bush is the groom,
Just a wee bit timid.

Her, Mr. McClintock is going to tie the knot that makes them man and wife.

So across the sea of matrimony on which you are going to embark, we trust that Ken with whom you have signed will be staunch and true, for we can vouch for you sterling qualities, Laura, whom we have known since childhood. As your friends we may not always be calm; storms are sure to gather, but if you put your trust in God, He will guide you through.

Laura, If Ken does not obey, tell her his mother took him across her knee and that you will do the same. And Ken, if Laura does not obey, tell her a cold winter is creeping around the corner, that you must have a fireplace. The advice which is freely and cheerfully given comes from your neighbors of the 2nd line.

Wednesday is your wedding day
We hope that it is fair,
For all your relations will be there.
And after you have said "I will"
And Ken has really kissed you,
Then you will go to distant towns
Then we'll surely miss you.

The emblem of your day "Just Married" may be fastened with old boots, etc. to the springs, but we hope you will live to wear faded blue many years. Now Ken, remember that often a kiss will dry a woman's tears, and remember Laura wholesome food often helps to save the day. These kindly words have been tested, tried, and are true. Be kind, patient and be'll love you all your life; baking and cleaning we know you can do, wash, mend and make good stitches too. So blessings on you, bride of June, long may your journey be, and as you have felt it desirable to enter upon a new course of life, we offer our congratulations and wish you much happiness. When you're acking up the love of his whole can't be bought with gold, if you feel at any time you are in need of some one who will stand through thick and thin, we shall count ourselves most happy if you will only come to us. We trust that your future will always be bright, your pathway be joyous and troubles light. If shadows should come, just whistle and sing. Laura, be to your husband a kind, loving wife.

Ken, be a good sport; don't get cranky or pout, then your wife will be happy when you're about.

Now we pray that God's blessing may attend you wherever you may be. We also assure you or a warm welcome back in our midst as opportunity permits and not a single cloud will darken your lives, but in the future be a ray of sunshine and happiness. And now that you may carry a memo of your friends and neighbors, we ask you to accept these gifts in the hope that their frequent use may call to your mind from time to time the happy profitable hours you have spent with us.

(Signed) Mrs. Geo. Connors.

Laura and Kenneth both replied thanking all for their kindness for coming and bringing them such lovely gifts. They invited all to visit them in their new home.

Two lady friends sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Lunch was served by the ladies. The remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse and dancing.

Burr's

Burrs—Burr's Ladies' Aid met on Thursday afternoon, June 9th, at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Vanoott with an attendance of twenty-seven members and nine visitors. The president, Mrs. Ewart Harnes opened the meeting with a hymn. The Scripture was read responsively. The theme song was then sung. The treasurer gave her report and reported the sum of $67.78 in the treasury. The Aid decided to pay what was lacking on the minister's salary. Mrs. Gerald Brooks gave a splendid report of the W. A. Convention at Pusbero. Burr's Ladies' Aid had the largest average attendance of any society in the convention. The offering was then taken. Mrs. Tom Morden moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Brooks for her splendid report of convention. Seconded by Mrs. F. Burkett. A hymn was sung and the business part of the meeting closed by all repeating the last verse of Psalm 18. Mrs. Norman Fox gave a reading "The Finished House." Mrs. McRae read "What A Call Living." Irene Fox read "Begin Today."

Presentation

Mrs. Hoag Burr read the following address to Mrs. McRae and Mrs. Huffman presented a Kenwood blanket.

Dear Mrs. McRae—

When we find, as we have today, that we are forced to lose the companionship of a friend and valued member from our society, it brings to all of us a keen sense of loss. A sense of loss that is not easily expressed in words.

During eight past six years of service among us, you have found a warm place in each of our hearts. Your life has been one of inspiration and splendid example. To our meetings your presence has always brought the sunshine of a cheery personality, combined with the beauty of a real Christian character. Your spirit of cheerful, willing helpfulness will be missed in our memories.

We are glad to know you will not be so distant from us, but that we may from time to time keep up our bond of friendship.

As a small expression of our regard, we ask you to accept this blanket. May it continue to remind you of your many friends in this locality, and may God's richest blessings follow you always. As the united desire of your friends at Burr's.

Signed on behalf of your friends at Burr's,

Mrs. Roy Burr
Mrs. Geo. Huffman.

Mrs. McRae replied very feelingly and said it had always been a pleasure to attend the meetings and if she had been of help in any way she was very glad. She hoped they would visit them in their new home at Hilton.

Mr. McRae gave a very nice address and thanked them for their appreciation. He had, he said, spent six very happy years at Burr's and hoped they would continue to give their hearty co-operation to the next pastor. He also invited Burr's people to visit them at Hilton. Lunch was then served after which Mr. McRae photographed the company of ladies.

Mrs. J. R. Marvin with her guest Mrs. John Wannamaker, Macon, and Miss Zelda Carter, were callers at Mrs. Geo. Fox's on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McHenry, Rochester, spent over the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McHenry.

Miss Helen Cook, Reg. N., New York, has been spending a time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hobbs, Mt. Pleasant, spent Monday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hoagg.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carley, South Lakeside, spent Wednesday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clarke.

Master Bobby Eigle went to his home in Toronto for the week-end.

Rev. and Mrs. Grant, Welling-ton, dined on Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McHenry.

Young Gorilla Won't Retire Without Nightie

St. Louis, June 13 (AP)—Even a gorilla can be "raised to be a lady" and sleep in a nightgown, she'll everything. Not only that, but "Coquette" insists on her tea, cream with her cereal, and chicken with "all the trimmings."

Coquette arrived in St. Louis yesterday after a two-months trip from the Congo in Africa, accompanied by Trainer Phil Carroll, a young orang-outang captured by the late Martin Johnson, and a second young gorilla.

"Coquette is as smart as most six-year-old children and twice as well-mannered," Carroll insisted. She was raised by a French couple.

"She ate with a knife, fork and spoon, slept in a bed, and shared their daily life," Carroll explained.

That's where she learned to wear a nightgown—made from a burlap bag.

"She won't sleep without it." Carroll claimed. "She crawls into one bag, and pulls another over her head."

Coquette and the other young gorilla, Jack, are kept, instead of suffering the indignity of cages when they arrived, they rode to Director George Vierheller's automobile.

WALL STREET
(Close)

New York, June 13 (AP)—Lightfooting converged on the industrials in today's stock market and leaders were pushed back fractions to a point. There were a few losers of three or so at the worst.

Lack of volume on the retreat was a negatively cheering influence, analysts declaring a grain of comfort from the thought that important holdings are still intact with activity more pronounced in rallying periods.

Extreme setbacks were reduced in many cases near the final hour, but the pace failed to quicken. Transfers were about 350,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS
(Close)

Toronto, June 13 (CP)—The Toronto stock market registered a sizable decline today in a dribble of trading. Odd chances did not courraged any bullish effort and traders finally took to the side lines. Turnover was little better than 200,000 shares, the lowest for a full session this year.

Weakness in New York stock quotations, lower metal prices and revival of anxiety of the political developments in Europe worked against continuance of the advance on the Toronto market today. At noon all indices were down moderately with exception of the gold industrials which held steady. Volume for the first three hours hit a year's low at 182,000 shares.

Base metals were practically all down. Wells-Amulet backed up to $4.05 but recovered all but 5 cents of the loss. The industrial share market displayed most weakness in the steels and utilities.

Butter Prices Decline

Toronto, June 13.—Values willed on a soft butter market in Toronto Saturday.

A serious surplus of butter, revealed by the release of the cold storage figures Friday, shocked the Toronto market into a coma, from which it could not be revived Saturday. Price disclosure, coming at a time when production is on the increase, coincided with a reported drop in the English market on the same day.

Quotations in the week's short closing session were almost entirely nominal, dealers reporting utter impossibility to make sales. However, potential buyers, although standing aside for the day, were said to have been well stocked up earlier in the week and holders of butter were disinclined to push sales.

Ontario Dairy Creamery solids clung to the 25c level on the offering side down 1½c to 24c from the previous day.

Egg receipts cleared readily at Toronto and the egg market here ruled firm, being particularly strengthened during the past week by demand from Northern Ontario, which was a force again on Saturday, helping prices 1-4-large and 1-2 medium eggs, quoted on a graded basis, to develop a range, spread in the upward direction. Grade B was in exceptionally good demand at 22c but receipts were light.

The cheese market was inactive at Toronto Saturday, as dealers awaited the results of the week-end cheese boards. However, values seem to have eased slightly as the 14½c in the previous ... was not quoted again, now ... practised apparently set ... a straight 14½c.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford
By Financial Service

Last week's market was interesting for the reason that it revealed a somewhat increased public interest. The mining market was better, with some good gains recorded in several sections of that list. Rumors continue to the effect that efforts are being put forth to bring about an increase in the price of gold. Reports of this character are now emanating from many important sources thus giving added importance to the rumors.

The action of the so-called "screnine" stocks last week, in view of the announcement that Great Britain would spend over $300,000,000 in Canada in the next few years on war materials, indicated that the anticipated "war profits" will not develop. It is believed that orders will be placed on a "cost plus" basis, which would yield a satisfactory profit, but the tremendous fortunes made out of the last war will not again be duplicated. The companies that survive orders will be permitted to make satisfactory profits for the work done and will give employment to a large number of people. This is no doubt the reason why the stocks effected in an orderly manner and did not record a very sizeable advance.

Important News Expected From Turney Speer, Boss.

Financial Service expects to be in a position before long to give our readers the salient facts on an important constructive development out in Tooper Valley.

Consolidated Paper.

Should the Consolidated Paper be successful in their efforts to dispose of their holdings in Anticosti Island, the money received would undoubtedly be used to improve the plants and perhaps to buy into other paper companies operating in the province. The common stock of this corporation has given a rather impressive account itself during the current setback in business.

POLICE COURT

Ernest Hawkins, alias John Howard, 33-year-old Kingston man, was sentenced to seven years in jail after being convicted of vagrancy before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local Police Court.

Arrested in a barn on the premises of the late James A. Roy Estate by Provincial Constable Izard one week ago, the man gave his name as that of John Howard. Following a plea of guilty today however, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan told the court the accused man's conviction record, which revealed his name as being Ernest Hawkins.

Roland Chasse, 33, of Montreal, who was found by Provincial Police lying face downward on Highway No. 2 immediately east of Belleville a week ago, today was convicted of vagrancy and remanded in custody for sentence. Mr. Donnan in reading Chasse's record of convictions revealed Chasse had served prison terms served in many of the leading penal institutions in the United States.

"The police inform me this man was talking he had been struck by a hit and run motorist and caused the subsequent coincidentally necessary work," added Mr. Donnan.

"I'll remand this man for a week. In the meantime have Dr. Doyle, the Provincial Psychiatrist, examine him," added His Worship.

Ross Hogle, Belleville, was fined $100.00 and costs, totalling $115.50 after being convicted of impersonating a police officer. Hogle was arrested last week on the Collegiate campus following disturbances which alarmed residents of the district and resulted in his arrest.

May Slunden, 20, of Toronto, appeared charged with vagrancy. She pleaded guilty and was given six days, to date from the time of her arrest. Later the girl was given into the custody of Mrs (Major) Alderman of the Salvation Army who assured the court she would obtain transportation for the girl back to her home in Toronto.

Compulsory Cooperation of Railways Proposed by Hungerford

C. N. R. PRESIDENT FAVORS TRIBUNAL TO CARRY OUT PLAN

Hungerford Attacks C. P. R. Unification Plan in Statement Today

DISCUSSES 'ECONOMIES'

Says Unification 'Impractical', Cooperation Only Feasible Way

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—Compulsory co-operation, enforced by an arbitral tribunal, was proposed as a remedy for Canada's railway ills by President R. J. Hungerford of the Canadian National Railways today. He advanced the suggestion as he presented to the Senate Railways Committee his case against unification proposals of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Co-operation would be developed under the Hungerford plan through a three-man board, the members nominees of railways and the chairmen representing the "public interest". The board would endeavor to obtain agreement of the railways on cooperative projects "feasible, productive of economy and in the public interest."

If either railway refused to agree completely and if he is not settled through the arbitral tribunal which could be set up under the 1933 statute enabling co-operation.

Britain to Speed Up Civil Aviation Sir John Reith Heads Imperial Airways

London, June 14—(AP)—Sir John Reith, director general of the British Broadcasting Corporation, today was appointed chairman of Imperial Airways to speed up the development of Great Britain's civil aviation.

The appointment was announced in the House of Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air.

Sir John, guiding hand in the development of the government-controlled BBC, succeeds Sir George Bebarrell, whose resignation was forced following publication of the report of Lord Cadman's committee on civil aviation.

The report criticized certain aspects of the administration of Imperial Airways. Press reports at the time said Sir George had told the Board of Directors, his other interests did not allow him the necessary time to devote to Imperial Airways he is managing director of the Dunlop Rubber Company and director of many other corporations.

UNITED CHURCH LOSING ITS HOLD STATES PREMIER

Says Many of its Ministers "Will Not Grapple With Realities"

OTHER CHARGES MADE

Hamilton, Ont., June 14—(CP)—The United Church of Canada faced charges today it had "lost touch with public sentiment." Premier Mitchell Hepburn lashed out yesterday at what he termed "sanctimonious, pussyfooting preachers" and "parlor socialists" in the United Church.

The Premier's unexpected attack came during an address to a convention meeting of the Ontario Social Democratic Association. "A lot of people will think I will go straight to hell for making this statement," said the Premier.

Referring to the protest of United Church ministers in Toronto against the street car strike, Premier Hepburn charged the United Church was losing its hold on the people because many of its Ministers, "won't grapple with realities."

Belongs to Church

"I'll be the last to leave the church myself," he continued. "I view with general alarm the attitude of those who feel that society owes them a living, but I view with greater alarm the attitude of those ministers who would not support the government in trying to relieve that belief."

JAPANESE DRIVE ON CHENGCHOW BLOCKED BY FLOOD

Reported Army Has Withdrawn 43 Miles From Railway Line

DIKES ARE BREACHED

Shanghai, June 14—(AP)—Flood waters rushing through breached dikes of the mighty Yellow river blocked the Japanese before Chengchow today, while engineers battled air with the ways of the meandering stream, heir one of the greatest catastrophes of the century threatened.

Chinese reports from the front said the Japanese had been forced to withdraw 43 miles and 12 miles east of Chengchow on the Lunghai railway.

These reports said the boiling yellow water was 10 feet deep north of Chengchow, that numerous villages were inundated, and that the flood was two and three feet deep at several points where it crossed the Lunghai Railway.

Deliberate destruction of the dikes, which in two places overflow the river to a course above the Lunghai railway, was undertaken by Japanese artillery fire and airplane bombardment by the Chinese themselves to impede the Japanese, it was said by these experts to be largely responsible for the present overflow. However, there have been heavy rains.

Wedding Plans of Heiress, Salesman Upset by 'Principle' of Clergyman

New York, June 14 (AP)—An Episcopal clergymen who said, "I don't care to marry two people of varying social and financial standing" today upset the wedding plans of 24 year old Andrea Luckenbach shipping heiress and William Dobbs, 32, butler and egg salesman and amateur rider.

The minister was the Rev. William Grimes, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at Great Neck, Long Island, who was to have officiated at the wedding this afternoon.

The Rev. Grimes denied that other clergyman on the part of Andre's father Commodore Edgar F. Luckenbach merchant-millionaire shipping magnate or fear of a reprimand from his ecclesiastical superiors had led him to decline to perform the ceremony.

"I have a principle," he explained.

The groom-to-be's mother, Mrs. Henry Herron of Forest Hills, Long Island, said the wedding would "go on as scheduled", though she did not know where it would be held.

Commodore Luckenbach, head of the shipping line which bears his name, has frowned on the match, declaring Andrea is still "too young."

Miss Luckenbach will inherit $1,000,000 three years hence from the estate of her mother, the late Andrea Maria Fenwick Luckenbach of Toronto.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. W. Tinsman, Science Service Meteorologist

Mountain climate! Who is not thrilled by the prospect of a vacation in the mountains? There is a reason. The pure, invigorating mountain air is due to the greatly decreased number of dust particles, which are very numerous at low levels. These, due both to less dust and less water vapor, the air is highly transparent to the sun's radiation. While the days may be warm, the evenings and nights are delightfully fresh and cool, because of the very rapid outgoing radiation through the almost dustless, dry air. Also, snow is often found at moderate altitudes, especially in early summe...

CADET CAMPBELL IS FOUND DEAD

Believed to Have Been Brooding Over Death of Lad

Kingston, Ont., June 14 (CP)—Cadet H. G. Campbell, of Port Arthur, was found dead Monday in the dormitory of the Royal Military College, with a bullet wound in his body. An inquest has been ordered.

Cadet Campbell was a pal of Cadet Kenneth Smith, 19-year-old A. A. Smith, Chief Engineer of the Ontario Highway Department, who died in hospital here on May 30 in the college. At that time there was a slight sailing party on the lake and Campbell, in the mixup, pulled Smith's shirt off. Smith stepped back on the bed and died within a few minutes from hemorrhage of the brain.

At the time Campbell was heart broken over the affair and was said to have been brooding over the death of his friend since then.

It was learned, that the death occurred while the closing exercises were being held at the college and these exercises were carried on with the blackest of Campbell's death being made.

Ascot, England, June 14—(CP)—The fashionable Ascot race meeting began in glorious weather today.

The King and Queen, in a state coach drawn by six cream horses headed a procession of carriages from the palace to open the first race. His Majesty wore a morning suit with a white carnation in the buttonhole and a grey top hat. The Queen wore a gown of rose pink over beige with a big straw hat of the same shade.

Others in the royal party were Princess Elizabeth and Margaret, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, and the Princess Royal, the Earl of Harewood, her husband.

Bright sunlight displayed the colorful gowns of the fashion world in the royal enclosure. Mauve seemed to be the dominating color.

Princess Elizabeth and her Peter Beatty only last night from Prince Rock Brian, won the Ascot gold vase over two-mile course, defeating Sir Woodman Burbidge's Scorolaite by 1 1/2 lengths.

Attempting to Save Children in Car, Douglas Barlow is Seriously Hurt

Jumping on the running board of a runaway automobile, said to have been started by two very small children, in an effort to save the kiddies, 13-year-old Douglas Barlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barlow, 31 Highland Ave., sustained a fractured jaw, badly lacerated left ear, injured leg and internal injuries early last evening when the car crashed into a tree.

Barlow lad was taken to the Belleville General Hospital, where his condition was reported as favourable today, Dr. G. S. Cronk, attending physician announced.

Harry Mountenay Hopkinton, parked his automobile on the slight grade of Willard Street, in this city, while visiting his sister, leaving the vehicle in gear to act as a brake on the grade. During Mr. Mountenay's absence, however, it is said, that two small children by the names of Redquest, who reside on Willard Street, climbed into the vehicle and in some unknown manner started the engine, although the children are said were given as five and seven respectively. Mr. Mountenay had left the ignition keys in the car, he later informed Traffic Officer D. Ellis, who investigated.

With the vehicle in reverse gear the car gained momentum. Young Barlow running the danger the two small Redcaps children were placed in ran out into the street and grabbed the running board in an effort to stop the then speeding vehicle. Before he lad could turn off the ignition key, however, the automobile crashed across the Mary Street side-walk, at the Willard Street intersection, and collided with a tree, pinning young Barlow between the body of the vehicle and the tree. He was later removed from his position by Mr. Mountenay and other residents who had heard the disturbance.

The Barlow boy was bleeding badly about the face and left leg, where he had suffered severe lacerations. It was upon examination at the hospital by Dr. Cronk, that the fractured jaw was discovered. Many favourable comments of the brave act of the 13-year-old Douglas Barlow were heard by eye-witnesses in trying to save two small children when endangered.

CHANGES URGED

Ottawa, June 14—(CP)—The report of the Royal Commission that investigated Canadian penitentiaries was tabled in the House of Commons today by Justice Minister Lapointe.

Relating to General D. M. Ormond, Superintendent of Penitentiaries, the official summary stated:

Would Retire Gen. Ormond

The Commission reports against the present Superintendent, Major-General D. M. Ormond, and recommends his immediate retirement from the service. Gigli Continues To Sing While Putting Out Fire

London, June 14 (AP)—Beniamino Gigli, Italian tenor, turned fireman last night during a performance of the opera "La Boheme" —and did not miss a note.

A brilliant Covent Garden audience which included two members of the royal family Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise, looked on in astonishment when the singer unintentionally lighted a stage stove in the Paris garret scene.

A real fire started instead of the glow supposed to be cast by an electrical device. Smoke rapidly filled the stage almost getting the best of Gigli and three other singers.

Behind the scenes firemen had hoses primed as Gigli—still singing —stepped into the wings and got a bucket of water. It took a second bucketful to quench the flames.

The performance went on as if nothing had happened.

ZONE SYSTEM PLAN FAVORED

Two Plans Indicated by British Prime Minister

London, June 14—(AP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that Great Britain planned no air defense action because of the bombings of British shipping in the Mediterranean, but was not among the dead table guests, when the Premier spoke.

The terms in which the Premier expressed himself "should not be taken too literally," Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's comment this morning in private conversation with reporters, but enough truth in what the Premier said toward cessation of these attacks."

Difficulty in First Plan

The first provides for the establishment of safety zones in ports and harbors, which "although it presents considerable difficulties is being actively investigated," Prime Minister said.

The second plan, he continued, was proposed Saturday by the Spanish government.

Moscow, June 14— (AP)—Soviet Russia is polishing up her fighting forces as war alarms sounded in Europe. With Germany making threatening gestures toward Czechoslovakia, leaders of the Soviet Republic are—

Demanding greater discipline in the army and navy;

Pushing on heavier armaments from the factories.

Observers Watching

Foreign observers have been unable to learn what Russia intends to do in a military way if there is a German attack on Czechoslovakia, whom Russia is pledged to aid if France does.

Another question mark is how strong the morale of the people is after a years ago and a shake-up of other officers left the Red Army, Soviet authorities repeatedly say

Canadian Flying Ace is Called Homing Pigeon by World Flier

Detroit, June 14 (CP)—Herbert Stephen, news editor of The Print-Finishers, flier for the convention of the Advertising Federation of America, landed here today in unusual rescue while on a tour of Canada's Northland in Greenfield Village.

Mr. Stephens' buckhorse in place in which Col. James Fitzmaurice, chief of the Irish Free State Air Force, and Capt. Hermann Koehl, Baron Ehrenfeld had to make a forced landing on Greenly Island off the Canadian Atlantic Coast in 1928, after a flight from Ireland.

Stephen told how Duke Schiller, Canadian flying ace, was sent by the New York Times to take the stranded fliers back to the mainland. Schiller made the trip in a flight from the island, after the rescue. Fitzmaurice asked Schiller where they were.

"Don't know," Schiller replied laconically.

"Here's your map?"

"Haven't got any."

"Where's your compass?"

"Doesn't work."

At that point the airplane ran into a snowstorm. Fitzmaurice began to worry.

"Where are we going?" he asked once more.

"I'm not sure some people," Duke assured him, plunging farther into the storm.

After some anxious moments, they dived out of the snow and landed on the ice. A distant fleet that Duke negotiated perfectly. Newsmen rushed to greet them as they stepped out of the plane.

Asked about the trip from Greenly, Fitzmaurice replied with emphasis, "That man Schiller is no pilot. He's a—homing pigeon."

Kime and Edward Burley, Picton residents, were rescued from a watery predicament by members of the Picton Edward Yacht Club after three-quarters of an hour immersion.

Mr. Reddick and Harold Rattan, Picton, driving along the Glenora Road saw the men clinging to the upturned keel. Racing back to the clubhouse of the Yacht Club they notified Messrs. Fred Vandervoort and Erwin Allan who dashed to the scene in a fast motor boat.

The men, not much the worse for their prolonged ducking, were brought back to Picton in the boat, one of the "skimmer" type belonging to Clifford Seeley, was towed back to the clubhouse by the rescue party.

Wellington Council Displays Progressive Spirit Since Election

Residents of Village Appreciate Improvements Made to Attract Visitors

Good naturedly charging the village council with being "tourist-minded", residents of the village of Wellington are now voicing their appreciation on the efforts the village fathers since their election to office.

Completion of the erection of a sewage disposal system that takes sanitary refuse from the village into Lake Ontario, eliminating marsh odors that have been detrimental to village during canning seasons and tainted many wells, has made this work.

Norway Maple trees have been placed in vacant spots on the Main Street, with a number of new ornamental trees placed in Community Park.

Five hundred thousand pickerel fry have been placed in West Lake, and commercial fishing eliminated, and an extensive advertising campaign instituted by the council.

A possible aftermath of the new condition is seen in the fact that the innumerable cottages that dot the shores of Lake Ontario at this point have been "spoken for" for the coming summer, while numerous requests for camps and cottages are being received by the officials in charge of publicity.

Two near-record pike were taken from West Lake over the week end by a group of London fishermen. One of the beauties topped the scales at sixteen pounds while the other weighed fourteen and one half pounds. A fine catch of pickerel rounded out the "tail" of the Western Ontario lake Walleye.

Tourist Advantages Of Quinte District Outlined in Article

Montreal Daily Star in its special Holiday Edition this week, which is being read by tens of thousands of continent and abroad, calls attention to the tourist advantages of the Bay of Quinte in a special feature article.

"At Trenton—where the Dominion Government has established a new modern lock—you enter from the south entrance of the famous Murray Canal, 2,000 feet long, which leads you directly across the province from Lake Ontario to the picturesque Bay of Quinte.

"From Trenton to Napanee extends the Bay of Quinte, widely known to countless thousands of vacationers—the Bay of Quinte, with its islands and its deeply indented with deep arms that stretch inland to the wooded hill-sides—enough to attract anyone's interest. Here the Bay of Quinte between Prince Edward County and the mainland. Famed for its fishing, its duck shooting, its beauty as well as its delightful resorts the section is becoming more popular as few days' visit. Access to Prince Edward County is quite easy and the trip across the bay in the motor car or coach, by water, if you are cruising", states the article.

Expresses Desire to Be Sent to Chair

Miami, Fla., June 14 — (AP) — Franklin Pierce McCall was reported today to have expressed hope he would be sent to the electric chair rather than be given life imprisonment for the kidnapping and death of James Bailey Cash, Jr.

Clyde Tolson, a special cell guard in the jail where McCall is being held said the 31-year-old truck driver is giving evidence of "cracking" under the strain of waiting for evidence against him to be presented before a grand jury now in session.

Several times recently McCall had "wondered why" he took the 4 1-2 year old child from his home in Princeton the night of May 26, the guard said.

Vancouver Papers Raise Subscription Rates to 75c a Month

Vancouver, June 14 — Evening newspapers here have increased their price from 5 cents a month to 75 because of the "rising cost in newspaper production," according to an editorial in the Vancouver Sun.

Influenza and the common cold are responsible for nearly half the time lost to industry through illness.

TURTLE SEIZES FOOT OF CHILD

Beak of Reptile Penetrates Shoe of Little Girl, Wounding Her Toe

Excited wails of a small unidentified girl, who between her frightened efforts pointed to the ground near where she stood along the fence of the bay shore road north of the bay of the lake attracting hurriedly a member of the fishing colony near that location on the run. Arriving at the spot he found the child struggling with a huge turtle whose heavy beak, in a death-like grip on the child's foot, had penetrated the shoe, and the flesh of one toe deeply.

Summoning aid, the resident and his assistant ran forward to immobilize the head of the turtle in a manner exposing the leathery beck. Three or four times with a keen knife a knife severed the head of the turtle which still remained fastened to the shoe and foot. A wooden pry was then necessary to disengage the beak.

The child, encountering the turtle, had extended an exploratory toe which the turtle promptly seized.

Fiery Speech Made

Hess in his Sunday speech, accused Czechoslovakia of being a menace to the peace of Europe, so long as the Praha government failed to recognize the autonomy demands of the German areas.

One Sudeten German leader told Havas he was convinced of the good intentions of Premier Hodza in the negotiations. He claimed, however, that Czech opinion was so ill-informed about the Sudeten Germans that the government would lose face with its Czechoslovak followers if it yielded to Henlein's demands.

Other Sudeten Germans are seen as anxious to reach an accord. They say that a conflict with Germany would first be fought in their territory, and they wish to avert this.

Times Takes Issue

London, June 14—(CP-Havas)—The Times (Independent) today had sharp words for Rudolf Hess, Chancellor Hitler's Deputy in the Nazi party, who on Sunday at Stuttgin asserted Czechoslovakia was a menace to the peace of Europe.

"The prospect of reaching an agreement satisfactory for both government and nationalities is regarded as by no means hopeless," the Times stated. "Not wild foolish language, but a sense of perspective and patience, can yet solve peacefully the international problem cumulated by past mistakes and complicated by international ambitions."

Crisis Not Over

Berlin, June 14.—(CP-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Volkischer Beobachter said today the crisis in Czechoslovakia was not over and would not be until satisfaction is accorded the 2,500,000 Germans living under the Praha government.

Calling for revoking of the military measures taken a month ago by Praha, the newspaper asserted Sunday's Municipal elections settled none of the outstanding questions.

"Foreign nations, and particularly the western democracies, whether they like it or not, must realize they are dealing with the whole German people, within and without the Reich's frontiers, whenever vital German rights are involved", the newspaper said.

MARTIN SUSPENDS FIVE OFFICIALS

Stakes Leadership in Using Power to Purge Internal Opposition

Washington, June 14—(AP)—Homer Martin, who left the Ministry to become a powerful figure in the committee for industrial organization, staked his leadership of the United Auto Workers Union today on a purge of internal opposition.

Martin invoked his emergency powers as International U.A.W. President yesterday in suspending five of the Union's officers for leading a disgruntled minority faction. He termed them an "irresponsible group."

Six others out of a board membership of 24 promptly threw their support to the suspended men. The next step will be a trial in Detroit before the remaining members of the Board.

The suspension order included four of the union's five vice presidents: Richard T. Frankenstein, Walter N. Wells, Wyndham Mortimer and Hall. The fifth man was George Addes, secretary-treasurer, whom Martin replaced by the temporary appointment of Delmond Garst.

Termed Declaration of War

Martin said at a press conference he did not intend to see the union "used as a tool to assist or comfort any alien dictatorship." He added that an "insignificant communist element" had influenced "some unthinking people" in the union.

A member of the suspended faction termed Martin's move a "declaration of war" which threatened to "split the union wide open."

Members on both sides of the issue expressed belief the 'struggle for control of the U.A.W. might have a far-reaching effect on the whole C.I.O. movement.

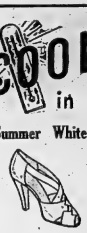
Hitler Building for Next 300 Years

Berlin, June 14—(CP)—Chancellor Hitler laid the cornerstone of a monumental edifice on Potsdamerstrasse as the first act in Berlin's huge reconstruction plan to begin simultaneously at 18 different points today.

The building is to become the headquarters for the Nazi home and foreign travel movement.



In his address Hitler said he was building for at least the next 300 years and in view of the vastly increased motor traffic was planning arterial roads as wide as to avoid street congestion problems that were troubling other capitals.

He announced 30,000 dwelling houses would be built this year.

"SLOW TWISTER" WRECKS TEXAS TOWN, KILLING FOURTEEN

Fourteen persons were killed and 40 injured when a "slow twister" ripped through the small west Texas village of Clyde. An unknown number of persons are missing and scores of homes were wrecked. Communications with the outside world were destroyed and it was several hours before the plight of Clyde became known to rescue agencies.

CARE WITH FIRES

People are thinking over their vacation plans and those who go into the forest land should have stamped upon their minds the thought that they will create grave damage if they throw a careless match or do not guard any fire they set out for the cooking of meals.

This wooded territory is one of the great assets of the Dominion, on which depends much of her wealth and prosperity and should fires attack the forests, a great share of the third of a billion dollar income industry might easily be lost, lives threatened and settlements wiped out.

One does not even have to go into the woods to cause trouble. One has only to drive the main highway when the grass is dry and carelessly tilt a cigarette or cigar butt or lighted match from the window of the door of the car and just drive on without a look behind. If they should fall lighted in grass on the highway the fire may spread like lightning to the fields, damage orchard trees or trees skirting the highways and fences, as well as cause peril to the farmers. It is not unknown for a match to start a conflagration of real size along the highway, calling out the entire resources of men power in the neighborhood. It must not be forgotten that in the country there are not the highly organized fire departments and equipment that cities have and a fight against a fire raging in the fields of grain or running across stubble calls for generalship and every effort to check it, whether barns and dwellings and machinery may go up in smoke.

Yet many men will toss or drop a cigarette or cigar or match out of a car. Most of them may fall on the road, but the others may be in the dry grass. Then it is a fire that has to be fought but the offending motorist is gone out of sight.

Fire losses are the most complete losses the nation can experience. No one gains by fire. It is distinctly loss of wealth. Canada's fire loss is far too heavy.

A FLASHLIGHT AND A PEDESTRIAN

In the news columns of the papers a few days ago appeared a bit of advice to roadway pedestrians to carry flashlights. With modern high-speed traffic and the increase of vehicular traffic, it seems the height of courting danger not to guard oneself when walking on the dark road in the dark unprotected. A flashlight or reflector could prove a lifesaver.

Such a precaution is not only a safety to the pedestrian but also a safeguard to the motorist. At night, it seems almost impossible to catch a glimpse of a walker until too late, or if the motorist succeeds in protecting the pedestrian he may be risking his own neck and that of his passengers or perhaps persons in another car, should he have to swerve his car sharply out of the way of the pedestrian.

There is no doubt that lives would be saved if walkers carried some means of warning the car driver. Unfortunately transients who are without money use the highways and have not the means of owning a flashlight or a reflector. They could surely carry a piece of paper or something white, which would be visible.

Drivers know how difficult it used to be to see a buggy ahead for the narrow width of the wheels is almost invisible and the body of the buggy is not to be seen until the drivers were upon it. But now lamps are necessary. Bicycles also were very risky vehicles to use at night on roads until the use of reflectors became general for the narrow strip of the bicycle and-rider ahead made them difficult to discern in the dark.

The worst spot in which a pedestrian may find himself is when cars meet while one of them is passing him. In the clash of the lights of the two cars the vision of the oncoming driver is practically eliminated back of the bonds of light of the headlamps, all behind being intense darkness. In that dark may be a pedestrian. He may be struck because it is almost impossible to see him.

A MAN'S OPINION

Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan said the other day that his opinion on politics and economic questions was not worth much because of his experience and of much less right to speak authoritatively do not hesitate to discuss every side of economics and some very unwise statements have been made by them since the year 1929 when the period started which gave rise to the most amazing crop of prophets of world affairs and business.

It is not that Mr. Morgan does not study the great political and economic questions. He does not scorn the multitude of the people who might like to know what he has to say.

His reticence is probably due to the very nature of such a genius of finance, not talking too much as so many persons are wont to do. He is spending the time in thinking out problems while others spend time in getting their opinions before the public.

But just the same people would like to know what Mr. Morgan thinks, though after all a man's opinion to be of real value to himself must be his own opinion wrought out of his contacts with life and tried in the furnace of his own experience. A man if he applies his own wisdom to business may succeed but if he tries to apply another man's opinions in his business may not prove so successful. In the final analysis the opinion is in a large sense the man.

BELLEVILLE BEACHES, an attractive name, suggestive of cool, sandy reaches, good bathing, particularly for children, sandy bottom, shelving gradually out to deep water with no pitfalls or hole traps to afford menace to novice bathers. Belleville Beaches, at last showing form and substance and rounding into the form contemplated by the promoters, citizens intent upon giving Belleville something to be proud of, something useful as well as ornamental. Last season much work was put on the Belleville Beaches project by citizens interested, assisted materially by the City Council — all with the objective of placing no additional burden upon the tax rolls. Many citizens of Belleville and others enjoyed the bathing facilities of Belleville Beaches last season, as many as five hundred being present in one day. This season promises to be an even busier one with the constant improvement of the beach and surroundings. Trees have been set out and everything is being done to make this a beauty and pleasure spot, contributing materially to the health and happiness of all who patronize it. This season's program of improvement calls for considerable expenditure of money and a campaign is now on to raise this sum by popular contribution among the friends of the project, and the cheerful response already made indicates that the objective will be more than reached. BOOST BELLEVILLE BEACHES.

"ONE HOPEFUL NOTE" is the title of the leading editorial in Maclean's Magazine for June 15, and describing the column for that "One Hopeful Note" the following paragraph stands out, as the boys say, "like a sore thumb" — being perhaps the "One Hopeful Note" referred to, and it may be gratifying to note that the "One Hopeful Note" was sounded by a Belleville citizen, in fact the First Citizen, His Worship Mayor Jamieson Bone. Here's the paragraph referred to:

"Large audiences of business men in many cities and towns were cheering speakers, who, like Mayor Bone, of Belleville, were declaring that neither provincial and Federal Governments in Canada are concerned more with politics and job-seeking than with the business of government."

Strong words, Mr. Mayor, worthy of profound consideration, awaiting evidence in rebuttal which will no doubt be offered by those so charged.

Preceding this reference to Mayor Jamieson Bone in the Maclean editorial was the following paragraph:

"Veteran members of the Commons were agreeing with veteran members of the Press Gallery that this was the most futile Parliament in Canadian history."

THE VETERANS HAVE IT, APPARENTLY.

The Maclean editorial goes on to remind "Tax-ridden citizens" that the remedy for existing alleged evils and defects in the state of the nation is through the ballot-box. "Only the people themselves can make government in a democracy" says Maclean's, which declares "We have a notion that out of the present welter of unrest improvement will come."

Like a voice crying in the wilderness Mayor Bone's contention that the taxation levied on property owners is oppressive and unfair and out of all proportion to benefits received, has been heard in the cities and is reverberating all over the Dominion, with the result that people are sitting up and thinking, which in itself is a good thing. Perhaps they will even think less of politics and more of the common good as a result. In any event good will come of it for no system of government or economics is so perfect that improvement can not be made after defects are pointed out.

Boring Through to Australia

Can you visualize a drill 9,200 miles long, seven feet high, five feet wide? Such a drill would approximate the diameter of the earth.

If you can visualize such an opening you can grasp the idea of the amount of ore removed and milled by the Canadian gold producers in a single year. By the end of 1938 milling capacity of Canada's gold mines will be at the order of 17,500,000 tons annually.

The figure is important for several reasons. It augests the activity and resulting prosperity in the industry. It suggests big payrolls, good wages, immense consumption of supplies. It also brings up some questions.

Are we developing new ore as fast as we are using it? The answer to that is in the affirmative. At this rate, shall we continue in the future to replace expended ore at a rate to keep pace with milling capacity? Nobody knows.

The really significant suggestion which these big figures convey is that it is absolutely essential that prospecting in Canada be encouraged. If his country is to continue in the top flight of gold producing nations we must support the ore finders and ore searchers. We must find new cake if we are to continue to eat it. We are convinced that the cake is there but it must be sought, laboriously and expensively.

Nature did the cooking acons ago and hid the product cleverly. In the passage of time a race of men was developed, men who used metals, and products. In the logical division of labor some of their number became expert in the finding of ore, as others became expert in its smelting and its fabrication. These ore seekers are the prospectors of today. They have a wonderful field in which to work but they are hamstrung by red tape and lowan unless money can be made available to send them on their quests into the wilderness. They are valuable, they are vital to the success of our mining industry.

We have plenty of miners, plenty of smelter men. We have a plethora of railway men and highway workers. But we have no surplus of good prospectors. The ones we have we should employ. Fully—Northern Miner.

That Body of Yours

Hearing Aids Should Be Fitted Just As Glasses Are Fitted

An individual who is hard of hearing meets a friend whom he knows is similarly afflicted and is surprised at the improvement of the friend's hearing, due to the use of a new hearing aid he is wearing. His friend's hearing is so much improved that he decides that he must get one of these new hearing aids. To his dismay he finds that the hearing aid which so greatly helped his friend's hearing is absolutely unsuitable for him, as the increased amount of sound actually disturbs him and the sounds are less clear than with the old hearing aid.

Why the difference in hearing aids? Are not hearing aids just meant to increase sound?

The individual whose eyesight is failing can go into a five and ten-cent store and purchase glasses that will magnify an object so that he may see it more plainly but if he wants his particular eyes fitted to correct poor vision due to farsightedness, long sightedness, astigmatism or other defect, he must consult an optometrist or oculist. Similarly with the hearing.

Loss of hearing is the same in all cases. Some cases are due to frequent colds and chronic catarrh, the inflammation of which may extend up the air-carrying tube from throat to middle ear and set up an inflammation there. The inflammation may affect the three little bones which transmit sound from the ear drum across the middle ear to the ending or plate of the hearing (auditory) nerve, so that they become anklyosed (one bone) which cannot conduct the sound properly from ear drum to the nerve ending in brain.

Then there is the hard of hearing due to deafness of the hearing nerve itself caused by infection, injury or other conditions.

A physician can test the hearing with the ticking of a watch or a tuning fork placed on the ear drum and then at certain distances away from the ear, or he may place the watch behind the ear (on the big lump). Generally speaking (not always however) if the ticking is not heard so well at lump back of ear as some distance to the hearing nerve is suspected. If sound is not heard so well at the ear drum as at some distance to the sound conducting bones, due to middle ear disease is suspected.

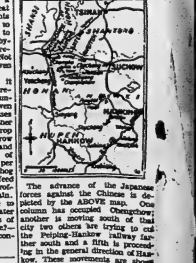
The reason then, is that those who are hard of hearing should be fitted with hearing aids best suited for their particular type of hard of hearing.

INVENTORS NEEDED

The Huntingdon Gleaner is probably correct when it says that there are many things in men's clothing which could stand improvement. Deep down in the hearts of men there is undoubtedly a prayer for the birth of some inventive genius who will evolve a few gadgets to relieve men from the persecution of their clothes.

For example how about someone inventing something that will make trousers permanently retain their crease? The average man spends a mint of money every year having that crease put in his trousers. A few hours after pressing them he wiggles them "baggy" and goes right back again for more pressing.

Another menace is the shirt that refuses to stay down in the pants. Still other needs are as follows:



A necktie made so that it will make a nice knot first time every time and stay that way.

A stiff shirt that will not come through with a right to the jaw every time you make an unguarded move.

A handkerchief that will fold well for the breast pocket without five minutes of toil suggestive of a puzzle contest.

A color chart that will show how to avoid combinations likely to irritate the wives.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

STRAWBERRIES
FLOOD MARKET
Berries of Fine Quality And Sell at 15 Cents Per Box

Forerunners of what is now conceded by growers to be a near-record crop, strawberries, some of them measuring one and one half inches across the "nose" flooded the city market this morning.

Prices shot down sharply as further quantities of the berries augmented early arrivals, later in the morning. Boxes were offered at 20 cents each while in some cases, case lots were quoted at 15 cents per box. Near noon prices receded to 15 cents per box.

A decrease in price of 15 cents per box from the quotations of early Saturday morning was noted today with vendors prophesying a further decline as the season advances.

Ideal weather conditions, consistent rains tempered with warm sunny days have resulted in the quality and size of the berry this year, a prominent grower stated. "As far as my patch is concerned, it has been productive of the finest quality of berry so far that it has ever grown. The berries are forming quickly and rapidly," he continued, "whether new berries are forming quickly and will be ready for market within the next few days.

"If canning factories do not contract for the crop, some of the growers will be hard put to find a ready market for a crop that now gives indications of being the best harvested in these parts for a number of years," he added.

A slim display of spring vegetables and fruits overshadowed by the red luscousness of the strawberries, was offered today with prices of the week end remaining firm.

INDIANS TO HAVE HUNTING GROUNDS

Areas in Northern Parts From Quebec to B.C. to Be Set Aside

Ottawa, June 14.— (CP) —Vast areas of forestland in northern parts of the provinces from Quebec to British Columbia are to be set aside as restricted areas for fur-trapping mainly in the interests of Canada's increasing Indian population. Work on these projects has already been undertaken.

These and other measures designed to make the Indian wards of the Dominion self-supporting in the environment to which they are adapted were outlined in the House of Commons last night by resources Minister Crerar. The House was considering the $5,000,000 vote required to administer the Indian Affairs Branch.

In recent years the Indian population has been increasing by 1 1-2 per cent a year and is now approximately 118,000. They are wards of the Government which took from them their heritage in the lands they held before white men came to this continent.

Consideration of the Indian vote was featured by an appeal, accompanied by details of Indian orgies of earlier days, for strict enforcement of the law against the "Potlatch".

This ancient ceremony of Indians gathering for gift exchanging was declared by J. S. Taylor (Ind., Nanaimo) to still bear some of the most objectionable features of the old days and he wanted it stopped.

C. N. R. PRESIDENT

estimated in the C.P.R. plan, are largely unrealizable, President Hungerford declared in a 5,000-word brief attacking the unified management proposals Sir Edward Beatty, C.P.R. president, laid before the committee May 24. Those realizable could be obtained through co-operation without risking "the inherent perils of unification".

It was feasible to accomplish under co-operation everything in the valuable interest contained in the unification plan. Abandonment of 5,000 miles of lines, proposed in the Beatty brief, would be "an unwarranted clock of Canada back thirty years. Such a step would be economically involved." he added.

Unification "Impractical".

Mr. Hungerford told the committee the unification plan "has neither the merits of public or of private ownership and, in my opinion, is impractical and would ultimately lead to serious involvement of the state." Railway savings purchased at the expense of the development of Canada and of a wide disturbance in the already disturbed labor and material markets of the country would be too dearly bought, he said. "Neither country insisted of being better off would be worse off.

Bank Interest Loss is Expenses.

"Yet it is only to the extent that a program of drastic reduction in expenses could be achieved that the public would be warranted in inviting the perils of ownership and of the great difficulties which I foresee in the type of management of the joint enterprise which is now proposed."

In unification there was the grave danger of "a slackening in the morale of the organization, of a lessening of initiative and enthusiasm, a dis sympathetic contact between the management and the men and between the management and the public."

The risks were so great they could be offset only by substantial economies he could not envisage.

Calls C.P.R. "Owner System"

In addition there were financial risks. The C.P.R. plan, while it contemplated technical preservation of the respective ownership of the properties, "really consisted of a permanent fusion of the physical properties and the organization into an indivisible unit." State and private ownership were to go into a partnership "same terms as yet undisclosed."

Reduced to simple terms the case submitted by the Canadian Pacific to the committee was that an unwise venture of the State into the railway field had produced the greatest danger to the future of the nation by the creation of the Canadian National. This danger could only be removed by unification.

C.N.R. Not Danger to Canada

He could not agree that creation of the C.N.R. was a danger to Canada. Those who held that view overlooked the "inherent necessity of public service performed by the railways in providing transportation to communities to which, "as parts of the Dominion, Canada has entitled but which it is impossible to provide on a paying basis."

Looking to the future, he said the Canadian National has far greater potentialities than the C.P.R. because it is better located in relation to the natural resources of the north. If development took place without needless duplication of lines the broad outlook for the development of traffic on the C.N.R. was "decidedly encouraging."

Deficits Not Cost of Operation

Mr. Hungerford said there is a tendency to consider the income deficits of the Canadian National as deficits arising out of operation but this is not so.

For the 15-year period 1922 to 1937 inclusive its operating revenues exceeded its operating expenses by $361,346,000 or an average of $24,090,000 a year. In the five most prosperous years, 1925 to 1929 inclusive, the property earned $253,287,000 over operating expenses. The deficits arose not from operations but from the heavy burden of interest charges.

Mr. Hungerford said that perhaps he was in a favored position to judge the practical economies to be expected from large scale consolidations of railways because he had gone through three such consolidations—the Canadian Northern and Canadian Government Railways into the C.N.R., the C.P.R. with the Grand Trunk Pacific and the C. N. with the Grand Trunk.

C. P. R. Policies Criticized

His experience had been that large scale economies were not produced from consolidations. In his judgment, based upon his extensive experience, the saving of $75,000,000 yearly would never materialize from unification of the C. N. and the C.P.R.

During the past few years co-operation had been attempted in an unfavorable atmosphere. The C.P.R.'s policy of "unification only if unification had made co-operation between the railways less effective than it otherwise might have been."

He suggested the three-man board to study co-operation, saying: "The asserted savings dictate, on examination, into two broad classifications:

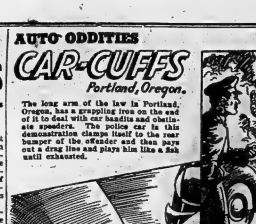
"(1) Those savings based upon assumptions that the quantity of transportation service is greater and the quality of transportation service is higher than is needed, to which I have joined the asserted savings from a drastic program of abandonment of lines, the closing of stations, shops and other repair points and the consolidation of ancillary services. This group totals approximately $55,000,000 a year.

"(2) Those savings which are based on the assumption that Canadian Pacific unit costs can be applied with propriety to Canadian National operations without due regard to differences in geographical distribution of lines and the relative traffic, maintenance and operating problems. This group totals approximately $20,000,000 a year.

Assumptions "Unsound".

"The assumptions which underlie assertions of such savings are, I believe, unsound."

After saying most of the economies realizable under unification could be obtained through co-operation, Mr. Hungerford turned to what could be done under co-operation.



"It is entirely feasible under co-operation to arrange for the abandonment of one or two closely parallelling lines of railway where public interest is not adversely affected," he said. "It is feasible under co-operation to make arrangements for joint stations and terminals where an economy is indicated."

Co-operation.

"It is feasible to arrange for the handling of one company's traffic over another company's line. It is feasible to eliminate duplicative competitive passenger train service to the extent justifiable in the public interest. It is feasible to effect co-operatively with ancillary services. Types of all these economies have been explored and have been demonstrated as entirely practicable and workable."

John Earl Baker, at present head of the International Red Cross relief work here and formerly investigating engineer for the Yellow River Commission, said the course of the flood might strike anywhere on a rough line between Chengchow and Suchow, then into the Grand Canal and along the old bed of the river through north Kiangsu province to the sea.

The old river bed entered the sea 200 miles south of the present outlet on the other side of the Shantung peninsula.

This course would sweep across much of the area now occupied by Japanese troops and lines of communications established in their Shantung campaign to cut the east-west Lunghai railway for an advance upon Hankow, China's provincial capital, 300 miles south of Chengchow.

The river, besides cutting off the Japanese advance and hindering its communications, was sending a stream of Chinese peasant refugees toward the west, driven from their homes by the rising waters.

SNAPPING TURTLES BECOME A THREAT

Amphibians Crossing Highway on Bay Bridge Road Endanger Cars

Over-size snapping turtles, some almost as large as small wash tubs, it is shown by those caught and killed, have become the latest threat to motorists using the bay bridge road evenings. Apparently the result of rough water of the bay on the west side of the bridge due to high winds during past few days, the amphibians have been deserting the bay in droves, crossing to the east side overland and using the highway at Zwicks Island on trance as a crossing point.

Motorist, in an attempts to escape hitting the mon-stacked turtles have been swerving dangerously on the road, narrowly missing collisions with approaching cars.

Residents along the bay bridge road, regarding the turtles as one of the greatest of game delicacies, have been busily engaged killing them off, but the market for turtles which at one time was a productive one, has been nil.

One specimen captured last evening was estimated by high nearly one hundred pounds of vicious bulk.

Police Blotter

Lorne Kellaway, Everett street, reported the theft of his bicycle to local police yesterday. Young Kellaway had parked his "bike" in a barn at the rear of the family residence on Everett street earlier in the day. It was not reported recovered today, police revealed.

Even local motorists, despite continued warnings, continue to violate the city's one-hour parking by-law with the conventional results that police stickers are first affixed to windshields of the vehicles with subsequent summonses being issued the reported offenders, police stated today. "We have repeatedly warned motorists that the city parking by-laws must be strictly adhered to, but strange as it may seem local motorists seem to be the greatest offenders," police officials stated this morning, when five summonses were issued in the matter.

The continuance of fine summerlike weather has resulted in a general falling off of transients seeking sleeping quarters at the police station these fine June nights, only five sabling shelter last night.

EMERSON—WILSON

Rankin. (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Rankin, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, June 11th., when Ethel, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wilson of Fuller, became the bride of Andrew Emerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Emerson of Moira. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Marshall, B.A., rector of the Presbyterian church.

The bride looked lovely in a hand embroidered sheer gown of robin's egg blue with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and baby's breath.

The young couple were attended by Miss Myrtle Emerson, sister of the groom and Mr. James Wilson, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony Mrs. MacDonald served a delicious lunch.

The happy couple left by motor for the United States, amid showers of confetti and the good wishes of their many friends. For travelling the bride wore a rosewood crepe coat with brown accessories. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Moira.

HOW TO MAKE ICED TEA
Infuse the brewing temperature of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh boiling water. After the tea has stood for three minutes, strain it. While hot, add 1¼ cups of granulated sugar and the juice of 2 lemons. Stir well and pour in the cold water; add crushed ice and serve. Do not allow the tea to cool before adding the ice, otherwise it will be cloudy. Garnish with lemon slices cleverly. Some with chipped ice.

Reply to Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me how should acknowledge a written invitation. I have received from my boy friend's mother, inviting me to spend a few days at their beach cottage, which is some distance from here. She is anxious to meet me and I have not met his people. What should I say when I answer, if I should answer it.

E.

This kind of hospitable note of invitation should be answered and as soon as possible. I am delighted that your friend's mother wrote you a "direct" invitation, for so often business, especially mothers of young men take for granted that an invitation of this kind, may properly be given by the young men themselves. A well-bred girl waits for the direct invitation from the hostess, and your friend's mother takes the correct point of view about this.

Your note of acceptance might read something like this:

Dear Mrs. Wells,

How very kind of you to invite me to come to visit you for the week-end of July 4 fourth. You make me very happy by your thoughtful and hospitable invitation, and I am delighted to accept. Jack has told me such charming things about you, and I have been wishing for ever so long to know you and your family.

As you suggest, I shall arrive on the five-thirty train on Friday, and can, if it is convenient to you, stay until early Tuesday morning.

Friendliest greetings to you from Mother and me, and high-hearted anticipation of seeing you on the first of July.

Most sincerely yours,

Acceptance or Regrets

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please give me some information as how I should answer a wedding invitation? Please tell me whether I should write a formal acceptance, also when I decline. The invitation reads in the third person?

Should it be answered in the third person?

C.

If your formal invitation is to the church only, it does not require a reply. But a formal invitation (a third person invitation) to the reception or wedding breakfast does require an answer, also written in the third person.

Write your answer on the first page of double-sheeted letter-paper, and write the words as nearly as possible as they are spaced in the invitation.

Your acceptance reads:

Miss Mary Morris Atwater accepts with pleasure

Mr. and Mrs. John Kent Babcock's kind invitation to their daughter's wedding reception, Tuesday, the thirtieth of June at six o'clock.

Miss Mary Morris Atwater regrets that she is unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. John Kent Babcock's kind invitation for Tuesday, the thirtieth of June

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers).

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

DO YOU LACK DATES, GIRLS?
HERE MEN TELL YOU WHY

Some time ago this column printed a little word from a dateless girl who said the radio was keeping her home, and that was the happy bachelor contentment.

At that time the bachelor-Dad-Donald served a reveal it trend. But since then so many letters have come to this column in answer to the Radio versus Romance problem that the question is worth considering.

And not only is the radio guilty as a date-breaker. Hiking, canoeing, motoring, golf, tennis count in the open and dozens of other things that make for bachelor enjoyment, also leave the dateless girl waiting for the tinkle of the telephone.

We leave the feminine wails out of this discussion and consider the question as revealed by the men. One letter states:

"I've nothing against the girls. In fact, I've a way of falling in love with a girl a week. But as a good many of the fair creatures draw larger pay envelopes than I do, I can't see why outings shouldn't be fifty-fifty.

Scotch Treasurer."

Here's another bachelor's point of view:

"As you know, Miss Fairfax, the day of the parlor sofa, as an anchorage for the boy friend, passed in the like grandpa, or even dad, we can't get a girl to go for a walk without first discussing the weather, until the time for a little hand-holding comes around.

"Today a man has to have a girl who likes to go a-courting, and Lord bless us, the good car isn't all. We've got to take the little pets to night clubs, or out-of-town taverns where the cover charges are as much as a meal. We bachelors would like mighty well to have a few femmes as friends. But we just can't afford the racket.

Lonely Boy."

Another wants a safe and sane marriage. Here's what he says:

"Taking up the question printed in your column the other day of why we bachelors have not married, I think the reason is a good many of us don't want to be hamstrung by matrimony. Some day I hope to meet the right girl, but I want to be sure is the right one, and not have her pull an act on me (they're dozens of acts, Miss Fairfax) such as tears to tantrums and tragedies (real or make-believe). And I don't want to fall into any of these traps.

Safe 'n Sane."

Still another bachelor-woman have lost their femininity and with it, charm. Listen to his lament:

"When I go out with a girl, I want to go with a real girl, not a ridiculous parody in slacks. I've never seen one girl look well in these things. Nature did something to their legs from calf to ankle which makes them a joke when dressed in slacks. If they must discard skirts which are always attractive, then let them wear shorts, which are kinder to the female shank.

Critical."

And still another voices his opinion, too:

"Once burned, twice warned. With me it's a clear case of a married man looking for fun. I was engaged to one girl and she chucked me for an old guy with money. I fell in love with another girl, but she had what she called 'A man of the world' for a friend. Her standard of conduct was impulse. I didn't care for that thing, so I quit her cold. I stick to the good old-fashioned name for that sort.

Bachelor."

And there, girls, are some of the reasons given by men why they refuse you walking in vain for that telephone tinkle which means a date. Please let me have your side of it.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

P. M. Richards, financial editor of Saturday Night, writes that rumor persists that there is to be another rise in the price of gold, through action in Washington, who are supposed to represent the administration viewpoint; my view is nothing in it—now. But London has the rumor too, and presumably Washington and London would act together in view of their co-operation in exchange stabilization. And both are very anxious to raise commodity prices, to stabilize them at higher levels, particularly in Washington. While past experience does not encourage one that raising the price of gold again would necessarily bring about a similar rise in commodity prices, the Washington administration might be willing to try it in view of the failure of production restriction schemes to do the job. Presumably the new price would be $41.34 per ounce (twice the old $20.67 price), but Roosevelt is entitled, if necessary, Congress to take it to that figure when he made it $35. Or it might be something between.

Such a step would, of course, be very bullish as regards our gold mining shares, besides increasing the profit margin of present producers. It would bring into production many properties now on or below the profit border line. It would also lengthen the life of existing mines, by increasing available ore. Prospecting would be stimulated. And the operation of new mines, and hence increased employment, more business for the producers of mining equipment and a whopping demand for transportation and power. Canada, then, might well engage somewhat in the price of gold, the gold mining industry occupying a very important place in our one inflationary economic life. But there is another side to it, too. For instance, a rise in the price of gold (if it does what is expected of it) means a decline in the purchasing power of money. That would penalize all recipients of fixed incomes, all investors in bonds or savings, insurance policies, annuities, mortgages or bond interest. Not one inflationary step tends to lead to another, where would it end? However, it is all just a rumor. A year or two ago I was assured that the price of gold was to be cut.

A good deal of the pessimism currently prevailing does not appear justified. Indeed it might be given to the various business reports appearing. The business recession here has not been as severe as across the line and the Fall may witness a sharp upturn should the wheat crop measure up to expectations.

ONTARIO CROPS IN FINE SHAPE

In Hastings County Some Sweet-Clover Has Been Cut

Toronto, June 14 CP)—Crops in most parts of Ontario are in excellent condition, although growth in the northern part of the provinces has been retarded by cool weather, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today in its weekly crop report:

A plentiful supply of moisture has helped the outlook of farmers in Sudbury district, despite the cool weather. In the Kenora-Rainy River district, several warm showers during the last week have put the crops for progress and prospects are good for an abundant harvest.

Hay has started to rapidly and new seedings are good in Western Ontario districts, while corn is looking head in some places. Lincoln, Brant, Wentworth, Haldimand and Norfolk counties report that fall wheat nearly fully headed in some fields with rye also in head. In Wentworth district corn was even planted during the week while early potatoes are coming up.

In Hastings County some sweet clover has been cut and some corn is in silk, the report says. Muskoka and Parry Sound reported plenty of rain and most spring grain fields "looking very promising."

The report says that warm weather is needed in Dundas county, while Prescott has a very "delightful" hay crop. Prospects are good for hay and grain in Grenville county, where there will be "considerably more red clover than has been for years."

PENITENTIARIES

circular letters, he has thrown the service into confusion.

Arbitrary Action

"Regulations drafted by him, when he was inexperienced and new to the service, were introduced without consulting the Wardens, suggestions being ordered, and the regulations were arbitrarily put into effect. He has appointed and dismissed a large number of officers from the service without specific cause or opportunity for defence.

"He has interpreted the regulations with severity, even to the punishment of prisoners, he has violated their provisions. He has failed adequately to investigate the misuse of fire-arms and the illness of prisoners. He has introduced misleading reports to the public and for presentation to parliament by the minister.

'Antagonized Personnel'

"His arbitrary manner has antagonized the personnel of the service and been a major contributing cause of the riots and disturbances that have taken place in the penitentiaries since his appointment. His methods before the commission was unsatisfactory, and he has completely lost the confidence of the staffs of all the penitentiaries.

"There are three inspectors in the present penitentiary service and the commission recommends that one of them, Inspector J. D. Dawson be transferred out of that service.

The official summary stated: "In the cases of Inspector Vernon and Inspector Craig (now Warden of Collin's Bay Penitentiary, Kingston, Ont.) inspection was in particular instances, namely, the shooting into the yard of prisoners in the Kingston penitentiary and coal shortages at Collin's Bay institution, highly unsatisfactory, and their findings unjustified, erroneous, and misleading.

Inspector Criticized

"The commission finds that Inspector Dawson has failed to perform his duties in a creditable manner in making important inquiries and that his little knowledge of penitentiary management, and recommends that he should be transferred out of the penitentiary service."

On the commission's major recommendation of a prison Commission the summary read:

"The Commission recommends that the positions of superintendent and inspector be abolished, and that a prison Commission of three members immediately be appointed, should immediately be established to administer the prison service of Canada, and that the Commission should have power to appoint staff and act as a staff board thereof, and that it should be responsible directly to the Minister of Justice and Parliament.

Prison Commission Favored

"The existence of the prison Commission of England has impressed the Commission with the advisability of establishing a similar set-up in Canada, it is recommended that an outstanding English authority be invited to visit Canada to advise the Commission in the reorganization in his recognization of the Canadian penal system.

"The Commission also recommends that the entire penal system of Canada be reorganized under the Federal government and that the provinces, especially those without institutions to accommodate those sentenced under provincial statutes or for short sentences, pr on remand.

"Canada and the United States are the only countries that do not have a centralized penal system, and the difficulties encountered in the United States because of the lack of centralization are fully recognized, but, because of constitutional reasons, cannot be overcome.

Present Division

"There is no constitutional basis for the present division of jurisdiction by two-year sentences in Canada, and the difficulties of centralization, largely geographical, could be overcome by Federal-Provincial cooperation. An immediate division between the Dominion and Provincial governments is recommended with a view to eventual complete centralization.

"It is impossible to reduce crime appreciably or satisfactorily to recognize the penal system of Canada under divided jurisdiction with the consequent lack of proper classification and segregation, lack of uniformity of treatment and without continuity of policy. Waste, fut duplication of penal establishments on the cause of unnecessary classification expense and the lack of uniform classification and treatment between divided jurisdiction is the cause of present conditions.

Take 4 cr

Penitentiaries

System is Lopsided

"Duplication of institutions and lack of uniformity were overcome in England and a decrease in recidivism and a great saving to the public resulted. At present comparatively few criminals are placed in Federal institutions and recommended reforms cannot be made effective if the majority of criminals are left in the hands of municipal, county, or provincial institutions under varying methods of penal management. Pending centralization of control and uniformity of treatment, closer cooperation should be established with the provinces."

The commission found that penitentiary discipline was handicapped by lack of classification and segregation and by application of one set of rules to all prisoners.

Too Many Regulations

Summary went on: "There are too many regulations governing the offences punishable in a drastic manner, and these regulations affect on the morale of the prisoners and interfere with the possibility of reform.

"Segregation of agitators without total abolition of privileges in exceptional cases and in strict compliance with the rules.

"Proper classification, which has been abolished in the United States and Kentucky, very seldom carried in England, is too frequently awarded in Canada. Modern penitentiaries Straps used in Canadian penitentiaries are condemned because of the humiliation involved.

Dealings With Prisoners

"The present method of dealing with prison offences is unsatisfactory. The evidence of officers is always accepted, and the accused is left to code charges. Procedure outlined for the conduct of prison courts is not being followed.

"The commission recommends that these prisoners should be tried before a prison court composed of three members, and that the following prison offences should be simplified, that there should be a right of appeal.

"Corporation punishment should be abolished except in cases of incitement of mutiny, and assaulting officers, or fellow prisoners.

No Outlet for Grievances

"No provision has been made for appeals from decisions of the prison court and there is no outlet for grievances. Rules have been related to attract attention to their grievances.

Head of Welfare Needed

"In England the situation has been met by the appointment of a welfare officer, and a similar officer is recommended for Canada. It is recommended that the chief social welfare worker and a medical doctor, and be appointed by the Federal government.

"The duties of such a board would be to receive and inspect the penitentiaries, hear complaints and appeals, and report to the prison commission. This would provide an outlet for grievances and keep the commission in touch with conditions in our penitentiaries in place of the present system of secrecy, rumors and misconceptions.

The lack of an outlet for grievances and the lack of machinery for covering and correcting injustices were disturbing contributing factors, prior to the present disturbances. During the riots, it was found that prisoners were driven to revolt. No privileges are sought by rioting they were already entitled to. Present procedure in granting privileges because of riots is destructive to discipline and encouragement to disorders.

The first trial of prisoners who participated in the riots at Kingston Penitentiary in October, 1932, was a farce, the commission had been a grave misuse of firearms by officers.

"The commission finds that the Deputy Minister and the Chief Superintendent in this regard was entirely inadequate and that there was a failure of proper discipline responsibility, that report, made by the inspectors were inadequate and misleading and that the recommendation of the Superintendent to the Minister that no disciplinary action be taken was misleading, and was prepared in an attempt to justify what had taken place.

Entitled to Protection

"It is admitted that necessary injury to human life by those engaged in the legitimate duties of police brings it into disrepute, that prisoners are entitled to the full protection of the law, and that the wilful use, or reckless misuse of firearms by prison officers should be dealt with in the same manner as in the case of others.

The commission dealt exhaustively with classification and segregation of prisoners. It found that although provision had been made for classification boards at each penitentiary, the regulation was not being observed. Collin's Bay penitentiary and the Laval buildings at St. Vincent de Paul were created for treatment of reformable prisoners and to remove first offenders from the degenerating influences of habitual criminals.

The summary continued: "Collin's Bay is now almost completed, and at great expense, but it is now treated as another penitentiary and receives its population comprises confirmed recidivists and habitual offenders. Of recent years youthful offenders have been segregated in separate wings in Canadian penitentiaries but they have received no special treatment and have been handicapped by the cause of denying them access to the buildings and thus preventing them from receiving any trade instruction.

"Classification and segregation cannot be made entirely effective under divided jurisdiction.

Often Contaminated.

Young prisoners are often contaminated by associates with confirmed criminals in municipal, county and provincial institutions where there are no facilities for segregation, and the chances of their reform or rehabilitation are greatly lessened if not destroyed before they reach the Federal penitentiaries.

"Before penal treatment can fulfill its function of reforming crime there must be unified control and scientific classification and segregation involving adequate treatment of youths and first offenders, the removal of inmate and habitual offenders to separate institutions, the segregation of the specially deficient, and the classification of the remaining prisoners by previous record, social history, mental condition, education, aptitudes, etc.

Faulty Classification.

"The main object of scientific classification is the prevention of those contaminating influences of prison life which prevent reform, and the encouragement of those which increase crime.

"Under a proper system of classification, a grades and merit system, such as is in force in the Borstal, could be put into effect with a view to encouraging good conduct and reformation. Extension of privileges, such as smoking and longer recreation should be earned as privileges and not as rights.

"There is the object in severity as such. In Canadian penitentiaries the effect on the present treatment of inmates is to break down their morale and diminish any chances they may have of reform and rehabilitation. To combat this destruction, there is required education, medical care, religious instruction, employment, and the incentive of privileges earned by industry and valuable influences."

More Trades Needed.

Regarding recreation, the commission found that the provision of concerts and lectures in penitentiaries. News of the outside world was inadequate. It recommended distribution of a weekly newspaper. It also recommended for outdoor exercises, sports, indoor games for suitable classes of prisoners and time provided for exercise for all physically fit.

The commission considered that conversational periods, now limited to the cells, should be extended to recreational periods. The commission disapproved of installation of radios in penitentiaries. There should be no objection to radio if it is properly supervised, but it is opposed the present method of purchasing equipment by contributions from prisoners.

The commission found that education in the penitentiaries was inadequate. It suggested revision and remodelling of the educational programs, and the employment of library teachers as in England.

Trades Are Inadequate

Turning to medical services, the commission recommended the services of psychologists and psychiatrists. Hospital should have wards apart from cells and facilities should be provided for segregation of mentally ill persons found guilty of crime. Special wards should be reserved for tubercular prisoners. Another recommendation was that all doctors, medical nurses and more frequent opportunities for bathing and shaving.

Touching on chaplain services, the commission found the churches had taken too little interest in discharge of responsibilities. Religious life should be provided. Chaplains should not wear uniforms or be regarded as officers of the service. Compulsory attendances at religious services should be abolished and there should be left to the discretion of chaplains.

Employment Deficient

The commission found that employment in the penitentiaries was inadequate. Canadian penitentiaries. The hours are short, the work performed is monotonous indifferent. Little opportunity exists for learning a trade which will be of real assistance ly is denied to youths. A great deal of time is wasted in the cells in demoralizing idleness."

The commission recommended a complete survey to determine what goods needed by the government and by the public and that the penitentiaries crunch competent to supply them. Prison labor should comply with the result they were operated at a loss.

Wages in Prisoners Negative Check

Regarding prison pay, the official summary stated:

"Pay given to prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries is merely a negative check on idleness and not the positive stimulus to industry which it should be. Prisoners should be encouraged to save money. In Canada there is an atmosphere of fatalistic indifference in the workshops which contrasts with that in other countries. The Commission recommends that experiments based on the experience of other countries should be tried in Canada and that every precaution should be taken against favoritism or special assignments."

Remove Women to Reformatories

Turning to women prisoners, it was found: "Few women are placed in federal penitentiaries and all of these are confined in a central prison at Kingston. There is no need for this expensive central institution and the women could better be cared for in reformatories nearer their homes. Girls should never be committed to institutions except in extreme cases. Instead, full use should be made of probation and the assistance provided by social agencies.

The construction of the women's prison was highly unsatisfactory and demonstrated the usual incompetence. The capital cost per inmate is $11,000 and the cost of upkeep $750 per inmate. In addition there is a high cost of transportation.

"The commission recommends that women should be removed to prisons to reformatories nearer to their homes and that the present women's prison be used as a classified institution for men."

Insane Should be Removed

The Commission recommended that insane prisoners be removed to provincial institutions. Drug addicts should be segregated.

Revision of the criminal code also was urged. The definition of "vagrancy" should be rewritten. There should be provision for payment of fines in instalments, and the sale of firearms drastically restricted.

"The summary then went on: "The Commission recommends that individual cases should be investigated by the Commissioners before sentence, so that discrepancies in sentences for similar offences should be minimized.

HEENAN ASSUMES LABOR PORTFOLIO

Will be Sworn in Today—Late M. M. MacBride Was Former Minister

Toronto, June 14.—(CP)—Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests will assume the portfolio of Labor, left vacant by the death of Hon. M. M. MacBride, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced today.

Mr. Heenan will be sworn in as Labor Minister late today since urgent departmental business requires the attention of a Minister.

However, the Premier indicated the appointment could be regarded as a temporary expedient", it is understood Mr. Heenan was unwilling to re-shuffle his Cabinet at this time. When asked, "Would there be a Cabinet organization before the Legislature opens?" the Premier answered; "I would not say that there would not be one".

Mr. Heenan announced writs will be issued late today for a by-election in Brantford which was Mr. MacBride held in the Legislature.

BEAUHARNOIS CO. CHIEF ON STAND

Tells Probe of Road-Table Conference And Subsequent Meeting

Toronto, June 14 (CP)—R. A. C. Henry, President of Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company, told a special session of the Ontario Legislature today that his first conference with Dr. T. M. Hogg, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission in regard to renewal of power-purchase contracts cancelled in 1935 was on Nov. 4, 1927.

That was a "round table conference" for the purpose of seeing what arrangements, if any, could be made for new contracts. Nothing of a definite nature materialized but the meeting was followed by another five days later at which both sides "just felt each other out." A final agreement was reached Dec. 2.

Revised Agreements

The committee, inquiring into Hydro affairs, was set up after Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member for Essex Legislature, charged that while Premier Hepburn last fall publicly favored a "back-to-Niagara" power policy, he secretly negotiated with Beauharnois for renewal of the cancelled contracts.

Revised purchase agreement with Beauharnois and other Quebec power companies were put into force last December. A lower purchase price than that provided for in the original contracts was agreed upon. Certain controversial clauses in the old agreements were deleted,

LIBYA WHEAT UP 5 CENTS TODAY

After Dropping 2 1-4 Cents Rises Full Allowable Limit

Winnipeg, June 14 (CP)—Winnipeg Wheat prices dropped 2 1-4 cents, advancing the five-cent allowable limit after all futures traded down the limit during the early part of the session.

Serious rust and root rot reports from the United States southwest generated the buying flurries and prices rose steadily due to light offerings.

Lack of roots to feed plants in the majority of winter wheat fields in Kansas also was reported.

Private estimates recently predicted a winter wheat crop of 810,000,000 bushels, 200,000,000 more than actual production a year ago.

Ban on Inter-Club Trading Goes into Effect on Wednesday With Few New Deals in Sight

National League Moguls Have Their Lineups All Set

NEWSOM MAY MOVE

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Barring a sudden switch from speech to action on the part of the American League moguls, the 16 Major League baseball clubs will have to go through the hardest part of the pennant fight with whatever material they have on hand now.

About the time the Dodgers are expected to wind up their fling at Cleveland under the floodlights—midnight tomorrow—the ban on inter-club trading goes into effect. The National Leaguers have completed a good many deals in the past few days and appear to have finished the job but the American Leaguers have only talked a lot of deals.

There still are plenty of weak spots that might be strengthened by a bit of ivory bartering, but for the most part the prospective pennant contenders are in pretty good shape. Let's take a look at the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians first, as the Buck Newsoms, the winning pitcher down at St. Louis, but the chances are neither will get him.

Browns Want Players

The Browns want players this time while the offers are in and Cleveland also has a chance to pick up Eldon Auker, the submarine flinger, from Detroit, but apparently doesn't want to give up what it takes.

The deal that sent Alex Kampouris from Cincinnati to do duty second-hanking for New York Giants seems to have put the National League champions in shape to make their big pennant bid, in the home stand which opens the week which starts today. Alex helped out a lot during the recent Western tour and the Giants returned home on top.

The Reds got a regular outfielder, Wally Berger, in that deal but have been having some trouble with slacking Kampouris. Lloyd Frey hasn't done especially well and on Friday was replaced by young Dusty Stein, obtained from the Phillies for Buck Jordan.

In addition, the Reds have recalled Don Lang from Albany and bolstered their second string staff by their latest deal which sent Pitcher Al Hollingsworth and Receiver Catcher, Virgil (Spud) Davis to the Phillies. If they can plug the hole around second, they ought to be right up there in the first division.

Phillies May Move

The Phillies, with Jordan on first, Phil Weintraub, who came back up from Baltimore recently, when Manager Jimmy Wilson decided Gene Corbett wouldn't be shifted to the outfield; Davis working behind the plate with Bill Atwood and Hilly Flitcraft to help to stay on the bench and with two new hitters, may move a little faster than before, but they aren't likely to be bidding for the first division.

The Whalen-Hollingsworth trade was the only action in the free market yesterday as both leagues took the day off for travelling.

NEWARK BEARS ARE "HOT" TEAM ON HOME FIELD

Paced by Bob Seeds, Team Defeated Toronto by 11-3

CHIEFS WIN

(By The Associated Press)

Ruppert Stadium, Newark Bears home field, is still hot as a furnace as a rattlesnake den for invading teams.

The Bears may drop a few on the road but once they're playing in front of the home fans they look like the champions of all time—something Toronto Maple Leafs found out yesterday.

Placed by Bob Seeds, the Bears whipped the Leafs 11-3 in a game curtailed to seven innings by rain. In the only other League game yesterday Syracuse Chiefs shaded Montreal Royals 5-4 in a night fixture at Syracuse.

Seeds hit homer No. 23, a 390-footer, off the Leafs' Mike Mesa in the third. Jimmy Gleeson and Leg Seagrella also hit for the circuit for the winners, Joe latter's blow coming with two men on an inning later, it was Scarsella's 19th homer of the season.

Lee Stein went to the seven innings for the Bears allowing ten hits in his fourth victory of the season.

Lefty Kleinhans had the Royals cowed and was sailing along nicely with a three-run lead for the Chiefs until a Montreal uprising in the eighth netted three runs. Reggie Grabowski relieved him in the eighth and the Chiefs pushed over a run in their half of the inning on his single to snap the 4-4 tie and win.

The game between Buffalo and Jersey City was postponed because of rain. The game will be played as a part of a double header Wednesday afternoon and today's afternoon game will be shifted to a night game, tonight.

CANNIFTON WINS BY SCORE OF 7-4

Shannonville is Victim in South Hastings League Tussle

Shannonville, Ont., June 14—(Special)—Behind the seven hit hurling of Sharpe, their ace hurler Canniflon defeated Shannonville by a 7-4 score here last night in a scheduled South Hastings League fixture.

Ability of the visitors to bunch their hits in the last inning of a five inning game enabled them to pull out with the win, three runs crossing the plate, after the second were tied at four-all going into the inning.

Joby, local chucker, hurled good ball but was afforded poor support by his mates, a number of errors spelling the otherwise good pitching effort. Canniflon scored three in the first, added another in the third and romped home with three more in the fifth to clinch the pastime. The homesters scored two in the second, and tied up the game with a spree of runs in third, but from that point on could do nothing with Sharpe's slants.

Shannonville—Spencer cf; Riddle 3b; Cook ss; Reed, rf; Joby p; Hanson lf; Dix 2b; Coutts c; Osborne 1b.

Canniflon—Colling 2b; Empson, lf; Webb ss; Bleesman, rf; Bowers cf; E. Jarrell c; H. Jarrell 3b; J. Jarrell 1b; D. Sharpe p.

ROME COLONELS PROTEST BISONS

Officials Claim Cornwall is Carrying Too Many Class "B" Players

Score

(By The Canadian Press)

Cornwall Bisons are waiting anxiously today while Can.-Am. League officials consider Rome Colonels' protest regarding eligibility of several Bison performers.

Should the protest be allowed Cornwall may have to alter its smooth working line-up that has carried them into second-place, for it is Rome's contention Bisons carry too many Class "B" ball players.

Manager Buckley allowed his Colonels to take the field under protest yesterday, but the game play came out even. Bisons dropping the opener, 5-4, and coming back strong in the finale to tally 14 times in the last two frames for a 11-7 decision.

Art Upper, retired from his outfield duties when his string of straight pitching attempt when Colonels' Frank Borden honored in the opening contest but Bisons' two-inning spurge easily wiped it out.

Those tempting pitching slab duties widened their first-place margin to three games as Cornwall's Eddie Lasser for his first loss in seven starts.

Big Mike Naymick, Oswego smokeball artist, also tasted defeat for the first time in seven when he lost his control for the second time and proceeded to bow to Ottawa Braves, 5-3. Ted Springer, Oswego cast-off, let his former mates down with a one-hitter for his third win since joining Braves.

Sports Roundup

Speculation in baseball circles over Gene Tunney, who gave Joe Louis a private boxing lesson, is expected to play a big part in the next issue of the Connecticut Yankee Conference. Thirty-five dates and a dozen foreign countries will be represented in the press section at the Stadium a week from tomorrow night . . . Joe Louis, who rarely strays from the lights of Broadway, heard a row low here the other day and asked: "What was that noise?" . . . Mike Jacobs will have to do business with Hitler before he can install the layout in the stadium for Schmeling and Louis.

Suppose you all noted what happened at Pompton Lakes Sunday when they took the blankets off Joe Louis for four or five minutes. Rogers Hornsby is batting .500 as an after dinner speaker. The drinking water Max Schmeling uses here is shipped to him from Germany.

Some of the boys are saying Lou Gehrig will not be picked for the all-star game for the 12th straight time since the thing started. Horses to finish in the first three slots in the Kentucky Derby all wore aluminum shoes which weigh just half an ounce each the ordinary kind.

Mike Jacobs says he has 150,000 requests for ringside seats on hand from New York yet. . . . Seventy per cent of the business done at some five-and-ten stores . . . World Telegram says Lefty O'Doul of San Francisco is slated to manage the Pirates if Pie Traynor transfers to the front office.

The western trip just concluded by the Yanks was the most successful in five years—seven victories in ten starts. And it was Bobby Doerr who saw up Burleigh Grimes' job for the balance of the season, anyway.

CORBYS IN TIE WITH CEMENTMEN

Defeat Booth And McCrae Nine by One-Sided Score

Pounding the offerings of two opposition moundsmen to all corners of the Coleman Plate ball yard Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. nine took a one-sided victory over the Booth-McCrae nine by a 12 to 1 score. The losers bested the pellet artist for seven juicy drives, which materially assisted in their downfall last evening.

Hank Ryan's squad pushed their tally over the plate in the fifth ninth, Lunberg, the first batter clubbing a home run. Previous to things extra base hit, the only one registered by the losers, Connie Harris batting for the Corbys with the bat limited the Booth-McCrae batsmen to six scattered singles. Shortly after he had retired the side, he was placed by Dracup in the box, relieving Harris after pacing 10 to 0.

Barnett's slugging Corbys were applying the screws with a vengeance slapping out seven extra base hits in the 15 collected. Art Cole hit a two-sacker and a single jet the winners at bat, as Barrage hit a double and single slugfest. Ryan three base hit and McMartin a brace of juicy blows. Dracup, Ellis, Held and Lunberg were the only consistent hitters for the losers, Held was out at the plate when trying to stretch a triple in the seventh for the losers' only run in a nice fielding play.

By virtue of their victory the Corbys A.C. nine move into a tie for the Belleville Softball League lead with Eldridge Cement with the strong Point Anne "cementmen," a tie that will be broken this Thursday when strong squads battle mattists out here to-morrow night in the first league fixture. The "cementmen" have handed the Corbys their only reverse in five starts by winning the league opener 11 inning affair, but have since won four wins and one defeat as they clash with the Corbys tomorrow night.

THERE AIN'T NO 'NEW JOE LOUIS' SAYS BLACKBURN

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pompton Lakes, N.J., June 14.—(AP)—Of the thousands who have peered, prodded and poked at Joe Louis since he started knocking the daylights out of his fellowmen, none is better qualified to talk about the Brown Bomber's prospects than his scarred and genial trainer, Jack Blackburn.

His big around Dr. Bire's sock sanatorium runs something like this:

"There ain't no new Joe Louis'. Just a kid who started big, that's all. He hits harder, though not as often, than he used to and he's a way better fighter than he was the first time he fought that Schmelin'.

"Stands to reason don't it. He's gotten a couple of pretty smart guys since then, Jim Braddock and Tommy Farr, and he's been growing and learning all the time and he've we've taught him somethin' too.

"While Julian Black and John Roxborough handled the business end of his career, Jack handled the end of his career, Louis' arms.

"Taught him the best left jab in the business and how to use it as a punch to bother a guy while"—improved his hook—hucks, didn't seem sound proposition is being carried out by the city council as a civic measure in the bargain.

Remember way back when Hans Wagner was beginning to fade out and Buck Herzog was beginning to bud in the National league...rdio and airplanes came under the jurisdiction of "Believe it or not"?.....and when a pitcher started a game he generally finished it.....and few hitters topped the .300 mark?

It's—a ill wind, that doesn't dry somebody's washing or pet a few bucks into the pocket of a baseball player providing he keeps his shirt on the first trip, spikes Johnny Allen, fiery twirler of the Cleveland Indians. For his drag-out, joke Johnny, who was fined $250 smackers by Manager Oscar Vitt, when he stepped peeches with Joe Cronin following a dispute, that centered on the loen sleeve of Johnny's shirt waving in the breeze, while he was coaching his fast one at Yanky pets, netted Johnny the amount of his fine in cash of the realm. It appears that Cleveland spects good dealer, smelling the advertising value of Johnny's torn sleeve, offered him $500 for the garment for use in display in which Johnny took the offer, and came marching home with 250 iron men in the clear.

Let Joe Harold Reid, their hard-hitting first baseman, the Belleville intermediates invade Ernie Gilbard's ball loi for a scheduled Bay of Quinte League fixture tomorrow. Coach Alec Wetz is negotiating with the Riverside Juniors for the loan of Joe Kelsher, but as the juniors are slated to play in Picton, no doubt that angle is out, but the locals still have Ray Wilkins and Wilkins available, to say nothing of their pitching-third baseman Bud Johnston. Incidentally Reid is clipping the spots at the .583 rate, having seven hits in 12 times at bat.

The "battle of the century" insofar as the local softball wars are concerned, faces the Corby's A.V. and Point Anne "cementmen" at Coleman Plate Wednesday. Last evening the Corbyville nine neared up to the line, by the league leadership, with Point Anne past they did not prove as prolific as the rejuvenation of hoyer last winter in Gentle Mcdreck-ical ice plant. If our memory serves us right the Belleville Arena officially cost twice that figure and we haven't got as far in cash today. Two of Belleville's top flight golfers, in the more youthful range, competed in the Ontario Golf Association district playdowns at the Hope on Saturday, one being successful in winning the low net score of the day. Tommy Carruthers and Harry Ridley, representing the Belleville Golf Club, competed at the meet, with the more youthful Carruthers shooting a low 76, with handicap. Both local lads were off color and form during the first nine holes but Tommy came back strongly to shoot a 36 in the second round and earn a tie for the low net score. He won the day's prize in the subsequent draw, however. Incidentally the Belleville Golf Club is preparing for a gala day on Saturday, the 30th when the annual Bay of Quinte district tournament will be held at the Belleville Golf club this year, Picton, Trenton and Napanee being the outside clubs concerned.

Murder the King's English.

It was Lee King, Kate with the Glanda, who was our Babe Ruth bit a home run for the first time, exclaimed, "Gosh, he hits 'em so far you can't see 'em with a mega-scope."

It was Frank Bressy, then catching for the A's, and now a member of the hotter league at Elizabeth, N.J., who when asked if he was as pale as replied, "Oh, I have gone through a long siedge of sickness."

And it was the great Babe himself who, so being asked what he was doing for a rest cure on the ankle, said, "I am putting on hot and cold compliations."

As a civic project they are to have a new artificial ice arena in Owen Sound before the snow flies. Perhaps the efforts of the Owen Sound Trappers in vanquishing the Belleville Redmen last winter prompted this move, but it does seem strange that after the fine record of the Owen Sound Greys in the past they did not prove as prolific as the rejuvenation of hoyer last winter in Gentle Mcdreck-ical ice plant. If our memory serves us right the Belleville Arena officially cost twice that figure and we haven't got as far in cash today. The Owen Sound proposition is being carried out by the city council as a civic measure in the bargain.

Crossroads

By Kathleen Norris

"Why, there's nothing for Karl to do," Gloria said, looking at him in mild resentment. "Karl is perfectly sensible about it, of course. Thinking about his work, thinking way ahead into the future, leaving the details to me. And of course they'll clear up, as they always do. Eldie's out of it now, anyway, only a question now of deciding about Jimmy in a way that will be fair to us all, and to him most of all, and that's what I have still to settle with Peter. I want to be generous about it, but I can't see that my child of Jimmy's age ought to be taken away from his mother. He loves his father as much as he does me, and Peter allows him; it isn't that. The trouble is, that isn't enough.

"From the way you talk, Glory, it's very hard for me to see how you really feel about Peter."

"Well," Gloria said defensively, "I don't dislike Peter. I want — of course, I want to be fair to Peter, to us all."

"All, in this case, meaning —?"

"Peter, Karl, myself, Jimmy," she answered. "And Peter's upset me by suggesting that maybe it isn't fair to Karl!"

"I'm going to tell you something even if you never speak to me again, Tony said, with an unalarmed smile that belied his words. "You're trying to do something that you can't do. Other women may, but not your sort. That's where your trouble is Gloria. You've got Jimmy, Karl, Peter, yourself on your hands. If you throw down Peter and Jimmy, to whom you do owe something, for this dream of happiness with Karl, you're going to be justifying yourself for the rest of your life. Certain women, fine women, always take that upon themselves when they break up one life and try another. Twenty years from now you'll be telling Jimmy just why you couldn't make a go of it with his father. You'll tell it to Peter. What else can you do? Gradually you'll have to make Peter responsible for the whole thing.

"Meanwhile," Tony went on, as Gloria watched him with bright, resentful eyes, "meanwhile, Peter's wife will be vilified; you, too, tell Jimmy that when his father was down on his luck you kicked him out."

"Which will not be true!" Gloria said quickly.

"Of course it won't be. But he won't know it. Children have to believe the grownups. You certainly aren't going to tell him that you were in the wrong, Gloria, neither will his stepmother tell him his father was.

"Why shouldn't I tell Jimmy the truth? That his father is a fine man and that I still like him very much, but that I fell in love with Karl?"

"Because—I'm supposing this to be some years in the future, of course. But they go fast, the years. Jimmy'll be a big fellow of fifteen, eighteen, before you know it. Because by that time you won't be in love with Karl," Tony answered. "You know that, I suppose?" Gloria tried to smile.

"Who is, after ten years?" Tony pursued it simply. "What woman, roped to a grand passion, wants to talk about it after ten years?"

"You don't believe in love, Tony," "That's not love. Women would not do it all over again with some other man in a few years—and hundreds of them do!—if that was love!"

"Then there's no happiness in life!" Gloria said, in a sudden anger.

"Oh, yes, there is."

"Moving across the lane here," she suggested ironically, "Reopening 'Bide-a-Wee.' Mother back again, Jimmy running down to the corner to the Bywater Garden School, Peter working in the garden Sundays, Karl about in New York. Ha!" She broke off on a mournful laugh. "I supposed I'd be happier then?" she demanded.

"Not right away. But the others would be, wouldn't they? I mean your mother and Peter and Karl—Jimmy, what a difference to him!"

"And Karl," she added dryly. "He'd be exquisitely happy, of course."

"So far," Tony reminded her, "you owe nothing to Karl. So far, you haven't made yourself responsible for Karl."

"Tony," she said in a softer tone than she had used before, "I love you; you're like an older brother to me, or I'd never have let you talk this way to me. I want to do what's right, truly I do. It may seem complicated now. But wouldn't it all straighten itself out, come right some day?"

"Not for you. For some women, perhaps. And it would be hard for you now. Your happiness wouldn't come at once, Gloria. But when it did come, it'd be clear—it wouldn't be mortgaged."

"I can do for heaven's sake come in, Kitty!" Gloria exclaimed, after the long silence, during which the light had deepened to dusk in the room and the fire had died down to white ash. "Has the rain stopped? What time is it?"

"You two have been having a great talk," Kitty said, not without betraying a certain suspicion of the child's possible significance, as she came in. "No lights yet? Don't you want lights? I've called chicken here, Glory, and asparagus—"

"No, no, and thanks!" Gloria got to her feet.

Kitty, lighting a lamp, saw tears on her face.

"Karl ought; to be here," Gloria said.

"Karl is here. He parked close to the kitchen door, it's so wet. He's out there with the children."

Gloria stood at a strip of mirror and put her hair into some sort of order. When she turned back to the room Karl was there, his belted raincoat sparkled, he set cap in hand. His fine smile went about the circle; she saw his anxious change as he met her drenched eyes.

"Button up this child well," he said, giving her Jimmy's hat and coat. "It's wet and blowy; it's a horrible night."

"Awful!" Gloria said, thickly, kneeling down to get Jimmy's reefer on straight.

"Why not stay to dinner, Karl? We've just been asking Gloria," Kitty said, all hospitable eagerness.

"Oh, no, thanks! I'm taking her all the way to San Francisco, rain or no rain," Karl answered happily. "We'll get this man to bed," he added of Jimmy, "and then go off somewhere, eh, Glorianne? I have a completely inexplicable fancy," he said, smiling at Tony, "for this woman's undivided society."

The proprietary note. His tone would have made her so happy only a few hours earlier! Karl, no longer the shy, silent, bespectacled doctor she first had known; but Karl, splendid, sure of himself, quiet in the orderly pursuit of the happy destiny that had found him. Gloria's heart fell sick and weak within her; she stood up, Jimmy's little gloved hand tight in hers.

"Are we goin' back to Dad now?" Jimmy demanded. "Mummy, if you and Uncle Karl are goin' to the city, can I have supper with Dad? His said he'd wait."

"We'll see; I think so," Gloria muttered confusedly. She did not look at Tony as she and Karl and Jimmy went out into the rain.

Trinity Minstel Band Concert

The Minstel Band of Trinity United Church entertained St. Peter's Presbyterian choir Monday evening. An interesting program was put on by Trinity Minstel Band after which refreshments were served. All present had a very happy and good time.

The Mission Band of Trinity United Church held a social evening on Tuesday June 6th. Last fall the band was divided into two groups with Marion Reynolds and Margaret Kennedy, as leaders. The object was to see which band built up the best attendance during the year, the losing side was to put up the lunch for the party. The losing girls did well in coming out but when records were looked over, Margaret Kennedy's side had won. Games were indulged in for some time and then a delicious lunch was enjoyed by the boys and girls. All present voted they had a splendid time and lots of good eats.

Mr., Mrs. A. Milne, Thurlow Happily Wed for 50 Years

Reception For Couple Held on Homestead Where Mr. Milne Was Born

MASS CELEBRATED

Perhaps if houses were animate objects, the residence of Mr. Alexander Milne, highly expected resident of the last concession of Thurlow, would hold its head high in justifiable pride for on Monday it witnessed one of the important ages of man, when its occupant celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding in the house in which he was born, eighty years ago.

Time has placed a kindly hand on this aged couple who's half century ago yesterday wended their way to St. Michaels Church, where Monsignor Farrelly united in holy wedlock Alexander Milne and Ellen Lynch. Since that memorable day they have resided in the house of the groom, raising a family of sturdy children, who yesterday joined in wishing their parents many felicitations upon attaining this anniversary.

Fifty summer and winter suns have shone on the Milne homestead since the young bride and groom took up their residence there. Down through the years they have pursued the even tenor of their way, safe in that mutual love and contentment that comes from lives closely harmonizing as they travel down the roughly road of Life.

Surrounded by Relatives

At noon yesterday surrounded with their immediate relatives this old time couple sat down to a "celebration" repast and again relived that momentous bridal occasion, and recalled the many incidents, that down through the years have made their lives happy ones. With smiles of joy lighting their faces they accepted a beautiful token, presented to them by their children, following the dinner held in the "Old Home".

Yesterday afternoon, a further token of the esteem in which they are held by the residents of their area immediate community was evidenced in the presentation of a gold brooch by Mrs. Harry Grills, while an appropriate address was read by Mrs. Fred Mitchell on behalf of the "Neighbors Aid" of the community. Last night neighbors and friends gathered at the Milne residence where further celebrations were held and tangible appreciation of the kind neighborliness of Mr. and Mrs. Milne as well as congratulatory messages were tendered them.

In Perfect Health

Attaining his eightieth year, Mr. Milne has been a farmer all his life and prescribes hard work in large doses for those who covet longevity. In perfect health he has worked until a few months ago when he rented his farm and decided to retire from active participation in its operation.

Mrs. Milne, who was the former Ellen Lynch, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lynch, was also born in Thurlow. She still does her own housework and is mentally bright and physically alert.

Four of the remaining children attended the celebration yesterday and included Ursula Milne and William Milne, of Detroit, and Mrs. Howard Prichard, of Station Street, Belleville. Mrs. Jos. Hyland, Boston, and Charles Milne, St. Catharines, other members of the family, were unable to attend.

Mass is Celebrated

At the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Mass of Thanksgiving was celebrated at nine o'clock yesterday morning by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. at which the jubilarians renewed the vows plighted fifty years ago in the same church. Monsignor Nicholson addressed the jubilarians, congratulating them on attaining their golden jubilee. He referred to the sanctity of the Sacrament of Matrimony and its importance in the scheme of Christian life. Among the guests present was Miss Stella Lynch, who with Mr. Frank Carney (who was unable to attend this morning) was an attendant at the marriage performed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Farrelly, fifty years ago.

During Mass, Gounds "Ave Maria" was sung by Alex Pritchard and "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother" was rendered by Mrs. Clapp.

Tweed

Tweed—The village Council met on Monday evening with all the members present. Adjustments in assessments were made at the annual Court of Revision on several pieces of property. The Council will erect a pumphouse on the bank of Moira River, permission having been received from the Department. The Council decided to paint the Council Chambers, work to be begun this week.

Further reductions in relief to several families were made necessary owing to the drastic cut in the provincial relief paid to the village. For the month of June it was reduced to $60.

The following accounts were passed:

Quinn and Quinn, $12.75; P. C. Barnett, $38.90; A. Mayes, $20.50; Dominion Stores, $6.40; F. B. Foster $1.02; Rose. McCoy, $9.00; Ontario Hydro, $158.75; Foster's Dairy, $13.81; Ray Quinn, $25.00; County of Hastings, Indigent Account $32.00; Jos. Beahotte, $6.08; C. H. Parrith, $1.19; A. McMonnachie, $11.50; Isaiah Woodcock, $1.50; Tweed News, $49.75; H. McIntyre, $32.00; H. Courneyea, $18.00; H. Hayes, $70.00; J. D. Lindsay, $6.02; Walter Courtney, $12.50, Dominion Wheel and Foundries, $11.34; Bell Telephone, $11.66; Paul Beahotte, $7.50; A. Godfrey, $7.50.

Included among the graduates at Hotel Dieu, Kingston, were Misses Patricia Quinn and Cecilia Mersey, of Tweed, who graduated after a three-year course. Members of their families and friends attended the exercises on Wednesday last.

The oiling of the streets of the village on Thursday was most welcome, removing the dust nuisance. It is expected that No. 37 will be given a coat of oil in the near future.

The regular June meeting of the W. M. S. of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hicks on Friday afternoon. The programme was featured by a play on the social aspect of Temperance under the direction of Mrs. M. Ardenne.

AT THE RACE TRACK, NOT THE CIRCUS

This looks like a good trick, which it probably would be if it were a trick. Unfortunately for both parties concerned, it was a mishap instead. The horse ahead of her jumped first after taking the jump, but somehow his front legs gave way and he tumbled over on his head. The camera clicking just as he struck the ground. Jockey Leonard Kidd nearly down his back to land feet first. The horse is Flying Falcon, and the scene, Aqueduct Park, N.Y.

YELLOW RIVER

were Chinese farmers and their families.

Dikes Reported Broken.

Reports from the war zone along the Lunghai railway, course of Japan's westward push, said dikes of the Yellow river, known for generations as "China's sorrow", had been broken back at three main points.

Chungmow city itself was under three feet of water and scores of villages were inundated.

The Japanese asserted their own army engineers were working day and night to fill breaks in the dikes; assisted by thousands of Chinese farmers, but the work was hampered by Chinese troops firing on the repair gangs.

500 Foot Wide Break.

At one point there was said to be a break 500 feet wide in the dikes, through which the flood was racing into the low plains.

Even before the Japanese military reports were received engineers familiar with the Yellow river expressed fears one of the greatest catastrophes of the century was imminent.

ALLEN GETS THE LAST LAUGH—ALSO A NEW SHIRT

Imaginary conversation between Manager Oscar Vitt, of Cleveland Indians, LEFT, and Johnny Allen, one of his pitching aces, RIGHT: Won't have any trouble with the umps now," says Manager Oscar. "Yeah, but how'll I make any money on it? They can't chase me out of the game for wearing this," replies Temperamental John. Yes, it's the same Johnny Allen who was chased from a game by Umpire Bill McGowan, after Joe Cronin, of Boston, objected to his torn shirt sleeve. Johnny refused to change the unsightly object, was fined $250 by Vitt, and then collected the last guffaw by selling his ventilated vesture to a Cleveland department store for $500, a neat profit of $250. The new garment, Johnny is wearing has but one tiny slit for air-conditioning purposes, but the mound star is expected to slash it up any minute....If there are any more department stores in the market!

Shannonville

Shannonville — The sixty-first anniversary of the building of the Trinity New Church has been observed between the Sundays June fifth and twelfth inclusive. On Whitsunday the special preacher was the Rev. A. L. Geen, who has had charge of the Parish in years gone by. On Wednesday evening a very sumptuous anniversary banquet was served to a large number of people. The Brick Hall was very prettily decorated for the occasion. The tables were centred with tall white taper lrix, Pennies, and Phlox with a three story birthday cake beautifully decorated and "sixty-one" inserted on it. The president of the Women's Guild, Mrs. Harriet Toppings, made the birthday cake.

Those contributing numbers to the very entertaining programme were Miss Olive Reid, Rev. F. C. Beare, Mrs. Chisholm and the Misses Lena and Eliza Bell.

Short addresses were given by the following clergy Rev. J. Cantrell of Parnham, Rev. W. D. Crake United Church, Shannonville, Canon W. G. Swayne, Bonarlaw, Rev. G.O. Wright, Christ Church, Bellevile, Rev. A. L. Geen, Belleville, Rev. F. C. Beare, Roslin, Rev. A. St. McCreight, Shirling, Rural Dean N. B. Pringle of Tyendinaga. All the speakers congratulated the ladies who made the affair such a success and extended their best wishes for the future of this church and all other churches.

The Rural Dean, the Rev. A. E. Pepper, in a short address referred briefly to the building of the first church frame in 1854 and the building of the present church in 1877 after destruction of the former by fire in 1876. Trinity New Church was consecrated May 8th 1881. Abstracts of the first baptismal and marriage registrations were read by the speaker. The first marriage in the former church was that of James Finlay Carver and Mary Fullerton; Miss Fullerton was an aunt of Mrs. William Bell (nee Mitchaw) now residing on the Tyendinaga Reserve.

The concluding service was held last evening in Trinity Church with the Rural Dean the Rev. Canon Herbert Pringle, of Tyendinaga, occupying the pulpit and delivering a very inspiring sermon to a large congregation.

Treat Young, Old Prisoners Alike—Ex-Warden Ponsford

YOUNG PRISONERS LOOK ON ELDERS AS MERE FOGIES

'Young Fellow Certain He is Smarter Than Old Criminal'

PONSFORD'S STATEMENT

Troubles Begin Not With Inmates But by Trafficking of Officers, Convicts

St. Thomas, Ont., June 15—(CP)—The Royal Commission which probed Canadian penitentiaries and travelled through nine countries seeking information has arrived at a result inacceptable in one salient feature to the man who for years managed Kingston Penitentiary.

"The whole idea of the segregation of the young and supposedly impressionable prisoners from the old confirmed criminal is based on a false theory," says J. C. Ponsford, who retired from the Warden-ship in 1932. "It will not work even if these types are confined in different buildings, or if there is an equality of punishment operates against the hardened criminal. Reform, and will inevitably create distrust and dissatisfaction among all prisoners.

Young Call Old Prisoners 'Fogies'

"Young prisoners are going astray to have the idea that the young prisoner is thrown among hardened old timers who teach him evil ways. The fact of the matter is that the young inmate looks upon the old criminal as old fogies. The young fellow is certain in his own mind that he is smarter than the old criminal and he disdains him and his old criminal ways. The young inmate is more impulsive. He gets into trouble more readily and

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Master Moosewalkie

Ocean coolness! In summer many go to the seaside for recreation and refreshment. They might as well go there in winter, for the same reason. Why? It is a remarkable fact that of all common substances water has the greatest capacity for heat; that is, it takes more heat to raise water to a given temperature than any other. Therefore, as the air gets some of its heat by contact with the earth's surface, the seaside air is cooler than air in the interior because it takes much longer for the ocean water to warm up than the interior soils. On the other hand, since it takes water a long time to cool off, the seaside is warmer in winter than the interior.

Jew Children Born in Germany Will Be Without a Country

Berlin, June 15—(CP-Havas)—Jews, are to be excluded completely from German nationality, Wilhelm Stuckat, Secretary of State for political affairs in the ministry of the Interior, announced today in the review of the German Law Academy.

This will be done, he explained, by refusing nationality status to infants born of German Jewish parents, although the parents will retain their nationality unless they are deprived of it for "lack of fidelity to the Reich." The children are by theory a bastardy.

Although under German law a foreign woman who marries a German citizen automatically becomes, German, a foreign Jewess can not acquire German nationality by marrying a German, nor can a foreign woman by marrying a German Jew.

ARMIES FLEEING BEFORE FLOOD

Water Rolls For Miles Across Flat Plains of Honan Province

Shanghai, June 15—(AP)— Both Chinese and Japanese armies were fleeing today before a Yellow river flood that could not be stopped either by guns or bombs.

Spilling through immense breaches in the river dikes between Chengchow and Kaifeng, the flood waters rolled majestically across the flat plains of Honan Province, recognizing no man-made barriers and carrying death and misery to hosts of Chinese peasants as well as to armies.

Japanese war dispatches said fully 300,000 Chinese civilians had been made homeless and estimated that 150,000 civilians had drowned.

Hundreds of floating corpses were declared to be visible, and Japanese troops were pouring from war to life-saving participating feverishly in building rafts in an effort to keep their supplies stranded on high ground and house-tops.

Chinese dispatches said the refugees splashed through the water shrieking for aid.

Tragedy long familiar to China was being enacted as farmers, fleeing before the relentless current, were trapped and drowned in their homes and fields.

SAND USED TO PUT OUT BLAZE

Railway Car Loaded With Tar Catches Fire in Unknown Manner

Igniting in some undetermined manner, fire broke out on an oil car, set on the Canadian National railway yards early this morning. Railway employees were successful in extinguishing the blaze with the assistance of the fire department, but not before damage of a use stand. The oil car was partially filled with tar, that was being unloaded by the Public Works Department. Fortunately the blaze was discovered by those inside of the tanker, but was confined to the drippings on the outside of the car, which melted the paint from the boom, resulted in considerable effort being put forth by men under control. The city employees had only shortly before arrived to commence operations of the tar, when the blaze broke out. Fortunately there was a load of sand available, which when used proved a successful extinguisher of this type of a blaze. Members of the local fire fighting unit later revealed the application of the latter to such a type of a fire would be useless, sand being the only substance to smother flames set oil blaze.

Little damage resulted, as the fire was confined to the outer portion of the oil tanker.

Battle Started Years Ago Ending In Victory Says Miss MacPhail

Ottawa, June 15—(CP)—Miss Agnes Macphail, first woman member of Canada's parliament, smiled tonight that a Royal Commission had recognized the need for "complete reform in the penal system."

Miss Macphail said the battle she started years ago was ending in victory.

"It took years to do it," she said, "but I can't forget the things that were said about me when I started the battle to reform the completely punitive and unreformative penal system. All parties are for reform now but I'll go no further than I years ago said some of the things this report says now."

Miss Macphail held an abstract of the Royal Commission's report on Canada's penal system in her hand and declared it was "magnificent."

"This is one Royal Commission that has wrapped honor around itself," she said. "The report is amazing in its comprehensiveness and I am eager to study it."

Few Surprises

The report had few surprises for her, said Miss Macphail. For years she has been preparing herself to reached the conclusions the commission reached.

"Prisoners who didn't even know each other, told me the same things I have been told here when were true. Canada's prisons turned out men with the prison stamp on them. I know what I am about as my office door. Even that rap was being put in prison."

Miss Macphail commended parliament's decision to appoint a three-man commission to administer Canada's penal system. She said she was glad Justice Lapointe agreed that this commission should also have jurisdiction over remissions and paroles.

"This commission certainly studied the matter thoroughly and they must know what they are doing," she said.

Haste should be made slowly in the reform of the penal system, she said. A start should be made on the most careful selection possible of the three-man commission, at least two of whom should be expert penologists.

BULL RING AND BUILDINGS HOUSE 15,000 REFUGEES

Valencia Overwhelmed by Growing Stream of War-Weary

DEATH'S HIGHWAY

Families Scoop Out Shallow Graves to Bury Relatives

Valencia, Spain, June 15—(AP)—Valencia was overwhelmed today by an ever-swelling stream of hungry, war-impoverished refugees from Castellon De La Plana and Castellon Peniscola.

The bull ring, many theatres and every building fitted could be converted to make room for them was packed with the 15,000 already arrived. They ranged through days of hours of terror spent in dodging bombs and machine-gun bullets from insurgent warplanes.

The road from Castellon to Valencia was a death's highway. Scores of families told of stopping to scoop out shallow graves for relatives or friends killed in flight.

Most of the refugees arrived afoot, carrying their few worldly possessions, but a few more fortunate came in an old cart. There was scarcely an able-bodied man among them. Adult males were left behind to dig government trenches or to take places in the lines.

72 Year Old Banker, Known in Great War, Walks Unaided to Train

New York, June 15—(AP)—General C. Dawes, former United States Vice President, left a hospital bed today for the first time in nearly two months and boarded a train late yesterday for Chicago.

Before he left, he wrote this statement for the Associated Press of a good job:

"When a man whose life has been saved by the quick decision and skill of a great surgeon, and, after 31 days well again, steps out of the hospital, his first feeling is one of gratitude to His Maker and then to the surgeon and his aids, and his second, that this world is a damn sight better place to live in than it was before he took sick. (Signed) Charles G. Dawes."

The surgeon to whom he referred was Dr. Henry W. Cave.

The 72-year-old banker, who won the nickname "Hell 'n Maria" in the Great War because of his favorite expression, walked unassisted several blocks to the train. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dawes.

SAYS LATE DUKE SAVED 5 MILLIONS IN DEATH DUTIES

Daily Express Refers to Formation of Chatsworth Estate Company

TAXES $135,000

London, June 15—(CP Cable) — Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today attacked the law which enabled the late Duke of Devonshire to protect his estate from death duty, saving big heirs more than £7,000,000 ($35,000,000) in death duties.

Twelve years ago the Duke formed the Chatsworth Estates Company, which assumed the size of his family £2,000,000. Under the law the estate ordinarily would have paid £12,000,000 death duties. Actually they are paying about £37,000.

The Daily Express termed a gift tax, to be levied at the same rate as the inheritance tax, to frustrate such incorporations.

Back Weakness Stopped by Grafting Two Shinbone Strips to Vertebrae

By Howard W. Blakeslee

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, June 15.—(AP)—A surgery that takes shinbone and grafts it to the backbone to stop backaches was reported to the American Medical Association here today.

The surgery is something new in bone grafting developed at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn. It takes splints of a person's own bone and uses them to form a bridge six inches long lengthwise of the aching part of his back.

The bridge is two strips of firm, parallel, flat bone spring pieces of an engineering bridge, chips of bone dropped upon the vertebrae alongside these "bridge bones" serve as "cement". They cause the shin-bone bridge to grow fast to the vertebrae of the backbone. This natural bridge then becomes further bone growth, so that in two or three years, the patient has enlarged vertebrae and a structure stronger than the original backbone.

It cures the ache. The cause of these backbone troubles, it was explained by Dr. Russell A. Hibbs, of Mayo Foundation, who developed the operation, is a slight displacement of vertebrae. Usually the lower vertebrae fails to rest in the right slot on the bone below, the bone in which the backbone ends at the hip line.

This back weakness rates as a new ailment. Twenty years ago, it was not usually recognized. For a long time, Dr. Myerding said, the medical profession thought only of back aches of this sort followed rheumatic fever or severe injuries to women.

In many cases, Dr. Myerding said, steel braced corsets can be used to avoid bridge-building operations.

Cadet Campbell of R. M. C. Despondent Since Death of Chum

Kingston, Ont., June 15—(CP)— A report on circumstances concerning the graduation day death of Cadet H. G. Campbell of the Royal Military College is being prepared today for military authorities at Ottawa. Two inquiries were held yesterday.

Body of the Port Arthur student was found in his room Monday, a bullet wound in his head. A coroner's jury found he took his own life in a fit of despondency. Evidence was introduced to show Campbell received an anonymous letter which he took as a direct blame for the death of another cadet, R. D. Smith, some time ago.

Cadet Smith died suddenly a month ago of brain hemorrhage following a friendly scuffle with Campbell. An investigation attached no blame to Campbell, evidence showed his nerves were shattered by the fatality, however, and he was in hospital for a period after Smith's death.

Lieut.-Col. C. B. Smith, Adjutant-General of the college, told the coroner's jury last night of the anonymous letter Campbell received. It has been sent to the Minister of National Defence.

Hay Fever Sufferers Urged to Go North To Obtain Comfort

Hay fever sufferers of the city are in the first throes of their annual sneezing and snuffling attacks and handkerchief sales are apparently booming in local stores.

Carried on by June breezes during the past week or more, the ills has been credited with inflicting mal spacks of nostril irritating particles, which have started the yearly first sniffling.

But in the midst of the sufferers comes the comforting thought that this year again, as in years past, members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will again advertise the sure specific for the disease of hay fever. By mail and in folder the fact will be circulated here and abroad that in the rural hamlet of Hastings County in the northern townships where the air is clearer and the weeds apparently do not thrive and blossom as readily as in the settled south hay fever is rare. There one may find surcease from the malady.

Appointment of 3-Man Board To Operate Federal Prisons Is Recommended in Report

Borstal System is Urged For Youthful Prisoners

TRAINING OF OFFICERS

Ottawa, June 15 (CP)—Sweeping changes in administration of Canada's penal system were recommended in the report of the Archambault Commission tabled in the House of Commons yesterday by Justice Minister Lapointe.

The major change would be the appointment of a three-man prison commission to operate the federal penitentiaries and act as a central parole board.

Immediate retirement of Major-General D. M. Ormond, superintendent of penitentiaries, was recommended and transfer out of the penitentiary service of Inspector D. Dawson.

A conference between the Dominion and Provinces leading toward centralization of prison administration also was suggested and to remove the divided authority now existing; duplication of penal establishments, disunity in regulations, treatment and systems.

The Royal Commission was headed by Justice Joseph Archambault of Montreal and had as members R. W. Craig of Montreal and J. C. McRuer of Toronto, Allegheny, it related 113 institutions in nine countries, heard evidence from 1,865 inmates and 300 officers. Its report, running 600 pages, was accompanied by an official summary.

It said in part:

Social Clinic Not Court.

"The Commission is not in favor of the provision of special courts or duties. In cases of the complete exoneration of the accused the presiding judge should have the power to order the destruction of photographic and finger-print records. The Commission recommended many changes relating to young offenders and delinquents. One was that juvenile court should be in the nature of a clinic and that juvenile siding officer should not be called "judge". Voluntary institutions' services to assist in rehabilitation of juveniles was approved. It recommended extension of Alberta's system of foster-homes.

"Turning to youthful offenders, the commission suggested they either be treated by probation or sent to a training school for at least three years. The commission found the Borstal system had not been established in Canadian prisons despite official suggestions it had been.

The summary went on: "There are 7,000 youths of Borstal age convicted annually in Canada, who should receive Borstal type of training. The difficulty of adapting the principles of the Borstal system in Canada is largely geographical and the question of jurisdiction is not involved.

Borstal System Recommended.

"The commission recommends the English Borstal System as being the most effective method of dealing with young offenders and that its principles be applied in Canada.

"The commission recommends the creation of a Borstal unit of three separate sections in Quebec and another similar unit in Ontario, and that other units be established in the Maritime Provinces, the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia, and that after-care associations patterned on English lines should be established.

On the subject of recidivism, or the habitual offender, the summary read: "There will always be habitual offenders who are no longer amenable to treatment. It is useful to punish these offenders for specific crimes because they will always revert to crime on release from prison.

Detention of Habitual Offenders.

"The commission recommends that provision should be made for the preventive detention of habitual offenders in Canada and that a special penal institution should be established, remote from others, where these prisoners may be imprisoned. Those undergoing preventive detention should be treated with greater leniency in prison because the principle consideration in detention and undue severity would influence the judges against making use of the sentence. Preventive detention operates as a deterrent and minimizes the corrupting influence of habitual offenders both in and out of prison.

Supervision For Probation.

The commission found there was no adequate system of supervision for probation in Canada. It recommended conviction before release on probation, proper machinery to supply information to judges passing sentence, trained officers to collect case histories and exercise supervision over prisoners on probation.

Uniform rules for remission of sentences also were urged by the commission. It found many objectionable features in the present system in penitentiaries. Both this service and the ticket-of-leave branch should be administered by the prison commission.

Parole officers should be appointed for each province "so that responsibility will be centralized and means of adequate investigation of particular cases and proper supervision on release will be provided."

Recruitment of Officers.

The commission opposed Ontario's system of indeterminate sentences.

An agency under the prison commission to assist in rehabilitation of prisoners after their release, also was recommended.

Turning to consideration of personnel, the commission recommended a number of retirements "and that the prison commission should institute a definite plan for the complete reconstruction of the personnel."

A five-year plan of recruitment and training should be instituted with the selection of officers left with the prison commission, removed from political interference. Pay should be on a parity with police forces, university students should be interested in the work, retirements should be made at 65, an eight-hour day established. A training school for officers should be built.

The First Telephone

The world's first telephone conversation over any distance was in 1876 when contact was made between Brantford and Paris, Ontario. People wouldn't believe it. Even Alexander Graham Bell at first saw scant possibilities in his own discovery.

Twenty-nine years before this momentous event the Canada Life, then the only Canadian life insurance company, issued its first policy to a resident of Ontario.

From its humble birth ninety-one years ago, the Canada Life has developed into a great co-operative organization. To-day, hundreds of thousands of policyholders entrust to it savings of more than $250,000,000.

LOCAL CHINESE SADDENED BY JAP VICTORIES

Have Many Relatives in Heavily Bombed Canton District

In the laundries and shops and apartments of the city's Chinese residents there is little jollity and music these past few days so funeral a part of the domestic life of the peace-loving natives of an adopted country.

Little commercial is or has been made. There is no excited gesticulating or unrestrained effervescence of the feelings of those who go quietly about their work. Still there is sadness; a gloominess and soberness that is evident among the least of them.

For news of the terrific bombing of Canton by the Japanese this week has been received with sorrow by Belleville's Chinese. Many of the local colony have relatives and friends there are in that catastrophic bombing; now a daily occurrence by the Japanese raiding planes. Whole families of relatives are believed to be wiped out. Mail from there has been arriving at infrequent intervals or not at all. It is from that province of China that the majority of Belleville's Chinese have come.

Eagerly, as The Daily Ontario Intelligencer goes to press in the afternoon, those of the local colony wait for news and tidings from across the seas with an anxiousness not at all in keeping with the supposedly proverbial calmness and lack of emotion. Spokesmen, interpreters of their race secure copies of the paper, hurry to nearby apartments and then scan the news, reading aloud.

"We are sorry for China at this her time of trouble," declared Jason Mack, one of the local spokesmen. "But we know that the rest of the world sympathizes with her. We know we will be victorious in the end. This is just a time of testing."

Several local Chinese have visited China within recent years and know the fearful carnage that must have been wrought in that crowded city of the East.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Friends and relatives of rain may not easy for our ancestors to explain the coming rain and the passing of the drought.

About 150 years ago the first plausible theory of rain was evolved by the vigorous genius of Benjamin Franklin, the fish mineralogist. He contended rightly that the amount or moisture in the air determines increases with its temperature. He further thought that two masses of air of different temperature mixing together would cause cool and rain. They are thus caused by this process; but he is not the principal one. Station also stated that rainfall everywhere is not regulated by the humidity of the air and the causes which produce many.

THE WEATHER

Light scattered showers have occurred in southern districts of the Prairie Provinces where the weather is now rather cool, while in eastern Canada it has been warm with showers occurring very locally in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. Pressure is high over the Prairie Provinces and Northwest Territories, also the southeast states while a shallow trough now extends from Newfoundland southwestward across the lake region to the Mississippi Valley.

Italy and Germany Declare They Will Respect Swiss Neutrality

Rome, June 24 (AP)—Italy and Germany today announced they had assured Switzerland they would respect her neutrality.

Both also cooperated the little republic on obtaining her freedom from obligations to take part in any future League of Nations sanctions—a freedom acknowledged by the League Council May 14.

Italy's assurance was given in an exchange of letters with the Swiss government.

"The Italian government is convinced that the unconditional maintenance of the integral and perpetual neutrality of Switzerland constitutes an important factor for peace in Europe," wrote Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, wrote in similar vein.

Switzerland joined the League with the stipulation she would not join in military sanctions and in April notified Geneva she would not even participate in economic sanctions.

(Von Ribbentrop's note to the Swiss government, dated June 21, congratulated Switzerland on liberating herself from League sanctions obligations. It said:

"The German government welcomes this result because it sees in it recognized maintenance of Swiss neutrality, an important element for safeguarding European peace.")

Eleven Beauties Taken From Sharbot Lake

Salmon trout are biting in Sharbot Lake according to John Clark, 321 John Street of this city, who with four others visited that lake on Thursday and brought home eleven beauties, the largest one weighing fourteen pounds and the smallest fish tipping the beam at five pounds. Mr. Clark stated one of the fish weighing seven and one half pounds was taken on a silk line, while the remainder were all hooked on a spoon and wire.

"Otter Tail" a perfect "lunge bait" was used almost exclusively, while some used a "Pet and Wobbler" fish. Mr. Kirk also stated there were many tourists fishing in that vicinity and seemed to be getting their quota.

BUDGET CARRIED BY LARGE VOTE

Attack On Bank For Closing Branch In West

Ottawa, June 24 (CP)—Safely over the hurdle of the Budget debate after a flurry of divisions the House of Commons has settled down to discussion of the tax changes the Budget contained and is heading for prorogation within a week.

The House endorsed Finance Minister Dunning's Budget by a vote of 132 to 53 after defeating a Conservative amendment 136 to 53 and a C.C.F. sub-amendment 168 to 33.

Government Leader Dandurand and Conservative Leader Meighen both made speeches to second a motion that all public bills be considered on the floor of the Senate rather than in committee.

After a week's debate the House yesterday turned from the amendment and sub-amendment which would have rebuked the Government. Harry Leader (Lib. Portage La Prairie) was the only Government supporter to register dissent, the vote his protest against lack of tariff reductions, voting against his party.

Tariffs

Dr. H. R. Fleming (Lib. Hamilton) caused a flurry when he moved that the end of the debate to protest vigorously against failure of the Government to lower tariffs and to declare he would not be intimidated by any minister of the Crown" nor would any party whip "snap me into action."

Dr. Fleming concluded, however, with the announcement he would vote for the Budget and he did so when the divisions were called.

Highlight of the final stages of the Budget debate was the attack upon the Canadian Bank of Commerce by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, (Lib. Melville) for the closing of a branch at Kinistino, Sask., and

"Society of the Octavians" Urges Duke, Duchess of Windsor to Return

London, June 24 (AP)—A plea for the return to Great Britain of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor was voiced last night at a dinner of the "Society of the Octavians," which met to celebrate the 44th birthday of the former King.

Cheers greeted reading of a telegram which said: "Thank you for tonight's dinner and good wishes, which we much appreciate. Signed, Edward."

The society, sworn to uphold the honor of the former monarch, was shortly after his abdication Dec. 12, 1936, to defend him "from all slanderous attacks" and obtain fuller recognition for his past services to the country.

Compton Mackenzie, author and chief speaker at the dinner, denied any desire to "embarrass their present hosts," which said: "Thank you for those present "all agreed in love, devotion and loyalty to our former King."

Compares Ships With Volunteers In Spanish War

FEARS COMPLICATIONS

London, June 24 (CP)—Unmoved by angry demands for reprisals, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his cabinet firm on his declaration Great Britain will not take "the risk" of plunging into war to protect British ships in territorial waters of Spain.

Plotting calls by David Lloyd George, Winston Churchill, Sir Archibald Sinclair and Clement Attlee, Labor Party leader—including demands that aggressors on the Balearic Islands be "punished and the Spanish insurgent cruisers sunk"—the Premier told the House of Commons last night.

Ships Risk

British ships went into those waters at their own risk, he declared. Both Sir Samuel Hoare-Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary, concurred, adding that Britain's volunteers in the Civil War, who had to take their chances.

Winston Churchill declared no other great naval power would withdraw British ships from the shipping and asserted nothing could be "more fatal" than Britain seeking to condone the bombings.

"There is no country in the world," he said, "which has a greater interest in a general war," he said, "which has a greater interest in a general war," he said, "which has a greater interest in a general war

"THAT CERTAIN WOMAN"

"Ginger's" Pride Suffers Greatly Because of Loss of Silky Coat
RAZOR ALSO SUFFERS

In a home on the west side of the city a humiliated part-Persian cat skulks this week behind bones in the woodshed, under beds and sofa in the house, abject and beaten, afraid of being seen following the most embarrassing experience of a heretofore lengthy and dignified life.

Gone is its former haughty and supercilious air. Its proud strut on verandah and lawn has been replaced by a slinking crawl. At about mien and condescending state to visitors and family alike an air of terror lest it be seen.

"Ginger" became the victim of a fiery fanged electric razor in the hands of the six-year-old s'ster of the home. In spite of his valiantlungs and wails and flying claws, it was nearly shaved and clipped in strange and devious patterns by the buzzing clippers as it struggled for freedom. When the shearing was finished, "Ginger" sped to the top of the china cabinet in the living room, from where it was forced down, carefully.

The boy of the house has deep and painful scratches on face and arms; the cat has deep grooves in the formerly silky hair; the electric razor has been sent back for repairs. Habits of the formerly normal home have been running counter-clockwise which discouraged mother is attempting to remedy. Her worst trouble she confides, is to instil again confidence in a glaring cat.

POLICE COURT

Merritt Wood, Belleville, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted on two charges of the theft of grain, when he appeared before Magistrate K. J. Butler K.C. today. The sentences are to run consecutively. Charges of taking two motor cars, without the owners' consent, were dismissed against Wood, as Crown Attorney R. J. Donnan K.C. stated no presecution evidence from the accused.

Alan Sprague, local barrister, appeared on behalf of Wood and held Wood's previous record of crimes, which were submitted by Mr. Donnan, were all trival matters. The grain was stolen from Gordon Graham, Sidney Township, and restitution will be made, Mr. Sprague assured the court.

As a sequel to the above cast, Floyd Wood, Thurlow, pleaded guilty to three charges of taking automobiles without the owners' consent and also to the two charges of the theft of grain, sentenced last May. Jacob Goodman, local barrister, appeared on behalf of Floyd Wood and pointed out his previous unblemished life. "This young man is married and recently procured employment with a construction company. A fine in this matter might well meet the end of justice," pleaded Mr. Goodman. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan assenting, His Worship remanded Floyd Wood in custody until Monday for sentence.

Pleading two charges of obtaining money by false pretences to wit issuing worthless cheques, H. K. Scrutton, Kingston, requested his case be enlarged until July 2nd. during which time he would attempt to raise sufficient money to endeavour making restitution.

Donald Bruce, no address, was sentenced to serve one week in the common jail after being convicted of obtaining food at a local restaurant by fraud, to wit misrepresentation.

E. KEITH FACES TWO CHARGES

Criminal Negligence And Reckless Driving Charges Follow Death

Charges of criminal negligence and reckless driving were today preferred against Eldon Keith of Wallbridge, Ont., resident, following the death of the late Mrs. Emma Jane Pobert, Tweed, who died in the Belleville General Hospital early today, as the result of injuries received in a motor accident near Roslin one week ago when an automobile driven by Mr. Keith went out of control and crashed into the ditch. Mrs. Pobert suffered a fracture dislocation of the neck as the result of the accident, police allege.

Mr. Keith was arraigned before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., today on charges preferred by Provincial Constable William Hutchison. Keith was charged with the investigation of a motor car, did cause grievous bodily harm to Mrs. Pobert, contrary to Section 284 of the Canadian Criminal Code and also of reckless driving, a charge preferred under the H.T.A. The charges were read by Crown Attorney S. C. Donnan K.C., but Keith was not asked to plead, his case being enlarged until July 2nd.

"I am not asking bail under the prevailing circumstances," Mr. Donnan informed the Court, His Worship permitting Keith his liberty upon his own recognizance.

Police stated the accident, which resulted in the death of Mrs. Pobert occurred near Roslin and was caused by Keith, who was crossing the road at the time.

YOUNG RABBITS DRINK MIXTURE FROM THE BOTTLE
Jiggs, the Cat, Brings Home To West Belleville Man the Gift of a Baby Rabbit and Points Way to Nest
— Cottontails Learn to Drink Milk and Water

When Jiggs, an eighteen month old cat belonging to Mr. H. R. Bedford, corner of Cedarhurst and Wickett Street brought home a live baby cottontail rabbit in his mouth a few days ago, the owner of the cat naturally thought the rabbit was dead or mauled so badly that it would not live. But an examination showed that the little fellow was very much alive.

"Jiggs", Mr. Bedford then insme, plately addressed the cat. "Where are the rest of them. Go and show me where they are."

Jiggs acted at once, but he ran so fast out of the yard across Wickett Street out to the open land, growing deep in grass on the east side of Wickett Street, that Mr. Bedford was quite unable to follow feline. But sure enough the cat at last stopped and seemed to be working at something.

"When I got to where he was," said Mr. Bedford in a newspaperman, "Jiggs had the next exposed nest in it the cat could find. Grabbing it, I picked them up and took them home and the cat followed me. There were six in all.

"The next thing for me to do was to find out how to feed them. I tried milk but they would not touch it. As the days went on, I managed by dipping our fingers in milk and rubbing them on the rabbits' mouths to get them to drink a little of the milk. Later the same day I made a bottle and began feeding and had some success.

"They went well enough, but Mr. Bedford was not yet satisfied. He wanted a more convenient way to feed them, and finally hit upon a milk and water sweetened sugar bottle and with this method he has worked, managed to precipitate himself and tools into the bay, when the end of the board suddenly parted.

Attack Banks

The veteran former Minister of Agriculture bitterly denounced Minister H. Logan, head of the Bank of and Canada.

Commerce and urged the Government to set up a board of bank commissioners "so that when a broncho like this breaks out a scrub and lariat can be put on it."

Earlier in the day C. H. Cahan, (Con., St. Lawrence—St. George) warned the Government not to sacrifice any trade arrangements with United Kingdom in facilitating a three-way trade agreement between that country, United States and Canada.

One on Eddie!

The tree trimmer who sawed himself off on the end of a limb in this city some years ago, thus creating one of the most-oft-told tales when humour demands, has a counterpart. And Eddie George, popular Market Street barber, for whom the incident happened tells the story on himself with considerable gusto.

Engaged on an extension of a boat pier at his Jones' Creek summer camp this week, Mr. George misjudged the distance at which the board was held underneath by the supporting trestle work and whilst sighting up as he worked, managed to precipitate himself and tools into the bay, when the end of the board suddenly parted.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, June 24—Buyers got behind the stock market again today and, for the fifth successive session, pushed leaders up one to more than three points before encountering important profit selling resistance.

Overnight orders for selected rails and industrials flooded board rooms and, during the first hour, the ticker tape was almost continuously as much as four minutes in arrears. There was a subsequent let-down in activity and top marks were halved in many cases, but buying then hastened but once more gave ground near the day's high. Transfers were about 2,500,000 shares.

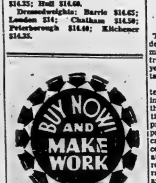
TORONTO STOCKS (Close)

Toronto, June 24 (CP)—Moderate gains in the industrial and base metal sections of the Toronto Exchange were trimmed in the late afternoon session, particularly in base metals and these along with the golds and the western oils closed slightly with a preponderance of losses over gains. Industrials held a margin on the up side, touching tapered down in volume to less than 600,000 shares.

Morning advance in Wall Street and higher London metal prices lifted the industrial and base metal Toronto listings in the early stage while the golds stood unchanged and the Western oils were down a little at noon. Trading was on the slow side with only 238,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours.

Noranda recovered a 3 point decline despite the general strength of the base metals, closing at 31¾. Ventures and Waite-Amulet were a little stronger. Changes were scarce in the golds. McIntyre, Dome, Wright Hargreaves, Hardrock and Uchi were favorite in the early action.

Strength in the industrials was concentrated in the steels, liquors, papers and the Canada Interlakes. At Petroleum posted a point gain.



Calgary Edmonton, Okalta, Royalite, Alberta and Home all posted minor declines and other Western oils were steady.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, June 24 (CP)—Steadying prices prevailed under upward trend at three markets today while other points reported steady conditions. Gains of 15 cents were noted at Barrie, Peterborough and Kitchener.

Liverpicks: Heil $18.65; London $18.55; Chatham $18.60; Peterborough $14.40; Kitchener $14.35.

Dressedweights: Barrie $14.65; London $14; Chatham $14.25; Peterborough $14.40; Kitchener $14.35.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford
By Financial Service

Some people feel that the market has moved ahead too rapidly but they have not taken into consideration the extent of the liquidation of the past eight months. It must also be remembered that stockings are scarce and any decent demand results in an appreciable advance. The list has a long way to go yet before it makes up even a portion of its decline of the past year. Nevertheless, it should be expected that any market recovery will be perpendicular and advantage should be taken of all sizable setbacks to acquire the sounder equities.

The feeling locally persists that the price of gold is headed upwards. A good deal of the recent buying of the golds found its basis in recognition of the principle that gold is still the most effective hedge against business uncertainty and political disturbance. The present accumulation of gold and gold stocks, however, appears to have a deeper underlying motive. That this is gaining credence is indicated by the trend of comment by some of the world's leading commentators on monetary trends.

The object of such a move would be two-fold. In the first place the aim would be to raise commodity prices and in the second to increase the paper value of gold held by governments. On the one hand it would be an effort to once more "prime the business pump" while at the same time giving the Government a huge "paper profit" with which to balance budgets and carry out further construction projects and armament programmes. Many commentators are definitely of the opinion that the price of gold will be stepped up 50% within the next year and possibly quite soon.

Canadian Car Common is a Stock That is Favored by Special Circumstances

A business depression of the severity of that through which we are now passing naturally has adverse effects upon the vast majority of companies. Owing to special considerations, however, there are always a handful which, if they suffer at all, are hit very much less than the average. Then there is a type of company that is favored by special circumstances and whose business is moving against the general trend. This is the condition that the Canadian Car & Foundry Company Limited is in, and, as a result orders on hand total more than $30,000,000 and the prospects for future business appear very bright. Therefore, it is only logical to expect that the forthcoming financial statement for the year ended September 30th, 1938 will be the best that the shareholders have ever received. The last report revealed earnings, of $1.75 a share on the common, the best showing should be materially better.

London Buying of Canadian Securities Has Appeared Within Week

The Street took interested in the London buying that has appeared within the week for seasoned issues. Montreal Power, Hollinger and Canadian Canners do not have been favored in this connection.

The Times of London has been commenting on the favorable trend on conditions in Canada, stressing the importance of a large crop and the benefits to be derived therefrom. Undoubtedly this comments has stimulated the investing of capital in this country.

Butter, Eggs Remain Unchanged

Toronto, June 24—Prevailing quiet dealings depressed prices in new makes at the close to the wholesale trade on the local produce market yesterday. Butter and eggs maintained former values.

Trading tapered off on the butter market, buyers apparently having taken on sufficient supplies in the past few days for the present time. Offerings were not being pressed, and prices ruled steady at previous levels. No. 1 Ontario creamery solids were quoted at 25¾ cents, 28 score at 25c and 27 score at 24½c. Prints moved through the channels at unchanged quotations of 27c to 27½c for top grades and 26½c to 26¾c for 26 score.

Fresh eggs were still scarce in light volume on the egg market. Enough demand appeared to keep

HUMANE SOCIETY MAKES APPEAL FOR MORE FUNDS

Citizens Are Urged To Contribute Generously On Tag Day Saturday

RECENTLY ORGANIZED

Members of the Belleville Humane Society will launch an appeal for funds Saturday, the first tag day tomorrow, Saturday.

Many of those not familiar with the work of a humane society did not have a very clear idea of the work, a field that it attempts to cover. Care of domestic animals, prevention of abuse or neglect of captive wild animals, the destruction of birds and educational work along all these lines is but a part. Mode of cruelty to animals is due to thoughtlessness or ignorance rather than to a deliberate intent to cause pain. One of the principal phases of the work is the teaching of kindness to animals to the children in school, the sweetening and refining influences of which cannot help raising the morals of our pupils. Dean Inge said in one of his essays that "as the people of the world become more civilized we will become more humane in their treatment of animals."

Belleville has for many years been one of the very few towns or cities in Canada that did not have a humane society and has frequently been criticized for that reason. Now a local branch of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been formed and it is hoped that the support of citizens in general and particularly those with a fondness for animals, will enable this society to a really effective organization.

Your contribution will be much toward alleviating distress and caring for all animals.

Following is a poem taken from Animal Life emphasizing the need of kind treatment of animals.

THE KING'S GRACE

The King said: "They bring us their homage;"
The Queen said, "They bring us their gifts."
But the Princess who sat at their footstool said:
"They starve their bounds in the cold!"

"Bengha the Wolfhound crouches Through the long night in the snow.
While the wind speeds down from the mountain's crown
Like an arrow sped from its bow!"

The King said, "By grace from high Heaven
When next they bend us the knee
We must live to the folk of the land
The Princess who sat at their foot, stool said.
"God grant that we faithful may stand!"

CONGRESS SIDELIGHTS

Quebec, June 24 (CP)—Electricity used to supply thousands of decorative lights installed throughout Quebec City specially for the Eucharistic Congress would be sufficient to carry on all of Quebec's street-cars 1,000 miles each.

Statues of St. John the Evangelist, St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Pascal Baylon and Blessed P. J. Eymard, founder of the St. Sacrament Order of Priests, are mounted on the four sides of the tall repository on the Plains of Abraham.

More than 30 men, women and children were overcome by intense heat during Pontifical High Mass celebrated yesterday. They received first aid at special stations just beyond the amphitheatre on the plains.

Throughout Canada more than 4,000,000 Masses and special prayers were offered by Roman Catholics during the past few months for the success of the Congress.

Congress ceremonies were threatened all day yesterday by rain but only a few drops fell and skies cleared early in the afternoon for the Manifestation last night by 80,000 men. In nearby districts, Meteorological authorities reported rainstorms throughout the day.

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow presumably remained in Paris, far from a reconciliation with his wife of many years in the district over the future of their son, Lance. If the German Embassy in England was required to appear before the magistrate who issued papers to the coroner on non-extraditable allegations.

The Countess awaited news from her father, Franklyn Hutton, who was due yesterday in Paris from with the Count.

Ben Frey Whips Farrata Squabble

Only chubby little Lance appeared oblivious to the commotion which has shaken the entire Winfield House. Guarded by detectives and nurses, he played alone while the press and cons of the "squabble" over his custody—whether he should go to school in the Count's native Denmark or in England as the Countess desired—were debated.

Both his parents are Danish. The Countess became a British subject United States citizenship last December to keep the nationality of her husband.

Since Lance was born in London with His Majesty Edward "liege and allegiance" he is considered a British subject under British law. By his Danish parentage, however, he is both Danish and British citizen. 22 years of age, when he could insist his British nationality by a declaration of allegiance to Denmark.

ASKS WHY FRANCO BOMBS SHIPPING

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 24 (CP Cable)—Sir Robert Hodgson, agent in Insurgent Spain, today requested the Burgos authorities to explain without delay why General Franco's airplane, contrary to bomb British ships in Spanish ports.

On receiving General Franco's reply, Sir Robert will immediately return to London, where he is expected early in the month, it was learned. Whether or not Sir Robert returns to Burgos will depend on the nature of the explanation he brings with him.

British Decision Later

A decision on this will not be taken until the conversations between Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Halifax, and Sir Robert.

Following adoption of the British plan for the withdrawal of volunteers the non-intervention committee is now considering how to finance establishment of observers in Spanish ports with facilities for unloading war material.

Negotiations are under way for the exchange of the British prisoners held by General Franco against 100 Italian prisoners held by the Republicans.

BAYSIDE GIRL FRACTURES HIP

Jean Jeffery, 5, Found Lying In Field In State of Collapse

Trenton, June 24 (CP)—In a state of collapse Jean Jeffery, five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Irene Jeffery, Bayside, was found lying in a hay field by a neighbor, Harry Bird, Trenton. An examination by a Belleville physician revealed the child was suffering from a fractured right hip. It is believed the girl was kicked by a horse.

Marks on the ground indicate the child had dragged herself to the fence from the centre of the enclosure, apparently attempting to respond to the calls of her aged grandmother, who became alarmed when she noticed her granddaughter missing.

'CANADA IS THERE'

"What Canada Is Doing In Scotland" is the subject of a short article in the pamphlet, "The Homecoming Scot" distributed by the Donaldson Atlantic Line, by Mr. Gordon B. Johnson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Scotland. Mr. Johnson states that the close racial relations between Scotland and Canada naturally encourage equally close commercial relations between them. He declares that Scotland fully subscribes her share of the United Kingdom's immense contribution to Canadian prosperity. "That contribution," Major Johnson remarks, "has been expanding rapidly since the recent depression lifted."

The commissioner states that his office deals with a continuous flow of enquiries both from buyers in Scotland and sellers in Canada, between whom, he acts as link. This duty is much more comprehensive than that simple statement implies. He studies and reports upon conditions, and the import requirements of his territory for publication in the Commercial Service Journal published at Ottawa or directly by letter to interested Canadian firms. This is but a small part of the work he does in trade promotion, and in trade publicity, with the publicity director. They take part in all important exhibitions. He tells of Canada's part at the Annual Housing and Health Exhibition in Glasgow in 1937.

Referring to the present Empire Exhibition at Glasgow, Major Johnson says Canada's greatest effort yet made in Scotland is impressive. "Canada is there—in a centrally situated pavilion of attractive designs and filled with commercial and what might be termed cultural, exhibits of which every Canadian may well be proud. Canada is there also in another sense. About 34½ percent of the timber used in the whole of that great exhibition is of Canadian growth and manufacture. Even the three mile boundary fence is of Canadian eastern spruce."

Major Johnson invites Canadian visitors to the Glasgow exhibition to avail themselves of the services of the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, either at the Canadian Pavilion at the Exhibition or at his office, 200 St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.

Other interesting articles are "Wings Over The North" by J. G. Perdue, Canadian Government Agent for Scotland, at Glasgow, a description of Scotland and a story on the Canadian Club of Glasgow, of which the Hon. Secretary is Mr. Robert N. Baird.

WITH CAPT. 'BOB' BARTLETT

Captain Bob Bartlett is on his way to the Arctic for another summer cruise and with him have gone some students for their health and for collection of specimens for museums. Incidentally the captain has aboard a cow which he is taking to his aged mother in Newfoundland. With them he carries also two dozen chickens for her.

How many boys would not like the voyage into the northern seas at this season, especially with such a captain as Bartlett. Capt. "Bob" has been one of the leading figures of cruising for years. He has appeared on the screen in short summaries of the result of his northern journeys and his charm is felt even in pictures. He is the type of man any boy would like to accompany into the places unknown to them.

Seeing the vastness of the waters of the globe, particularly in these parts which are out of the usual lanes of commerce brings a touch of romance which everyone, young or old, would like.

Then after the season will come the return journey with possibly some of the produce grown in his own northern garden, sometimes a narwhal or so which the crew has taken and sometimes walrus pups.

Here is one of the finest mentors for youth that can be had, the happy, generous type of man who inspires everyone with whom he comes in contact. It was the New York Yacht Club which bought for the captain the Effie Morrissey, which started the sea-dog in a new business a dozen years ago. Now every year he collects for museum after museum, and turns college boys into hardy sailors and scientists.

Happy captain and happy crew!

They have found things worth while in a world which for many seems to have worn threadbare of interest.

WE DID NOT QUARREL

We did not quarrel, did we, you and I,
And yet somehow the love we had did die.
No flaming sword of temper we employed
To kill that love we know has been destroyed.
We took great pride in letting it be said
We did not quarrel—for we were too well bred;
When each did things the other did resent
To no outbursts of temper we gave vent.
But stored up all we felt within the heart.
A dangerous undercurrent then did start,
Misunderstanding's gulf grew deep and wide
Two hearts which once were close it did divide,
That gulf so wide between us now does yawn
We never more together may be drawn.

I reach to you, whom once I loved so much
But you're too far away for me to touch.
And when I try, to me it then does seem
My heart grows cold within the icy stream
Which you and I, politeness like to call
But it's understanding after all.
So I suggest a bridge I know will reach
Across that gulf; it's frankness in our speech.
Let's build that bridge where we again can meet,
Let's warm that icy gulf with temper's heat.
And on that bridge let's you and I just stand
And vow that we will stay there hand in hand
And face the quarrels and tears and stormy weather,
And if our bridge should break—go down together.

EDUCATION OF THEIR CHILDREN costs parents in the United States two billion dollars annually. They support a 10-billion-dollar educational plant. They make it possible for a million and a half American young persons to attend college, compared with 50,000 not many years ago. Over three-quarters of all children in the United States now get to school.

"Are the results worth the price?" That's the question Dr. Henry C. Link, psychologist and author, asks after presenting the above figures, in the Rotarian Magazine.

"The free education which parents so often force on their children," says Dr. Link, "may be a source of more harm than good. The ideal educational program would be one in which all children, rich and poor, had to work to pay at least part of their expenses, especially during the summer months. Some colleges already follow this plan, with very satisfying results.

In the absence of the ideal program, parents can make further education of their college student contingent upon his getting a job during the summer, doing some paying work at school, or, at least, keeping his expenses to an absolute minimum. If a student has time for nothing but his studies, and even so finds college work difficult, then probably he would do better to get a job.

"The longer a young person postpones the getting of a job, the less likely he is to find it, or the less fit he may be for it when he does find it. This is a matter of personality, not economics, and personalities make economics, not, as we are so often told, the reverse."

A PARABLE ON GOVERNMENT—There is a prayer used in the Church of Scotland before the opening of Parliament which runs something like this: "Bless, O Lord, the two Houses of Parliament now assembled and overrule their deliberations for the people's good." Overrule, mark you, not guide or direct, the assumption being that they are almost certain to be wrong. I would take these words as a parable, for they might well be our attitude toward life and that law and government without which life cannot be lived. We dare not overvalue authority, since we know it is our own creation, but we dare not undervalue it, because we realize its supreme practical need. So we obey it and we pray for it.—Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, in the Rotarian Magazine.

Nervousness Plus Infection May Cause Ulcer of Stomach or Intestine

A business man found himself becoming very irritable about the office—nothing being done right,—driving his car—every other driver was at fault. He noticed also that after four hours after he ate a meal he had a pain in the stomach, which was relieved only when he took some baking soda, drank some milk, or ate some food. When he consulted his physician and gave him the above history the physician told him he thought it was a stomach ulcer, which the Xray proved was correct.

The physician put him on a soft diet and prescribed alkaline mentones which gave relief; he told the patient however that there were likely two things causing the ulcer, one of which was his own high strung nervous disposition and the other some infection—likely some teeth. An Xray of the teeth showed the roots of two teeth so badly infected that they had to be removed.

Rest, soft food, removal of infected teeth, brought about the cure at this time but his physician told him that if he didn't learn to control himself, to take things a little more easily ,to relax more, any little infection in his system, added to his knee disposition, would likely 'grow' another ulcer.

However, this nervous tense disposition even when no infection is present can cause symptoms closely resembling ulcer of the stomach. I have spoken before of the patients whose symptoms closely resembled ulcer but Xray showed that while no ulcer was present the rhythm or regularity of the stomach, nerve centre, churning the food, was greatly upset in that the movements would occur in rapid succession for a few minutes, then stop altogether for a time, perhaps become regular and normal, and then occur rapidly and irregularly again. A straight conditioning by the physician revealed the fact that the patient was trying to handle a difficult domestic problem. When this problem was solved or solved, the symptoms disappeared entirely.

The point then is that while high strung nervous, slender individuals are more likely to develop stomach ulcers, there must be an underlying cause, usually some infection, but any severe emotional disturbance, if continued for any time, may cause not only symptoms similar to ulcer, but true ulcer itself.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, June 24—(Special)—With town workmen very much on the job the task of completing the painting of street signs and park areas is nearly completed. In an astonishingly short period of time painters have placed the white lines along street parking areas, at the centres of intersections, and placed stop and slow and no parking signs on the pavements. The improvement is very marked, and will do much to assist local police in their check on motor vehicles.

Six Run Spurge

Making a big sixth-inning bid for victory that netted them a half dozen runs and put them one up on the opposition, Wooler's batting softball nine were still not quite able to pull the trick when Tourex's bested them 13-11 in about the most thrilling game of the season at Bayshore Park here last night. The contest was featured by errors from both teams, and the resulting slickness was responsible for a number of runs.

Until the sixth Tourex led by a small margin, but when Wooler combined a number of nice hits with several juicy Tourex errors and brought in six runs in the sixth to take the edge, the crowd wondered just how long the Hillsterbeen could do with just one more bat. However they had down a great barrage of hits and pushed in five to apparently go into a nice lead, only to have Wooler come back gamely with three and the tieing and winning runs on base.

Among the batting highlights were fine catches by Bell of Tourex's and Austin of Wooler, and heavy hitters included Austin and O. Redcliffe of Wooler with homers and Bell and C. Cook of Tourex's with round trips.

Fine Accomodation

After weeks of endeavour and pleasant and hard work two clay courts were laid this year on the C. P. R. Recreation Club grounds and some really excellent accomodation has been provided for tennis players who are flocking there in numbers. The regrettable feature of all this, however, according to one of the club officials, is that although there is plenty of enthusiasm there is not the support to care much about paying. Of the dozen who signed the original petition asking that the scheme go forward, only seven have paid up membership to date. This leaves the executive and the club as a whole in a serious position, for one of the keen players becomes prompt payers, the powers-thatbe are wondering just what will happen.

Following is the address read:

Miss Alyea,

Dear Teacher and Friend—

We learned with regret that in a few more days you will be leaving our neighborhood, as your pupils and friends have gathered here this evening, desiring in some small way to convey to your appreciation of your helpfulness during your sojourn among us.

You seem to have cultivated those traits of mind and heart that would have been the means of endearing yourself to both old and young.

The kindliness of spirit, cheery smile, genial manner and loving service shall not soon be forgotten.

Your untiring interest in everything pertaining to good of our community, your Christian example to young and old alike, we shall ever with all our hearts.

You gave unstintingly of your time and talents to help in every way you could and we feel our lives have been richer for our association with you.

As a "public school" teacher, you held high ideals of education, life and character before your pupils by your example, teaching them those golden qualities which are so essential in the making of true citizens and molding them to fill the various vocations of life.

Your social gatherings and as president of our "Community League" you will be greatly missed. You were also a member of our W. M. Society.

Along with the busy activities of the week, Sunday afternoon found you in our Sabbath School as teacher, very ably imparting truths from our Holy Word which were not only enjoyed, but feel sure have left lasting impressions. That is very gratifying to a small effort.

Mere words, often times fail to express our feelings. This we feel to be true at this time.

Would you kindly accept this gift as a slight remembrance from this community. May it also bring to mind pleasant memories of the days spent in our midst.

Your success will be felt as a distinct loss, but confident that wherever you go you will be a helpful uplifting influence will be given.

We extend a very great welcome to you in our midst when ever occasion permits.

Our best wishes, thoughts and prayers will follow you, that your new position may bring to you joy and joy and may God's blessing rest upon you.

Signed on behalf of the community—Evelyn Manns, Mr. Sparrow, Bernice Robinson, Marion Hagerman.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Judge Hardy's Children"

Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker and Fay Holden again unite as the interesting family for the third of the "Judge Hardy Family" series, coming to the Belle Saturday and Monday, under the title of "Judge Hardy's Children," a sequel to "Out Young Doctor", which takes the family from the little county town of Carvel to Washington where the judge is named on a power commission.

Mickey Rooney as the young son flirts with a girl from the French Legation, Cecilia Parker as the daughter goes to pay parties with a state department employee, lobbyists try to use her as a "spy" on her father's decisions, but the family remains quite content their daughter learns about men and returns to her real sweetheart and again all is tranquil in the family.

Kay Van Riper's intimate screen play of family life, with its touches of comedy and heart interest, was ably directed by Norman Z. McLeod who has piloted the series since its beginning with "A Family Affair." Among the comedy highlights are Mickey's first tuxedo and his dismissal from dancing school for teaching Jacqueline Laurent "The Big Apple."

Excellent Featurettes

An excellent array of featurettes have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including Pete West and Tom Patricola in an exceptionally funny multiple-reel comedy "Litter Bugs", the Belle News of the Day, and a funny Cartoon and the Eddi cartoon "Poultry Pirates." On Saturday matinee a new and thrilling chapter of "The Vigilantes are Coming" will be exhibited.

A frolicsome comedy studded with sparkling news songs is "College Swing" the new Paramount production starring Jackie Coogan, lovely Betty Grable, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Ben Blue, Edward Everett Horton and Bob Hope will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times.

The desperate lad sicked made by a cold blooded killer who invades a small suburban home to take refuge from the police forms the plot background for Paramount's "Eunied Men." The concession feature on the same program featuring Mary Carlisle, the lovely young blonde star, Lloyd Nolan, Lynn Overman, J. Carroll Naish and Dorothy Peterson, very interesting. Popular Science Issue in color will also be exhibited. The last complete show starts at 8 p.m.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

What Shall They Call Their Stepmother?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Our dad has just married a spinster six years older than he is, one bride being 51 years of age. She insists that we call her mother, and father, while not objecting to it at this, has told us it will make her very happy and prevent friction. Now why should we give a comparative stranger the same name as our darling mother, who died not quite a year ago? Our ages are 16, 17 and 18.

Three Sisters

Yours is a problem which frequently confronts girls with a new stepmother, and who are loath to give her the same title as they gave a beloved parent.

Some young friends of mine steered clear of it by calling the new bride she looked too young to be the mother of marriageable girls, and she smilingly agreed to be called by her Christian name. If she insists on a maternal tag, you might give her the French name of Belle-Mere. Or some pet derivative of Mama.

He Won't Marry Till He Has a Brick

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When he first began to talk about the nice brick house he was going to build for me, I had hopes that it would be ready to walk into in a year or so at most. But time has gone on, and the foundation has not been dug for the house of our dreams. We've had a joint bank account, and I've always worked and saved to furnish this home. But of late I'm beginning to wonder if I've been sensible.

He goes round with other girls and takes them to shows sometimes. He has also bought a car from our joint savings account, and he acts as if it were a favor for me to when I use it. I am beginning to

Wonder

Better get this matter of the joint account straightened out without further delay. I've had a good many letters along the same line as yours, and joint accounts, for one unknown reason, don't seem to hurry along the wedding bells. If this young man doesn't give you detailed information, my advice is to consult the proper legal authorities.

Wants a Real Wedding, But It Must Be Economical

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I want to be married in the garden of my grandmother's house, and I want to wear white and a veil and have some of my best friends for bridesmaids. But I can't afford to spend much on anything. I want to make my own wedding dress, is that bad luck? Someone tells me it is. Can you give me a few suggestions?

Bride-To-Be

No, certainly not; it's not bad luck to make your own wedding dress, unless by thinking, worrying and imagining things you deliberately court bad luck. You can do that, you know—just as you can court happiness and good luck.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Conflicting Obligations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Which is more courteous— to explain to an unexpected guest (especially one who has told "to home' days) that a previous promise has been made, making it necessary to go out, or to explain to the person promised that unexpected guests have arrived, making it necessary to stay at home?

2—Should the ladies of a family all shake hands with guests introduced in their own home?

3—Should the members of a club or firm giving a party or dance offer to shake hands with all certificates introduced, if the affair is given on hired public property? I refer to informal gatherings where there is no receiving line.

K.

1—Quite the thing to do is to explain to the arriving guests that you have an engagement that means that it will be necessary for you to leave. Guests who "drop in" unexpectedly take for granted that, if the hostess has an appointment, she will tell them. As a matter of fact, a thoughtful guest always asks about this "inconvenience" of her call. The person with whom the hostess has an appointment should not be inconvenienced under circumstances. The gracious hostess explains, "I am terribly sorry, Mary, but I do have an appointment that I must keep, and so I must leave in about ten minutes. I do want so much to have a chat with you. . . couldn't we make a date now for any time you say?"

2—Yes ,the members of a family, hostesses and guests of the home, shake hands with all arriving and departing guests, women and men.

3—Yes; even if there is no receiving line, the members of the club or firm giving the party are hosts or co-hosts of the party, and should shake hands with guests.

Wedding Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I Should wedding announcements be sent to guests who have attended or are expected to attend wedding's during which time engagement is announced?

Miss Fairfax

No. Announcements are sent—and friends who have not been invited to the wedding. This is true whether the invitations were formal or informal, and whether or not the person invited attended the wedding.

3—Yes. Formal invitations or announcements are addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Billings, and the person sending them knows both Mr. and Mrs. Such formal details make a social how to both husband and wife.

Wedding Guests' Attire

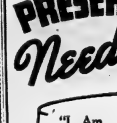
Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to an afternoon wedding. The bride will be wearing a long dress and hat, and the groom a business suit. Would a long dress with sleeves be correct, or should street-length dress be worn? Will you kindly advise me as to the correct dress for a formal afternoon wedding, for both ladies and gentlemen?

G.

For an afternoon wedding you should wear a street-length dress. A woman guest at an afternoon wedding, whether the wedding is formal or informal, wears her best-looking day clothes, (street-length skirt as much as possible on the formal side); the type, for instance, she would wear to a luncheon party or to a tea of some formality. A man guest at an informal afternoon wedding wears a dark business suit. At a formal wedding a man guest, if he is so fortunate as to own formal day clothes, wears cutaway coat, dark striped trousers, and appropriate accessories. Otherwise, he wears a dark business suit.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH



Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

Many people believe that oriental poppies do not make good cut flowers. This is true only when they are cut and not cared for correctly. When properly handled the cut flowers they can be enjoyed for a considerable time.

If you want to use oriental poppies as cut flowers indoors follow these directions carefully: After the poppies are cut and brought indoors, cut another inch off the end of the stem. Then immediately singe the cut surface over the flame of a candle or match, as shown in this Garden-Graph. Next immerse the stems in a bucket of cold water and set in a cool and darkened room for several hours. Best results with oriental poppies as cut flowers will be obtained if the cutting is done when the flower bud is partially open. Early morning is the best time for cutting them.

Planted where it can spread over a warm stone wall where it can hang from a sunny crevice, sedum sieboldi is attractive because of the contrast between its ash-pink beauty and its dark green foliage.

Ordeal by fire for Oriental poppies

If some of your peonies are large-headed they will need to be staked so that each pompom can stand erect and display its flowers and gray branches.

Shapely Figure Is Fashionable

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

DAME FASHION seldom gives a thought to her dumpling-shaped customers. She is kinder to them this season. She is building out the shoulders of the slim girls, flattening them out at the hope and stuffing their bodices to make them look "chesty. Being a bit overweight isn't the ordeal that it was in the past.

Still and all, the "plumpies" must keep an eye on their figures and both eyes on the clothes they select. They must remember that dark colors slenderize light ones add to appearance of dimensions that have expanded beyond the limit.

Lifted hem lines are not for them, so they're still keeping skirts 12 inches from the ground. Sleeves must not be full or fitted, but comfortably loose.

If you put a fat girl in a form-fitting frock, every bump and shelf will be apparent.

She must beware of those pretty bouquets that are so interesting a detail of the evening bodices. Her best bet are gardenias, placed close and flat. But she can have flowers on the top of her head; they add to height.

Belts must be narrow- or discarded entirely. Any decoration of any kind should be worn; they make her look chunky.

It is a shame and a pity when a neck gets wrinkled and scrawny. If you notice any change from the smooth, full surface, pity kaoline or a heavy massage cream every night, stroking the necks up and down, working from the collar bones to the ear lobes. Include the back of the neck; wrinkles exist there, too.

Martha Entertains

By ADA L. HUNTINGTON

Martha Bradley was beating up four eggs in a mixing bowl. To use four eggs in one cake was an extravagance, she knew, but this was an unusual occasion. She stepped into the cool pantry for some butter to grease her cake tin. Her eyes that couldn't help turning towards the roasting pan, where the last roaster, which she had been saving for their anniversary dinner, lay with its trimmings of salt pork all ready for the oven.

It hadn't seemed right to kill that bird with their anniversary so near. She hadn't even asked Henry what he thought of it. She just did it, and that was all there was to it. If she ever did ask his opinion he was regret to anything of the sort he would always say, "Do just as you please, Your judgment is better than mine."

When Henry had returned from town, the afternoon before, he had said, "Company tomorrow, Martha. I met Arthur Brown today. He said he hadn't seen you since we were married, and he'd like to come over. I urged him to have dinner with us, and he accepted."

"I hope his nerve," exclaimed Martha. "Finding for an invitation, after going with me for a year—and then sending me a note, telling me he had decided we weren't suited, as each person also saying he thought it was better for us to break off before I got to thinking too much of him."

"The device to did! You never told me that, Martha."

"Well, I wasn't so proud of it that I cared to tell you about it."

"The big stuff I hope you didn't answer it."

"I certainly did by return mail. I told him I agreed with him perfectly in thinking we weren't suited to each other, But I was sorry he'd been disturbed about my regard for him, as I prized my affections too highly to be so careless as to bestow them on someone who bored me as he did."

"Good for you. When did all this happen, Martha?"

"A short time before I met you."

Henry went out to finish his work, and Martha planned her dinner. She decided she must sacrifice all the good things she had planned for the celebration of their fourth wedding anniversary. And now she was making the lightest of sponge cakes, because Arthur had never been so at peace with the world as when he was eating lemon sherbet and sponge cake. In fact he had always seemed a bit more interested in his stomach than what nourished his brain.

The cooking dishes were washed and every one in its proper place when the telephone rang. Martha hoped it wasn't anyone who thought the telephone a convenience for social calls only, but it proved to be Clara West, one of her most loquacious friends.

When the enthusiastic conversationalist finally rang off, a distinct odor of scorching was in the air. Martha rushed to the kitchen and opened the oven door wide. Instead of the sponge cake of feathery lightness, there was a soggy ruin that not even a pig could relish. Just as she was taking it from the oven Henry came in.

"Wouldn't that discourage a saint?" Martha exploded. "One of Clara's famous telephone visits was the cause of that ruin, and I put four eggs in it. I don't care, I'm going to make another one. If I can't get it, I think I shall throw the telephone when I put it in the oven."

The second cake was a success, and Martha felt assured that her dinner was going to be very satisfactory.

Trouble with his car kept Arthur on the road for some time, making it rather late when he arrived at the Bradleys. When he came in with Henry, Martha thought him very personable. While Arthur was removing the effects of his auto wraps, she put the rest of the dinner on the table, and then stepped back to get a stranger's impression of the result of her hard day's labor. She felt sure that the cold chicken, dainty fruit salad, cake, encrusted in a delicious brown, squash, onions and mashed potatoes, and coffee which I put the best part of lettuce in the salads, and I know it couldn't be salted into the house."

"Oh, that's all right," was the prompt reply, "I thought you might like it, and as for the dressing department, I brought a supply in my grip."

As Arthur left the room, Martha heard a strange expression, exclaimed in a low voice, "My poor anniversary dinner! Pride directed each detail to put it over, and I've dealt harshly with me and my pun. Inherent in my complex I shall never be tempted to commit a second offence of this kind."

Why a Girl May Dislike Mother

It's Usually Due To Adult's Interference In Her Private Life

(By LISA GRENELLE)

There are many nice girls who don't like their own mothers. One day a young married woman, who still has retained her affection for her mother, said to me in shocked surprise, "Why, three-quarters of my friends can't get on with their mothers! They don't like them. I can't understand it. In a few cases of course, but generally—"

It is really shocking and frightening, to those of us who have young children, or children, to see how many girls seem to turn against their mothers after they are grown, or half grown. Of course, as my friend said, you can understand it in some cases. There are any number of impossible women in the world, unfortunately, and many of them are mothers.

There are, too, some very difficult children; even impossible children, I believe, but just a few. Then, too, there are the mothers and daughters are just naturally "mismated".

Not The Cause

Still, these in no way account for the enormous number of young girls who grow away from their mothers, feeling perhaps still a certain loyalty and, at bottom a certain love, but no longer any liking or sympathy. The relationship, apparently through no one's fault, has slipped from something warm and comfortable to something painful, irritating and uncomfortable.

It is the fashion to blame everything on the mother, but, in a way, she is as much a victim as the child —a victim of tradition, ignorance, lack of foresight and so often the crippling influence of her own past. Every home than girls turn against their mothers when grown. Why is this? Well, I believe it is because of the very different attitude with which mothers regard their sons. A mother may love her son more than her daughter, but she generally respects him more—respects him as an independent individual with a right to a life of his own.

The average mother will hesitate to interfere with her son's life, but not her daughter's. It's this attitude, more than anything she does, it seems to me, that makes for the difference in the children's attitudes. It's this half-conscious feeling of the mother that she has a right to take out on Janie what she has missed in Jimmie.

ADDITIONAL PARKING FACILITIES AVAILABLE

Alderman B. J. Jennings, chairman of Regional Planning, announced today that cars were not being parked in the Domenico property at the rear of Zellers' store in the same numbers as were parking in other lots in the city. Ald. Jennings stated there is space in this lot for 100 cars and all first class parking facilities. Entrance can either be made to the south of the property or further north on Front Streets, as all the parking space between the C.D.S. and the Zellers' store is now controlled. By using these lots, congestion will be removed from the main street and give the mechants a better chance to do business with those coming into the city. This operation and use of the parking lots will ease the traffic condition in the city considerably the alderman stated.

BATTERY—VANDER MEER AND LOMBARDI

When someone mentions Cincinnati Reds, current sensations of the National League, it's hard to know just who to talk about. There's Goodman, McCormick, Derringer, Manager McKechnie and others playing a big part in the Reds' push, but no one could forget the genius for Ciney, Ernie wields a powerful bat at the plate in addition to handling the catching chores in capable fashion.

Johnny Vandermeer, no hit pitcher de luxe, of whom just about everything has been said that needs saying. With him is his battery mate, Big Horn Rinie Lombardi, who caught both Johnny's classic efforts, as well as other great games for Ciney. Rinie wields a powerful bat at the plate in addition to handling the catching chores in capable fashion.

Oft-Repeated Scene—Goodman Scoring on a Homer

Batting in the number three and four positions in the line-up of the Cincinnati Reds are those two sluggers, one going to bat and the other finishing his effort. Frank McCormick, first baseman (37), ready to take his turn at the plate, congratulates Ival Goodman, ballplayer extraordinary, as he comes in after pulling the ball over the fence for a home run. The blow came off the slants of Carl Hubbell in the Red's series with the Giants.

Tigers Now Only 6½ Games Behind The Leader

By RED PERKIN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Those experts who gave Connie Mack's Athletics the slightest consideration this spring decided early and unanimously that as a pitcher Lynn (Line-Drive) Nelson was a good scavenger.

They figured that a fellow who was only four games and lost nine for an average run would be about as welcome around the Athletics' training camp as the "moon boys" bally at Shibe Park.

In fact, Mr. Mack thought so little of him that he didn't give him a starting assignment until May 8, but this Thursday he whipped the Tigers in 15 innings.

There isn't a more consistent working oldtimer in the business this season than the husky right-hander from Kansas City. He's started 12 games, and has finished every one.

Won Eight In Two

In those 12 starts, he's won eight, seven of them in a row, lost one and tied one, and has an earned-run average just more than three-per-game. Yesterday he tangled with Lonnie Warneke and polished a two-hitter for a 1-1 decision.

Way up at the head of the race, meanwhile, there was a change in the standings as the Yankees, comeback champions, drew starting pitcher in old Sammy Hadley, nipped the Indians 5-4 to regain second place from Cleveland and, for the time being, shoved the tribe's pace-setting margin to 2½ games.

Giants' Lead Cut

The Giants' National League lead also was cut a full game when they went down 8-5 before Cincinnati. Although their challenger, Johnny (Double No Hit) Vander Meer out for the first time in six starts, the Reds had enough lead to emerge with his eighth win in a row, chopping the Giants' loop edge to 1½ games.

Babe Phelps drove in six runs and Ted Presnell pitched a six-hitter to hand Brooklyn Dodgers an 8-1 win over Pittsburgh Pirates. The Cardinals topped the Braves, 3-1. The Cubs and Phillies were rained out.

Rudy York contributed homer No. 20; Hank Greenberg clouted No. 18 and the Tigers breezed the Red Sox, 10-2. Dutch Leonard's eight-hit pitching was enough for the Senators to trample Chicago White Sox, 13-6.

It is estimated that the United States has spent twenty-six billion dollars on its present highway system in the last thirty years. Another billion years and fifty billion dollars more will be required to complete the job.

THE HARD WAY

This striking action shot from the tennis courts was taken at Wimbledon as the feminine racquet-wielders of England and United States battled for the Wightman cup, won for the 12th time by the latter. It's Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, American star going after a hard one in her match against Margot Lumb of England whom she defeated.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

GEO. E. WATKIN

Several of our men were busy last week weeding the lawn green and certainly made a good job of it. Jack was telling me it was real funny to see how awkward it was for some of them to get on their knees.

Only of England's best lawn bowlers is blind. I could weep when I think of some of us with good eyesight.

I think it would be a good idea if we had more challenge games when there is no jitney. It is not hard to give someone a ring in the afternoon and make your date, this would be a great benefit to the new players and those not classed as skips. For instance Norm Edwards could phone Frank Carroll and tell him to get a partner. Mac McLean could phone Fred Harper and so on, after a while these games would become popular and create keen interest, so try it out. Newt, give me a ring.

A suggestion to the games committee. Start your Wednesday games at 6.45 sharp instead of 2.30 o'clock for July and August. This will give all a chance to play and will be much cooler.

We have several new players this year who are taking quite an interest in the game among them are Bill Rankin, Geo. Waterhouse, Bob Ragsdale, Geo. Stewart of the Bank of Commerce and Charlie Bishop.

The winners on Monday night's men's jitney were Mrs. McIntosh and Mrs. Ward, Rod Mitchell, C. McGuire, R. Richards and Harvey Stewart.

Our local rink composed of Mr. and Mrs. E. Zeran and Mr. and Mrs. Ab Wonnacott captured second honors at Brighton Wednesday.

The following is the standing of the men's club jitney:

KIWANIS JUNIORS DEFEAT NAPANEE BY A 7-4 COUNT

Local Team Yet To Be Defeated In Junior Loop

KELLEHER HURLS WELL

Popper't Triple In First Frame Longest Hit of Pastime

Proving exceptionally good opportunists by making their hits count when runs the Belleville Kiwanis kids continued their undefeated parade in the Quinte Junior League by taking the long end of a 7 to 4 count over the Napanee kids at the City Grounds last evening. The pastime was productive of a good brand of junior baseball, the result three consecutive league victories giving "Blink" Kelleher three consecutive league victories in as many starts.

Young Ken Kelleher went the route for the homesters and hurled steady ball in the pinches, as he struck out eleven Napanee batsmen but walked three in clutches. Kelleher wielded ten hits, but kept them well scattered and struck out every member of the Napanee nine at least on one occasion, Raymond Yick, a slender lefthander, ascended the mound for Walter Gerow's charges, but was replaced by Jocko in the sixth, following two successive hits. The visitors out-hit the locals 10 to 8, the longest hit of the day being Popper's triple in the initial frame.

Napanee Opens Scoring

Napanee opened the scoring with a run in the top of the initial frame after an error, a walk supplemented with McCutcheon's two base blow. The visitors added another in the second on one hit, a sacrifice and an error, but were kept off the score sheet until the ninth when a walk and a hit scored their fourth run across the plate. A single by Carson, a double by Jarrell and a triple from the bat of Jim Pepper gave the Barrett-led aggregation three runs in the final. Hits by Ronsky and McQuaid added another in the second, while the homesters terminated their scoring with three in the sixth on hits by Pepper and Austin, separated by an error and a passed ball.

One Double Play

One snappy two-ply play completed by the visitors, while the local infield played errorless ball behind Kelleher. Five of the fielding catches were sent in the outfield, with Raby, Napanee centre fielder, standing with five putouts to his credit. To date in the league the local Kiwanis kids have two victories over Picton and one win from Napanee to head the district junior loop without a defeat. A mere handful of fans witnessed the game, but was productive of good junior baseball throughout and a credit to the younger players.

Simcoe, first Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, was the "father" of Ontario's present day road system.

Both Upper and Lower Canada began an "active policy" of road building after the War of 1812 and over £2,000,000 was voted in the next thirty years.

In 1836 the federal government alone in the United States spent almost five hundred million dollars or nearly the total investment in Ontario's highway system.

In Europe and America to-day foremost efforts of highway engineers and traffic experts are being devoted to safe travel and the reduction of appalling casualties.

They had to call out the reserves to maintain traffic on W. 46th St. yesterday when Joe Louis dropped into Jimmy Braddock's spot to pay his respects.

It may be Louis vs Baer in September, but there may be billions.... General Phelan of the boxing commission didn't like the rass Baer threw the fans poured into Miami Wednesday night.....and what Baer saw there in the ring is making him wonder whether he shouldn't have "stood in California" or something..... Mike Jacobs thinks the host is a natural and will do between $500,000 and $750,000 and is more than willing to take a chance on Chicago if New Yorks turns him down.....

IMPERIAL OIL Announces
NEW IMPROVEMENT IN GASOLINE QUALITY!
Protected by Canadian Patent #357976
Exclusive solvent dissolves gum and fights carbon accumulations that rob engines of power/
● From Imperial Oil Limited refineries comes an improvement in gasoline quality so important that it is protected by a patent issued by the Canadian Government. Esso and 3-Star now contain an exclusive solvent which dissolves gum and fights carbon. Instead of drying and baking into hard sticky deposits that in a short time rob the engine of power, carbon and gum are dissolved and blown out through the engine exhaust.
The Canadian Government, in granting this patent, has recognized that this new solvent when added to gasoline, gives it new, useful and improved characteristics. No one can duplicate the new formula of Esso and 3-Star. No other gasoline can duplicate the performance of these improved motor fuels.
You have the word of Canada's leading petroleum organization that Esso and 3-Star are unexcelled motor fuels.
You Have Two Choices of Performance
ESSO The highest quality motor fuel Imperial Oil has ever made, containing a sufficient amount of tetraethyl lead to eliminate "knock" and "ping" and to give smooth power and cool running. Now Esso also contains the new Imperial solvent to keep your engine free of gum and carbon.
3-STAR This famous gasoline has long been recognized by motorists as a regular priced gasoline of exceptional quality. Now it contains the exclusive gum-checking solvent. It means more power, a cleaner engine, than ever.

No Foul Claimed by Max Schmeling; Leaves For Home On July 2

Schmeling Out of Danger And There is No Talk in N. Y. Of a Return Bout With Louis

Will Be In Hospital Until July 2nd When He Will Go Home

NO FOUL CLAIMED

Pictures Show Superiority of Brown Bomber Over Maxie

By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 24 (CP)— Max Schmeling is in a hospital across the street from Madison Square Garden—the same one in which Ernie Schaaf died after a clubbing by Primo Carnera—and with the passing of the German as an active threat to the heavyweight title the fight game abruptly has hit a short of "dead-centre."

Two days ago, before Max walked into a crushing first-round defeat by Joe Louis at the Yankee stadium in the record the spatial injury which probably has ceased his big-time career, the boxing business was booming better than Wall Street in the lush days.

Now, suddenly, the bubble has burst. Louis stands alone, with no opponent in sight except Max Baer, a man once whipped brutally by the tall young negro.

Louis-Baer Go

Promoter Mike Jacobs is negotiating for another Louis-Baer fight, either in September, or next summer in San Francisco. But Mike doesn't have his heart in it, and Baer is willing to fight Louis again only because of the money involved.

Maxie made a pitiful showing in the ring—and the contempt in the Louis blasts. Since then he has done nothing more notable than get married, enjoy his first-born and split two decisions with Tommy Farr. It will be extremely difficult to drum up big interest in another Louis-Baer scrap.

Louis is back in Chicago today, starting to enjoy a long rest. He and his wife are thinking seriously of making a boat trip all the way to Europe next month, and then passing up Germany as a point of interest.

Not Visited by Louis.

Although he and his entourage were in the mid-town sector all yesterday afternoon before boarding their train to Chicago, Louis didn't get around to visiting Schmeling at the Polyclinic. Neither did he evince much interest in Max's condition, leading observers to the conclusion that the only way he can move fond of the German than he had acted in the ring Wednesday night.

Unless he shows exceptional recuperative powers, Schmeling will remain flat on his back at least until July 2, which will be taken to the plane in an ambulance to embark on the trip home with Dr. Robert Brennan, surgeon who attended Max from the time he reached the hospital, said it would be advisable for him not to sit for three weeks.

There is absolutely no talk of a return go between him and Louis. Max surely disappointed those who thought he could whip Louis again.

Pictures Show no Foul

The slow-motion pictures of the bout, shown to the boxing writers late yesterday, accentuate the tremendous superiority of Louis. They show that he hit Max almost as he pleased, and that Max appeared to be groping through thick fog well before he received the blow, that sent him to the hospital.

The pictures prove, too, that there was no question of the punches that laid Schmeling low being intentionally foul. When Max, taking an awful pasting against the ropes, turned sideways from a blow to the head, Louis simply continued to throw lefts and rights to the body. A pair of them hit the vital spot just above the left hip bone.

The most that referee Arthur Donovan could have done when the kidney punches landed was warn Louis pounding he thought the blows intentional. As they obviously were not he disregarded them. It simply was Schmeling's hard luck that he chanced to be hit by what his manager Joe Jacobs described as "one punch in a thousand."

Scenes as Joe Louis Blasted Out Max Schmeling In One Round

The Challenger Sinks to the Canvas Under the Devastating Blows

time the first blow was struck until the end two minutes later until the end two minutes later, the challenger Max, the previously stolid, confident warrior, sinks under the barrage of lefts and rights, sent crashing into his head and body with all the force of an aroused opponent behind them. But one clean blow yas the pathetic retaliation of the man conceded a fair chance of becoming the first in history to regain the heavyweight crown. Referee Arthur Donovan springs around the falling German to wave the champion to a neutral corner and begin the fatal count, stopped at eight when he realized going further was futile.

Two Former Victims Congratulate the Champion

Bearing not a single mark of the dramatically ephemeral encounter, the dusky champion, again in command of the former of old, sits in his dressing room, full to overlowing with admirers well wishers, photographers and reporters. Congratulating him are two other prominent heavyweights who had tried to master the champion. On the left Tommy Farr, who stayed 15 rounds with Schmeling's conqueror last year. On the right-Met Louis last fall, when he, too, met Louis beg fall, when he, too, moved to the sidelines, after eight rounds of punishment from the iron fists.

CONSECUTIVE RUN SETS RECORD FOR NEWARK BEARS

By Downing Syracuse, Team Together 13 Straight Wins

BISONS KEEP PACE

Tenth Inning Homer By Boland Is Help Against Red Wings

That "big inning" idea of New York Yankees is being copied with excellent results by the Yanks' Newark farm of the International League.

The Bears stagnd another of their uprisings last night as they clobbed down Syracuse Chiefs, 11-9, for their 10th straight victory. That consecutive run set an all time Newark record as it bettered the string of 13 put together by the 1926 Bears.

Trailing 5-2 going into the third inning, the Bears got six runs over the plate to take the lead. The Bears belted three Syracuse pitchers for 16 hits with clouting Charley Keller getting three of them, including a homer, to run his hitting streak through 13 games. Nick Wittel, Newark shortstop, also hit for the circuit.

The Bears, however, failed to gain any ground on the Buffalo Bisons who remained nine games behind the league leaders by trimming Rochester 3 to 2. A tenth-inning homer by Eddie Boland with Art Jacobs aboard gave the Bisons their fifth consecutive win and moved them six games in front of the third place Jersey City Giants.

Old Pat Malone stopped the Giants with six hits to gain a 6-3 victory for the revamped Baltimore Orioles. Gene Corbett, former Wing, sling pedestal, slammed a homer for the Orioles.

Toronto Leafs and Montreal Royals had an off day, their scheduled game having been moved back to make a doubleheader.

"The Winner and Still Champion!"

The triumphal moment! Announcer Harry Balogh holds high the hand of Joe Louis, signifying victory and the successful defence of his heavyweight crown. Never before had a champion had his hand raised in victory such a short time after entering the ring, a ring already swarming with admirers and the press. On the right is Trainer Jack Blackburn.

It must be discouraging and disheartening to the sponsors of minor league baseball in this city. Last evening the Mimico Shores won a lidy tussle over the Napanee Minors by a 10 to 9 count and there were exactly seven paid admissions went through the turnstiles. If the baseball fans of this city ever expect to have a good ball club in our midst and hope to keep it on a right-about face in the attitude of the fans from the minor league brand ball in Belleville. Some years ago the fans cry was: "aw, what's the use in wasting our setters, they lose every game." Today we have junior and intermediate clubs that are playing good baseball and leading their respective leagues, and still the fans don't support them. Could it be that baseball is not catered to this fair city? Maybe we've got something there.

Skipper Walley Gerver interviewed Yetna as a battery for his Napanee Juniors last evening in Kaymond Park and Yetna was the pitcher and catcher respectively. Frankly speaking we feel the local battery could materially assist their club in the pitching role by showing a little more hustle during their games. Yetna's attack on the ball when given the support in his mound league victory, indicated that he has the stuff in improving and is hitting as well as handling his pitchers.

Fraternizing on the links last Wednesday a team of golfers from the Belleville Golf Club met defeat at the hands of a team from Port Hope on the latter's course. The score was 36 and a half to 18 and a half against the locals. Harry Bibley, Walt Ferguson, Joe Legault, O. Waldorf, "Toots" Holway, A. Walker, H. Tyre, C. Laughlin, Cliff Maybee, Sam Hibbard, W. Tyrer, L. Hahnke, Doug Reid, Carl Pusard and Jock Mitchell the local club pro were the players to represent Belleville. Reports are to the effect the Port Hope course is one of the hardest nine holed courses in the province, which may have caused the local boys some difficulty in their initial appearance there.

That old saying in the heavyweight boxing ranks of —"they don't come back" still holds good and took its toll on another in Max Schmeling, who today is not absolutely "out" as he was at first accused of. Already Promoter Mike Jacobs is angling about for a possible opponent for champion Joe Louis for September, and Max Baer and Tommy Farr have been mentioned, but after Wednesday's fig right the newspaper men have been unable to find Baer in or around New York. Schmeling's retaining lethal punches hung on Schmeling by Farr and Louis and hurt Baer equally as bad as they did "Unser Max." Reports are confirmed — Schmeling's injury was no fake, he had a small bone that joins the spinal column fractured.

Johnnie Vander Meer, Cincinnati's sensational hurler, was clobbed from the mound yesterday, but in the long run Eddie and the Giants and Johnnie was given credit for the win, being his eighth consecutive victory. Ohio State fans are hoping for an all-Ohio world's series this year between Cleveland and Cincinnati, which seems somewhat remote from this corner, but not exactly possible.

For the Peterboro scribes information we'll let him in on a secret—Dud Clarke, who was with the Kingston Frontenacs in 1933, is not pitching professional ball down south, but on the contrary is up around Sudbury, pitching in the Northern Ontario loop and according to our operator No. 23, is not going to retire, also spoke his 23 smokers per seven days below.

Skipper Burrell Fanning says he's discovered a find in Chuck Barrage, who filled in at second base for "Ortina" at Picton on Wednesday. "Barrage played hands up baseball in the field and helped himself to two hits. Right now our team is fighting great defensive ball and hitting with consistency," continued the skipper. True enough Belleville "Ortins," (and they're orphans in every sense of the word insofar as pitchings is concerned), are playing great ball and deserve the support of the fans. Any team winning four of its first five games in the Bay of Quinte League must have something on the ball. The fans can help the front office of the club by purchasing tickets on the two autographed balls from the Yankees and Cardinals. They are authentic.

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland club is a good one. You will recollect that Manager Oscar Vitt fined Johnny Allen $250 for failing to get on the team chartered plane after Umpire McGowan had ordered the pitcher to discard his shirt with the cut-up sleeve. Allen had adopted the old trick which the National League let Dazzy Vance get away with a few years.

The Indians went from Boston to New York for a vital series in which the club needed Allen badly. So Bradley dashed to New York and called Allen.

"That shirt of yours has become famous and a (Cleveland expurgated store offers $500 for it. Want to put it in their window?"

Allen said the shirt for $500, and was fined $250 for the deal. Yes, this Bradley guy is cute. His brother and he practically own that department store. It was a fine way to save Allen from the ranks of the disgruntled.

"Like father, like son", or chips off the old blocks, perhaps would be more appropriate. Eddie Grant, many moons known his business. Why there minded, do you want more good scores never?" asked the lad. "Yes but, sonny, what's it all about," we replied, when it suddenly dawned upon us our yokelness was none other than Jimmie Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. (Penney) Mills. Well, my baseball team the "East Hill Tigers" is playing Red Green's Point Anne "stogers" at the Pole Grounds on Saturday, afternoon and we want you to tell the public they are welcome. All the players are under 15 years." decided Jimmie in his best effort to impress.

This looks like a real ol' grudge game, because Jimmie Mills is Penney Mills' son, while Rud Green is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl (Sonny) Green of Point Anne. Sonny and Penney for many years battled for the batting honors of the old Belleville senkrs, and now their sons manage rival baseball teams. It's too bad there are not more boys of this caliber and if they'll drop around to this office we'll donate a new batting ball for this important game.

A Sorrowful Figure

From radiant confidence bug a by his friends. The intervention few short minutes before to dejected bewilderment went Max Schmeling, seen in his dressing room after the bout being consoled by his friends. The intervention of Promoter Jacobs was necessary to allow reporters access to the beaten man's quarters, where the door at first was locked.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

They might like and admire, but they could never wholly understand each other. Eileen would have found inconquerable bitchery real uncertainty, the formless fears that troubled her, the hunches that pulled her one way and another. Eileen would have said, and meant it, that second among all, not even excepting that she did, "Either you love him or you don't, there's no middle ground." And if you do love him, there's nothing to worry about. It's grand being in love. If you don't"—well, that's right too. You've always said you didn't want to marry.

A mere matter of differentiation between black and white, between parallel lines and converging ones. But it wasn't like that really. Something deep down within Eileen, something not newly come into being seemed that there was more to this business of love and being loving than Eileen supposed. Since such profundities were not given to that appear parallel to the naked eye may converge, and at some distant time and place, meet.

Two who are friends with no intention of ever being more than that, may find themselves involved in a tangled, hopelessly interbinding, canght and held fast beyond all hope or possibility of escape without injury to one or to the other.

Sensing this danger, still Tobey must go on, she might decide somewhere along the way. "I'll stop seeing Douglas. I won't go out with him again." But when the moment of Elaine's to find him waiting, her resolution lifted. Pleasure in his company overcame her shadowy doubts.

She thought she could have told Rod something of the uncertainty that troubled her. And not any more. In fact, she was finding it increasingly difficult to write to Rod at all. A queer, half-sensed constraint had grown up between them.

She did not again encounter her cousin, Dick Power, in exactly the way that the next move should come. She came across him very close to meeting the fabulous Connie, and Peter Tobey had to do with Douglas to the Stadium to see a hockey game. The great echoing place was crowded as usual. Well-dressed, dignified people in the lower tiers, a scattering of men and women in evening clothes. More unsmallable hats. Peter Lamont fans filled the seats above, stretching her on noisy tier to the distant roof.

The ice was smooth and milky white in its great oval. Players moved swelled as the teams skated out, their bodies crowded in small, bulky muscles, protected by unwieldy looking leather guards and pads. The spectators drowning into place. The whistle shrilled. The sticks flashed and clashed and the great small innocuous cause of all this hurried whirlwind action, went flying—

Tobey gasped over the vicarious exhilaration of the game. Her eyes were alight with interest, with the necessity of grasping every speedy detail of play. She cheered with the rest, and the thought that Douglas' arm until he other two were hopelessly lost in the crush ahead?

"Not much chance in this mob, I'm afraid."

Douglas' prediction proved true. Only once did Tobey so much as catch a glimpse of those two blond heads. Later a curious and troubling thought occurred to her. Had Douglas' hand on her arm restrained her rather than propelled her forward until the other two were hopelessly lost in the crush ahead?

When Eileen Shea was married Tobey graduated from 18 to 19 and seem a break beyond all expectation to be given Eileen's old position in the office. Responsibility, advancement carried with it an unpardonable increase in salary. The way of celebration Tobey bought herself a frock at Elaine's, a dinner dress that was the color of an Easter gundy.

Tobey was wearing it a few nights later when Douglas Norman announced across a crowded room in the ultra-modern dining room of a Michigan Avenue hotel. "Connie Winslow married her Viking yesterday. They're gone off on his yacht for a honeymoon in Scandinavia, and Fran's already taken advantage of the chance to get a divorce. Douglas opened the door and when they were back from Connie's, a moment's staring, drinking her in, an unsettling hunger in his face that spelt Rod. Then they were strong and brown; his face was deeply tanned. Wordless as the two met into the thick silence of Loop traffic, headed north.

It was Tobey who spoke first of her or a thought. She broke the silent understanding between them. "Rod, you're home! You're so brown."

"I've been to Florida. Got back this afternoon."

Been now they must dwell on the safe, impersonal level of the issue that lay so clear and distinct between them. Tobey spoke of the trip.

They sped on through darkness. Fran—Fran—Fran—Fran—the name was on one side and on the other bare trees whipping in the wind. Douglas' car stopped at the edge of a curving road that overlooked the lake.

Tobey was only a little surprised when Douglas' arm, strong and heady languor possessed her even before their lips met. Nothing in her, only the acquiescence of her traitor senses. Feeling on each little thing in a casual touch, a word spoken gently, a look that could mean much or little depending on the interpretation one put upon it. But there was no word of love between them, nor any outward indication that they had gone past friendship. Still Tobey could reassure herself with the thought that, knowing the possibility of danger, she was safe. She would stop seeing her vacation.

Douglas in time, before he was important enough to her to really matter.

Yet she was totally unprepared when, giving no slightest word of warning, Douglas stopped seeing her.

At first Tobey couldn't accept his absence as significant. She thought, with the unconscious pitiful boastfulness of women, It's just that he's busy. Or perhaps he's had to go away for a few days. But it was more than that. If this were final she'd have to know. She'd have to get things over and reached a decision. Together. Tonight he'd be waiting — or tomorrow, or the day after that.

Days passed and Tobey was to grow appalled at the bleak emptiness of those days, appalled at the torturing expectancy that flared up in her each night as she left the store. She was to learn at last that the unbearable humiliation of involving a man and a woman, ever stands completely still. It wanes or it waxes. It never remains on the rock.

Bitterly the daughter of Tim and the stepdaughter of Adam rebuked herself for her stupidity, her naivete. You were going to be so wise, so wary, so unteachable — and then you let something slip down within her that cried out for the sun, for the light, for the blustery evening when she came home from work and was met at the door by the grey car waiting as if it had never been away, as if the days between had not been. Then the weakness within her revolted and she was filled with a strange unreasoning despair, a despair of the ultimate insanity. Douglas opened the door and when they were back from Connie's, a moment's staring, drinking her in, an unsettling hunger in his face that spelt Rod. Then they were strong and brown; his face was deeply tanned. Wordless as the two met into the thick silence of Loop traffic, headed north.

It was Tobey who spoke first of her or a thought. She broke the silent understanding between them. "Rod, you're home! You're so brown."

"I've been to Florida. Got back this afternoon."

Been now they must dwell on the safe, impersonal level of the issue that lay so clear and distinct between them. Tobey spoke of the trip.

They sped on through darkness. Fran—Fran—Fran—Fran—the name was on one side and on the other bare trees whipping in the wind. Douglas' car stopped at the edge of a curving road that overlooked the lake.

Tobey was only a little surprised when Douglas' arm, strong and heady languor possessed her even before their lips met. Nothing in her, only the acquiescence of her traitor senses. Feeling on each little thing in a casual touch, a word spoken gently, a look that could mean much or little depending on the interpretation one put upon it. But there was no word of love between them, nor any outward indication that they had gone past friendship. Still Tobey could reassure herself with the thought that, knowing the possibility of danger, she was safe. She would stop seeing her vacation.

I was standing around the letter box eating a apple, and Sid Hunt came up eating a peach with a expression as if he thought peaches was one of the best fruits in the world. Which they are, only so are apples, and after a while I said, How about swapping the rest of that peach for the rest of this apple?

Sure, if I take 3 more bites out of it first, Sid said, and I said, Okay, if I take 3 more bites out of this apple while I'm waiting for you to take your 3.

With both started to do, me saying, Apples are more valuable than peaches anyways.

Oh I dont know, why are they? Sid said, and I said, Because peaches fade too quick. You can save a apple around as long as you want and it's still good, but if somebody leaves a peach lying

80,000 MEN ATTEND MASS

Sacrament Exposed As Thousands Kneel On Plains of Abraham

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, June 24 (CP)—From Quebec's cliff-top, where the green-sloped Plains of Abraham stretch far beyond countless church spires in the ancient city, more than 80,000 Roman Catholic men-folk raised reverent voices last night in an oath of unflinching faith.

For days from all parts of Canada and the United States they had gathered in the old capital where more than three centuries ago forefathers implanted that faith that brought them here as pilgrims to Canada's First National Eucharistic Congress.

Their solemn, spoken vow broke the midnight stillness over hallowed ground where forefathers also shed blood in final settlement of Canada's civil rule and echoed over the black St. Lawrence River which once echoed to the roar of cannon and musket from the selfsame spot.

Sacrament Exposed

The huge assembly packed a glistening, white amphitheatre encircling a repository where the blessed Sacrament of the Catholic Church was exposed in a seven-foot gold Monstrance.

The thousands knelt on low wooden benches with bowed heads for an hour's adoration before they were called upon to raise their heads and give verbal manifestation of their faith.

Second day of the Congress. It was the demonstration marked the perhaps the most impressive of its kind in the Roman Catholic Church's long history in Canada.

Cardinal Villeneuve, named by the Vatican as personal representative of Pope Pius XI, attended under escort of a Papal Mission of six men from Rome for the Congress, and nearly all the Dominion's Archbishops and Bishops.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

RARER THAN HEN'S TEETH

Rarer than hen's teeth, according to agriculturists and breeders, is the birth of a mule to a mule, which is classed as a hybrid animal. But here in Sandstorm, dark Kickapoo, a mule owned by William H. Mobley, of Hartsville, Ind., with the help of a horse, gave birth. The little fellow has been named Kickapoo.

Control Destructive Cabbage Insects

Velvety green caterpillars, known as imported cabbage worms, are commonly found feeding on cabbages and cauliflowers. They eat large circular holes in the leaves and frequently bore into the centre of the cabbage heads. Control measures should be applied as soon as injury to the plants becomes evident.

Dusting with arsenate of lead and hydrated lime, is the most widely recommended remedy. One part of the poison should be mixed with eight parts of the hydrated lime and the resulting powder dusted on the plants in the early morning or late evening when the leaves are wet with dew. Particular attention should be paid to the central portion of the cabbages and cauliflowers, since this is a favourite spot for feeding. Two or three applications should be made as needed, care being taken to apply the dust immediately feeding becomes evident. Dos in the waxy condition of the leaves, spraying has not given satisfactory results.

If the plants have to be treated shortly before being marketed, fresh pyrethrum powder should be used one part to three parts of hydrated lime or flour. Pyrethrum powder is non-poisonous to human beings and can be secured at local seed houses, drug stores or wholesale drug companies. Fortunately, the remedies recommended for cabbage worms control other destructive cabbage and cauliflower insects as the cabbage looper and diamond back moth.

Effective Ways Treat Poison Ivy

Of all skin-irritant plants, poison ivy and the related but less frequently met poison sumach and the far western poison oak are the most virulent. The active principle of poison ivy is an oil which is present throughout root, stem, leaf, flower, and fruit and even to the easily detached hairs. Tearing or brushing of any part of the plant liberates the oil to come in contact with the exposed parts of the person touching it. The first sign of infection is usually a slight itching followed by a faint blush on the skin. The itching sensation increases and, from a few hours to some days, numerous minute blisters, or there may be only one blister, appear. In a mild infection, there may be no more than shiny dots upon the skin and go no further. In other cases, the blisters eventually break, to become irritating, oozing sores from which contagion may spread to other parts. The sores finally dry up, forming scabs. A really severe attack may upset the health completely for a time.

If the poison ivy oil is suspected of having reached the skin, immediate scrubbing with laundry soap strong in lye, in tepid water changed after each lathering, or running warm water to carry away the poison is a sensible precaution. If done before the oil penetrates the skin, no other treatment is usually necessary. Washing with alcohol, kerosene or gasoline also helps to keep the poison from spreading.

Recommended Treatments

Treatments without number have been proposed and used, often indiscriminately without regard to their exact purpose. The treatment for affected parts most widely recommended in recent years, potassium permanganate, has for its purpose the destruction by oxidation of the poison itself. The parts are washed with a three per cent solution, made somewhat weaker if the skin is particularly sensitive. A brown stain left by the permanganate may be removed gradually by soap and water. The commonly used iodine stains even more. Once blisters have been formed, rubbing should be carefully avoided. If cooling substances (baking soda, boracic acid solution and such like) are used, no application should be made while the sores are oozing, or they may seal over with a crust and thus aggravate conditions.

Easily Transmitted

Individuals vary greatly in susceptibility to ivy poisoning and many have never suffered any ill effects, but this cannot be taken as full assurance of immunity. Sooner or later, when perspiring freely perhaps, or having oils on the skin one may become a victim and therefore is obliged to exercise more caution. Persons who are certain they have not been in contact with poison ivy and declare that the infection must be air-borne or that it is "in their system" during the popularly seven years after an attack, forget that the resinous oil may be sticking to clothing, especially to boots, tools, picnic baskets, and dogs. It is easily transmitted to the hands and thence to the face, and by handclasp to others who may not have been exposed at all. The smoke from burning the plant has been reported to carry particles to cause severe poisoning.

A circular giving full information as to recognition of the plant, treatment of poisoning, and eradication of the pest may be obtained free on application to the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Why the Weather?

By A. H. Thiessen
Canadian Meteorological Director

Why do clouds appear, disappear and reappear in their shapes. But how can they be so heavy that they are composed of water vapour which is 800 times lighter than air? Of course they really do not float but settle relative to the air, the latter moving as a whole where they happen to be at the rate of eight feet per minute. Formed as they are in rising air, their motion in relation to the earth may be rising or stationary, if the air stagnates, or changes in direction downward over so little, the bank of cloud may be warmed but its descent, unless that is, changes into invisible water vapor.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 23 (CP) — Light scattered showers have occurred in southern districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan and thundershowers in northern portions of Ontario and Quebec, while over the remainder of the Dominion the weather has been fair. It has been moderately warm in the Prairie Provinces and decidedly warm over still greater part of eastern Canada. Pressure is high over the northwest portion of the continent and relatively low over Quebec, the Maritimes and the Middle Western States, with a moderate disturbance centred over northern Labrador.

Lake Superior—Moderate northerly winds; partly cloudy and moderately warm today and Friday.

Western Provinces—Partly cloudy and moderately warm today and Friday; probably scattered showers in southern districts.

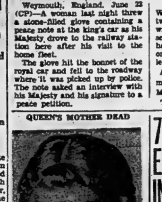
Woman Throws Stone-Filled Glove At the King's Car With Peace Note

Weymouth, England, June 23 (CP)—A woman last night threw a stone-filled glove containing a peace note at the kings car as his Majesty drove to the railway station here after his visit to the home fleet.

The glove hit the bonnet of the royal car and fell to the roadway where it was picked up by police. The note asked an interview with his Majesty and his signature to a peace petition.



The woman was not held.

It was thrown by Mrs. Helen Willard, a Weymouth mother of two children, who said: "No harm was intended. I wanted to present my letter to the king when he arrived at the railway station on Monday but they would not let me."

A policeman said it was "a most minor incident and I doubt if his Majesty noticed it at all."

The woman was not held.

Countess Reventlow Obtains Order To Safeguard Herself and Child

London, June 23 (AP)—A source went to Court after adopting unusual safeguarding measure, at her house in Regent's Park. The precautions were taken in regard to threats to kidnap the boy.

The Countess was reported to be planning to make application to have the boy made a ward in Chancery, which would prevent him being kept in the jurisdiction of Germany.

The London Daily Mail quoted the Countess as saying in an interview in the that British police wanted to question him in connection with his wife's proceedings. But subsequently the paper published a report from his London correspondent that Count Haugwitz-Reventlow denied report of the differences between himself and his wife.

700 MEN BATTLE EXTENSIVE FIRES IN NORTH ALBERTA

Showers Bring Hope, Though Downpour Is Needed

PEACE RIVER FIRES

Edmonton, June 23 (CP)—A southeast wind carried hope of rain today to 700 men battling widespread forest fires in Northern Alberta and a hope for people in dozens of districts of a cloudy sky to replace the smoke haze of the last few days.

Thunderstorms that broke in Southern Alberta left welcoming rains yesterday at Edmonton, Lethbridge and Letbridge, a shower at Edmonton showed indication of drifting farther north. Weather Forecaster Bowery recalled for "scattered showers", and forecast of official dealers a downpour would be needed to stamp out the fires.

Throughout the Peace River district, east around Lesser Slave Lake and further east still at Lac La Biche, fires were reported burning fiercely yet. In Edmonton, Alberta's assistant director of forestry, remained grounded at Peace River on an aerial survey of the fires.

Every available piece of forest fighting equipment had been sent from Edmonton and equipment from Rocky Mountain House, 150 miles southwest of Edmonton, was being transferred north.

Four new fires were reported to the Alberta Forestry Branch, all of them in outlying districts. Two were situated near Keg River, 300 miles northwest of Edmonton, another in the British North Peace Country west of Keg River and the fourth on the north shores of Lesser Slave Lake.

FEW ARE BORN WITHOUT COOLING SYSTEM IN BODY

Nature's First Air Conditioning in Human Body

LAWS OF HEREDITY

Condition of Lack of System Leads To Abnormal Temperatures

By JOHN TRACEY

Halifax, June 2 3(CP) — Being born without an air conditioning system was one of the causes of death in infancy, Dr. H. R. Cluston of Huntingdon, Que., told the Canadian Medical Association in a scientific paper today.

Nature's first air conditioning system was in the human body, the system in the nose and throat, deficiency, known as hereitary ectodactyly germ-free and dust-free, the air before it reaches the lungs.

Rare Condition.

Some babies born without the necessary apparatus, may die of chronic irritation or infection due to dust and germs which get into the lungs.

The condition is relatively rare, but it is more prevalent in certain localities than in others. It follows certain laws of heredity and seems to be confined to males.

Usually accompanying this condition is another deficiency. The babies have no "sweat glands". These control the temperature of the body. Without these children suffer acutely in warm weather. Water gives off in the form of perspiration cools the body. Without this cooling system the temperature may rise to abnormal heights.

Dr. Cluaston estimated there were more than 7,000 cases of this deficiency, known as heretialy ectodermal dysplasia, in America. He presented a graph to show the intensity of the condition is becoming less severe with the improvement in living conditions.

FIVE THOUSAND C. N. R. SHOP MEN TO BE AFFECTED

General Cessation Across Canada For Ten Days

TEMPORARY REDUCTION

Change Made Reluctantly Until General Traffic Improves

Toronto, June 23 (CP)—More than 5,000 Canadian National Railways shop employees will be affected by a "general cessation" of shop work throughout the System for 10 days, Vice-President W. A. Kingsland of the C.N.R. Central region announced today.

In the central region, including Ontario and Quebec, 4,500 employees will start a 10-day holiday tomorrow. About 500 men are similarly affected in Manitoba. After the lay-off, a general reduction of 25 per cent will be made in all classes of shop work.

The Statement

Mr. Kingsland's statement:

"Due to general business conditions, with the resultant falling off in traffic, it has been necessary to announce a general cessation of shop work throughout the C.N.R. Canadian National System for a 10-day period, commencing June 24 and terminating July 4.

"In the central region 4,500 shop employees will be affected as the following points: St. Malo and Montreal, in Quebec, and Stratford, Leaside and London, in Ontario.

Reduction Made Reluctantly

"Upon the resumption of work, however, there will be a general reduction of 25 per cent in all classes of shop work. These reductions will be effective as follows: St. Malo, 105; Montreal, 563; Stratford, 290; Leaside, 78; London, 175.

"I wish to emphasize the fact that this general cessation, affecting 1,178 men, is purely temporary and was made by the management with reluctance, but it is entirely due to conditions over which we have no control. As soon as increased traffic warrants it the men will immediately be returned to work."

31,650 Air Volunteers Sought In R. A. F. Recruiting Campaign

London, June 23 (CP-Havas)—Launching the greatest recruiting campaign ever undertaken by the Royal Air Force, Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air, today asked for 31,650 volunteers.

Enrolment of the new fliers and technicians will begin next month and continue through the fiscal year, it was announced.

Sir Kingsley called for 2,100 pilots, 850 observers, 26,000 specialized workers, and 3,000 apprentices.

An official communique appealed for the aid of the public in securing each month's quota of recruits, saying that only thus can the desired record number be obtained.

"Consequent upon the recent decision of his Majesty's government further to expand the Royal Air Force," the statement said, "Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air, and the Air Council have decided to take most vigorous steps to obtain a record number of pilots, observers and tradesmen required from July onwards."

Candidates for these posts must be between the ages of 17½ and 23 years and must have a good primary education.

LAFAYETTE DALES GOES ON TRIAL ON MURDER COUNT

70-Year-Old Farmer Accused of Slaying His Brother-in-Law

WRAPPED IN QUILTS

Owen Sound, Ont., June 23 (CP)—Lafayette "Harry" Dales, 70-year-old Balaclava farmhand, went on trial before Mr. Justice R. C. Hamilton here today on a charge of murdering William Waterton, his brother-in-law.

Waterton's bullet-riddled body was found May 12 in his lonely cottage near Balaclava, twelve miles northeast of here. Police arrested Dales May 16 on a charge of stealing $75 from Waterton, later changing the charge to one of murder.

"Shanny" Fanning, neighbor of Waterton and believed a key witness in the case, disappeared early May 25 after seeing out from his home to a nearby cemetery. The boat was found empty several miles from shore. Efforts failed to locate Fanning or his body have failed.

Walter Reid, Sydenham Township tax collector and Crown witness, told of passing Waterton's home May 12, finding the door open and, on entering, discovering Waterton's body wrapped in quilts on a bed.

Used Pheno.

Reid said he went to a neighbor's telephone to call Coroner Dr. A. B. Rutherford. He had not noticed a pool of blood on the bed until he returned with the doctor.

"He was lying on the bed at an angle, feet on the floor, and there was a gun, muzzle on the floor, between his knees," Dr. Rutherford, Chief Coroner for Grey County, told the court. He said he saw a few holes and blood on it. I saw blood on the floor.

Provincial Constable Harry Noble, who arrived soon after the doctor, told of finding a shell on one of Waterton's wrist and a mark on his forehead. Also on the floor and bed, the muzzle almost touching Waterton's left arm.

Shot in Breast

Further examination of the body showed "a wound in the breast and in the left side. I saw two bullets, one found under a chair near the bed."

"When the body was removed, I found the forearm of a gun on the bed," Constable Noble said. "It fitted the gun exhibited here in court. There was a mark where the split pieces of the gun stock which fit the gun."

Witness said he thought the split was recent. He described the table on which two people apparently had eaten.

Drastic New Retrenchment Program By Japan to Aid Country in Conflict

Tokyo, June 23 (AP)—Reflecting the stringency of Japan's economic position, the Government announced today a drastic retrenchment program expected to begin functioning July 1.

The order, to be implemented by applications of those portions of the "Mobilization" national mobilization law applying to economic activities, was announced by Marquis Ikeda.

It affect, production, distribution and consumption inside Japan and gives priority to materials to supply armies, navies and air and export materials, the Government said.

"The ultimate end of the current incident still is very distant," the Government communique announced, in an obvious reference to the conflict in China, now almost a year old.

The inevitability of protracted warfare necessitates further control over economic functions, it added, and consequently the Cabinet approved the plan formulated in a five-minister conference.

Eight Planks

The plan contains eight planks:

1. Restricted use of metals, chemicals, oil, gasoline, rubber, linen, leather and lumber.

2. Promotion of thrift among the people whereby it is estimated $2,320,000,000 could be saved during the year.

3. Reconstruction of export trade.

4. The import control law will be relaxed to allow entrance of raw materials intended to become exportable manufactures.

5. Control of commodity prices to halt the current upward trend.

6. More intensive use of synthetic materials.

7. Further curtailment of imports except war materials and raw materials for exportable manufactures.

8. Distribution control.

9. Increased promotion of mining and home industries.

ITALIAN EFFORT TO PUT IN FORCE APRIL AGREEMENT

Franco Said To Have Battleworthy Infantry In His Army

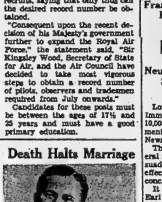
DELAY FORESEEN

Neutrality Plan Will Be Submitted To Parties To Civil War

London, June 23 (CP-Havas) — Immediate withdrawal by Italy of 10,000 soldiers fighting in Spain was mentioned as a possibility by the News Chronicle today.

This step would be taken, the Liberal newspaper said, in order to persuade Great Britain to put into effect the Anglo-Italian agreement concluded in April.

It has been reported earlier the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador in Rome, had told Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, a substantial voluntary withdrawal of Italian effectives, with or without suspension of hostilities, might result in application of the accord.



The News Chronicle said in a dispatch from its Rome correspondent

"Premier Mussolini has received reports stressing the fact that the Italian infantry, although it was in the forefront of the battle during the break through to the sea and the follow-up in the direction of Valencia, is not a decisive element in the war.

"General Franco now has trained and battle-worthy troops capable of taking their place and therefore it would be possible for Mussolini, without dealing a blow to Franco's prospects, to bring home about 10,000 infantrymen—thus making a gesture which might appease Prime Minister Chamberlain to put the Anglo-Italian pact into immediate effect."

It was believed considerable delay must occur before the agreement for withdrawals of foreign volunteers, reached by the non-intervention committee this week, can be carried out. The chairman's sub-committee will meet tomorrow, after which a plenary session of the full committee will consider and the plan submitted to the two parties to the civil war.

FRESH PRODUCE DOMINATES LARGE MARKET DISPLAY

Strawberries, New Potatoes Attract Thursday Shoppers

PRICES STEADY

Strawberries, new potatoes and fresh fruits and vegetables again held the shopping spotlight at the city market today as farmers and growers of the district offered one of the largest Thursday displays of farm and garden produce seen this year.

Prices however, showed but little change from the quotations of the previous week-end. Strawberries, that maintain the ripeness and cream of the first offering, sold today at three boxes for twenty-five cents with a slight reduction for case-lots. A casual survey of vendors revealed the fact that these containers will in all likelihood stabilize as continuing factory contract prices are stated to be seven cents per box.

New potatoes were fairly plentiful in a varying range of sizes. Berry box lots were offered at ten cents with bushel quotations remaining steady at two dollars.

Asparagus, the last of the crop, offered at ten cents per bunch, with new onions, radishes, lettuce and beets selling in bunch-lots for five cents. Spinach fresh from local gardens was offered at forty-five cents per hamper. Some old potatoes were available today, but lost in popular favor as shoppers turned to the new crop. Ninety pound bags were offered at sixty-five cents.

Lake trout and whitefish were an unexpected offering today with trout catches offered at twenty cents per pound.

Eggs showed no change from early week quotations, "A" selects selling at twenty-five cents per dozen, mediums at twenty-two and some undergraded stock at the same price. A few broilers, were in evidence with chicken pairs demanding from seventy cents to one dollar.

Two Cows Killed On Railway Tracks

Two cows were reported killed near Gilbert's crossing late this afternoon as the result of being struck by a C.P.R. train. Provincial Constable W. R. Smith was dispatched to investigate but on later advices this matter of concern was not required.

Provincial Police were informed that a herd of cows, in charge of a boy, had wandered upon the tracks, two of the herd being killed as the result of being struck by the train. The name of the owner of the cattle was not obtainable at press time.

HALF THE LISTS YET TO COME IN

Beaches Association Canvass Has Been About Half Completed

Half of the lists has been turned in completely canvassed for the Beaches Fund, but the other half with names of many cottagers to be interviewed, are not yet been reported, it was learned today. The canvass at the beaches is almost three hundred dollars collected by the canvassers who have been on under the chairmanship of Mr. Jack McIntosh. In addition about $141 was realized from the recent exposition shows.

When the other canvassers complete their lists it is expected there will be quite a large accession to the donations in behalf of this worthy fund.

Complaints have been made to the police that some of the timber used in bonfires on the beach finished rail was pushed into the bay during the night and was found afloat this morning. The police are investigating this action, and members of the Beaches Association state that there be no further incidents of this kind.

The Beach is growing in importance. It will not be long now until the enclosed frontage of the beach will have been completed.

After school about four o'clock there will be seen from two to three hundred children and others at the beach where bathing and in the evenings about seven o'clock there will be large crowds to be found nightly using the advantages of the resort.

Local C. N. Shops Not Affected By Lay Off

Layoff of Canadian National Railway shop employees affecting several points, that goes into effect on Friday, June 24th, will not affect Belleville's local railway officials stated today.

Belleville includes the "back shops" of the road that are located on Dundas Street, but the station in Belleville is known as a "roundhouse" centre which will not be affected by the layoff order. "Our part of this cessation of operations came about a month ago," local railwaymen stated today.

PLAYFUL MONKEY AMUSES CHILDREN BUT ANNOYS OTHERS

Little did the irate papa dream this morning when he gruffly ordered a group of school children "to get along to school" and "mind their business" that he spoke literally.

For upon the arrival of Cecil "Cap" a six-months-old Capuching monkey from the jungles of Honduras, jungles, cavorted and climbed verandah railings, swung by his tail, grimaced at passers-by, much to the delight of small children gleefully enjoying the early morning entertainment.

"Cap" a little dark brown and tan monkey enjoyed playing with the children equally as much as they enjoyed watching his antics and stroking his fur. Suspended by his tail from an iron railing "Cap" made sounds of merriment from the youngsters with his quaint intermediate grimaces.

Finally he leaped to the safety of his instinct another time where he smirked and chattered his humorous defiance at the onlookers.

Cecil is the property of Mr. and Mrs. R. Sullivan, Philadelphia, guests at the Jubilee.

City Briefs

When ten-year-old Jackie Cannon, fished off the bridge early evening recently received an extra heavy pull on his line. At first interest, he loosened his grasp on the pole. After reeling out all the line from the steel rod as it lay on the concrete abutment below, the lovable youth finally managed the pole and tackle into the depths. Dragging for the rod was unsuccessful.

Filling his outboard motor while fishing at Moira Lake, Charles Geddis, local resident, recently escaped severe burns, when the gasoline-oil mixture of the tank did burst into flames, by promptly jumping into the shallow water and hurriedly tipping the can of the skiff, submerging it and the blazing motor. Flames were extinguished before more than slight damage was done, though the paddle-boat was considerably scorched a lengthy row to the landing.

Clear weather lately has resulted in greater traffic activity at the Royal Canadian Air Force Base, Trenton, with numbers of flights being made over the city this week. Pilots of the seaplane school have been seen frequently in flights in the bay just west of the bay bridge.

As a result of a starting killing campaign which has been carried on by the Havelock Women's Institute during the past few weeks, a total of 700 heads of the birds have been returned to the Institute by children of the schools and a bounty of one cent each has been paid.

When the men of the congregation were found too busy with [illegible] work [illegible] and wives of painters could not immediately be secured, women of Knox Baptist Church have taken over the job of painting the church themselves in preparation for the Brighton Old Home Week. The Rev. W. H. Moore, pastor, will paint the steeple.

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Postmasters' Association held at North Bay, L. L. Bird Wellington, was named to the executive of the association. J. M. Ferris of Campbellford was also appointed in executive capacity as delegate to the session passed a resolution that children of all schools should be taught the history of policing and return addresses on all mail posted.

Daylight Saving Time will come into force for the season at midnight on Saturday, June 25.

The straw vote on daylight saving held in the Town of Deseronto showed a vote of 106 in favor and 56 against its adoption following the results counted this week. The unanimous decision of council the period of fast time will be set from July 3rd. to September 3rd.

Members of the Belleville Salvation Army Band aided the Campbellford Salvation Army in their open air service held on Tuesday. The band, under the direction of Bandmaster Hall, visited Warkworth earlier in the evening and stopped at Campbellford for the regular service afterward.

Police Blotter

Alleged by the proprietor of the Radio Cafe to have obtained food by false pretenses, a man who police say is Donald Bruce, no address, was apprehended in the above mentioned cafe by P. C. Traynor last evening. Today Bruce appeared in police court, Belleville, local Justice of the Peace, officially charged with false pretenses and was remanded in custody until Friday's local police court.

According to police versions of the incident, Bruce is alleged to have represented himself as the driver for a well known trucking concern and had signed for a meal under the name of the firm, which police allege is false.

Arrested in Kingston on a charge of false pretenses, Harold R. Sinclair of that city was escorted to Belleville by Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard yesterday. Scruton was arrested in Kingston on a warrant issued in this city charging the accused man with obtaining of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, which will be held this week at the college.

BATH TUB BUSINESS

The world may be growing up very fast just now but it's getting cleaner. At a plumbers' convention in Philadelphia it was disclosed that the bathtub business is getting better and better all the time.

It was also disclosed that Italy and Germany are spending "millions of dollars" on bathtubs and showers and such for their armies, feeling that a cleaner soldier is a better soldier. Which suggests a new plot that might be tried out as a measure of war-prevention.

Send some high-pressure tub-and-soap salesman out to cover the world. Let every military leader see baths in the light Hitler and Mussolini have seen them in. Then send out a first-class crew of scented-bath-salts drummers. And follow that up with lavender sachet for the clothes, and then foundation creams for the skin.

There won't be any fighting after that. The boys might be goaded into slapping one another but there wouldn't be any real fighting.—Kitchener Record.

"I wouldn't want to have sole control in New York City. It might be a better government, but I wouldn't want it."—Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

CHURCH IS BEREAVED

Just a few days after he had been exalted to the high post of Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. Donald MacOdrum died suddenly at his home in Brockville, his death causing a shock to his intimate associates, to the members of the church of which he was the head and generally to the members of all the churches. He has been one of the great figures of one of the great churches of Canada and members of all churches will deplore his death, removing as it does one who should have been able to render intense service to the church and society in Canada.

Dr. MacOdrum possessed a worldwide knowledge of the needs of the various countries in which missions are established and of the church at home. He had traveled extensively and had he been spared to make the Canada-wide journey he intended to begin shortly to visit almost every congregation, he should have left a powerful influence during his term of office.

KING GUSTAF AT 80

King Gustaf of Sweden or "Mr. G." as he is known on the tennis courts of Europe is one of those democratic monarchs who retain their sway in a period of falling rulers.

King Gustaf Fifth like the British Kings is first of all a democratic figure and yet the most kingly and royal. He is beloved by his people who do not dwell in awe of him.

Modern European democracies have given the world one of the finest examples of stability in the modern kingship. Somehow the rulers of the north and their people have developed in a way to bring about this combination of monarchy and democracy which is not only workable but irresistible but the very existence of these democratic kings of England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Holland, particularly in an era of explosive political thought and of the rise and fall of different forms of government has proven the merit of this system. True, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and for that matter Holland do not play the supreme part in affairs which the British Commonwealth does, yet the two, the responsible government and the kingship seem to make this very peace and tranquility possible.

In this king there is a rare combination of blood streams, that of the Viking kings of old who hunted bears with crude woodknives and of his great grandfather, the Napoleonic Marshal Bernadotte, one of the leaders of the age.

He is modern. At eighty he has not been behind the sweeping changes of outlook and the broadening humanitarianism of this period. His country is his first duty, he rules. He wages battle against cancer as no king ever fought against one. His people have just given him nearly two million dollars as a birthday gift, with which he will fight the scourge of infantile paralysis.

Every inch of his height of more than six feet, he is a king, the first of men in a happy land of Sweden, which has experience and with an intensely practical people. He loveable ruler of thirty-one years current throne of the Kingdom of the Northeast.

This king has been always free from wars. One has but to recall the role of kings of so many countries of Europe, who lost their thrones, during the Great War period and later. King Gustaf's line runs no such danger because really democratic kings of modern days are like kings of some golden age.

This great king has always been a peacemaker, for as Crown Prince during the illness of his father, he conducted the affairs of Scandinavia in a happy manner at a time of tension when Norway broke away from the union with Sweden. He was the leader in the neutrality policy of the Scandinavian Kingdoms in 1914 and succeeded in keeping the three states out of war.

POLITE REQUESTS

In a newspaper appeared the following advertisement: "The man who picked up my wallet in the High Street was recognized. He is requested to return it." The next day this was published in reply: "The recognized man who picked up the wallet requests the loser to call at any time and collect it."

CHEAP IN LONG RUN

"Just bought this diamond ring for my wife," said a City man to a friend. "Cost $100." "It's a beauty. But isn't it rather—er—extravagant?" "Certainly not. Look what it will save in gloves."

FOG

Creeping in from the harbour
On noiseless feet,
Fog, like a thieving villain
Lurks in the street.

Swift it uncurls its fingers,
Silent and white;
Wrapping them round tall buildings,
Shuts them from sight.

Billows against the street lights
Dimming their glare,
Drifting into men's nostrils,
Filling the air.

The arms of the fog grow greedy
As night comes down;
Folding in traveller and homestead,
They smother the town.

THIS BEING THE AGE OF RACKETS, all kind of rackets, it is not surprising that radio set owners have been selected as good targets for racketeers. It is reported that radio racketeers are travelling the country, gaining entrance to homes on various pretexts of examining and improving radio reception. Their mode of procedure, it is alleged, is to find various faults and replacements necessary. It is also alleged that tricks have been taken from the set, taken out to the car used by the racketeers, there to be rubbed up a bit and then replaced and charged for as new parts. Why folks should trust strangers in this and other things is a mystery. The stranger is plausible enough and knows his salesmanship, but a moment's thought will reveal that he is here today, was not on the map yesterday, and tomorrow will be some place else very difficult to find—casting your money in such muddy waters means kissing it goodby forever as a general rule. Doing business with the home folks is always satisfactory—the most satisfactory in the long run—the local man is bound to make wrongs right if it takes him many extra hours. The gift flier generally leaves things worse than he found them, but collects and moves on—and there is no come-back.

VOTES FOR WOMEN—When famed Feminist Carrie Chapman Catt saw that the fight for woman suffrage in the U. S. was about to be won, she journeyed to the Philippine Islands in 1918 and publicly proposed suffrage for her little brown sisters.

Time Magazine tells the story thus:

Male Filipinos laughed derisively. Their women had been practical slaves in their homes until the Philippines came under U. S. rule in 1899.

By the time Mrs. Catt sailed away, however, Filipino women were up and doing about enfranchisement. The native politicians adopted bobbing and weaving tactics. At one session the Philippine Senate would pass a bill enfranchising women, and the House would kill it. At the next the House would do the passing, the Senate the killing. Realising that the men could not save their political faces forever with such trickery, the women campaigned ever more vigorously. When in 1933, Michigan's Bachelor Frank Murphy became the first Democratic Governor-General in twelve years, they had the gallant ally they needed. With his help they finally got a suffrage bill passed.

The unsympathetic Philippine males had another trick to play. Into the proposed new Philippine Commonwealth Constitution, soon to be offered for approval by a plebiscite, they wrote a clause specifically withholding suffrage from women. Thus, if the women voted Yes in the plebiscite, they would be voting to disenfranchise themselves; if they voted No, they would be voting against freedom for the Philippines. Setting up a loud clamour, they finally got a clause inserted that would restore suffrage to literate women of 21 or over if they could muster 300,000 affirmative votes at a plebiscite within two years after the Constitution was adopted.

Recently, with the end of the two-year period only two weeks away, the women held their plebiscite, settled their suffrage question once and for all. With more than 100,000 votes to spare, they became the first females in the Orient to hoist themselves to political parity with their menfolk.

The Gastroscope Enables Physician to See the Lining of the Stomach

While the Xrays have been and are of great help to the physician in locating the cause of symptoms in various organs, to be able to see inside the organ with the eye itself is of even more help. For some years now instruments have been in use to see inside the bladder, the bronchial tubes and the rectum—lower end of the large intestine. One of the latest instruments of this kind to be perfected is the gastroscope which enables the physician to see inside the stomach and thus learn whether an inflammation of the lining (gastritis) is present, and also whether or not an ulcer or a cancer is present.

An interesting editorial on the development and usefulness of the gastroscope published in the Journal of the American Medical Association is worth quoting:

"The clearness of the view is remarkable. . . . The normal mucous membrane or lining of the stomach presents a brilliant picture—glistening, delicately rugated. Gastric or stomach ulcer presents a yellow or grayish white floor and a sharp edge. The inflammation in gastritis the floor is dark brown and the edge is sharp and raised. The surrounding mucous membrane (lining of the stomach) appears hazy and indistinct, sometimes a faint orange-red."

The gastroscope makes everything so clear to see, why should it not take the place of the Xrays entirely?

The opinion of stomach and intestinal experts is that the gastroscope and the Xrays have their special uses. Both are frequently were used earlier when symptoms of indigestion occur in those who have middle-age and a cancer could be discovered.

Every patient over forty-five years of age who suffers with loss of appetite or significant loss of weight and who shows this or other explanation for the symptoms should be subjected to an examination by both the gastroscope and the X-rays". By these examinations the first signs of development of cancer of the stomach would be greatly lowered because no operation would be attempted on those persons in whom the gastroscope examination failed to find evidence of cancer.

But the greatest field of usefulness of the gastroscope is in gastritis—inflammation of the lining or surface of the stomach. The appearance or condition of this lining—orange-red, pale, and very often cysts per dozen; strawberries, 12 cents to 15 cents per box; butter 20 cents to 21 cents per pound; hay, $20 per ton.

The Lake Shore House at the Bandbanks is now open to receive guests. A number of cottages have been erected which will prevent overcrowding of the main building. Quite a few have already been booked.

Four boys appeared before the police magistrate this morning charged with bathing in the river near the Waterworks. It is said was their first offence they were given a warning and discharged.

Premier Patterson, Saskatchewan

The eyes of Canada have of late been on Premier William John Patterson, of Saskatchewan, whose Liberal administration was returned lately by a huge majority.

The business-like, quiet-mannered leader of the triumphant western group turned back the Aberhart invasion with a remarkable show of strength.

He has had an active and varied life. When he succeeded Hon. J. G. Gardiner, present Dominion minister of agriculture, as premier of the province in November, 1934, he established three records. He was the first native of the province, first bachelor and first returned soldier to hold that high office.

He married, however, during his term of office a pretty Toronto stenographer, Florence Donnelly, who knew the premier when she worked here as a civil servant. Their marriage last year in New York was a surprise to all except intimate friends.

x x x

The 52-year-old premier led the Liberal government through the worst years in western agricultural depression with relief administration problems easier than any hitherto encountered in the province.

Patterson, a stocky man of medium height, who looks more the outdoor type than man of business, was born May 13, 1886, in Grenfell, a farm town 160 miles east of Regina. His Irish father came to Ontario in 1881 and then moved on to Saskatchewan, where he married. He died in 1930, after spending years as foreman of a railway section crew.

Saskatchewan is a province where politicians start young. Patterson, barely 19, attended the first Liberal convention ever held in 1905, the year the province was constituted, as a Grenfell delegate.

The same year he went to Winnipeg as a bank clerk and went back to Grenfell two years later as branch manager with a staff of five, all older than himself. He was superintendent of rural services and the municipally-owned telephone system from 1910 to 1917.

x x x

Patterson joined the Canadian Light Horse as a lieutenant and served overseas for three years. Wounded, he celebrated the armistice on a London hospital cot.

On his return to Canada he went into business as an agent for insurance and other things, meanwhile keeping a close eye on the political trends. He was elected first to the legislature in 1921 in Cannington, near the southeast corner of the province, with a 94-vote margin.

Four years later when the then Premier Gardiner chose his first cabinet, he placed Patterson in the difficult post of provincial treasurer and responsible minister for the telephone system. Patterson retained his seat after Gardiner's government was defeated in 1929 and his opponents complained, "they denounce the government when they can't pay Billy Patterson."

Patterson was given cabinet ranking when Premier Gardiner's forces returned in the general election of 1934, getting the difficult post of municipal and natural resources.

A party caucus here chose Patterson as Gardiner's successor when Gardiner accepted the Ottawa agriculture minister post. Patterson retained his telephone portfolio and became provincial treasurer, during the difficult financial period in Saskatchewan history.

Like most western politicians, Patterson is a keen surfer and golfer during the fall when he has time—which is not often.

WEST IMPROVED

Think of it. Thirty-three years ago the West was wilderness without a road or a bridge and with very few trails to guide the pioneer settlers to the prairies and their homesteads. Today there is a wonderful system of highways connecting all cities and towns and lesser and suitable secondary roads enable the farmers to market their produce. It is possible for bus transportation companies to maintain a schedule almost as exacting as that enforced on the railroads. People are very fond of referring to the perfect roads which are maintained in England, but they neglect to point out that the foundations of such roads were laid by the Roman invaders before the establishment of the British Empire. Since the year one or the Christian calendar, work has been done on those roads continuously, both by slaves and freemen. — Calgary Albertan.

CONTRAST!

An interesting and comforting comparison may be drawn between the situations existing in Europe and in this country.

While German and Czech troops were even then mobilizing across their frontiers lately, a Canadian regiment swung up Woodward Ave., Detroit, with full marching equipment and skirling bagpipes.

The tenth annual "invasion" of Detroit by these Scottish Regiments of Canada was occasioned as usual instead of jitters.

There is a feeling of security behind such evidences of international friendship and good will.

When the soldiers of peace in Europe can live together in the neighborly spirit which prevails between the soldiers of the British Army, there will be fewer wars, and distinctly fewer wars of war, than are likely to issue from their present fevers and fears. — Detroit Free Press.

POLITICAL WOMEN

ELECTORS' INGENUITY

A woman's convention has placed itself on record as favoring the appointment of more women to the Senate of Canada. With all due respect for the ladies, we think this is not the time to take women. If they want to get into public life, should be willing to go into the thick of it and win their political honors, and, by fighting elections, prove their ability. Agnes Macphail and Mrs. Black, we feel sure, would not ask to be excused from struggle and contest and place in the female that can be won by mere appointment. Let the ladies try hard work.—Fort William Times-Journal.

Average Drivers Cause Accidents

Last year in Ontario, according to the accident records of the department of highways, 726 people lost their lives and 13,282 were injured in motor vehicle accidents on the streets and highways of the province. Casualty records of recent weeks offer no hope that this year will be any better.

Many people, when confronted with these figures, will shake their heads sadly and talk about hit-and-run drivers, drunken drivers, erratic bicyclists and motorcyclists, drivers who go to sleep at the wheel, drivers with poor eyesight or drivers who are subject to epileptic fits. They will talk about young people who go dashing around without any regard for the rights of others on the highway, or drivers who are operating a motor vehicle without a license, or about people who are "just learning to drive." They will talk about drivers who by bad habits to the railway crossing, about drivers who do not pass on curves or hills, fail to signal, pass standing street cars, pass on the wrong side, or take the right-of-way when it doesn't belong to them. They will talk about bad brakes, glaring headlights, defective steering mechanism, and other faulty equipment.

They won't be entirely right for several reasons. And these reasons are the figures compiled by the department of highways' accident reporting division, and they do not lie.

Here is what the Ontario accident figures for 1937 tell us — and there can be no denying their truth:

That most drivers involved in all accidents and five years or more experience behind the wheel.

That most of these drivers were between the ages of 25 and 40—not young people.

That 30,907 drivers involved in accidents had clean driving records.

So, besides worrying about the hit-and-run and the drunken driver, and the driver who goes to sleep at the wheel, the driver who is "just learning to drive," and all the rest of them, you passenger car drivers will have to worry about yourselves when we get behind the wheel. You are a cool and calm driver, a pleasant journey on the highway, or even if we are hurrying along down to the corner for a pound of tea or loaf of bread.

For it is that great army of normal, careful drivers who have never done anything more serious than denting some one's fender or scraping his bumper who are likely to be responsible for most of the deaths and accidents in 1938 on Ontario's streets and highways. And it is they who can reduce this toll of misery and destruction to a negligible amount simply by always being "careful, courteous and common-sensible." — Guelph Mercury.

"whipper-snappers" or "flaming youth" and not old enough to be called "dodderers" or "old fogies." Besides, drivers were in normal physical and mental condition—not drunk, broken down, or asleep at the wheel, not in the throes of an epileptic fit.

Their cars are going straight—not defying death by trying to pass other cars on curves or hills.

That most cars were in good mechanical condition, with four-wheel brakes and balloon tires, and not of them were passenger cars — not old "jalopies that should be in the junk yard, nor huge transport trucks that we may sometimes think take more than their fair share of the highway.

That in most cases the weather was clear, it was daylight, the road was paved and in good condition, and the surface dry — no chance to blame it on rain or fog, the dark, a bumpy road or icy pavement.

And that 86 per cent. of the 30,907 drivers involved in accidents had clean driving records.

So, besides worrying about the hit-and-run and the drunken driver, and the driver who goes to sleep at the wheel, the driver who is "just learning to drive," and all the rest of them, you passenger car drivers will have to worry about yourselves when we get behind the wheel. You are a cool and calm driver, a pleasant journey on the highway, or even if we are hurrying along down to the corner for a pound of tea or loaf of bread.

For it is that great army of normal, careful drivers who have never done anything more serious than denting some one's fender or scraping his bumper who are likely to be responsible for most of the deaths and accidents in 1938 on Ontario's streets and highways. And it is they who can reduce this toll of misery and destruction to a negligible amount simply by always being "careful, courteous and common-sensible." — Guelph Mercury.

JAPS LOSE FACE

Saigon, Indo-China. — Throughout southeastern Asia, from Singapore to Saigon, the Japanese have lost face and business as a consequence of their blundering aggressiveness in China. The polyglot population of the Malayan and Indo-Chinese peninsula who before the war were giving sympathetic consideration to the Pan-Asiatic doctrines preached by smiling good-will ambassadors from Japan now see in all activities of their island cousins with emotions of anger and dread. They are asking, "who will be next?"

Here in tropical Indo-China, where French protectorates cover four nations and countless millions of natives, another French prestige has been strengthened by the Japanese invasion of China. Nationalistic elements which had been clamoring for independence from France have seen and there is wider recognition of the fact that without the French army to back them up the various Indo-Chinese kingdoms would be at the mercy of any land-hungry neighbor.

The French administration is at least benevolent. The native kings governing under French supervision have been content to let the French do all their worrying.—A.P. Steele in Chicago Daily News.

BEATTY IS FIRM ON UNIFICATION

C.P.R. Head Says He Thinks It Will Prove Most Progressive Step

Ottawa, June 23 (CP)—"I believe unification of the railways will prove the most constructive step we have ever taken in Canada for many years." Sir Edward Beatty, Canadian Pacific Railway president, told the Senate Railway Committee yesterday.

He protested employment by Government Leader Dandurand of the expression that the merger of the Canadian National Railways and the C.P.R. would be a "fatal step."

Fatality was usually associated with death, said Sir Edward. He was convinced that so far as the railways were concerned, unification meant the opposite.

Sir Edward had presented to the committee a final brief in which he marshalled the previous submissions given by himself and other officers of the C.P.R. Senator Dandurand took up the main task of his examination.

Monopoly Says Dandurand

"It is generally agreed that unified management will gradually lead to a condition that will be speak monopoly," said Mr. Dandurand.

"Only a call monopoly," commented Sir Edward.

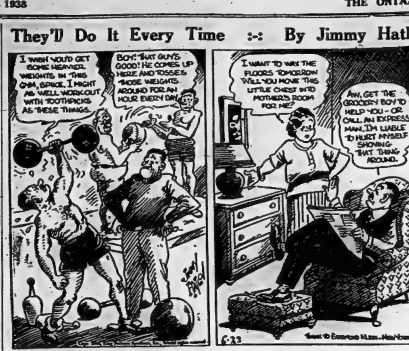
"That is, it would create one single company comprising the whole of our railway system," Senator Dandurand said. "That would mean a railway monopoly under private management."

Responsibility to the public might be reposed in one executive, but not in another. It might continue for one generation, but be absent from the next.

Unification Says Senator

"We would be legislating for all time to come," said Senator Dandurand, "unless Parliament intervened and said 'We must break it up'."

His own contention was that such a condition would be "more than intolerable, for the reason that the country was facing a situation that could not be unexamined."



His conviction was that Canada needed the C.P.R., went on Mr. Dandurand, for all that the system meant in this country and elsewhere as an ideally administered railway.

"It is because I fear the C.P.R. might be placed in state ownership that I hesitate about the first step," he added.

"England has found out that competition is a dead influence," Sir Edward said, "in Great Britain they have made more progress in the art of railroading since the systems were amalgamated than ever before. All their executives admit that."

He believed public opinion to be a "great regulator of public service activities." Railway operators today had a much finer sense of their responsibility than they had 25 or 30 years ago. I believe the Board of Railway Commissioners can exercise full protection of the rights of the public, should there be any invasion of those rights."

MOISTURE NEEDED FOR STRAWBERRIES

Raspberry Crop Likely To Reach Last Year's Proportions

Toronto, June 23 (CP)—Despite frost damage in early bloom in Western Ontario strawberry production shows an estimated increase of eight per cent, the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Statistics Committee of the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today in a published report. Strawberries in Eastern Ontario need only moisture to make the crop an excellent one, the report stated.

Although raspberry acreage is down five per cent, all indications point to a crop of last year's proportions. Currants and gooseberries are also listed as average. Cherries, due to frost and adverse weather conditions, will be below average, but good gleing may cause a slight upward revision in the present estimate. Sweet cherries, however, promise a medium to heavy crop. Spring is light with Windsors just above average.

Pears and Plums

Plums and pears are also below average with Bartlett Pears generally light in Burlington and Niagara West districts. Niagara Peninsula has an average set. Plums are irregular with European varieties such as Prunes, Reine Claudes, Damsons and Lombards, medium to good.

Blue grapes show average prospects; whites are light and reds heavy. Vineyards are in excellent condition and a good average crop total is in prospect.

An average crop in all varieties of peaches is expected. Extensive thinning operations are under way in most orchards. There is a large acreage of young trees just coming into bearing.

Apples

In apples, Red McIntosh, Snow and Wealthy promise a slightly below average to average crop in Western Ontario, with early apples below average. The total apple production at present can be classed as slightly below average.

In Eastern Ontario, an average crop of apples is expected in Northumberland, Prince Edward and Hastings, Counties and lighter crops of winter varieties in Durham and Ontario Counties. Prospects on the whole should be higher than last year.

Prospects for vegetable production are considered good with a slightly higher commercial acreage in Western Ontario.

Weddings

McKEOWN—CARR

West Huntingdon, (Special) — A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, June 21st., 1938, at the home of Mrs. Mary McTristram, when Leah Docsids, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr, became the bride of Leslie John, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKeown, Belleville.

The bride entered the parlour on the arm of her father, carrying a white bouquet of garden flowers, to the strains of the Bridal Chorus played by the bride's sister, Mrs. Adam Brunsdon, and stood under an arch of white, the bridegroom entering in white sheer, ankle length dress, fashioned on princess lines with a bolero jacket and matching accessories with white carnations in her hair. Her only jewellery was an ivory necklace, the gift of the groom.

Miss Reid's sister, Mrs. Rick Hamilton, was matron of honor and Miss Reid's cousin, Miss Enid Hamilton. The groom's gift to the matron of honor was a white gold bench and to the bride a white bouquet.

Following the ceremony all enjoyed a dainty buffet lunch. Amid showers of confetti the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and western points.

Confinement Discipline Advised

That Punishment May Be Just What Child Needs, Says Writer

(By LISA GRIZELLE)

RECENTLY A YOUNG mother told me that there was no use in punishing her small son because he didn't seem to mind being punished. There was nothing she could do to him, short of sheer brutality, that would even impress him. At the age of two, she said, her Bobby already had learned to capitalize his misfortunes. For instance, if he were restrod in disgrace in his crib and all his toys were removed, he would serve himself with the pictures painted on the sides of the crib.

"Of course," his mother said, half in jest, "we could have painted out the pictures. But then I'm sure Bobby could have entertained himself quite as effectively pulling the bristles off his tampico, or the string out of his nightie. Somehow or other he would entertain himself, and so defeat the punishment."

Tried Spankings

Since solitary confinement held no terrors for Bobby, his young mother next tried slaps and gentle spankings. They always do. But even these, after the first shock, Bobby managed to capitalize for his own amusement. His learned the delight, not of being spanked but of spanking—for there were toys anyway, within reach and so submissive! There was also a little girl friend in the park who responded even more favorably to Bobby's spanking, howling with terror.

As is usually the case, hitting a child only teaches the child to hit. The more enthusiasm Father puts into spanking Jimmie, with the more vigorous justification and more will Jimmie, when his time comes, hit Father, or Mother, or the maid or Sister Susie, or anyone smaller than himself.

But what are you going to do with a child whom you can't punish because he doesn't mind and for whom punishment is permissible punishments?

Again, is it necessary to punish?

Fat Is Confinement

Of course. If he refuses to behave, he must decidedly should be removed from the vicinity and from all ordinary confinement until he gets into a more social and cooperative state of mind. That should teach him that he cannot continue behaving in such a manner if he wishes to enjoy your companionship. And if you consistently remove him immediately, as soon as he misbehaves, the child can hardly fail to realize the connection.

It is then up to him to decide whether he prefers proper behavior with company and possibly food, as well, or solitude, with no food. He may prefer solitude and no food. If so, that is probably what he needs.

If a child does not mind solitary confinement, that does not mean that it is an ineffective method of correction or discipline. Quite the contrary, it is all the more effective if the child need it.

Solitary confinement must, I think, usually be constructive, because it is really, relaxing, camping. It arouses no fear, and at the same time effectively squelches the too "bumptious" child. The object after all, is not to punish, but to effect an end of the undesirable behavior.

Worry is an Enemy of Beauty

(By HELEN FOLSETT)

Beauty is Little Red Riding-hood, and worry is the wolf. If one no good to play with fragrant cosmetics if the mind is constantly fretting, the soul full of "woe is me." What goes on inside the head shows up on the face. Worry is fear, and fear does terrible things to the physical being.

Especially is it true that keeps a human being youthful. Each life is bound to have its disappointments and disappointments; nobody escapes them. If one has courage, one can "tread the waves".

Anxiety will change the temperature of the body, chilling the skin, making the cheeks chalky white. It interferes with the powers of digestion so that nutrition is impaired. It knocks the nervous system into a cocked hat. Worry is not restful.

One can learn to control the emotions, to rise above them. It should be the first law in the constitution of beauty, since how we feel determines how we look. The woman who scolds, weeps or feels sorry for herself grows old before her time, becomes embittered. That won't do. Everybody can be fair to the eye unless she is sweet, mistress of herself, facing life with spirit.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT
HAS a beauty grief

Every woman are past mistresses of the are of make-up. They use synthetic helps lavishly if they happen to be the right type. Or they use almost no colorings, depending upon a pale gardenia skin and a splash of lip colorings to make them appear interesting.

Since women seem to have forgotten the art of blushing, few of them can get along without a touch of rouge. It should be well blended with powder, so the application will not be spotty. Nearly always it is better to apply it high. Coloring that comes far down on the cheeks gives the face fullness and an appearance of fatigue.

Keeping lock, up at the back has become an occupation since the upped hairdress has taken the attached by the ears.

A narrow comb can be used. Or, when the flogger wave is given, a setting lotion can be applied with a single line of undulation marked across the nape line.

Girls with soft, silky hair, wise would have their puffs and rolls stand high upon their pretty heads, must use a setting lotion that is fairly thick and heavy when winding locates or curling irons. That gives the hair strength to carry on. And brushing doesn't raise the dickens with ringlets.

Iced Tea Delicious As Thirst Quencher

Here's a thirst quencher that is deliciously different, easily made and very inexpensive. If you have not tried it, you have a treat in store. Follow this carefully tested recipe, supplied by a leading tea company:

Use 4 heaping teaspoons of black tea. Infuse tea in one pint of fresh boiling water for six minutes. Strain and pour liquid into a two-quart container. While hot, add: 1 to 1½ cups of granulated sugar, the juice of two lemons, strained.

Then shake or stir contents well, until sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Fill container with cold water. DO NO ALLOW TEA TO COOL BEFORE ADDING THE COLD WATER, otherwise liquid will become cloudy.

It's now ready to serve in tall glasses with chipped ice or cubes. A slice of lemon may be added if desired. The above will make two quarts of ice tea, or 7 tall glasses.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Tomato Juice Cocktail

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—How should one eat a tomato juice cocktail served with a spoon in low stemmed sherbet glasses? We had this at a Junior-Senior banquet recently and part of the faculty used a spoon to eat the cocktail like soup, while the rest of the family drank the tomato juice cocktail. \rho was right?

2—How could the first course be served for more ease to one's guests?

Junior who was there

1—It is correct service to place a spoon with a tomato juice cocktail. This is for the convenience of guests who wish to add salt or lemon juice or any other condiment "according to taste". The spoon may be used to stir in the salt or other additions. Then the tomato juice cocktail is drunk as we would drink tea.

2—I am not sure what you mean by this question. Perhaps you mean that the fact that the tomato juice cocktail was served in a low sherbet glass may have been confusing to the guests. Usually these cocktails are served in smaller, more glasses than sherbet glasses . . . glasses more on the order of so-called appetizer glasses.

Wedding Details

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—For a white wedding at two-thirty in the afternoon, how should the guests be dressed, both ladies and gentlemen?

2—Can the shoulder should a corsage be worn?

3—The bride and groom are not close friends, but we are friends of the bride's parents. Should the invitation be accepted or declined?

4—Would you give me a sample letter declining the invitation?

5—If you receive a written invitation to a shower, should you reply by letter accepting the invitation?

6—When entering the church, does the lady take the arm of the man or does her husband follow?

Mary

1—The fact that the wedding is to be a "white wedding" applies to the appointments of the wedding party; it means that not only the bride but also her attendants are to be dressed in white. The guests, would wear what they would wear at any other type of afternoon wedding. That is to say, women guests would wear their formal afternoon clothes (cutaway coats, striped trousers and formal accessories). If the wedding is to be a formal one, or dark business suits, if the wedding is to be informal.

2—A corsage may be worn on whichever shoulder we wish . . . whichever is the most attractive.

3—Since the bride's parents were your friends it would be in the list of guests-to-be-invited, it would be pleasant if you accepted, unless you have some definite reason for not accepting.

4—You do not tell me the type of invitation—formal or informal—that you received, it is a formal invitation (engraved and worded in the third person) your answer should also be worded in the third person. If your invitation is a written note, your regret might read:

Dear Mrs. Wells,

You and your husband were very kind to invite us to your daughter's wedding on Tuesday, the first of January, and we are sorry that we will not be able to accept this important and delightful invitation. We are to be out-of-town for a few days, which, unfortunately include your daughter's wedding day.

Please do give our friendliest greetings to the prospective bride and groom, and our highest wishes for their happiness.

Sincerely

A formal regret (to the reception) reads:

Mr. and Mrs. George Foster Field regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wells's kind invitation

For Tuesday, the first of August

(The formal invitation to a church ceremony does not require an answer, but the invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast does.)

5—Yes, a note of invitation to a shower should be answered by a note. The important rule to remember is that an answer to an invitation must be "in kind"; that is, a formally-worded (third person) answer to a formal invitation and a note in answer to a written note of invitation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

First Broken Heart Sometimes an Asset

Now, please don't be furious with me for saying it, but a broken heart may be a definite asset, in the same way that a difficult school examination is undoubtedly an advantage. Any valuable knowledge, any valuable lesson is gained through effort. It's bitter medicine, but never again will you be so stupid and dull as you have been over the question of love. Certain are you to be more discerned.

You will be able to judge the next candidate far better after you've recovered from this one's heartbreaking. Oh, yes, my dear, you do get over a broken heart, much as you may protest that you never will. A certain protein-wound is raw. A certain professional accuracy will guide your actions and choice. That's why widows are so successful—they know the score.

Here are a few of the physical advantages of a broken heart: If you've overweight, and dieting has had no effect, the broken heart may enable you to lighten your waist line. The same broken heart may add becoming shadows to your eyes, real shadows, not the artificial ones, which so often give a mask appearance, making look as if you had been engaged in stoking coal for two of the same.

Now, let's agree that you've broken your heart as soon as possible. Get that single or compound fracture, which ever the case may be, over with as soon as possible.

The magnificent gesture of course is travel. A trip to Europe will help to avoid that pest, the sympathetic but curious friend. But if Europe is out of the question, there's a choice of short voyages to Bermuda, Canada, the West Indies and in the Caribbean for upwards or thirty dollars a trip. These may not be beyond the reach of a girl or boy with a broken heart.

Men with shattered hearts decidedly have the edge on girls with the same ailment. They can enlist as sailors and ship before the mast. In fact, two or three men have saved my advice assist stopping up on a sailing ship bent on long voyages have written to me later to tell how well the prescription worked. One of them, who traveled as far as Patagonia, got enough material to write a series of articles for a syndicate.

Next to travel a new wardrobe is another remedy. Look your best when you meet him or her face to face. Also, look him or her directly in the eye and smile with your most charming "best-for-you-smile" eye-expression. Above all, don't look defeated, sunk or frustrated when the meeting occurs. With first bitter experience being the equivalent of a freshman year in college—the school for heartaches—move on for bigger and better conquests. CANNIFTON ALERT BIBLE CLASS

On Sunday morning, the Alert Bible class of the Canniffton Sunday School presented Miss Mary Merrick with a pendant and ring.

Before the presentation Miss Mary Cowsan, teacher of the Class, called on Mr. Douglas Bronon, Supt. of Canniffton Sunday School to speak. Mr. Bronson spoke only a few minutes on the beautiful friendship that had grown during the years Mary had been in the Community. Mr. Clarence Birt added a few humorous remarks and then Miss Emma Collett presented the gift to Mary covering the home and esteem of the Class members. Miss Merrick thanked the Class for the beautiful remembrance in a very capable manner.

Deserted Mother of Two Finds Solace in Religion

By VIRGINIA LEE

HAVE YOU ever felt bowed down with your numerous woes — everyday things that seem more than you can stand—and then met someone to whom some terrible tragedy has happened? That person's affliction made yours sink into insignificance, and before her over-ragaous bearing of her grief your own yellings at the unkind cuts of fortune seemed utterly unworthy.

You who read this column regularly know how many letters I receive from wives who are troubled about their husband's behavior. They are among the most heart-breaking of the letters I receive, and they are from all parts of Ontario. However, one woman who has been through a sad experience has the kind writes to offer a comforting word to her sisters in distress.

Religion has been the rock upon which A CHRISTIAN MOTHER was sustained through her trials. Her husband's firm promoted him a number of times and he was sent out "on the road", became a travelling man. He came into contact with many people, of course, and fell in love with some woman. He obtained a Nano divorce, leaving his young wife with one little boy six years old and another one coming. Imagine the feelings of the wife! Don't you wonder how she ever lived through such a desertion? The older child is now eight and the baby 17 months.

The mother writes: "They mean so much to me. The father never has seen the baby — his own flesh and blood.

"I think divorce today is the worst crime in our nation, and it causes many broken homes. These things we cannot understand, those of us who are passing through these trials, but I know that my places are all in God's hand and so my future does not worry me because I have Him as my personal friend. There is nothing I can do but trust Him who doeth all things well."

She also says that one should not seek revenge, but pity those who have wronged us.

I cannot help feeling that the future has something pretty fine for a person who has gone through so much and has been and is so brave about it.

X X X

"MY DEAR MRS LEE: I am 21 years of age and in love with a girl of 16 of the same religion. We want to get married. My father does not object, but my mother does. What would you advise me to do?

BOB."

Wait until the girl is old enough to be married, Bob. No other girl is for you. What do the girl's parents say about it? Would they give their consent?

Of course you are of age, and your mother cannot legally control your actions. However, her feelings in the matter should be considered.

How Skin Reacts To Sun Rays

Clendening Explains Cause of Suntan and Burning

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SUN BATHING, which should be in full swing in a week or two, is undoubtedly of benefit to health if performed sensibly, but in order to get the full benefits out of it, an understanding of the anatomy and physiology of the skin and the action of the sun's rays is desirable.

The skin consists of a layer of tough horny cells in which there are no blood vessels. The nourishment of this layer comes entirely from below, where there is abundant blood supply, as well as fat, hair follicles, lymph, sweat glands.

The upper layer, if we could separate it entirely, would be found dry and crackly like a piece of cellophane. It is kept moist and lubricated by the secretions of the glands which pour out on its surface.

The translucent and allows the sun's rays to seep through it, affecting the blood and fat beneath.

It is the upper layer, however, that gets sunburned. The "burn" is the any other burn, and destroys the cells. The lower layer responds to the destruction by bringing more blood to the part—that is, furnishing more nourishment to repair the destruction. That is what causes the red skin of sunburn.

If the burn is mild, the very top layer of cells is destroyed, the dead tissue flies off. This is the "peel" of sunburn.

When Burn Is Deep

If the burn is deep, all the cells of the upper layer are destroyed and the burn is brought from the lower layer of the skin fills in these damaged cells, and that is the blister or sunburn.

Tan begins when the pigment cells of the skin begin to move in. The pigment of the skin resides in the lower layer of the skin. In very dark people and Negroes it may involve the lowest layer of the upper part. Pigment varies in different people and is increased or decreased according to circumstances. One circumstance which we all know is the stimulation caused by women during the height of the season's fashion. Even in the dark people make up many of the treasures in royal gem collections among the beautiful gems in the pearl treasury of the Gackwar of Baroda is a sash of 100 rows of pearls, the value of seven of the rows has been set at almost a million dollars. This ruler also owns a bitter set with seed pearls and a carpet of pearls which measures ten and one-half feet long by six feet wide. Dr. Kunz, the well known gem authority, believes this pearl rug to be the most costly fireality in the world, comparing its value at several million dollars.

PEARL, HONEYSUCKLE SYMBOLS FOR JUNE

PEARL is the birthstone for June and honeysuckle is the flower.

Certainly neither are very dramatic or flamboyant, but as long as we prize jewels, we will cherish pearls.

The scent of the honeysuckle, fresh, clean reminding us of old-fashioned gardens and country dells, wells were garlanded in this sweetest of all flowering vines—and there is in its simplicity, purity and softness of the pearl, the same quality of loveliness given to Pearls are the most feminine of all gems.

Since the dawn of history the pearl has been worshipped for its beauty. We find early mention of the pearl in the Book of Job and in the Talmud.

The Romans became attached to the pearl through association with the Egyptians, the Persians, and the Hindus who greatly admired pearls and wore them whenever possible. Pearls were much in demand by women during the height of Rome's power. Even to this day pearls make up many of the treasures in royal gem collections among the beautiful gems in the pearl treasury of the Gackwar of Baroda is a sash of 100 rows of pearls, the value of seven of the rows has been set at almost a million dollars.

How Gambling Becoming A Problem

How Does It Affect Our Children? Myers Asks

THE HUMAN urge to take a chance is very strong. Without it there would be but little human progress. But the gambling spirit of the pioneer in business, industry and business usually is prompted on the, assumption of some rule, by experience, that the chances are more than even in favor of the venture. There is opportunity for exercising wisdom and skill, judgment and effort. There is a motive to strive in order to cause the odds to fall his way.

But in gambling "just for the fun of it" (hoping to win, of course), the odds are always stacked against the gambler, whether he buys a chance on a cake at the church bazaar, plays a slot machine, or bets on a horse at the races. In the face of overwhelming odds, he fools himself that he is going to be lucky.

Was gambling ever so prevalent as today? And it enjoys respectability, even everywhere. In nearly any large hotel, one or several girls are employed at the cigar counter to record the throws of dice by the well-dressed mannikins guests; around one or several slot machines in the lobby, men and women will wait their turn; churches, lodges, and service clubs commonly raise funds by gambling devices. Few object; they say the ends justify the means; buying a commission table, equipping a hospital, feeding orphans and widows. Of the very influential organization, the P. T. A., which proudly stood out for years against resort to gambling, has, in some places, surrendered to the practice. Hardly will a stadium, country or village store, city corner drug store without slot machines or punch boards to lure our children and their parents into gambling. Apparently gambling is speedily becoming the American way.

Little Sentiment Against It

With the rank and file of Americans gambling day after day, one cannot see much hope through legislation against it. Where shall we find enough public sentiment to enforce such legislation?

But there are still many persons who do not deliberately gamble. They believe it wholly wrong in principle to do so. They believe that gambling is destructive to many of the basic elements of moral character, since it substitutes trust in luck for patient thought and effort.

Many educational and religious leaders seriously consider gambling as dangerous to individual and social character, they will probably not turn to avoid or quit gambling themselves and try to persuade the growing generation to do so, too. I see great possibilities in the schools, friendly parent-teachers associations demonstrate to their students the amazing odds against the player of the usual punch board or slot machine. Facts might win eventually. What do you think?

Occasional schools, alas, raise money by gambling events at public functions. Yet they have a far better record, on the average, than the churches. I wonder how they will compare 30 years hence. Perhaps we parents have the final responsibility. Or, shall we just accept gambling as a harmless bit of our folk ways? Why not write your views to the editor of this paper? He might wish to print them.

Poems That Live

THE WAY OF IT

The wind is awake, pretty leaves, pretty leaves,
Head not what he says, he deceives, he deceives;
Over and over
To the lowly clover
He has liked the same love (and forgotten it, too)
He will soon be lapsing and pledging to you.

The boy is abroad, pretty maid, pretty maid,
Beware his soft words; I'm afraid, I'm afraid:
He has told them before,
Times many a score,
Ay, he died for a dozen ere his beard fringed through
And the very same death he will die for you.

The way of the boy is the way of the wind,
As light as the leaves is dainty maid-kind;
One to deceive,
One to believe—
That is the way of it, year to year;
But I know you will learn it too late, my dear.

—Colgate Vanve Cheney.

Cologne Popular

There are many times when you may want to use lots of perfume without getting too heavy about it, and that is why cologne is increasing in popularity. It is refreshing after a bath.

Stunning Outfits for Swimming or Lounging

Culotte skirt opened and closed with slide fastener, worn with teddy shirt in batik print.

Variety Offered in Trim Styles, Novel Materials

By LIBERTE

THERE ARE women who take their sports seriously, and those who don't. And that includes swimming and lounging on the beach.

There are, in other words, those who swim and those who merely take an occasional dip, but who lie in the sun and loll about the beach.

Even if you are an ardent swimmer you may have your choice of suits, according to your personal preference or your type. There are the slick little suits that fit like a glove, and there are those that have little feminine fripperies or at least suggest by their cut and material that the wearer is a "womanly" type of person. No disrespect meant for the tailored athletic type of girl who is no longer masculine, although she is usually tall and broad-shouldered, and as good at sports as her brother or sweetheart.

Rubber Clothing Modern

One of the surprising materials that is being used for clothing these days is rubber. Who, a few years ago, when rubber tires were new, would ever suspect that we would be taking our dips in the briny in rubber suits? But so it is, and the rubber suits are as smart as those of any other material, like silk, satin or wool, which ones were more generally used for bathing suits.

The swim suit shown right of our picture is made of rubber. It is a dressmaker model with flare skirt, adjustable wool straps and separate rubber panties. In her hand is her swim cap which has a patented feature which keeps the water out.

Culotte Play Suit

At the left is a costume for sitting in the sand and playing. It is a culotte or divided skirt, opened and closed with a zipper slide fastener, and worn with a Teddy shirt. It is in a cotton batik print. Notice her socks and play shoes which are rubber soled.

If you want your beach pajamas as gay as they can be you can make them of red and white candy-striped Indian head cotton. The stripes will run vertically on the wide slacks, and they will run horizontally on the short-sleeved top.

Then put a patch pocket on the knee; a blue corselet belt about your middle, and fasten it with three nickel buckles — and there you are — in an ultra, ultra costume which will take you anywhere that is swanky.

Why Not Bake and Serve Griddle Cakes on Porch?

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Ideal

Tomato or Orange Juice
Griddle Cakes Ham
Syrup Jam
Bread Coffee

How serve your Sunday breakfast on the porch in summer? It is such a nice change. Of course to serve griddle cakes on the porch you must have some way of cooking them there. We happen to have a small screened-in porch where we like occasionally to serve breakfast or tea, and there is an electric light fixture there so we can attach an electric sandwich toaster or griddle and make our own toast or cakes there. Of course you do not need both toast and cakes on your menu, but maybe someone would like to finish off the meal with a crunchy piece of toast. You never can tell, and it is always best to be prepared. The directions for making apply to both griddle cakes and waffles.

Today's Recipes

SOUR CREAM GRIDDLE CAKES — One and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, one-half cup sour cream, one-half cup milk, three eggs. Makes eight waffles.

Sift all dry ingredients together, add the liquids, then the well-beaten eggs. Mix thoroughly and bake.

FACTS AND FANCIES

1938 Brides Intelligent

To the young intelligent bride of 1938, housework is no more drudgery imposed by tradition, but part of the absorbing project of creating a liveable, charming home. Even though it is a part of the cooking and cleaning and laundering without help, she will find leisure to cultivate her taste and develop a well-rounded personality.

A little experience will teach her what every good housekeeper knows — that hard jobs are made up of neglected details, that the scrubbed-clean look of attractive households results from well-laid plans and the efficient use of simple labor-savers such as hot water and soap.

If the living room is tidied up daily it will always look restful and charming. If floors and fixtures in kitchen and bathroom are gone over with soap and water every day it will be a small matter to keep them immaculate.

NATURAL EYEBROW EFFECT BEST

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty.

BE YOURSELF and be beautiful. That's still our motto for this season, and maybe we are stuck with it, but it's the best that is what the attractive girls are striving for. So we hope you agree with us.

It is a fortunate thing for your looks that the trend toward the natural has extended to the eyebrows. For the God-given lines of your brow are a lot more flattering than any pencil mark that even the most artistic artist could draw on your face. The fashion for the thinly-pencilled eyebrow has never done a bit of good to looks. So take advantage of a natural beauty hint and keep your brows in more or less the line that Nature intended.

This doesn't mean that you should not improve on your eyebrows just a bit to make them appear at their best. A slight judicious improvement that distinguishes the attractive woman from the plain one. So stare at yourself constructively.

Of course you don't want them to be too broad and heavy. That would only set off to advantage your clothes and svelt figure. Pluck out the excess thickness to a tenser, cleaner line, but avoid an exaggeratedly thin one. Always pull in the same direction, for the hairs grow, otherwise you will be apt to have a regrowth of stubby brows.

Ann Sheridan

Brows follow natural line

If you have the light eyebrow problem, be content to get by a little innocent artifice. Use an eyebrow pencil, either black or brown, according to your coloring. First brush your eyebrows toward your nose with the eyebrow brush. This may seem a little bit like rubbing yourself the wrong way but it will show you the true line of your brow. Now take your pencil and draw it from the outer end of your eyebrow toward your nose.

First Impression Here

You've made your first important move in planning your eyebrow makeup. The rest is perfectly simple. Apply a light coating of vaseline to your eyebrow brush and very gently brush them back into their normal line.

If your eyebrows stop a little short of the beauty line for your eyes, and even Dame Nature can make a mistake, elongate them by using the pencil. Always be careful not to show a definite break between the hairs and your pencil mark. That will make you look artificial and give the whole show away. Blend the coloring in carefully so that it looks like one well-shaped brow.

With your pencil; make a steady, light line across the bony structure under your eyebrow. This will make your eyebrow makeup give a natural and flattering appearance.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

Tobey rang the bell, but nothing happened. No voice came through the speaking tube; no lock clicked. She rang again, a more prolonged ring this time, and stood waiting.

The outer door opened and a man came in, a young man in a dark blue topcoat and a blue hat tilted downward over his eyes, sneaking them in shadow. His mouth was grave and sensitively modeled in a lean attractive face.

Chapter VIII

Tobey glanced away. She held her gloved thumb on the bell a long time.

The man said, "I don't think it rings and Fran wouldn't be likely to hear it anyway. If you'd really like to go up the door's probably unlocked." He reached beyond Tobey, tried the knob. The door swung open. "Coming?"

Tobey came. They walked up one flight of stairs in silence and she heeded outside a closed door.

From somewhere above came a great din as of many people talking at once, punctuated by occasional outbursts of laughter. Someone was playing a high reveal which was unfamiliar.

The man's hand touched her elbow. "Up another one. Haven't you been here before? What a surprise, you're going to have!"

They climbed the other flight. Without knocking, he opened the door and sound rushed out and engulfed them. His hand was still on Tobey's elbow as they went in and she was grateful for that. It was all confusing. Even the street even the corner and bottom, from the dim hallway and the steep stairs had not prepared her for this.

They stood on the threshold of a large, bare room that was made almost garish by the sunlight entering in unrestrained profusion through its tall, uncurtained windows and broad skylight. The sediments of furniture, old and well worn and comfortable looking, made as little impression on the room's vastness and emptiness as did the large number of people assembled there.

The floors were bare except for occasional rugs that seemed small in comparison with the dark polished spaces all about them. In contrast the walls, which were colored a cold warm shade of gray, were literally covered with pictures. Pictures framed and unframed, in endless variety.

Tobey's gaze passed fascinated among them; tart caricatures done in pencil, but up carelessly with primary paint; soft, misty nudes, heads, city scenes and landscapes and views of sea and water. In all, though, that the caricatures predominated.

The man's hand touched her elbow. "Up another one. Haven't you been here before? What a surprise, you're going to have!"

They climbed the other flight. Without knocking, he opened the door and sound rushed out and engulfed them. His hand was still on Tobey's elbow as they went in and she was grateful for that. It was piccolo.

"That's Every of the Symphony," Tobey's companion informed her. But where's Fran? I don't see her in the crowd."

"Fran or Ceaca? asked Tobey timidly, feeling more and more like Alice at the Queen's garden party.

Frankly curious, her new acquaintance inquired, "Don't you know them at all?" and when she replied in the negative went on to explain.

It seemed there were two Francesca Winsmores. Long ago they had decided to split the name into its component parts in order to avoid confusion. Ceaca was the mother and Fran the daughter.

"We're cousins, the daughter and I," Tobey said, smiling a little because it all sounded so mad. "but I've only lived in Chicago a short time and we've never met."

The young man looked understandingly at last. "Then you're a Wirgman, too?"

Tobey shook her head. "My name is Chandler."

"And I'm Douglas Newman."

His eyes, resting upon her, were very dark and direct. Interest glowed in them, kindling an answering spark in her own. She glanced away from him quickly to the crowded noisy room.

There were so many things she still didn't understand. Impulsively she began, "Fran and Ceaca differ-ent from what I expected, I thought—" she broke off then, confusion tangling the swift color in her face.

"What did you think?"

She answered in such a low tone the man had to bend very low in order to hear. "I understood the Winsmores were extremely wealthy."

Douglas Newman's smile was rueful. "Used to be, I guess. But it seems Black Tuesday was their business man. He and Ceaca ran through whatever was left of the family fortune before he died—leaving them to hold the bag. She's a caricaturist and Fran's a commercial artist by bitter necessity. Ceaca is delightful and charming and entirely helpless. Where she devil are they, anyway?" He raised his voice slightly. "Hey, Fran!"

No one seemed to pay the slightest attention but Tobey thought she heard a voice say, "Coming!"

A door on the farther side of the room opened and a tall slim girl came through it. She wore tweeds and a green felt hat set rak'ishly on shoulder length hair knotted into a great coil on her neck.

She called, "bye, gang. Be seeing you," and closed the door, not unintelligible in the ensuing chorus of farewells for she came from swiftly with a long ligh; stride.

Douglas Newman asked her, "What's all this? Here's your long lost cousin to see you."

The girl stopped. She smiled and her smile was warmly friendly. She said, "Really?" and pressed Tobey's hand between both of hers. "That makes it a worse mess than ever! You see, Tobey Chandler, Ceaca had a date for this afternoon that I didn't know about when I talked to you. And now I've just had a call from his studio. I've got to get down there at once and work. On Sunday! Isn't it hell? You've no idea how sorry I am. But do stay. I'm not going to try to get back later. Don't call Interflora you around. Please forgive me—I've got to—"

She was gone and Douglas Newman was saying, "Charming reception. But you've a kind mind. Artists are casual souls—and Fran really can't afford to take chances with her job. Do you care for tea? And whom would you like to meet?"

Tobey swallowed. It was absurd for her to feel like this, as if someone had slapped her. She said a little shakily, turning away from that alien room, "Those chattering strange people. No, thanks, I—don't want tea. I don't believe I'll stay. Good-bye."

The man smiled back. He said "I'm not especially keen on tea myself. And one of Fran's mad teas without Fran or Ceaca either —" his shrug was eloquent. "Where shall we go then? Or haven't you any preference in places to dine?"

Before Tobey could recover sufficiently from her surprise to answer, he had taken her arm again. Together they went out into the hall.

The nice thing about us is the way we understand each other," Douglas smiled saying that, but there was an underlying note of seriousness in his voice. He went on, "Girls are the very devil as a rule. Always messing around with tender feelings, jealousy, yearning for entangling 'alliances.' They never know when they're well off. But you're different."

He did not inquire into the reasons for that difference and Tobey kept her counsel. To Douglas there was no hint of arrogance in her hard young cynicism. It was a fitting match for his own.

x x x

They stood in a crowded theatre lobby during the long intermission between the second and third acts of a new play.

There was such a gay casualness about their frequent meetings Unplanned, unpremeditated, and perfect, complete in itself, without a sense of past or future. A few hours ago Tobey had an expectation but that she would dine alone as was her custom, and then return to her small room at the Kenk; then, to read or sleep, defending off loniiness as best she might.

Now here she was. And here was Douglas, his dark eyes laughing down into hers, his hand pressing her elbow. Tobey drew a deep breath of satisfaction, of undiluted pleasure in the moment, of sheer contentn.

Douglas asked softly, "Happy?"

And Tobey nodded

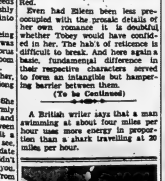
They stood side by side in the darkened theater, shoulders touching companionably, watching the make-believes, but curiously normal difficulties of a man and two women progress to their inter conclusion. And when the play was over they stopped for a dance and a cocktail at a small exclusive club where the revolving bar was all of crystal.

CHAPTER IX

Eileen Shea remarked over luncheon next day that the new your new man last night. I was only a few steps behind you as you left the store." She smiled and her dark brown rose slightly. "Ze looks like really money, and that you have haven't been holding out on me by any chance, waiting for a full-fledged-lonaire?"

Lightly Tobey denied it, adding, "You're just in a matchmaking frame of mind."

Eileen asked sheerily, "Do you suppose that could be?"



Her approaching marriage kept her so preoccupied these days she scarcely noticed a similiar preoccupation in Tobey. Eileen was full of her own plans, her own rosy dreams of the future. Plans in which Tobey felt little interest, dreams she couldn't understand. While her friend talked excitedly of apartments and furniture, silver and linen all the various and delectable gear to the heart of a prospective bride, Tobey thought her own thoughts.

There were times that winter when Tobey, too, envied Eileen the practicaled a confidant. The urgency of this need sometimes for a Julia who had always been so self-sufficient so capable of making her own decisions, of standing alone on her own feet. Who had always had to be, in a sense, grown-up and had looked for advice? Certainly not Julia. Never had there existed between these two the spiritual closeness that unites most mothers and daughters. Julia had no patience for understanding. Tobey had written to her mother only once since she left Manville, a coldly defensive little note, stating merely that she was well and that she had a job, that Julia was not to worry about her. And Julia had noticed; fear of her stepfather's possible interference was too deeply ingrained in her for that. She had received no hear of Julia occasionally through Reid.

Even had Eileen been less preoccupied with the prosaic details of her own romance it is doubtful whether Tobey would have confided in her. The girl was not reticent, difficult to break. And here again a basic, fundamental difference in their respective characters served to form an intangible but hampering barrier between them.

A British writer says that a man swimming at about four miles per hour uses more energy in proportion than a shark travelling at 30 miles per hour.

Poems That Live

The Rainy Day

The day is cold, and dark, and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
The vine still clings to the moldering wall,
But at every gust the dead leaves fall,
And the day is dark and dreary.

My life is cold - and dark, and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
My thoughts still cling to the moldering Past,
But the hopes of youth fall thick in the blast
And the day: are dark and dreary.

Be still, sad heart! and cease repining;
Behind the cloud is the sun still shining;
Thy fate is the common fate of all,
Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

"I'm a song and dance man. That's my world. My responsibility now ends with right good performances a week."—George M. Cohan.

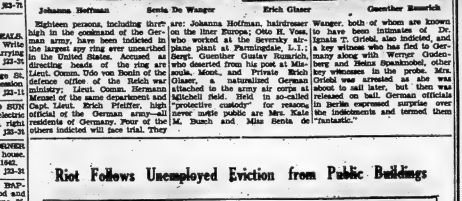
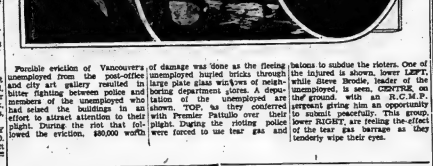
Hobo Candidate



Seeking the seat of Gomar Smith who is running for election to the Senate in Oklahoma, Ernest C. Albright, ABOVE, self-styled "hobo candidate" for election to Congress, is shown as he arrived at the Washington freight yards, in his "private car." He hoped to see President Roosevelt to get his support, but owing to "box-car train schedules" he arrived four days late.

Indicted as Foreign Spies in U.S.

Mrs. Ignatz Griebl — Kate Moog Busch — Otto H. Voss — Dr. Ignatz Griebl



Johanna Hoffman — Senta De Wanger — Erich Glaser — Guenther Rumrich

Eighteen persons, including three high in the command of the German army, have been indicted in the largest spy ring ever unearthed in the United States. Accused as directing heads of the ring are Mrs. Ignatz Griebl, von Rentin of the defence office of the Reich war ministry; Lieut. Comm. Hermann Menzel of the same department and Capt. Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, high official of the German army—all residents of Germany. Four of the others indicted will face trial. They are: Johanna Hoffman, hairdresser on the liner Europa; Otto H. Voss, who worked at the Beversky airplane plant at Farmingdale, L.I.; Sergt. Guenther Gustav Rumrich, who deserted from his post at Miesaouk, Morot, and Private Erich Glaser, a naturalized German attached to the army air corps at Mitchell field. Held in so-called "protective custody" for years, never made public are Mrs. Kate M. Busch and Miss Senta de Wanger, both of whom are known to have been intimates of Dr. Ignatz Griebl, also indicted, and a key witness who has fled to Germany along with Werner Gudenberg and Heinz Spanknobel, other key witnesses in the probe. Mrs. Griebl was arrested as she was about to sail later, but then was released on bail. German officials in Berlin expressed surprise over the indictments and termed them "fantastic."

Riot Follows Unemployed Eviction from Public Buildings

Forcible eviction of Vancouver's unemployed from the post-office and city art gallery resulted in bitter fighting between police and members of the unemployed who had seized the buildings in an effort to attract attention to their plight. During the riot that followed the eviction, $80,000 worth of damage was done as the fleeing unemployed hurled bricks through large plate glass windows of neighboring department stores. A deputation of the unemployed are shown, TOP, as they conferred with Premier Patullo over their plight. During the rioting police were forced to use tear gas and ba-

Insurgent Bombers Score "Victory" Over Hospital

Insurgent bombers sweeping over Figueras, Spain, transformed this hospital into a tomb for an unestimated number of patients and nurses, when they scored a direct hit with high explosive bombs. Searchers are shown digging in the ruins, seeking the bodies of the victims, many of whom were innocent sufferers of the brutal civil war.

3rd. Sidney

Third Sidney—On Friday evening June 17th, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Bush, second line, in honor of their son, Kenneth and his bride, the former Miss Laura Snider. Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bush were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Thursday and had just returned from their wedding trip. The lawn was gayly lighted for the occasion and presented a happy scene as guests from near and far gathered to welcome home the bride and groom.

Covers were laid for eighty in the spacious dining room of the farm home and a sumptuous repast was served. During the dinner hour there were toasts and speeches. Lemonade delights were served by Mrs. Grey Brickman of Redneersville, was enjoyed. She was accompanied by Miss Olive Bush, Reg. M. of Belleville. There were cornet solotions by Stanley Mitchell and a duet by Messrs. Arnold and Fred Mitchell. Appropriate songs for the occasion by Mr. Stanley Grills with her guitar accompaniment, added much pleasure.

Later in the evening a crowd gathered outside and indulged in an old-time charivari. As a result of the generosity to the "noisy band" another gathering was held on Monday evening when the crowd gathered to enjoy the ice-cream provided by the charivari money.

The Young People's Society to which Kenneth has been a popular member, took this opportunity and invited the friends and neighbors to gather with them and pay tribute to the bride and groom. The pastor, Rev. H. R. Johnson acted as chairman at this large gathering. After community singing he called Mr. and Mrs. Bush to the seats of honor on the verandah and Mr. Burrell Hamilton read an address and they were presented with a walnut fernery, a vase and a wall mirror. Kenneth and Laura thanked their friends for their gifts and there were very impressive speeches from various people present, all extending a hearty welcome to Mrs. Bush in our community.

Following is the address:—

June 20, 1938

Dear Kenneth and Laura:

We, your friends and neighbors have assembled in your home tonight to welcome you back from your wedding trip and extend to you our good wishes for future happiness and prosperity.

We have known you, Kenneth, from childhood and we have followed your fortunes with sympathy and interest and now in this most important undertaking, namely the beginning of a home, we wish you God speed. And more especially would we have you, Laura, feel the warmth of our affection and the sincerity of our welcome. While a number of us are not personally acquainted with you, and you are somewhat a stranger as yet, we trust as time marches on we will become better acquainted and that our friendship will increase.

Kenneth, we are glad that you have chosen for your life partner one who is so highly esteemed and loved. Appreciative songs for the occasion by Mr. Stanley Grills with her guitar accompaniment, added much pleasure.

Yanks Lose Ground to Indians By Dropping Double Bill; Giants Take Cincinnati Reds

Terry's Men Come From Behind To Score Five In Seventh

DETROIT WINS

Lon Warneke Leads Cards To Win Over The Bees

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Unless those Yankees of Colonel Jake Ruppert soon get around to flopping their baseball fireworks, Colonel Jake won't have anything but his beer sales to worry about along about world series time this fall.

Of course, there'll be a lot of Colonel Jake's brew poured before they wrap up the pennant on this year's American League wars. And, with plenty of time still remaining to unwrap the power and class that everyone knows the Yanks packed in their bats, there's no immediate viewing with alarm.

But with the season approaching the halfway mark, Gehrig and company is in third place today, 4 1-2 games back of Cleveland Indians, and that certainly shouldn't make those who invested a few bob at the 7 to 10 pre-season odds feel any too comfortable.

The hits murderers' row had its best chance of the season to do something about the whole business this week in a four game series with the Tribe. But the Indians came from behind for a 13 to 5 decision in Tuesday's opener, and then took both ends of a double-header yesterday 3 to 1 and 7 to 1.

Glenn Gets Greasy

With the second place Boston Red Sox dropping an 8 to 2 decision to the Tigers, in which Vernon Kennedy handed Lefty Grove his second defeat of the season, the double win boosted the Indians' margin over their nearest rivals to 1 1-2 games.

Bill Terry's Giants, at the head of the National League parade, also gained ground by coming from behind with a five run outburst in the seventh and eighth frames to clip Cincinnati Reds 6 to 4. By knocking off their closest pursuers, the Giants boosted their lead to 1-2 games.

Monte Stratton's eight-hit pitching gave the White Sox a 16 to 3 win over Washington Senators. The Athletics beat St. Louis Browns 5 to 1.

Lon Warneke's pitching led the Cardinals to a 4 to 3 victory over Boston Tess. The Cubs-Phillies game was rained out.

WAS TESSIE A FROST LAST NIGHT?

It can't be denied Joe Louis is undoubtedly the world's undisputed heavyweight champion today.

Incidentally Louis is the only heavyweight champion to ever successfully defend the title in less than one round, so he must have what makes champions.

It must have been interesting to watch the expression on Max Baer's face as Louis poured leather into the German. And to think Baer signed to meet Louis in September, for what?

Some of these fine days local sports frappers is going to awaken to the fact there is a real good baseball team within our city's portals. It may be news to many local baseball fans, but Belleville has an intermediate baseball club to be proud of. Yesterday the clouds stopped into Picton and beat the previously mighty heralded Prince Edward County nine by a 16 to 5 score. For seven years past local baseball fans have been crying for "new blood" talent but this year when a team is pinned on the field and it will only playing good ball, but leading the parade in the Bay of Quinte League, the fans refuse to patronize them. No baseball club can survive if the fans do not come through the turnstiles and the successful future of the Belleville nine looks anything but brilliant in the front office, despite the fact the Fairman-Wood clan is well fortified on the top story of the Bridge lodge, with four wins and one defeat. The Belleville nine has defeated every club in the loop, their lone loss having been the result of some boner batting in Kingston.

Proving his mound effort in Napanee the week previous was no flash in the pan or fluke, Speedy St. Louis hurled the locals to a well-earned victory over Picton yesterday. St. Louis hurled five hit ball, until he eased off in the ninth, to coast in and ultimately the homsters garnered eight safeties, while Belleville was pounding the pellet for 18 hits, including a homer by Ted Johnson. St. Louis helped his own cause with three safeties, two of them doubles. For several frames Belleville rifled the homsters in order, as the Weirites were playing shaky ball, until they had the piece well salted away. As a team, in five games played, the locals are hitting .348, a remarkably high figure for any average amateur team. With the exception of the one game in King, since the locals have played sterling defensive ball and when they appear on the locals lot next week it is hoped the fans will show their appreciation by their attendance.

Belleville has had 65 hits to their credit in five games, an average of 13 per game. Yesterday St. Louis, Sern. Burgeon and Green swung potent and timely bats.

Before leaving local baseball it might be well to remind the fans of this evening's junior league game at the Fair Grounds, Napanee versus Belleville Maracas. Neither nine has lost a game, Belleville having two victories and Napanee one in league competition this season. The leaders of today are the seniors of tomorrow and if the baseball fans of Belleville entertain hopes and ideas of the sponsorship of senior ball in this city at some future date, they should support the present junior and intermediates. Belleville has produced some mighty fine baseball talent in years past and can continue to do so if the fans will do their part in assisting to finance the clubs of today.

An all-star rookie team for the major leagues was named last week by the United Press, with Cincinnati, Brooklyn and the Philadelphia Athletics leading with two players each. The line-up follows: First base, Frank McCormick, Cincinnati; second base, Emmett Mueller, Phillies; third base, Ken Keltner, Cleveland; shortstop, Wayne Ambler, Athletics; left field, Ernie Koy, Brooklyn; centre field, Sam Chapman, Athletics; right field, Enos Slaughter, St. Louis Cardinals; catcher, Willard Hershberger, Cincinnati; pitchers—Jim Bagby, Boston Red Sox, Forest Presnell, Brooklyn; Milburn Shoffner, Boston Bees, and Emil Leonard, Washington,

Some fair softball pitching was seen at Point Anne last evening when the Anne Hathaways defeated the Kingston "Tassels" 6 to 1, Stan Ledroux, the homesters mound ace, hurling a one hit game. The Limestone City nine got five men on first, three by virtue of walks, one by an error and McGinley's single, the only hit chalked up by Kingston. As the "tassels" are a class "A" team and Point Anne a class "B" team in the O.A.S.A., the feat is all the more remarkable. Over at Consecon Flats however, Hal Keup's National Tavern lads sprung a surprise as they defeated the Canty A.C. nine 13 to 10, not only that, but in knocking Consecon's nine off their lofty perch of first place in the league gained top.

Incidentally the lovers of softball have a real treat in store for them on Friday night when the Intermediate, O.A.S.A. champions 11377, meet "Red Townsend's Redmonds in an outdoor game at Coleman Flats.

Belleville lawn bowlers fared exceptionally well at the annual inland tournament held by the Brighton Lawn Bowling Club on Victoria Day Monday, Saturday, at the conclusion of the day's play, a Belleville team of Mr. and Mrs. A. Zeran and Mr. and Mrs. Ab Woodman had recorded scores with two games high. The weekly men's Fri. day night club tournaments sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club are becoming more popular as they progress.

We heard on the street today, that Max Schmeling was doped—maybe so, but if he was it was with Joe Louis' devastating body punches.

HARLEM IN N. Y. CELEBRATES WIN TILL EARLY DAWN

Negroes Danced, Shouted And Rang Large Cow-Bells.

POLICE KEEP ORDER

Gloom Spread Over "Little Germany" Early In Evening

(By Tel Farah)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 23.—(CP)—Harlem's thousands of dusky celebrants shagged off to bed or weaved their way to work today after a night of joyous jubilee which was touched off ecstatically when Joe Louis pasted Max Schmeling behind his inside of a round and retained the world heavyweight boxing title.

Through the hours of the night, a large portion of the 800,000 population of the negro sector of New York rolled excitedly up and down Seventh Avenue, north of 110th Street. They danced and sheriked, tooted horns, rang cowbells. They climbed all over passing buses, cabs and autos on the top of taxis in a Emperor Jones. Dusky bettas bilked the farmers' out of restaurants and bars to join the mob.

Some of the Louis supporters reportedly went to bed early for the Reichsfuehrer. They paraded down the avenue, giving the Nazi salute, preceded by a sign which said: "Down with Hitler. Up with Louis".

No Racial Incidents In Celebration

Sounds of additional police has little to do as the thousands observed the victory good naturedly, and without indulging in any extremes.

Yorkville, as New York's "Little Germany" mourned its toppling of Schmeling.

Few of the thousands in this German district expects "Der Max" to lose. Probably none conceived him taking it in the first round—as one Franklin put it: "Ach—wildon a chance".

And today was payoff day for those who put up loads of German money in their grab at the long odds from Harlem.

There came the gloom to Yorkville. Almost everywhere it was noticeable the pall that light when the loudspeakers blared forth the result —"Louis by a knockout in the first round"—until well on in the day as the German sentiment shelled out its greenbacks.

Tavern keepers, primed last night for the wild jubilation stood glumly at their bars today facing a dull week. "If he win last night," said one, "all my tables let loosen—but Maxie lose und all the money go so Harlem. For a week will there be no more beer drunk."

NEWARK BEARS AFTER A RECORD

Hope To Equal Or Surpass Mark Set By Team Last Year

(By The Associated Press)

With the International Baseball League pennant race already showing every sign of turning into a rout, the current edition of Newark Bears today were gunning for a few of the records set up by their championship team last year in an effort to inject some excitement into the chase.

A year ago today, the "Wonder Bears" were riding in first place with the Buffalo Bisons and Mc. and Mrs. Al Zeran and Mr. and Mrs. Ab Woodman had recorded scores with two games high. The weekly men's Fri. day night club tournaments sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club are becoming more popular as they progress.

We heard on the street today, that Max Schmeling was doped—maybe so, but if he was it was with Joe Louis' devastating body punches.

Despite the fact they are only nine games ahead of the second-place Buffalo Bisons, who are a strong stronger opposition than the Royals did last season, the pennant race has already equalled a 13-year-old mark that the 1937 outfit couldn't touch.

In defeating the Royals 9-4 yesterday for their 34th win, the Bees Bruins tied the Club mark for consecutive victories set in 1926. Ten in a row was the best the Bears could do last season, and that included the eight straight won in the play-offs.

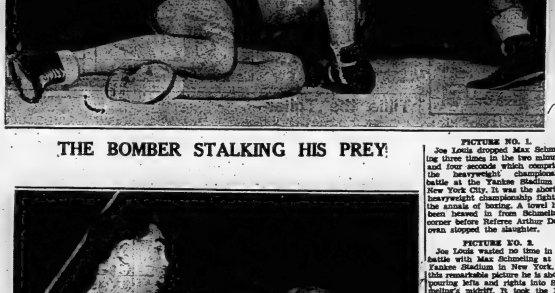
The Bears slammed out 13 hits including Jimmy Gleason's ninth homer of the season, to hand the Royals their fifth straight defeat.

In the only other game the other Clubs having played off their scheduled contests as parts of double-headers, Toronto Maple Leafs whipped Syracuse 6-1. The Leafs pounded Ted Kleinhans and Jake Jordy for 11 hits while Steve Vehovic Johnny Berly stopped the Chiefs with five hits.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Mel Harder, Johnny Humphries and Johnny Allen, Indians—Harder and Humphries combined in pitching eight hit 3-1 opening victory over Yankees; Allen hurled four-hitter to win second game, 7-1.



Bob Johnson, Athletics — Hit triple and double, driving in two runs in 7 victory over Browns.

Joe Medwick, Cardinals—Cloutes homer and triple to send home three runs as Cards beat Boston 4-2.

DER SCHLAGER HANGING ON THE ROPES

Joe Louis dropped Max Schmeling three times in the two minutes and four seconds which comprised the heavyweight championship battle at the Yankee Stadium in New York City. It was the shortest heavyweight championship fight in the annals of boxing. A towel had been tossed in from Schmeling's corner before Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the slaughter.

PICTURE NO. 3.

Max Schmeling didn't have time to hitch up his trunks when the ball rang for the first round of his fight with Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship of the world. In 3 minutes, 4 seconds, the Brown Bomber redeemed his terrific beating at Schmeling's hands two years ago by battering Schmeling into insensibility. The fight took place in humid and packed Yankee Stadium, New York, and was before the fans had settled into their chairs.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside.

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins at the lower bowel. This makes the veins bubby, pail or impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

No ordinary medicine will relieve piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Leonhart. HEM-ROID tablets relieve piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the part, tending to make HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that J. S. McKnown or any other good druggist is authorized to make good our promise to you that if you are not completely satisfied with the results from one bottle, you may have your money back.

In Praise of Famous Names

The manufacturer of any good product, who advertises it consistently in daily newspapers can, in the course of time, make his product famous.

Everybody knows and uses products whose names are famous because of the vision, faith, courage and enterprise of the owners of them.

They were not famous in the beginning, but the owners proceeded to make them "household words" by means of persistent advertising in daily newspapers. The goodwill value of these names is fabulous; so much so, indeed, that one or more of the plants in which these products are manufactured could be destroyed with less loss to the owner than the loss of the trade name.

You, too, can build sales and goodwill for your products and services by advertising in the Canadian daily newspapers.

Maverick's Melody

By KARIN ASHBAND

Maverick was old, so old that people were beginning to look at him with pitying eyes, and to tap their heads significantly as he passed them. The agony of many winters lay on his hair, and the dreams of many summers slept in his eyes.

Maverick had written songs in his day—songs which people had liked, yet over which none had become enthusiastic. But Maverick ignored them. He hummed snatches of them over and over again to himself, as he sat in his big armchair by his daughter's fire and watched his children go by. He sang them over and over, again to himself as he sat in the summer-house.

"Some day" he would say, "I shall compose a song which the world will love"

His daughter Hannah would sigh softly and, like the others, tap her head significantly. Elsa, his precious grand-daughter, was the only one besides Rupert who never tapped her head. She curled at his feet like a kitten to listen to his tales of the good old days of the Civil war, to his snatches of love songs of his own composition, while his tired old hands played with the gold of her hair, and his soul basked in the sunshine of her smile.

Very often Rupert, enamored of Elsa, would sit there also, and listen. All the world loves a lover, and Maverick loved Rupert and Elsa, not only because they were lovers but because they were a part of himself. They understood him. Perhaps it was partly because Rupert also sang snatches of song of his own composition. Rupert was young. Some day, perhaps he would write songs that would set the world afire.

Hannah did not think so, however. She would have none of Rupert. A dreamer, a prodigal of time, who would never make enough to support a wife. So she sent Elsa off the understanding heart away to school, and a great void was cut in Maverick's life.

He became quarrelsy than ever and drew into himself as an oyster draws into its shell. One day, however, he said very excitedly to his daughter, Hannah:

"Listen, Hannah. I have found the melody. Listen!"

"Very nice father," she said, pat. ting his hand absent-mindedly, as she hurried on and forgot all about it.

But Hannah remembered it ever Maverick's heart. He yearned more than ever for Elsa. It was because of this, he knew, that Rupert did not come to him because of his longing for her.

He sang the song for his son-in-law who said to him, "You must not bother your head about things like that any more. You don't need to. You've made your bones and everything you need."

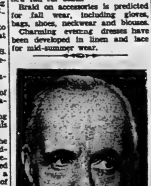
Elsa, the male publisher of great renown who spent his summers here in the town. Granny he did his cane, put on his hat and set off for the publisher's home. At the door a maid told him the great man was busy and could not see him.

His mind worked very fast. The windows were all open and outside one of the front windows he stood and sang his melody in his queer, cracked voice. The publisher heard distinctly nobody had heard him. He tried again. Then he went to the screen and thrust his head through the window exclaiming in the greatest excitement. Exactly Maverick turned, "Listen, my good man," he heard the fall author say, "and you holler me. Please take this and go somewhere else."

He handed Maverick a quarter. The old man put the quarter into his head, and the quarter into the gutter before the publisher's astonished eyes. Then he sang it still high set off down the street.

Maverick's wandering steps after Maverick. Rupert caught up with him, grabbed him by the arm, cried, "Listen, my grandpa, I've got it, I've got it!"

Maverick's wandering steps after Maverick. Rupert caught up with him, grabbed him by the arm, cried, "Listen, my grandpa, I've got it, I've got it!"



Reverently, Rupert wrote the song and sent for Elsa.

"It is a song in a thousand," he said. "We will make it a hit. You will sing it over the radio, Elsa, just as you have sung is to me. The world will love it."

And he made up a contract with them that quite overpowered them both and robbed them blind for Maverick. Hand in hand, they hurried home, so that he, who had been too weary and weak to come, might sing on the dotted line.

In the summer house in the garden they found him, asleep in his tilted chair, a smile on his thin, cold lips. They could not rouse him. In one blue-veined hand he held a paper, on which had been written in his fine old script:

"Maverick's Melody — I hereby dedicate and bequeath it to Rupert and Elsa."

Election of officers, appointment of standing committees, sewing demonstrations by junior members, interesting addresses by attending speakers, and fine musical numbers by talented members of the various organizations represented each formed a part in the interesting day's activity. Registration of delegates and visitors was made under the direction of Misses E. McDonald and Dorothy Ulman revealed delegates present from the following organizations: Stirling, Bay of Quinte, Chatterton, Hallidge, Unionville. Visitors were present from Brighton, Toronto, and other places. "The convention was held under the auspices of the River Valley Branch.

The meeting was opened by the singing of the Ode and some community singing under the leadership of song leader, Miss Mae Currie with Mrs. H. Morrow at the piano, the gathering was called to order by Mrs. C. Holmes, District President, who presided over the meeting. The first speaker was Rev. W. J. Scott of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, who in his fine address of welcome to the members and friends drew particular attention to the carefully arranged schedule of the day. The program gave evidence of efforts to make the constructive business of the sessions interesting and helpful as well as entertaining. The work of the Institute is an ideal one, he pointed out the land that little need be said regarding its usefulness as a educational institution for the betterment of general living conditions. The high standard of the Institute in the line address of welcome to the members and friends drew particular attention to the carefully arranged schedule of the day. The program gave evidence of efforts to make the constructive business of the sessions interesting and helpful as well as entertaining. The work of the Institute is an ideal one, he pointed out the land that little need be said regarding its usefulness as a educational institution for the betterment of general living conditions. The high standard of the Institute in the line of citizenship, he stated, could be largely attributed to the untiring efforts of this great organization, he stated.

The reply to this fine address of welcome was made in a very pleasing and capable manner by Mrs. C. Bullock, first vice-president. Then president then called for the Roll Call of the branches and their reports. A comprehensive survey of the program made throughout the past year was presented in a complete report given by Mrs. P. Bronson, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. C. F. Wall of Stirling, gave the auditor's report. Financing in activity was also emphasized in the president's report given by Mrs. Holmes. At this time reports of the Standing Committees were presented by the various chairmen in the following order: Education, Mrs. Bleeker; Home Economics, Mrs. C. Keichesou; Health, Mrs. Kerr; Agriculture, Mrs. Kerr, Reg. N., was read by the secretary; Agriculture and Canadian Industries, Mrs. Chisholm; Legislation by Mrs. Pryse; Historic Research, Mrs. Ketcheson; Community Activities, Mrs. Baker; Mrs. Chard Canadianization, this report prepared by Mrs. Ketcheson was also read by the secretary; Peace and International Relationship, Mrs. Ketcheson.

An excellent paper, presenting "Flashes from the Provincial Convention," prepared by Mrs. A. Mitchell, proved most interesting. This event held in Belleville City Hall, on October 7th, numbered the presence of two hundred delegates from Hastings, Northumberland, and Prince Edward Counties. Among the distinguished visitors present were Miss B. McDermid, superintendent of Women's Institutes for the Province of Ontario, and Mrs. T. J. Preservation of tree life in Ontario was being encouraged by free information of a practical nature made available to all interested in the province's future. Other outstanding speakers included Mrs. M. B. Wener; Mrs. C. Ketcheson; Mrs. Chas. MacCoun of Campbellford; Mrs. T. J. Brown, of Belleville; Mrs. H. Harrison; Mrs. Laurie Lewis; Mrs. J. A. Brown and others. A civic reception had been tendered the deputies by the mayor of Belleville and the annual banquet held in the Y.M.C.A. was very largely attended. Dr. A. E. Berry of Toronto, was also numbered among the good speakers and had given a fine address on the value of milk and milk supply, illustrating his points with slides. Such were the highlights of a most interesting convention, gathered thro' the careful observation of Mrs. Mitchell who had prepared the report.

Tea Table Talk

The next speaker on the agenda was Mr. H. L. Pair, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Speaking on the subject of "Farm Home Beautification," Mr. Pair stated there was always a need of exterior decoration, such as trees and shrubs, the types of decorative trees and shrubbery for planting suited locations, hedge into execution can serve only to make the home more beautiful and attractive. This was a most interesting and educational address, especially to those ladies who were interested in horticulture. The thanks of the gathering was extended to Mr. Pair for his presence and talk.

The morning sessions closed with the singing of "O Canada" and dinner was served by the ladies of the River Valley Branch.

AT THE BELLE

"College Swing" and "Storied Men" mount a musical comedy which is on the Bells screen today and Friday, matinee daily, should take its place at the head of the class. A gay story, a comic cast headed by Gracie Allen, George Burns, Martha Raye and Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jackie Cooper and Ben Blue and a lavish ensemble of sparkling new songs combine to make the film "dean's list" entertainment.

A cyclone hits the world of collegiation when it becomes known that Gracie will inherit Alden College as soon as she passes her examinations since this will make her the first member of her family to accomplish the feat in over two hundred years. One of the students, Bob Hope, sees his chance to make a fortune and sets out to tutor her in exchange for a share of the pot. Big.

The most hilarious screenplay in the history of "liberal" education follows. Martha Raye joins the family, Gracie becomes "Dean of Men," while romance becomes the daily routine of Hope and Miss Grable at the head of the department. This is the story of the dignified trustees of the institution, who are bead by Ryan Cooper, Jr., and Gracie in passes the hands again.

Ryan loses the college man-hating head giddy romance to her but she gets the men.

Right now some of the songs in the picture are the composers. Jimmy Dorsey's "Contrasting Sweeties" is numbered among the tunes that make the film "dean's list" entertainment.

In Love With You Every Day", "Monotonic Like This" and "You're a Heavenly Thing" are comedy favorites has been assembled for the production.

London, June 21 (CP)—Alarmed by mounting imports from subsidized industries in continental countries, an organized campaign has been launched by business interests in Great Britain for anti-dumping measures patterned on Canadian and the United States plans.

The Empire Industries Association has taken the lead in the movement against such imports and has directed its heavy guns on Germany in particular, which in recent years has captured a big slice of the United Kingdom market in the low-priced motor car field.

The Association points out that imports of German light cars increased from 1,935 to 5,181 in 1937, while 3,183 were admitted during the first six months of 1938 despite a 23½ percent ad valorem duty.

GOVT CONTROL URGED ON PRIVATE MENTAL ASYLUMS

Action May Be Expected From Ontario Gov't As Outcome

FINDINGS OF PROBE

'Drastic Changes' Are Advised In Report Just Presented

Toronto, June 21 (CP)—Possible comment or action from Ontario Government heads was looked for today as an outcome of a Royal Commission report calling the Provincial Private Sanatoria Act inadequate.

The report of F. H. Barlow, K.C., Master of the Ontario Supreme Court, on his Commission inquiry into affairs at the Homewood Sanitarium at Guelph, was made public yesterday by Health Minister F. J. Kirby. It called for "drastic" changes.

Safeguards Asked

The submission summed up findings of a probe ordered by Premier Mitchell Hepburn in April after receipts of charges by Angus McIntosh of Montreal, that he was held against his will at Homewood. Specifically, it said, the Government to provide "adequate safeguards to prevent any patients being detained in the said institutions or other persons." All private mental institutions should be brought under Government control, it continued.

McIntosh, his wife and other relatives, the superintendent and officials of Homewood were heard during the inquiry. The Commissioner found the Montreal man was "forcibly detained" after admission at Mrs. McIntosh's request.

Finding By Probe

"In September, 1934, Mrs. McIntosh signed a probation bond and was ready to take her husband home to Montreal with her, when by reason of the interference of his relatives in Hamilton, she did not go," the report said. "From that moment he was transferred to the Psychiatric Hospital in Toronto in June 1936. From that time he could not consent to her husband being released from the institution and was practically under supervision and, believed that by reason of the terms of the Private Sanatoria Act he must have this consent before he could release Mr. McIntosh.

Question of Protection

Concluding, the report said the Act "as it stands at present, is not sufficient protection to a person who becomes mentally ill and some drastic changes are quite necessary."

The report found many male attendants at Homewood were unqualified for their work and that the institution was not fitted to care for violent patients. It recommended training and instruction for attendants and nurses in a private institution.

BERLIN SWAMPED BY AUSTRIAN JEWS GERMANY CLAIMS

Hitler's Newspaper Claims Material Prosperity of Reich Attracts

INFLUX ATTACKED

Berlin, June 21 (AP)—Stung by eye-witness reports in foreign newspapers, the German press today broke its silence on the Anti-Semitic drive against Austrian Jews, declaring Berlin is an "open city for self-defence by the people against Jews who are swamping Berlin, particularly from Austria."

Although the drive began June 1 continued, the University of Rome-mics exempted foreign Jews living in Italy from property registration regulations while the United States had protested. New regulations also relaxed the ban as they apply to German Jews living abroad.

"Paradoxical though it may seem," the Beobachter declared, "the louder the foreign press has railed about Jewish persecutions, the more the Jews have swarmed to Germany."

New Influx Charges

It is the material prosperity of the Reich that attracts them and they have submitted willingly to any restrictions placed upon them as the Jews are notoriously thrifty, it added.

The Beobachter charged the new influx was peopled primarily of "smugglers of drugs and currencies, counterfeiters and professional swindlers." It accused the newcomers city also of "behaving with intolerable impertinence" to Aryan women and girls.

The Beobachter recalled allegedly forcible expulsions of German from Alsace-Lorraine in 1920 after the French occupation of the area.

"We never yet have told the Jews to get out of the country but with a hundredweight of personal property as the French did with German Alsace-Lorraine," Hitler's paper exclaimed.

Emigration Objective

It became increasingly clear, with statements today, that Germany was an objective of the persecution. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who estimated seized in raids said all who declared their willingness to leave the Reich would be released from police custody almost immediately.

Julius Streicher, who controls the Anti-Semitic drive, and Julius Stuermer, expressed the belief "exportation" of the Jews would be the only solution of the Jewish problem.

With a reduction of three and four tenths mills, the tax rate for the city of Belleville for 1938 was struck at 46 5-10 at the regular meeting of the City Council held on Monday evening. It was the longest session of the entire year, the greater part of the time being taken up with the reading of the by-laws, that are necessary to set the rate. Before the council went into the committee of the whole on by-laws, the time was extended one hour and it was past eleven-thirty when orders of the day were called.

The tax rate set for this year is the lowest that has existed in the city since 1929. In 1929 the rate was 45 6-10, in 1930 47 mills, in 1931 48 mills, in 1932 47 7-10 mills, in 1933 46 6-10 mills, in 1934 47 mills, in 1935 49 1-10 mills, in 1936 50 mills, and in 1937 49 9-10 mills. Being in detail how the reduction was accomplished and the requirements for the coming year.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Summer solstice! If you plant a stick firmly in a vertical position, its shadow at noon today will be the shortest of the year, because the sun has reached its highest point in the sky, and from now on it will go southward again. An observation of this kind, said to be the oldest astronomical one, was made by the Chinese nearly 4,000 years ago. Places in the northern latitudes receive more heat today than on any other day of the year, but the earth as a whole does not for it is farther from the sun than in winter. Although our received heat is not a maximum, our highest temperatures will not occur until later in the summer after the ground has had a chance to warm up.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 21 (CP)—Synopsis: The weather has been decidedly warm over the greater part of the Prairie Provinces with light, scattered showers occurring in places eastern Manitoba. It is fair and warm over Ontario and Quebec as compared to last week with light showers in East Maritimes. Pressure is low over Hudson Bay region and the Far West States, and a very shallow trough of low extends from the Atlantic Coast while high pressure covers the lake region. Central States and the western portion of Canada.

Lake Superior—Moderate southwesterly winds; fair and warm. Wednesday, moderate winds mostly fair and partly cloudy scattered thundershower.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy and not quite so warm tonight and Wednesday; probably light scattered showers in southern districts.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Partly cloudy and warm tonight and not quite so warm; probably light scattered showers in southern districts.

HEAD OF CHURCH DIES SUDDENLY IN BROCKVILLE

Rev. Dr. Donald MacOdrum Recently Appointed Moderator, Passes

NATIVE OF N. S.

Brockville, Ont., June 21 (CP)—The Presbyterian Church in Canada is without an official head today through the death of Rev. Dr. Donald MacOdrum elected moderator of the church at the general assembly in Lyon Mackenzie, Ont., last June.

Dr. MacOdrum, minister of the first Presbyterian church here since 1925, died suddenly yesterday at the age of 74. Since his return from the assembly, held June 1, he appeared to be enjoying good health and preached two sermons Sunday. He died thirty minutes after suffering a heart attack.

Church regulations make no provision for the election of a successor until the next assembly, scheduled for Midland, Ont., next June. Meanwhile urgent business requiring personal attention of the official head of the church may be transacted by any former moderator. Probably these duties will devolve upon Dr. Hugh Munroe, New Glasgow, N.S., whom Dr. MacOdrum succeeded.

First native of Nova Scotia to be moderator since 1876, Dr. MacOdrum was born in Mira and was educated at Sydney and Pictou Academies, Dalhousie University and the Halifax Presbyterian College at which he completed his studies in 1888.

Teaching school before his ordination, he went to his first charge at Marion Bridge, N.S., later serving at Moncton, N.B., Pembroke, Ont., St. Andrews, N.B., Halifax and Belleville. He resigned the Brockville charge recently, his resignation to take effect in September.

Daughter of Discoverers of Radium Seeks to Recover Minerals of Group

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—Madame Curie Joliot, daughter of the famed discoverers of radium, is at work on ores from Canada's Great Bear Lake radium deposits, it was disclosed here today by P. S. Friend of Port Hope, radium physicist who arrived in Ottawa to speak before the Society of Chemical Industry.

Her objective is the development of commercial methods for the recovery of other minerals of the radium group, particularly radium D, which has now just been produced industrially, Mr. Friend said.

Radium D is now found in the lead which is separated from the ores during the process of extracting radium of medical use. Polonium, another radio-active element, also discovered by the Curies, is likewise present in Canadian pitchblende but has yet to be produced on a commercial scale.

DEATH TOLL IN WRECK NOW 31

COOLER WEATHER IS IN OFFING

First Day of Summer Was Genuine In Every Respect

Temperatures of 75 and 85 degrees across the country greeted summer officially today. The first day of summer was genuine in every respect.

Extremely warm weather that prevailed in the prairie provinces yesterday lingered off slightly. Showers today indicated cooler weather tomorrow.

But in the east prospects were for continued high temperatures at least another day.

Era Most Rapid Expansion Of Field Crop Acreage Past; 4.7 P. C. Annual Increase

Two Factors To Limit Acreage, Retirement of Land From Production In Arid Areas And Reduced Fertility, Canadian Chemical Association Members Are Told

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—Total area devoted to field crop production in Canada will probably be stabilized at about 80,000,000 acres for some time to come, Dr. L. E. Kirk, Dean of the Department of Agriculture, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, said in a paper prepared for delivery today to the Canadian Chemical Association in the second day of its convention here.

Dr. Kirk discussed trends in Canadian crop production in a symposium held on Canadian natural resources and their development by chemical research.

Analysis of the statistics of field crop acreage from 1870 to 1930 indicates the period of most rapid expansion is definitely past, said Dr. Kirk. In how years the rate of increase in field crop production averaged 4.7 per cent annually, during 1930 there had been a steady decline in the production of wheat, oats, bar... and rye. Wheat and barley decreases were accounted for largely by two factors.

"Increase in acreage will be limited by two factors; the probable retirement from production of much land in the arid areas and the reduced fertility of the wooded land now available for cultivation on the southern fringe of settlement," he said.

Canada would use 286,000 tons of fertilizer in 1938 but only 2,000 tons will be used on the prairie provinces. Future use of fertilizers will be to maintain fertility rather than to produce tremendously enlarged yields, he predicted.

CITY COUNCIL TO CONSOLIDATE AND REVISE BY-LAWS

Work Will Be Completed By Nov. 1st At a Cost of $1,300

At a cost not to exceed $1,300, the by-laws of the City of Belleville will be consolidated and revised according to a recommendation introduced by Alderman McLean Hale and unanimously adopted by the council at their regular session held on Monday evening in the City Council Chamber. It was shown there are some 2,400 by-laws on the files of the City Clerk and they have not been revised for a period of forty years. The recommendation passed by the council was "that whereas the by-laws, of the City of Belleville have not been consolidated or revised for about forty years and whereas the total number of said by-laws approximate 3,400 and whereas it is considered desirable by the facility of City official, and the more efficient consolidation of future council, it is recommended that the City Solicitor be instructed immediately with a consolidation and revision of the existing by-laws of the City of Belleville as a cost not to exceed $1,300, said cost to include all disbursements and any clerical assistance required. It is to be understood and agreed that such revision and consolidation is to be completed and ready for printing not later than November 1st, 1938. It is further recommended that the committee consisting of Aldermen Hale and Wills remain as constituted to work in conjunction with the City Solicitor and report back to council as circumstances from time to time warrant." There was no discussion on this important matter, the members apparently having fully considered the question in committee.

KIWANIS JUNIORS TO MEET NAPANEE

Neither Team Has Lost a Game In League Schedule To Date

Riding on the crest of two consecutive victories in the Quinte Junior Baseball loop the Belleville Kiwanis face their initial baseball acid test, when they meet Walt Gerrow's Napanee Juniors at the Fair Grounds on Thursday in a twilight fixture.

To date neither team has met with defeat within their loop, Belleville having won two games at the expense of the Picton kids, while Napanee's lone league victory came from the same angle. On paper both nines seem to be apparently rather evenly matched, according to their respective victorious scores over the lowly Picton kids.

Coach Leo Barrett has two tried and proven hurlers at his disposal in Joe Kelleher and Bert Noakes, the latter being a left-hander. Kelleher won handily over Picton on the home lot, while Noakes was the winning pitcher upon the return game.

The quality of junior baseball has been considerably increased within the Bay of Quinte area within the past few years and with the keen interest being exemplified between the Belleville and Napanee juniors during the past two seasons a key baseball game can be assured the local fans on Thursday evening at the Fair Grounds. The juniors of today are the seniors of tomorrow which should command the interest and attendance of the patrons.

MANY SPECIES OF BIRDS HEARD

Scarlet Tanager, Mourning Doves And Cuckoos Heard

Marmora, Ont., June 21—(Special)—The throaty music of the rare Scarlet Tanager, rare Southern songster, provided a brilliant musical background to the plaintive notes of mourning doves and the chirpy calls of black-billed cuckoos here over the week end, according to Messrs. R. I. Gale, W. W. Fraser, of the local High School staff and G. Mc-Elwain of Glen Millar.

The trio ran across the tanager while on a walking tour of the Crowe Lake Road. Search for its nest was unavailing although near where the scarlet beauty, its black wing-tips showing in vivid contrast against the brilliant red of its body plumage, sang its song, a nest containing black-billed cuckoos was discovered.

Mourning doves in quantities greatly in excess of those of other years, are frequenting the swamps south of the village.

CROPS APPROACH HARVEST STAGE

Corn And Tomatoes Require Steady Cultivation

The hay's in the meadow, and the strawberries and new peas are yearning for immediate attention; grain is rapidly filling out and corn and tomatoes are at the stage where steady cultivation is necessary for the production of a crop, yet in this flourishing district of ours, with its unemployment problems, people on relief, farmers are experiencing a serious shortage of help, stated here at the Belleville Employment Office today.

Senator Dies

Senator Royal S. Copeland, New York Democrat, and well known medical authority, died in Washington following a long period of poor health. The senator was 68 at the time of his death which was attributed to "general circulatory collapse complicated by a kidney ailment."

revealed this morning.

A number of applications are on file from farmers in the district whose labor problems are gradually becoming acute. Every day brings them to the office in the quest for labor. But the offers of one dollar per day and board seem to offer little inducement to some of the men they have interviewed.

On the other hand, one man refused the offer of twenty-five dollars per month for three months but accepted a job with another farmer at one dollar per and his board. This morning, he, this reported story by a man courteously but firmly refused an offer of one dollar per day made by a Sidney township farmer. "The wages are too low", he claimed.

However, serious effects may result if something is not done to remedy the situation, officials of the Employment Service pointed out. Crops will not wait, with the present ideal weather conditions, they are rapidly approaching the harvest stage. Haying is in full swing in some parts of the county with good crops reported in the majority of district.

BASS SEASON TO OPEN JULY 1ST

Inspector Warns Fishermen Not To Take Any Before That Date

Stern warning was issued today by Game and Fisheries Inspector Herbert McCabe to gentlemen of the rod and line who develop a propensity for the succulent bass. It appears that a number of Isaak Waltons who have accidentally hooked bass while on fishing expeditions have neglected to throw the finny beauties back into their natural habitat, or have quietly refused to wait until the law fires the starting gun on the bass season.

In order to check and restrain some of the exuberant laddies who crave the excitement of bass fishing before the official season starts on July 1st., additional deputies have been sworn in to assist the various game inspectors in restraining the over-zealous fishermen.

As a matter of fact, the genial inspector stated more emphatically today that drastic measures will be taken to curb the practice, and in the event of any of the lads being found with the bass in their possession or using tackle for the express purpose of luring the green and black beauties to their dinner tables, they will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

Infractions of the law have been numerous in the vicinity of the Inland lakes of the district, Inspector McCabe said, with a knowing look in his eye, and orders have been given out to curb and check the practice.

"These fellows seem to forget that the season does not open until the first of the month," he said, "and although in some cases the boys claim they thought the opening of the "limpy season, that occurred last Monday, to be the signal for invasion of the bass haunts, also, this excuse won't be tolerated after today".

STRAWBERRIES AT 3 FOR 25 CTS.

Retain Size And Flavor of Earliest of Crop

There seems to be little doubt now in the minds of city housewives that the quality of the first crop of local strawberries was not figurative "flash in the pan". Quantities of the luscious fruit that appeared on the city market today, were of the same size and sweetness that characterized the first crop of two weeks ago.

Prices however, are still showing a tendency to decrease, the fruit selling at ten cents per box this morning with three boxes for twenty-five cents being offered in some quarters during the late hours. With some canning factories of the district contracting for quantities of the fruit at a price unable to be learned today, prices may stabilize within the next few days, one veteran stated.

New peas in small quantities were also offered for sale today with pints quoted at twenty and twenty-five cents each. These quotations however will likely decrease by Saturday, as the new crops of the district are rapidly approaching the harvesting period.

Home grown cabbage, fresh from the fields and gardens of the district, led imported celery in a race for public favor this morning selling at eight and ten cents per head to a briskly buying market.

Spring onions, lettuce, spinach, radishes, old potatoes and other vegetables were available today in fair supply, and orders have been given to meet this season.

New potatoes were fairly plentiful and are gradually pushing the 1937 variety from the market pedestal. They were offered today at two dollars per bushel, with smaller lots offered at practically the same quotations as on Saturday. The old potatoes, however, were available and were quoted from eight to five cents per ninety pound bag.

Police Blotter

Employees of the local branch of the Bell Telephone Company reported the loss of a kit of tools to the police last evening. The kit of tools had fallen from the rear of the company truck, it is believed.

Fender and radiator damage resulted from a minor accident on Victoria Ave., yesterday. Aubrey Fawcett, Ontario motorist, was driving westerly on Victoria Ave., when he stopped his motor car in order to permit another automobile to move from the street curb. Following Mr. Fawcett was another motor car driven by Allen Noakes of this city. The latter car collided with the rear of Mr. Fawcett's vehicle when the latter stopped with the bulk of the damage resulting from the impact being done the Noaker car about the radiator and front fenders, Motorcycle Officer Doug Ellis reported.

Cobalva police reported the theft of a 1937 black Buick sedan early today. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 689-H-3 when it was stolen.

GERMAN AUTOS

tlself, it is claimed, the same cars sell for the equivalent of $146 at the standard rate of exchange. It is estimated the actual billing price for a car to the British importer is between $55 and $80.

The threat to the British motor industry is described as "vital". On the basis of 1937 German imports, it is estimated 4,000 workmen were thrown out of employment.

Pinch of Competition

Other industries are also feeling the pinch of competition from subsidized imports, which brought the following statement from M. Tubbs, Secretary of the Wholesale Fashion Trades Association:

"There is no doubt that a cleverly camouflaged subsidy scheme is employed by German exporting houses. The sooner special measures are adopted for dealing with an exceptional emergency, the better will it be for British trade."

To meet the situation the Empire Industries associates is urging the government to invoke the relevant sections of the Finance Act of 1925 which gives the authorities power to value any article in accordance with the "price it would fetch in a sale in the open market."

Annual Meeting of East Hastings Women's Institutes

An interested assembly of Institute workers met, for their annual district meeting, at the Council House on the Tyendinaga Reserve, on June the 16th.

The District President, Mrs. Wm. White of Roslin Branch, presided.

A few introductory remarks by the president were followed by community singing led by Mrs. Harry Harrison with Mrs. Brant playing the accompaniment. The roll call was responded to by the President from each branch, was a suggestion for next year's district annual.

Some of these suggestions were: "A demonstration on any project taken during the year".

"A display of home-made useful articles".

"A contest".

"An exhibit of Girls' Work".

The District Secretary, Mrs. Noble Bowers, was asked to read the minutes of last year's District Annual which was held in Front Road Methodist Church with an attendance of 122.

Mrs. Edwin Harvey gave a humorous reading.

Following this, the reports of the various standing committees were given as Mrs. Geo. Connors, Quinte Branch, reported on "Health". One branch had an especially good program on this subject viz: Mrs. Noble advocated their meeting speaking on fresh air, exercise and sunshine. A nurse-in-training demonstrated artificial respiration and "First Aids" were given by a chemist.

Mrs. Edwin Harvey reported on Home Economics.

Mrs. W. Elliott, District Convener for Agriculture, reported on this subject.

Mrs. Pill of Mohawk Branch, reported from four branches on Historical Research.

After the reports a musical number was given by Audrey and Shirley Phillips, two little girl friends of Phillipston Xion branch.

The report of Publicationism was then given by Mrs. A. Waddingham.

Mrs. Carl Clarke gave a lengthy report on "Relief" and Community activities. Every branch had done five quilts, four of which had been sold and proceeded used for relief, the other one donated to a needy family. Mohawk Branch had exhibited at their Fall Fair and sold their quilt for over thirty dollars. Roslin reported an interesting evening meeting when the Harvest Feast put on the program.

The Press convener reported on this subject as having been taken up in five of the seven branches of the district. Local clergymen gave addresses at four of the meetings. The above reports were adopted on following which a solo was rendered by a member from Tyendinaga East Branch.

Continue Girls' Work

Miss Pollard, who has charge of Girls' Work for the district, took a short time to outline the work she has to offer girls who desire to form "Home-making Clubs". Three types of work are suggested — sewing, food and home furnishings. All girls from 10 to twenty-five years of age are eligible. Knowledge gained from these projects is really needed in rural and Institute Branches are asked to use their influence, and funds, to help girls of the district take advantage of the opportunities offered them by the Institutes Department of the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture. Miss Pollard mentioned that two girls from the Mohawk Branch had attended the Girls Conference held in Guelph in May of this year and she suggested that the district might take as its project the sending of a couple of girls to this annual conference. She also asked that the district appoint a convener for Girls' Work and when the election of officers took place, Miss Lily Wesee of Melrose Branch was elected.

After Miss Pollard's remarks although the forenoon program has not been completed, notice was given that dinner would be served, and the ladies were invited to the spacious dining hall in the basement of the Council House, where an appetizing meal was spread by the ladies of the Mohawk Branch under the capable leadership of Mrs. H. J. Eade, wife of the Indian agent.

During the noon intermission many observed the surroundings, noting the pleasant location of the Council House and Fair Grounds, overlooking the Bay of Quinte. A number visited the building where the "seed-cleaning" equipment has been installed and were given some information regarding its use by the Indian agent, Mr. Eade.

Tribute Paid to Deceased Members

The program following the noon-day lunch an impressive memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Ben Hayes assisted by Mrs. Tufts, for the deceased members during the year and for Mrs. Gordon, who has been present at the 1937 annual.

A cross of cedar boughs stood on the table and for each one deceased a flower was placed in it by Mrs. Hayes. After each name, Mrs. Tufts read a portion of a poem. Seven flowers were added in all, one for each of the following: — Mrs. Colloton; Mrs. W. Waddingham; Mrs. J. Garbutt; Mrs. Tennison; Mrs. Jas. Phillips from Phillipston Xion Branch, a charter member; Mrs. W. Ketchesen; Mrs. C. Ketcheson,

Miss Collins sang "Unto the Hills around I do Lift up, My longing eyes" to conclude the ceremony.

Afternoon Session

About 1.30 the afternoon session opened with an address of welcome by Mrs. B. H. Hill. Every courtesy had been shown on previous visits, but Mrs. Hill assured us it afforded them much pleasure indeed to entertain, for the first time, the Institutes of the district.

Miss Lily Wesee in responding to this welcome, congratulated them on their progress and example, and on behalf of all visiting branches thanked them for their invitation and efforts to make things so pleasant for their guests.

Miss Jones from the Department of Agriculture, presided during the election of officers which followed.

Co-operative Programme Planned

Miss Collins was called on to present the District Programme and strongly recommended its use. The Branch directors were asked to review the suggested list of projects to be presented this year and a majority voted in favour of "Meal-Cookery". So the District Secretary will make application for a training school in meal cookery to be held one day in January and one day in February in the Front Road Hall.

Miss Blanche Reid gave a pleasing solo after which Mrs. Fred Denyes, Federated Member for this area, who called for a report of the district what she had gleaned from her attendance at the meetings of the Federation.

It had been a wonderful privilege to be present at this meeting as in the past two years and the personal friendships formed will mean a great deal to her. One regret was that she had been able to do so little for the area.

Work of the Federation

Mrs. Denyes spoke of the Federation and what it does.

It gives a grant to the Area Convention.

It gave $500 to the Dominion Federation, it gave $50 to the A.C.W. of the World.

It gave $12 toward the upkeep of the "Peace Garden".

It assumes half the cost of "Home and Country".

It financed the song sheets and hand books. Here she recommended of to haVe and study the handbook.

Federation send, Provincial chairman to the Area Convention.

Finally it puts out good relief transportation to Putnam Relief Fund.

The Federation is separate from the department but although two separate bodies they co-operate.

Regarding the $1 grant members are asked to apply for it only at intervals, not each successive year.

Money raised by an organization with the standing of the Institutes, should not be done by questionable means.

Organizations have no right to circularize the Institutes so any requests in future must first be sanctioned by the Dept. of Institutes, Miss McDermand.

Mrs. Denyes urged everyone to secure and use the travelling library. Each Institute member is asked to procure and study the new course of study for the schools.

The Provincial Health Convener urged an active health examination for both children and adults.

The Peace Convener sent greetings had come from South Africa also from Scotland and Wales on the first "International Peace Day".

Two hundred and fifteen dollars have been spent for flowers for the Institute plot in the Peace Garden.

Mrs. A. E. Walker has donated a hundred dollars for a sun dial to be placed on the Institute plot.

In speaking of Agriculture every farmer is asked to have a twelve acre wood lot if not, already, begin reforestation.

Regarding the Canadian Industries, Mrs. Denyes mentioned the fact ninety percent of the buyers be women so we have need to educate ourselves as to what and how to buy.

Mrs. Denyes said in conclusion and extended her best wishes to her successor and asked for loyal co-operation for her.

The president informed the ladies that Mrs. Gilroy, a former District President, whose name appeared on the afternoon program was at present confined to the hospital by card of sympathy is to be sent her by the District Secretary on behalf of the convention

Gives History of the Reserve

Mr. Eade, Indian Agent, was now called on and he sketched a brief history of the Reserve. He stated he was proud of the Indian people and the progress they had made, proud of the progress their Institute had made in the three years it had been in existence. The Tyendinaga Reserve is the most settled Indian Reserve in Eastern Ontario—most advanced in agriculture.

The Reserve is about 17,000 acres of land, 8,000 suitable for crops. There are about 1,600 people, 1,000 making their living on the Reserve, the remaining 600 elsewhere. There are about 70 miles of roads, three main roads. Nine tractors are owned and operated here.

There are four schools with an attendance of 250. There are three part time doctors and one resident minister, Rev. Mr. Pringle. There are two stone churches, Christ's Church is very historic, having a solid silver communion plate given the Indian forefathers by Queen Anne. Part of this communion service is in Brantford, it was buried during the Revolutionary War, then it was divided, a part being brought here in 1784 by the exiled Indians who were driven from New York State.

The Indians have made a continued advance and it is a pleasure to work with them because of their willingness to work and progress.

Mr. Eade is subject to the temperance of Mines and Resources at Ottawa. He acts as Magistrate for the Indians, records their deaths, births and marriages. He does all administrative work and leads a busy life and only by his efficient help.

Mrs. Parrott sang "A Perfect Day", playing her own accompaniment.

Mrs. Harry Harrison gave a humorous reading after which the National Anthem was sung.

The display of articles made from a yard of cotton added interest to the convention.

The guests left the Council House feeling the Mohawk Branch had furnished ideal accommodations for the District Convention. The Phillipston Xion Branch will entertain the Branches next year.

Delegates attending the District Annual—Mrs. F. K. Hodgen, Plainfield; Mrs. H. Murphy, Melrose; Mrs. J. Blatherwick, Melrose; Mrs. E. L. Emerson, Plainfield; Mrs. W. H. White, Roslin; Miss Alice Wilson, Roslin; Miss Blanche Reid, Roslin; Mrs. J. M. Chisholm, Roslin; Mrs. F. Kimmerly, Tyendinaga East; Mrs. C. Akey, Tyendinaga East; Mrs. Jr. A. DOORS

Trees express the beauty, power and wisdom of God,
But doors are the handiwork of man in wood and steel,
And portray his moods of heart and mind.
The door that opens gently, without restraint,
Bespeaks a kindly warmth within,
But not so the heavy door, o'erlaid with iron bands,
And guarded by attendants in purple, red and gold,
For only stately royalty may enter there,
The mighty, ponderous door of solid steel
Hordes infinite treasures of jewels and gold,
While the forbidding grated gate
Bespeaks imprisoned priceless souls
From whom Hope, Faith and Courage have often fled.
May my door bid a welcome for all,
From without and from within,
Because our loving Father would have it so!

Give Underprivileged Children A Real Holiday This Summer

Country Homes Wanted To Give City Children a Healthy Vacation

TWO WEEKS PERIOD

Locating hundreds of homes within, 150 miles of Toronto where less fortunate city children would be welcome for a two-week summer vacation is the difficult task this week commenced by the Neighborhood Workers Association of Toronto.

Last year over 1100 children were provided with a holiday through this method, and according to F. N. Stapleford, General-Secretary of the N.W.A., the need this year will be more urgent than ever. "Many youngsters are still pale and wan from the effects of last-year's polio epidemic. There are scores of them who, although completely recovered from the disease itself, require many days in the sunshine and quiet of the country. For this group of children we make a particularly urgent appeal," Mr. Stapleford said.

Evidences that the children are well-behaved and do not "mess up the gardens; fight with other children; let out the cows; or frighten the sheep, is shown by the number of repeat invitations that come from country homesteads. Those who write each year asking that the same children be sent to them. Seventy-five such invitations have already been received by the country home department of the N.W.A.

Growing much more rapidly than the invitations, however, is the ever long list of cases where visiting N.W.A. workers report, "It is absolutely necessary that Johnnie or Mary get away for a vacation this summer." Cases reported to headquarters include such facts as:— "Mary is a sweet little girl of 12 with blue eyes and fair hair. She is run down and urgently in need of a holiday. She lives in a district where the noise of the traffic and the smoke of the factories gives her no chance to rest. Her parents are on relief."

Authorities of the Country Home Department prefer children to go on holiday in pairs if possible. Each child is medically examined before leaving the city and transportation is provided by the Neighborhood Workers Association.

The real holiday period of course commences with school closing. There are several groups of preschool children who are writing to leave town at this moment.

Hostesses writing to the Neighborhood Workers Association invariably a child or two for two weeks vacation are requested to include with their invitation a letter from the local clergyman or some well-known person of the community.

Invitations should be sent to the Country Homes Department, Neighborhood Workers Association, 22 Wellesley Street, Toronto.

Cool and delicious!

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 21.—(CP)—A share rise in the Base Metals and the Industrials marked operations on the Toronto Exchange today. The Senior Golds slipped, presumably on further denial of any present intention of Washington to devalue the dollar further. Western Oils also came along to show a preponderance of gains at the close. Volume improved to around 700,000 shares.

Industrial, Base Metal and Western Oil shares continued the advance on Toronto exchange today, supported by an improved market tone in New York and London and higher metal prices, but the Golds turned weak after an indifferent opening and the Senior Oils were well down at early afternoon. Losses for Lake Shore and Dome reached about two points. Cheaper Golds hels better.

International Nickel advanced to 46 for a gain of 1-2 and a new high for the year appeared for Noranda. Hudson Bay, Waite-Amulet, Pend Oreille and Smelters were all strong spots. In the Western Oils Calgary-Edmonton, Okalta and Davies improved. Trans Canadian gained about 20 cents on the strength of the earnings statement. Interlisted Leaders, Brazilian, Ford A, Walkers, Imperial Oil, C.P.R. and several Steel issues moved ahead strongly.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, June 21—(AP)—Profit selling lately barely denied the rallying armor of today's stock market and leading individuals pushed up fractions to more than three points.

There were a few wide gainers. Among these were Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak, up 10 and five points, respectively, at the best, on small turnovers.

Steels, Motors, Coppers and Specialties were conspicuously favored. After an uneven period in the morning, buying broadened in virtually all groups. For a brief interval the ticker tape was a minute behind. The pace slowed later, but quotations were around top levels near the final hour. Transfers were at the rate of about 1,300,000 shares.

MARKET COMMENT

Contrary to the general quiet opening Monday morning, the market yesterday showed considerable strength and activity at the opening. Buying was noted throughout the list and gains predominated both in the Industrials and the mines. No special reasons were available to explain the sudden interest.

The list is acting entirely in accordance with the law of supply and demand and of all the buying noted that the demand has tended to dry up and it has been difficult to pick up any appreciable amount of stock without greatly disturbing the price. The market has a habit of doing the unexpected and as this generally gets under way when least expected.

The list has had so many false starts in the past twelve months, that the average trader is not impressed by a one or two day advance. Stocks will have to register higher prices on good volume consistently for a few weeks at least before the man in the Street becomes stock-conscious again and is willing to take on commitments in a more than luke-warm manner.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, June 21.—Butter and cheese markets had a higher trend in Montreal wholesale trading. Speculative demand continued a strengthening influence on the butter market, while first arrivals of June cheese caused the upward tendency to prices in that division. Potatoes were steady to lower. The egg market was holding steady, with receipts about sufficient for the demand. Poultry was unchanged. Receipts were posted at the Board of Trade as 668 cases of eggs, 799 boxes of butter and 1228 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals. Trading was active in butter and cheese at the Commodity Exchange.

Spot and future butter at the Commodity Exchange were 100 bores at Quebec fresh 92 score at 25 1-4c; 200 at 25 3-8c; 300 boxes of Quebec seconds 38 score at 24 1-4c, and 100 at 24 3-8c. Spot cheese was posted at the close at 25 1-4c to 25 1-2c for Quebec fresh 92 score, 25 3-2c to 25 1-2c; Quebec specials purchased, and 24 1-4c to 24 1-2c for quebec second 38 score.

Graded shipments of eggs were offering on spot; in used free cases at 25 1-2c to 26c for A-large, 24c to 24 1-2c for A-medium 23 1-2c for B and 21 1-2c to 22c for C. Offerings at the Commodity Exchange were 25 1-2c, 24c 23 1-2c and 21 1-2c respectively.

The poultry market was quoted by the retail trade by wholesale jobbing houses as follow; on A-grade dressed stock, B-grade being 1c to 3c per lb less; Turkers, 27-28c; milkfed chickens, 29-33c; selected chickens, 26-30c; selected fowl 19-25.

City Briefs

Cost of oiling and gravelling that section of road on Victoria Park now being used by vehicles, which has been suggested lately by many park visitors to end the dust nuisance, is estimated by the public department at $150.

Dairy officials of the New Zealand Department of Agriculture have commended "the spirit moving members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers Association in staging the British Empire Cheese Exhibition" to be held in this city next fall, but it is doubtful if any cheese for regular consumption will be shipped from there officially, J. L. Irwin of the local Dominion office has been informed through a communication received from W. M. Shepherd, Director of the New Zealand Dairy Division, today. It is pointed out that consignments are sent from New Zealand to the London Dairy Show, and the local entries would thus be a diversion into a market where no heavy sales are registered. "Trade will be New Zealand cheese on display here, however assured Mr. Irwin.

More apples will be grown in this apple section this year than last it is predicted by C. T. Stevenson, local inspector of the Fruit Department of the Dominion Department of Agriculture following a survey of conditions. Conditions have been entirely favorable, it is stated.

Lake fishing so far this season has been poor, and fishermen of the city who are now engaged in the work are barely making expenses, it is generally reported. Trout catches this season have been slim, while netting of other fish has been light.

Mail men of the local office are still writhing their way in puzzled fashion over the addresses of letters being received. This morning a letter addressed 186 Front Street, Opposite City Hall, Ont." was received and promptly sent to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, in spite of the fact no city was mentioned by the Tweed village sender.

Went to See Mother Tot Became Lost

Starting out to visit her mother, who is at present confined to the Belleville General Hospital, little three year old Pat Calberry, St. Paul Street was picked up by a passing motorist near the Children's House of Refuge and given into the custody of the Belleville police this morning. Despite the efforts of a sergeant, two policemen and a newspaper reporter, no definite information of the little tot's identity could be ascertained. Although she was quite confident her name was Mary" at first "Mommy was near the hospital. Escorted in the police car little three year old Pat was taken east as far as Gibson's crossing but when asked where she lived the little lass repeatedly replied "Mommy near hospital." Taken back to the police station and given an ice cream cone by kindly policeman little Pat was later returned to her home when relatives telephoned the police at noon to report her missing from home.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

75

Peony precaution

Perhaps you have noticed that some of your peony buds have developed as they should, but others not only have not grown, but instead have turned brown.

This condition is known as peony decay and such decayed buds should be removed immediately. This Garden-Graph illustrates the appearance of a decayed bud on a peony. When cutting off a decayed bud, take some of the foliage. In fact, it is a good precaution to cut the stalk back eight or ten inches.

Do not neglect to burn the decayed buds, otherwise the disease will infect other nearby peony plants, where it will live over winter and cause more blighted buds in the spring.

The early spireas, golden bells and flowering quince have finished blooming by now, and this there, for is the right time to prune them. Removal of old wood will encourage new growth.

In order to have extra large peony flowers, the plants must be fed. Also see that the plants are given an abundance of water after feeding so that they can assimilate the food.

GAIN ENTRANCE BY FORCING SMALL DOOR

Gaining entrance by forcing open the coal chute door, robbers entered Wotten's ladies ready to wear store over the week end and rifled the cash register. The only money stolen was the small change left in the cash drawer by the proprietor. Police were notified and upon investigation were of the opinion that juveniles were responsible. After forcing the coal chute door from the outside, the robbers slid down the chute into the cellar from where they made their way to the main part of the store and completed their robbery. About $4.00 is believed to have been stolen.

Old Customers Not Enough to Keep A Business Alive

WHILE OLD CUSTOMERS — steady customers — are the backbone of any well-established retail business, they alone cannot be relied upon to make the business grow.

The farsighted merchant realizes the necessity of winning new customers, and uses space in his local newspaper to tell the public the latest news about his goods and his store. Experience has shown that bright, newsy, trustful advertising in the newspapers is the most economical way to make new customers.

Speaker Challenges Statement of Sir Edward Beatty

Ottawa, June 22 (CP)—Opposition to any interference with the present set-up of Canadian Railways was voiced in the Senate Railway Committee by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

Presenting a brief on behalf of the Brotherhood, President A. R. Mosher said: "Instead of tearing up railway tracks, abandoning communities and throwing railway workers out of employment, the railways of Canada should be encouraged to expand their mileage into sections of the country which are now inadequately served and to improve their physical equipment and provide increased opportunities for employment.

"The policy which Canada needs is one of construction, not destruction."

Mr. Mosher contended there is nothing wrong with the physical set-up of the railways or with the policies of railway management. The railways should be permitted

Why the Weather?

By Sir A. E. Thomas, Dominion Meteorological Service

Rainbows . . . These thrill us by their beauty, and many wonder how they are formed. As early as 1311 a good explanation was given. This was developed by Archbishop Antoinden de Dominis in 1611 and later by Descartes. To study the rainbow both used globes filled with water to represent raindrops. Placed in sunlight, there are the primary and secondary bows. They found that for the primary bow light entered the drops and the rays were refracted (bent) upon entering, they were reflected from the back of the drop to the observer and refracted upon leaving the drop. Sir Isaac Newton it was thought that refraction (or bending) actually produced the colors, but he explained that sunlight was composed of all the colors, and that refraction separated them, making them visible.

U.S. Calls for Bids on Warships, New Craft to Cost Forty Millions

Washington, June 22 (AP)—The United States' Navy accelerated its warship construction today under the Pitt-Robinson Act.

It called for bids on four destroyers, three submarines, three fleet tugs, and the propelling machinery for a submarine tender. Upwards of $40,000,000 was involved.

Two of the big sea-going tugs expected to cost $2,078,000 each, were authorized in the act to expand the fleet by 30 per cent. Four destroyers were approved in earlier legislation.

The award of contracts, expected in a few days, will speed up naval construction toward a rate unmatched since Great War days.

BRITISH FREIGHTER TORPEDOED NEAR VALENCIA HARBOR

Boat Sinks With Cargo And One of Crew Is Drowned

TO ENTER PROTEST

Valencia, Spain, June 22 (AP)—Two British ships were sunk just outside Valencia harbor today by a submarine in a continuation of the long series of attacks on foreign shipping in ports of Government Spain.

The 3,054-ton Sunion, British ship formerly of Greek registry, struck by incendiary and explosive bombs, burned furiously for six hours and then settled to the bottom.

Previously the 4,738-ton freighter Thorpeness, shattered by an aerial bomb, had gone down with 7,000 tons of grain.

At the Admiralty crew of 22, inspecting a German observer for the Non-Intervention Committee, were taken off safely.

Flames from the Sunion's burning cargo lighted the whole roads. After torpedoing the Thorpeness, the plane returned and machine-gunned her, splintering the captain's cabin.

Today's attacks brought to 54 the total of shipping attacks on British ships since the Spanish war started — nearly half in the last three months.

All the crew was saved except one Chinese.

The Thorpeness was pierced by the explosive shells in her forward and amid ships with five minutes in 30 feet of water.

Chief Officer Norman Goater of Southampton managed to get away in the boat with 25 members of the crew. The Captain, William Kerbyside and eight others, jumped into the sea.

The seaplane returned later and dropped explosive and incendiary bombs on the 2,054-ton Greek freighter Sunion, firing her cargo. Flames from the ship lighted up the whole road.

Woman on Relief Willing to Sell Cornea of One of Her Eyes for $6,000

Windsor, Ont., June 22 (CP)—Because she is "fed up" at being on welfare Mrs. Annie Middleton, 40-year-old mother of five children, will sell the cornea of one of her eyes to any persons who will pay $6,000. She decided on this course to obtain money after reading of successful operations in transferring the cornea of one person's eye to another in order to restore the sight to the blind visual organ.

"Some people will probably think I'm crazy, but I know what I'm doing," Mrs. Middleton said.

"I can't see any point in raising a family of undernourished children." Mrs. Middleton has a husband and three and a half pounds, underweight. We just keep slipping back more every day. My husband is a baker by trade but he lost his business.

The family has been living for the past seven weeks in a former dance hall over a garage. The abode is one large barren room. The family has been on relief the past three years.

SILENT GUARDS WATCH HOME TO STOP KIDNAPPING

Threats Made Against Baby Son of Countess Reventlow

WATCH AIRPORTS

London, June 22 (AP)—Silent guards watched the residence of Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow from behind locked gates today after reports of kidnap threats against the baby son of the five-and-ten-cent-store heiress.

The Countess merely said she had taken "certain precautions" to guard the child, two-year-old Count Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow, against reported threats. Scotland Yard stood to have remained up until 3 a.m. (6day).

Her lawyer said it was impossible to make a statement at the moment, "for international reasons."

Scotland Yard was said to have taken up ports and airfield watching for the arrival from abroad of a "suspected person."

The main gates of the Woolworth heiress' new home were locked. Several Rolls-Royces patrolled the grounds and tradesmen were subjected to a search before admittance.

Wheeled Around Grounds

Despite the precautions, however, a nurse wheeled the sandyhaired baby around the grounds during the morning. Scotland Yard authorities said they had provided no special guards or other protection, but declared knowledge of a kidnap threat. In March, 1936, a similar threat was born. Reports of similar threats were denied. Lilo Lorraver, a man sentenced to four months' imprisonment for demanding money from the Countess for "exposing" an imaginary plot.

Arsene Lupin Interest

Kidnapping here has been few and far between and usually blundering. Their activities aroused interest last month when a report alleged attempt to abduct Viscount Nuffield, motor manufacturer, philanthropist, and hold him for ransom aboard a yacht.

"Countess Barbara" and her second husband settled in London in November, 1935, after a seven months' honeymoon in Denmark and Italy. They live in a mansion under the gargoyle Prince Alexis Mdivani. They were divorced in Reno, May 31. Reports of the day the following August in an automobile accident.

British Monarch Guarded By 100,000 Frenchmen On French Visit Next Week

By HENRY CASSIDY
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Paris, June 22 (AP)—An army of more than 100,000 men—troops, reserve officers, guardians and police—has been mobilized to protect King George and Queen Elizabeth during their four-day State visit to France next week.

In the minds of those responsible for their safety are two bits of European history—the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria at Sarajevo, the spark that started the Great War, and the assassination of King Alexander of Jugoslavia, Oct. 9, 1934.

24th Anniversary of Sarajevo

Next Tuesday, when King George and Queen travel from Boulogne to Paris, will be the 24th anniversary of Sarajevo. The slaying of the Yugoslav king occurred just after he had landed at Marseille on a visit to France.

As early as February, when the King and Queen accepted President Albert Lebrun's invitation to visit France the first State visit of their reign, the Government started taking precautions. A massround-up was started among foreign refugees.

Millions Refugees Questioned

More than 1,000,000 persons were questioned. A number considered as high as 100,000 were expelled.

Then began the task of raising an army to protect the royal visitors. The Government ordered that 20,000 police be prepared for duty throughout the country. All reserve officers in Paris were recalled as plainclothesmen; the War Ministry assigned 50,000 troops to the task and the Interior Ministry about 10,000 mobile guards.

British authorities approved the plans, leaving the details entirely to the French except for Scotland Yard inspectors who serve as the royal family's bodyguard.

Guard Route Through Paris

The principal problem is to guard the route of processions through Paris. An open, bullet armored automobile with high sides which no bullet could pierce has been made ready. Only the heads and shoulders of the King and Queen will show over the armored sides.

Walls of guards, five men deep, were ordered to line the route over which the car will pass in State drives—a row of troops on the outside, backed by two lines of police and mobile guards and two tiers of reserve officers. All buildings along the route will be searched and guarded by inspectors.

Roofs, basements and subways will be guarded. Planes in wireless communication with police will fly over Paris.

Transvaal Produces One Third World Gold Output in Year 1937

Johannesburg, June 22 (CP-Reuters) — South Africa's total production of gold for 1937 is estimated at the record figure of 11,734,574 fine ounces, one-third of the world's total production, which is estimated at 33,000,000 fine ounces.

The previous production record of 11,558,533 fine ounces was established in 1932. With the exception of 1936 the ounces all the gold produced in South Africa came from the Transvaal, the output of the Witwatersrand Mines being 10,839,241 fine ounces.

The government mining engineer reported: "The significance of this record production lies in the fact that it has been achieved on lower pay limits brought about by the higher currency price of gold."

New records were also established last year in the number of tons treated, the number of persons employed and salaries and wages paid, and stores consumed.

C. P. R. OFFICIAL DENIES MONOPLY WILL BE SEQUEL

Vice - President of C.P.R. Refers To Beatty's Savings Estimate

ARGUES LOWER COSTS

Ottawa, June 22 (CP)—No necessity exists for "public excitement over the alleged consequences of unification of the railways," D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railways, told the Senate Railways Committee here today. Much of the misunderstanding in the public mind was due, he charged, to insidious propaganda intended to stampede the public into any plan of unification necessarily involved the abandonment on a large scale. Mr. Coleman was indisposed but his brief was read by Col. O. M. Biggar, Dominion counsel.

The schedule of line abandonments filed with the committee had been prepared at the behest of the Duff Commission in 1932, Mr. Coleman's statement said.

Erroneous ideas had been circulated that the railways, in the event of uniting the country to the power of a bearing economy; the throwing out of work of thousands of men; the drastic curtailment of necessary services; the risk of adding to the government's obligations on railway account—any of which, said Mr. Coleman, would be a real objection to unification.

COST 6 MILLIONS TO PAY EXPENSES OF WITHDRAWALS

This Amount Would Also Include Cost of Visiting Commissions

SOVIET REJECTS

London, June 22 (CP-Havas)—Application of the agreement reached by the chairman's subcommittee of the non-intervention committee on the withdrawal of volunteers from the Spanish Civil War was held by diplomatic circles today to offer the only immediate prospect of settling that problem and so permitting the Anglo-Italian accord to go into effect.

Despite the strong opposition, attacks on the Liberal platform, there was a wide spread belief that the chairman's subcommittee meets again Friday agreement will be reached on technical questions still outstanding.

The financing of the withdrawal is the principal matter to be discussed. Under the plan to which Britain originally proposed, powers agreed yesterday, the total expenses of sending commissions to Spain to take the names of foreign volunteers and of repatriating them would be about 1,000,000 (6,000,000).

Brunelle Hits Anti-Nationalism

Ottawa, June 22.—(CP)—Statements of "certain provincial Premiers," because of exaggerated importance attached to them, are creating bad feeling throughout Canada, aggravating sectional differences and undermining confidence in the Dominion, Hon. Dr. Brunelle (Lib.-Charlevoix) declared here today.

An attack by Mr. Brunelle on the "anti-National" attitude of provincial premiers at what he termed personally only Premier Duplessis of Quebec, coupled with his demand for abolition of the Senate, led to clashes in the Budget debate in the House of Commons last night.

Playing the role of financial critic for the Conservative Opposition, Hon. Earl Lawson (Con. York West) moved an amendment, which, if it adopted, would defeat the Government. It expressed regret that the government had failed to reduce sharply lighten the burden of taxation.

Speaking for C.C.F.

Speaking for the C.C.F. Party, M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) added to the Conservative amendment the further regret that the Government had not implemented certain tariff pledges laid down in the Liberal platform in 1919. He said he would be interested to see how Liberals would vote on what was, practically, a party issue.

Mr. Brunelle, speaking late in the evening, declared the time has come when it was no longer safe to "treat the anti-National attitudes of certain provincial Premiers, with sympathetic contempt."

Premier Duplessis of Quebec would be select adversary, Mr. Brunelle said, if he bent his energies toward finding permanent constructive employment for the people of Quebec instead of "provoking political quarrels."

SENT TO HOSPITAL FOR OBSERVATION

Committed to the Ontario Hospital at Kingston for mental observation, John Dykes, alias Dr. Wright, Trenton, was today escorted to that institution by Provincial Police. Dykes was apprehended recently in North Hastings by provincial authorities on charges of misrepresentation and fraud, said to have been connected with the sale of certain medicines, while Dykes was also said to have been representing himself as a doctor. He was arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, Northbrook, at Madoc, and later examined by Dr. Dyer, government psychiatrist, who recommended the man be committed to a mental institution. Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and A. A. Stark, escorted Dykes to Kingston today.

COMMERCIAL NETS TO BE TAGGED

All nets owned by commercial fishermen of the district will be tagged in the near future, according to game and fisheries inspectors of the district. Each net will be marked with a number and a seal. It is understood while yardage will be unrestricted in total, there is limited nettage will be allotted to be used at one time.

New restrictions will be rigidly enforced, according to the inspectors.

LARGE AMOUNT OF 'LUNGE SPAWN TAKEN

Ontario this year enjoyed one of its most successful seasons in the matter of lunge spawn collection. It is reported by D. J. Taylor, deputy minister of Game and Fisheries for the Province, who estimates that the department was able to get about 3,000,000 eggs. Most of this spawn that was collected in other years. Altogether about 4,000,000 eggs were secured. Out of this more than 50 per cent were hatched successfully in the Belleville government hatchery. The fish were placed in the lakes of this central and southeastern section, when they were about two weeks old the deputy minister further reported.

CHERRY CROP IN FINE CONDITION

"All the cherry growers of this district need now are warm days, cool nights and some rain at intervals to produce a record crop", remarked Clay Soanes, district horticulturist, who this morning reported a bumper growth already evident on the trees of his district. "Down Belleville way here things look just as good," stated the conservation Brighlonian.

"Picking of the cherries in some of the orchards should start soon as the fruit is well advanced, and growers are already scurrying for possibility of covering their trees with netting to keep off the birds, which have been inspecting the orchards." It was added.

INTERNATIONAL NEIGHBOURLINESS SEEN ON HIGHWAY

International neighborliness was exemplified on No. 2 Highway just west of the city limits this morning where two large cars, one bearing licence plates of the State of Texas, and the second one of the state of British Columbia were observed drawn up together on the side of the road, while the male occupants of both machines busied themselves replacing a tire on the car of the United States visitor.

While this was being done, the women passengers sat in the shade sharing sandwiches and the contents of thermos bottles.

The same cordial fraternity was shown between a small Pekingese dog and a wire-haired terrier born from the different cars when finally ad happily while the tire exchange was being completed.

One sixth of a mill lower than last year, and claimed to be the lowest since 1914, Prince Edward Co. Council struck tax rate of 8 and one-third mills in session in Shire Hall, Picton yesterday.

The low rate was made possible by the Province assuming the entire cost of Mothers' Allowance and Old Age Pensions, representing a comparatively lower levy by the council amounting to $4,382.06.

The sum of $34,000 is being spent on county roads, $413.00 less than last year. The rate levied this year will raise $85,000 as against $87,500.00 of a year ago.

City Briefs

Bathers of the city are finding the water of the bay and harbor almost too warm for comfort lately. Official temperature readings of the bay taken at the city pump house show a water warmth from 70 to 71 degrees during the past few days.

Tourists are at present in the district in as large numbers as ever, but the majority of them are not carrying their fishing tackle, it is indicated by the slowness of sales of non-resident fishing licences at the local office. Only a few have been given out, in contrast to the excellent business reported over the same period last season.

A feminine scream attracted the attention of scores of bathers on Victoria Park yesterday afternoon. Hastening to the wall of the park, Lifeguard Sennat discovered a pretty girl in after bathing clothing in the head of a huge turtle washed up on the edge of the stone, dead for but a short time. The fair bather had stepped on the monster's back of the turtle, believing it to be a stone.

Following the erection of new and suitable signs and the repainting in the proper direction on the highway in and out of the city, at the Front and Bay, Dundas Streets corner by the Department of Highways, tourists no longer find themselves halted by the dead end at the government dock, believing south Front Street to be a continuation of the highway east. Painting of broad white bands leading around the corner on the road by the city has also helped greatly.

Though considerable interest has been aroused over the discovery of the new variety, its plantings in the Jan Rin tomato have been small. It is believed by local agricultural offices. Seed and plants of the new tomato are reported extensively used in Quebec.

One of the first catches of lunge reported in this district since the opening of the season comes from Mrs. C. Trembel, Toronto visitor, managed to land a fine 15-pound muskellonge. Other smaller catches also were reported there. The fish appear, however, to be non-existent in the Bay of Quinte, according to local anglers.

Shipments in and out of Belleville by water so far this season are slightly heavier than for the same period one year ago, it is estimated by Harbormaster Jos. Waddell, following a fire, period check-up this week. Cheese loadings have been lighter, but other commodity cargoes has been of little heavier volume.

Containing names of tourists and summer resort owners, with a description of their properties from points as far distant as north of Marmoth and Oak Lake in the immediate district, a supplement list of tourist accomodations has been urged by the City of Belleville and County of Hastings and is now ready for distribution. The list contains also names and addresses of summer tourist homes along the highway just east and west of the city.

Orono, Me., June 22 (CP)—Canada is facing to an increasing extent the conflict between these two systems, Prof. H. A. Innis of Toronto said in an address prepared for delivery here today to a conference of leading educationists of the United States and United States and Canadian-American relations.

"An old system linked her to Europe by a geographic background dominated by the St. Lawrence River and by the effects of the efficiency specialization under free trade," he said. "This system linked Canada to the United States and is evident in the increasing importance of exports from Canada to the United States."

Head of the Department of Political Economy of the University of Toronto, Prof. Innis discussed "economic trends in Canada-American relations." Canada and the United States, he said, were subjected to the whirlpool of common points of conflict. "We are in conflict particularly in the Maritime regions of taking for granted a common point of view."

It is from those Maritime regions that Canada has been governed throughout the continent," Prof. Innis added. "It is not an accident that Canadian leaders from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have been the chief exponents of the federal constitutions of Canada and the United States.

Conflict of Two Systems.

The conflict between the two systems has continued and the Canadian claim becomes more intense. "The development of nationalism increases the burden of tariffs and fixed charges, precipitates regionalism and enhances the importance of the provinces. Particularism leads to decline in national loyalties and to increase in imperial loyalties.

"The instability of the Canadian political system and economy reflects the effects of rigidities and and reflects the relations between the European and American systems. It increases the weakness of Canada as a political unit in relation to Europe.

"The founding of Nationalism, the strengthening of regionalism and the stress on Imperialism increase Canada as the weak link in the North American structure — the Achilles heel in North American isolation. Outbreaks of war in Europe involving Great Britain involves Canada and in turn sooner or later the United States."

In the United States, the United States must consider particularly the effects of any change in Canada without benefit of political representation. Prof. Innis continued, "Whether the United States agrees or not, its monetary and tariff policies are largely the monetary and tariff policies of the North American continent and of Canada," he said.

Police Blotter

While moving away from the curb directly in front of the Capitol Theatre early today, a car being owned truck struck the marquee, in front of the theatre, damaging the same to a considerable extent. The Neon lights were also put out of commission during the impact. Police were informed of the incident, and a description of the truck, which is alleged to have driven away after striking the over-hanging marquee.

Activities were somewhat quiet and serene in and around local police circles during the past 24 hours, nothing of a serious nature being reported. Five transients were afforded shelter in the police station cell block last evening, however.

The report recommended a three-man commission to replace the superintendent and three inspectors now managing the penitentiaries under the Justice Minister. The commission in addition would act as a Central Parole Board and administer remissions and tickets-of-leave, now separate branches of the Justice Department.

Retirement of Major General D. M. Ormond, Superintendent and Treasurer from the Penitentiary Service of Inspector J. D. Dawson was urged in the report.

No mention was made in the resolution of General Ormond or Mr. Dawson and details of the bill will not be known until it is introduced in the Commons.

Several Questions Listed

T. A. Thompson (Con. Lanark) listed several questions on the votes and proceedings dealing with the prison probe.

He asked i file evidence heard by the Royal Commission was taken under oath, all of it, was any assurance given any witness that evidence would not go on the official record; will the evidence be printed; was General Ormond, before giving his evidence, furnished with copies of evidence previously taken and was he permitted legal counsel.

WILLIAM V. PETTET (Picton)

A colorful link of the political and municipal chain of Prince Edward County events of years ago disappeared yesterday when William V. Pettet, one of Picton's highly esteemed residents, died in Kingston General Hospital, where, he had been a patient for the past ten weeks.

Former representative of his county in the Ontario Legislature as a member of the old Patrons of Ontario party, the late Mr. Pettet was a farmer residing in Hallowell Township, where he lived on the homestead of his pioneer forefathers.

Chosen for the party headed by the late Joseph Haycock, he was successful at the first election, but was defeated when he sought re-election. In 1908 he was appointed Registrar of Deeds, a position he held for six years.

He held the rank of major, having served with distinction overseas in the old Bay of Quinte regiment. He was for many years secretary of the Prince Edward Liberal Association, member of the Oddfellows and served on the Hallowell Council. Surviving are his widow, and one son, George, in Montreal.

The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. F. D. Clintock, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church, assisted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

At the close of the service the funeral cortege proceeded to Ivanwood Cemetery, Picton, where interment was made. The service there was conducted in the chapel at the cemetery by the Rev. D. T. McClintock, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Durland Morden, pastor of the United Church of Picton, and the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

Pallbearers were Messrs. R. H. Calnan, William James Calnan, Melvin S. Calnan, nephews of the deceased, and Oral Calnan, Grayton Calnan and Raymond Calnan, nephews of the deceased.

Police Apprehend Juvenile as He Is Leaving Store

Apprehended as he was leaving by a taxi driver, a group of Belleville ladies ready to wear store early before 9.00 a.m. by P.C. Taylor, 14 year old lad was detained by police for further questioning today.

While patrolling his beat early this morning P.C. Taylor observed entrance had been effected into the rear of Wotten's store and immediately commenced investigation. It is believed the youth was trying to escape, when he dashed out of the building directly into the arms of the alert officer. Although the boy struggled and put up a surprisingly strenuous combat in an effort to release himself, he was easily but firmly subdued the lad and took him to the police station.

Police have been confronted with a series of minor robberies lately, but the downtown arm of late but believe in Constable Taylor's alert apprehension of the lad may in custody a long-awaited clue has been afforded the police in solving these breakins. Other juveniles are believed to have been accomplices in previous breakins and robberies, police are convinced.

The boy apprehended this morning was detained at the police station for further questioning and will be remanded to appear in juvenile Court on charges later this week.

RAILWAY SHOULD

and profitable if Canada's entire economic system was functioning properly.

Reorganize Economic System

"In the opinion of the Brotherhood there can be no final solution of the problem of industry and of the railways until the present economic system is re-organized in such a manner that every citizen will be able to obtain employment and ten sufficient income to maintain himself and his dependents with work, leisure, and products equitably shared."

The Brotherhood suggested three lines of investigation which the committee might profitably follow. They are:

"1. The possibility of reducing the rate of interest on the Canadian National Railway Indebtedness. This would place the burden on those who can bear it—the bond-holders—rather than upon the railway employees who cannot do so.

"2. The regulation of competitive forms of transport. Not only in Canada but in many other countries, it has been found that unregulated highway transport, by taking from the railways commodities on which comparatively high rates had been paid, have cut deeply into railway earnings. But railway rates are subject to competitive regulation, while highway transport, as well as transport by water and by air, have been almost wholly unregulated.

"3. The increase of passenger and freight rates, in such a manner as to permit the railways to earn a reasonable rate upon their capital investment.

Definite Policy

"The Canadian Government has adopted a definite policy of maintaining low rates on certain basic commodities in order to promote export trade; as has the United States. Rates charged in other countries were charged in Canada there would be no railway problem as such, but it has been considered desirable to keep the freight rates low and to make up railway deficits directly out of taxation."

Concerning the proposal to raise railway rates, Mr. Mosher said that "raising rates would dislocate industry generally and perhaps ruin some industries; nevertheless, raising rates is a possible solution of the financial problems of the Canadian Railways, which should be taken into consideration."

Brotherhood challenged statements made by Sir Edward Beatty, Canadian Pacific Railway

President, which gain assurance railway staffs would be treated under unfair conditions without hardship to the workers.

Contending that the reduction in railway employees would be 32,000 during the Beatty plan, of unification the Brotherhood continued: "Thirty-three thousand workers, following three dependents each, would equal the population of Ottawa at the last census. How can it be inferred that a process which, if feasible, would withdraw the means of livelihood from 132,000 people, be a 'painless' one."

Competition Unfair

Mr. Mosher said that motor transport competition with railroads was unfair and the problem of regulating it demands as much attention as the problem of regulating competition between railways. Unified management of numerous motor vehicle companies and operations may be out of the question, but it is possible to make public regulations controlling standards of operation, character of service and rates, which would eliminate the dependable aspect of the competition of motor vehicles with railways."

Mr. Mosher said that the contention Canada must be saved from the consuming peril of a railway financial burden has little appeal to the workers, "especially as the proposal in addition is designed to reduce their opportunities of earning a livelihood."

Little Ye Less

Under unification the Board of Directors would undoubtedly be believers in private enterprise rather than public enterprise. Hence, the Board would be inclined towards policies calculated to enable the C.P.R. properties to make a better showing than the C.N.R properties.

"The C.P.R. has little to lose and something much to gain. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether the C.N.R. has anything to gain, while it has much to lose. Although the unification plan is urged on the assumption that Canada is facing years of business depression or even retrogression, it is permissible to hope there is still enough vitality and energy in the country to produce a new era of prosperity and progress."

TAX RATE LOWERED

A reduction of 3.4 mills from last year's tax rate is welcomed, easing the tax situation for the present year. Chairman of Finance, Alderman Thomas Y. Wills, explained the reasons for the lowered rate which is the lowest since the year 1929. The present council, according to Ald. Wills, was responsible for little of the reduction, as over ten thousand seven hundred dollars was a surplus from last year, of which $7,000 was due to conditions more favorable than estimated in regard to unemployment and as other savings last year went to make the $10,704 surplus. Ald. Wills also explained that this year the city is not loaded with the cost of old age pensions and mothers' allowances, now borne by the Provincial Government. Last year the first three months' charges on these were charged to the city meaning seven thousand dollars. This year the Board of Education cut its estimates $7,200, Ald. Wills claiming that this was not due to any drastic economies but because the board entered the year 1937 with an overdraft of $6,000 caused by government legislation changing the date at which the amounts due for county pupils' attendance were payable. All, Ald. Wills explained that $24,000 of the reduction in the annual levy or two and fourtenths mills, is due to such conditions, a reduction which he said "has been purely a fortuitous circumstance as far as this council is concerned." Ald. Wills noted changes from last year, decreases in estimates for hospital indigents and Children's Aid and increase in assessment which have amounted to paring the mill down.

Mayor Bone claimed that too much credit was given past councils and that he, by his efforts, had stirred up public opinion, that he believed that another mill could have been cut from the estimates he called ample. He expressed the belief that the surplus of the Hydro should redound to the citizens and that such could be had if the council and he received the full support of the citizens.

Ald. Haig congratulated the council and the chairman of the executive and finance on their efforts to reduce the tax rate.

Citizens have every reason to be pleased with the reduced rate which has been accomplished through conditions and the efforts of past and present councils in the trying times of the past few years.

3.4 mills rate reduction means a considerable saving on the total tax bill and as the efforts of the council shows, every effort has been made to do justice to departments so that there might be no false economy which would only bring its retribution later. In this regard it might be told how much it would be to starve such a department with a result of depreciation of service in the course of time and in the final event larger appropriations.

AT GLASGOW EXHIBITION

Empire Exhibitions such as that at Glasgow provide a show window for the products of the Empire for the Empire and for whatever other part of the world is interested.

Shrewd advertisers have always been great fetes of nations for around the exhibition there grows up a fraternity of interest which speaks for good relations and friendship and trade.

Major Chas. Johnson, Trade Commissioner for Canada in Scotland, a native of Belleville, and a son of the late J. W. Johnson, Ex-M.P.P., tells in the Scottish Trader, the organ of the grocery and cooked meat trade, something of the Canadian exhibits, about the inquiries for Canadian wares and the practical results already achieved.

Montreal Gazette, referring to this article in the Trader, says:

"According to Major Johnson, the firms exhibiting are very pleased with the prospects. During the first eleven days of the fair no less than 32,125 samples were sold, chiefly cheese, apples, canned fruits, vegetables and soups, bacon, honey, maple syrup and sugar, salmon and lobster, tomato sauce, confectionery, macaroni and cheese, ice cream sandwiches, and biscuits, the latter being made of 80 per cent. Canadian flour; whilst Vienna rolls are made entirely of the flour of Canada. The demand created by the sale of these articles was diverted to the shops of Glasgow and other parts of Scotland which stock Canadian products. The possibilities of increased sales as a result of this distribution of samples may be estimated from the fact that in the first eleven days a total of 1,038,319 people visited the Exhibition, as compared with 476,999 during the same period at Wembley.

One of the striking features of the Canadian Pavilion is a gigantic map of Canada in burnished copper, covering an area of 1,000 square feet. This vividly illustrates the Dominion's resources and varied enterprises. Mining centres, cities, aerodromes, power plants and Mounted Police outposts are marked, and by pressure of a button the visitor may illuminate any point of interest. The officials in charge of the Canadian Pavilion comprise, in addition to Major Johnson, C. O. Currie, Exhibition Commissioner, and J. M. Byer, Assistant Trade Commissioner, and, of course, members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The article in the Scottish Trader testifies to their efficiency in carrying out their duties."

MIRACLE

'This miracle enough for me
To see brown earth,
When Spring returns with gentle winds,
Give flowers birth.

I marvel every time I hear
A robin's song,
Can aught so full, so rich and free
To earth belong?

What mortal to his fellow-man
Could ever impart
Such melody as that song born
In raptured heart?

Such simple things, brown earth, a bird,
Enough for me;
But thanks I give that every Spring
Such things may be.

IN PRAISE OF TROUT—The motor car has rendered fishing places all too accessible to fishermen, complains John Drayton, of Leigh in London, England, Truth. Only in spots miles beyond the end of the road can the supreme joy of fly-fishing for trout now be experienced. There, not in overweening pride—for who is to say that the solemn hunter of roach in the Thames is not the better man?—but in thankfulness that fortune has given him an abiding pleasure, the trout-fisher can exercise his skill, great or little, to the top of his bent. It is a game only for the patient, the inactive and elderly? Nonsense. When every cast may 'rise' a monster trout, what need of patience is there? Each moment is an adventure. When the angler has cleared the alder over-heather and broken ground to his water, and has five miles to cover before supper, need he admit to middle-aged inactivity? And the oldest hand at trout-fishing is still a learner. Whether his pleasure be river or loch, the study of the "lie" of trout, the likely pools or bays, the hours of the "rise", the types of natural fly on the water that the angler must seek to imitate, is never-ending.

FAITHLESS MOTHER

Such is the cowbird. The bird one can see in cow pastures watching for a catch the fly that lights upon the cow and swarm around her. The National Nature News tells us about this most unnatural bird. The female cowbird lays her big egg in the nest of some small bird like a warbler and there abandons it to be hatched and cared for by the nest to hatch and raise. That's the disreputable trick of the European cuckoo. It is impossible that the cowbird maiden is never so happy as when she has several suitors. Then, when she finally chooses her bridegroom, they get married and shortly after her husband deserts her and she never sees him again. Nevertheless she travels about, laying from ten to twelve eggs from April to July in the care of her by-miles apart, in the nests of other real mothers.—Our Dumb Animals.

WHY?

Why is it that when one has a hole in one's sock, right at the big toe, and one orders the sock by the other foot, one still has the hole at the other big toe? Surely the switching process should throw the sock-hole to the side of the little toe.

It's too much for me, I pass it in to other more gifted intellects.—The Passerby.

Perhaps Harvard could endow a year's scientific research scholarship to some worthy and capable individual who could solve the case.—Ed.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

There Are Other Symptoms in Diabetes Besides Sugar in the Urine

As students we were taught that there were two kinds of diabetes. There was the true diabetes mellitus, in which the patient had a big appetite, great thirst, had to pass his urine very often, there was sugar in the urine, and he was losing weight rapidly; and diabetes insipidus or false diabetes in which the patient had the great thirst and desire to pass the urine but there was no sugar in the urine.

The patient with true diabetes (sugar in the urine) usually died in a year or two after the condition was discovered although some were kept alive for a long time by specific diets low in starch and sugar. Just as long as the patient used this extract—insulin—he lived a long life and can go about his work as well as others.

Now that diabetes can be controlled, more interest is being taken in this disease. It has been found that there are many individuals who only discovered that they had diabetes when they were applying for insurance or receiving a generalized check-up from the family physician.

Dr. Reginald Pitt, Wade professor of medicine, Harvard Medical School of Medicine, in Hygeia says: "Approximately one person out of encountered who first consult a doctor because of failure in vision due to the diabetic who gets blind from following some minor accidents such as a boil, carbuncle, or some infection, or because of wearing a shoe too tight, a blister develops which ends in gangrene and loss of a limb, apparently out of a blue sky, carbuncles and boils are to be found that the patient has diabetes." In other words the onset of diabetes is often quite insidious with symptoms.

Because diabetes may come gradually and without symptoms Dr. Pitt suggests that periodic health examination will reveal a number of cases of diabetes which will be detected in time and happily under simple treatment.

FREE PUBLICITY

The Erin Advocate tells of a woman who brought a printing job to that office with a printing job paid for it in cash, and explained that she had called there to get her home town because she had seen the slips of the words in the work always in cash, yet when she went for a job printing elsewhere, she refused the request, and, in a huff, she declared not to give him any more work. He had established a business in her home town, and, as he says, he could not help but be elated to realize that her home-town service likely brought a lot more stuff in her store, always paid cash, and that he had just as much right to it as any other store in the city to make such a request of him. Advertising can be had in no other way as she sold groceries (or whatever it was), but, strange to say, never seemed after a eye-lash in asking for free publicity, but would be ready to pay cash for it. Many people are helping to "fill up the paper" when they send in items, not realizing that they are realizing that an editor can secure ten columns of local news without moving a foot. They also fail to realize that subscribing for a local paper is a help to paper has to sell; that is the advertising revenue which makes the newspaper possible at such a reasonable subscription rate; and that the publisher is entitled to some and deny them to others.—Hanover Post.

AIR DUEL

A duel between a large eagle and an airplane is reported from Addis Ababa. The machine was returning to the capital from a reconnoitering flight in the interior, carrying two British officers as passengers, when it was attacked by an eagle.

A machine-gun was fired at the bird without effect. It flew at the observer, struck and damaged the machine with its wings, and tried to peck the forehead with its beak. Finally it was hit and fell to the ground. The eagle was 11 feet high.

The eagle, which was found by some natives, measured 11 feet 2 inches between the wing tips.—London Times.

PICTURE PROOF

Moving pictures are being taken of drunken motorists in order to arrive at Detroit police station, the police hope. Handcuffs and fists defenders are forced to testify against themselves at the subsequent trial. We are quite sure if some drunks could see moving pictures of themselves when they are in that condition, they would swear off forever. No one likes the idea of being or looking ridiculous and that is inevitable when a man or woman is drunk. The Detroit plan seems to have advantages.—Niagara Falls Review.

The Timber Fire Bug

It is declared in Holy Writ that the poor will always be with us, and it might with equal emphasis be stated that each spring will bring a greater or less number of forest fires in every province of Canada. The extent of these, their frequency, location, etc. often depends upon the character of the season, temperatures, humidity, etc. but much has been and regulations protective and safe-guarding measures that are being developed each year to suppress forest fires, and the efficiency of forestry rangers keep down the spread and damage to the lowest possible degree that little or nothing new can be suggested, except that human nature takes funny quirks.

In one section of Ontario—Sudbury—it was reported recently that rangers had hired twenty-eight additional fire fighters in an attempt to stop three fires which had destroyed approximately 80 acres of bush and grassland. Here was work of a legitimate nature for men at's time when unemployment is altogether too prevalent. From the same source came another dispatch showing how low a conception some folk have of their responsibility and duty to the province or loyalty to the country in which they reside.

This dispatch stated that one benighted and unthinking individual imagine that if they start a fire in the bush it may not do a great deal of havoc and they will be given a few hours or days work in fighting the flames. One would conclude that upon conviction punishment for such an offence even in the past, had been severe enough to wipe out this sort of thing. Apparently not, for a 35-year-old youth in Sudbury, Ont., was given 12 months determinate and six months indeterminate sentence on a charge of wilfully igniting trees. The young man pleaded guilty and told the court the story of setting the fire with the object of getting work for himself. It appears he sprinkled coal oil over the bush near Wisbrod, Ont., and touched a match to it with the expectation of being engaged by the forestry service to put out the blaze. Had not rain interfered, there is no telling what vast damage might have been done. As it was 25,000 logs owned by John Campbell & Sons, lumber manufacturers, Westree, and 450 acres of standing pine, were destroyed. The judge, in summing up, declared that the youthful malefactor had need to go to a reformatory to learn a trade as he had worked only intermittently for several years and had no skill in any calling.

Nearly every year ignorant and wilful offenders are brought before the authorities for setting fire in Ontario and in spite of warnings issued, the danger created and the wholesale havoc are repeated every spring. The question naturally arises: how long will the people of this public domain be adequately dealt with?—Canada Lumberman.

FIVE MEALS

It is a little disconcerting to have a medical man come along at this late day and tell us that we should all eat five meals a day. It is disconcerting because for a couple of years now he has been telling us not to believe that over-eating was a direct cut to the grave and that even three meals a day was a kind of over-indulgence except to manual laborers.

The medical man in question is Dr. Lee Thomas who calls himself a dual convention of the National Office Management Association in Washington. He says that "skips are pernicious," and that missing breakfast or luncheon is dangerous advantage. "The best way men and women can maintain their efficiency as workers," said the health officer of an Assurance Company is to eat five meals a day."

Well, it is not likely that Canadians are going to pay much attention their eating habits on the say-so of one doctor, but it is a relief to find one who is ready to preach a doctrine which upsets all the popular belief about eating, established since the war. We have become a race of lettuce-eaters and arrowroot biscuit munchers because we thought that eating was a sign of refinement and love of intellectual pleasure.

The good doctor was speaking to office management people, it seems and he defended the man or woman who slips out for a couple hours for "a cup of tea or other refreshment."

He or she "is simply responding to the demand of the body for more frequent nourishment," he says. He carries the notion that if five meals a day are to be the accepted office custom, the government ought to pass a law establishing the compulsory "coffee break" of afternoon tea in all offices and workshops—after the manner of the English-Ottawa Citizen.

CAPTAIN'S TOFFEE

An exchange has an editorial speculating on what the steamer Britannia's officers will have presented them at ports where they open the season for navigation. So far as Port Arthur is concerned they trade them back to the Chamber of Commerce for the more delicate pleasures of headgear. The assembly captain who topper has been on many famous boats that it is considered much more worthy honor to have the privilege to have the opportunity to wear it than to exercise it temporarily.— Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Expensive

Ben Bernie, the old maestro, talks a lot about horses, but I think he's keener about golf. He says that when he first took up golf he says that I know of. His idea was to play golf until he was too old into the 60's, and he was serious about this.

Some might guess, the leading pros have got a few laughs out of Ben as they tried to help him with his game. If his teachers could be counted, the number would set some kind of record, for every time I met him during my travels he had just taken a new set of clubs or hitting the ball.

The other day I attended a rehearsal of his broadcast with my friend Lew Lehr. Bernie said, "You're just the man I want to see. You've got to help me with my game." Lew agreed, but in an effort alone determined the score. Old maestro would be in the low 70's at best, but unfortunately he has done what others do, expended himself into the most expensive kind of confusion.

In order to help him, or any other player who experiments to the extreme, I would have to force him to stick with one routine for some time and not permit him to keep changing grip, stance and other parts of his swing every time he went out to play. Experiment in golf may bring joy for a time first, but in time it means only another headache.

CLEEK

Maine still belongs technically to the United States. Senator Minton ought to know that the down-East state is one of those that is getting busy. If he will go to Islesboro and Camden he may be shattering the fairyboat that some theatre that town and Lincolnville he will see a Lincoln Memorial to the memory of a gull named Cleek. Last summer Cleek quit work and decided to loaf. He spends a happy old summer on that ridgepole till the ferry boys left the city for her, Islesboro was ill or decrepit. So between runs they caught fish for her. Every fish they threw into the air Cleek caught unerringly. After a Winter spent somewhere in sunny Florida, Cleek came back to the old ridgepole. Fishermen watches him in the cove. She spots a fisherman, throws a fish in the air and crying "Cleek, Cleek," a fifty it has flown. We needn't so acute a mind as Senator Minton has to have is a subtle parody on saving by spending and crying rich by working less, with those many other gulls, trained by the economics of Herbert Hoover. Economics, it will be going through this symbolic performance, casting contempt upon our new, basic principles. Think Sam and working for Republican prosperity.—Bangor Commercial.

Clearly there is a conspiracy in Maine. Mr. Minton ought to look into it.—New York Times.

ART RECOGNIZED

Walt Disney, creator of "Snow White" and the "Three Little Pigs" "Mickey Mouse," "Three Little Kittens" and "Donald Duck," will receive academic recognition, the 23 when Harvard University awards him the Master of Arts degree. It's about time, too. Though he himself has had no formal training in design he has done more than Disney to popularize higher education. In fact, the whole modern design may be constructed as a free interpretation of the Walt Disney canon, one long parable of collegiate animation.

What is Mickey Mouse but the Eternal Freshman, tried by the vicissitudes of undergraduate but always rising nobly above his environment? The Three Little Pigs, as Paul Elmer Moore pointed out in his magnanimation, represent the three other years of the more or less which in the harsh World Outside and overcoming him by superior cunning. Ferdinand the Bull, Donald Duck, as the name implies, is obviously the typical college Don. Snow White, of course, is Truth herself pursued by the forces of Error. The wicked witch is the busy Alumni, whistling while they work, and among whom she finds refuge. She brings evil into their household and teaches them to whistle while they work. Dopey, the dwarf, is the Greek scholar who is driven to the point of idiocy until the Prince, in whom Mr. Disney has symbolized Dr. Conant, wakes her with a chaste kiss.—New York Times Sun.

BIG BUSINESS

Most people when they stop at a hot-dog stand are content to purchase never appreciate that they are contributing to big businesses. Mr. J. W. Collins, retiring New England trade commissioner to Canada, corrected a wrong impression.

Canada, he states, is New Zealand's best customer for hot-dog casings, having purchased more than $1,000,000 worth of them last year. This places the trade definitely in the big business classification. So, in the future, if you are inclined to criticize "big business," remember that you are attacking the savoury hot-dog industry!—Windsor Star.

June 20, 1938

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bush,

Dear Kenneth and Laura:

We, your friends and neighbors have assembled in your home tonight to welcome you both from your wedding trip and extend to you our good wishes for future happiness and prosperity.

We have known you, Kenneth, from childhood and we have followed your fortunes with sympathy and interest and now in this most important undertaking, namely the beginning of a home, we wish you God speed.

But more especially would we have you, Laura, feel the warmth of our affection and the sincerity of our welcome. While a number of us are not personally acquainted with you, and you are somewhat a stranger as yet, we trust as time marches on we will become better acquainted and that our friendship will increase.

Kenneth, we are glad that you have chosen for your life partner, one who is so highly esteemed, and feel that you are to be sincerely congratulated on your good choice.

May success and happiness crown all your efforts and in life's pathway, whether rough or smooth, may the star of love and trust more and more grow dim on your horizon; as you tread the upper slopes of the journey, may a hand be placed on yours and a voice be heard to say: "Fear not, I will guide thee", and at last as you journey on, may the golden gates stand ajar and the kind voice of the Master say to you "Welcome Thou".

As a tangible proof of our affection and esteem for you, we ask you to accept these gifts as a remembrance of us in the future.

Signed on behalf of your many friends—Burrell Hamilton, Leon McMillen, Marguerite McKelvey and Ruth Spafford.

Mrs. Rew had the discussion for the evening—"The Danger of Sectionalism in Canada". In almost every political speech of national importance, there is some direct or indirect reference to Sectionalism in Canada—that tendency to consider the interests of a small group or area as the expense of the interests of the whole of the Dominion. During the past week, two were noted, Premier Drew as chairman of a meeting representing all political parties said in conclusion that unless loyalty to the Dominion were placed above loyalty to the provinces Sectionalism would prove a real danger in Canada. Hon. Euler also voiced the same opinion.

Mrs. Mills gave excerpts from an editorial, published in the May issue of the National monthly—re "The Task of 'Re-Confederation'". Democracy is in Canada once again on its trial, and the spirit of 1867 needs to be reborn among us.

Miss Ethel Adams gave a most comprehensive review of the difficulties facing the Canadian people.

Nature has divided Canada into four sharply divided areas, Maritime, Ontario and Quebec, Prairie Provinces and British Columbia, with all their differences of interests and traditions, as well as a diversity of race, language, religion and creed. These sectional problems have assumed importance now that it has been realized that economic problems are nation-wide. What we need are far-sighted statesmen, a modern group of Fathers of Confederation, not the parochial politicians whose aims and outlooks are predominant in formation of policy.

We have encouragement in the fact that there is a predominant feeling among Canadians from coast to coast is one of pride in National unity.

There followed a short discussion of the facts as presented under the headings of causes—Geographical, Economic, Political, Racial, Religious and Cultural. Cures —(1) Cultivation of larger patriotism; (2) knowledge of economics; (3) respect for all racial elements and their contributions; (4) Unselfishness — unwillingness to profit at others' expense.

Then came the business of electing the officers, for the coming year. Mrs. Fly Bell was re-elected Visitor and Cultural. "Too bad; she's a nice kid."

"Why she ain't known him long enough to bother. I've known him yet."

Strangely enough the whole storyful of Mathewson's employees took a sort of elderly interest in one another's affairs and exchanged information and instruction on any subject whatsoever. They took public interest in Anna Quinlan's romance, knowing the fact that she had never before been known to bother with the stronger sex. Anna Quinlan was "not for Joe" and her every night.

"Listen, girls," Rosie, head of the Ladies' Underwear attracted the attention of the three workers as they flung their coats and hats on, preparatory to their homeward departure.

"We all know what marriage is, but Anna don't. She's never had one and all of us have been asking once," Rosie's voice dropped.

"I'll fix everything. You girls can do the heavy looking on. Tonight at eight in the corner drug."

That night at 8.30 many shadowy figures could have been seen loitering in the same direction their destination being a slightly dilapidated dwelling on the outskirts of the town. At nine o'clock Rosie and Anna turned into the dim street.

"Is it much further, Rosie?"

"Here we are now, Anna. It sure was nice of you to come so far with me. I kind of hate to have you see poor Alice; she's been having such a hard time. But I promised her I'd come to see her and I hated to come alone."

They entered the dim hall. An odor of cooking met them and was met with the smell of fried onions. Rosie led the way to the rear of the hall and knocked on a door.

"Come in." A weary voice fluttered faintly on the heat-laden air.

The door opened. More smells of soap suds and steam enveloped them.

A little, thin, wispy woman came towards them. Her gray hair straggling across the thin face.

"This is my friend Alice." Rosie performed the introduction hurriedly. Alice bowed; Anna smiled. An awful silence fell on the room. Rosie laughed nervously.

"Well—"

A loud banging interrupted her. Alice started nervously.

"My husband."

A man's angered voice rose noisily from somewhere upstairs.

"Where are you you lazy, good-for-nothing!"

Rosie shrank back and pulled Anna with her. Alice began to weep quietly, The loud voice came nearer.

"Didn't you hear me? I said, where's my new shirt? I want it now!"

Rosie whispered to Anna: "He's this way all the time. Always on the prowl and leaving poor Alice with the kids."

Anna said nothing. Her eyes glistened; she gazed eagerly at the door. The door was very quiet. Rosie pulled her close beside the door just as the door swung open and a tall man stepped into the room. His hair was rumpled, his shirt was among the missing. Its place being taken by one of those rough and ready woolen affairs with cords an inch thick running through it. Suspenders hung ingloriously from khaki trousers and his feet were in his stocking feet.

"Where's my shirt?" he bellowed, and turned to face Anna. His mouth fell open.

"Tom!"

"Ann!"

"Oh...oh..." and Anna went off into gales of hysterical laughter. Rosie blinked; her mind was numb. Tom turned slowly around to Rosie. "What's the big idea making a fool of myself before my girl?"

Rosie found her tongue.

"How do I know she was your girl! You never said you had one."

"A idea for you got me in. Helping you save a poor nice girl from a bad egg. So I'm the bad egg am I?"

"Aw Anna didn't tell us who you was. How did I know you was who you was? Go drop in the corner."

Anna rather weak from laughing, stepped between them.

"Whoa, there. If there's any loving to be done, I ought to be the one to do it. Don't you think so? It was my business you were butting into. Of course I know you didn't mean it for any good. And I thank you for the trouble, but I guess I can manage better than poor Alice."

Later as Anna and Tom walked slowly homeward they laughed again and again over the affair. Then a serious thought struck Anna. She stopped suddenly and turned to face Tom.

"Listen Tommie would you ever shout at me like that when you wanted a shirt?"

"Would you ever let yourself and your home get the way poor Alice was?"

And no more was said.

Women of Moose Hold Installation Ceremony

A beautiful ceremony of the installation of officers was held last evening in the Moose Auditorium, when the officers for the ensuing year were installed. Past Regent Wells was the Grand Installing Officer, Past Regent Bunnett, Grand Installing Guide and Past Regent Parry, Grand Chaplain.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of gifts to the retiring officers. A Past Regent pin and beautiful purse were given the retiring Regent, Mrs. McGuiness.

Recorder, Mrs. Brown was also presented with a beautiful purse in recognition of her valued services during the past seven years, Miss Mary McGuiness and Mrs. St. Louis were also presented with a piece of silverware. The pianist, Miss Alice Bowerman, received a piece of crystal. Although completely taken by surprise the recipients replied fittingly. The newly elected officers then spoke briefly, thanking those who had faith in putting them in office. Senior Regent Mrs. York was chosen as delegate to attend the Ontario Moose Convention which is to be held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, the latter part of July.

Past Regent Parry, in her graceful manner, invited the workers to visit her at her summer home in Melville. A sumptuous banquet was then served, and an evening that will long be remembered brought to a close.

THE OLD FASHIONED PICNIC

—Still Holds Its Ancient Charm

NEW fashions, new methods, new people, new desires come and go with the changing years and the introduction of swift transportation, airplane, motor car and speed boat, and folks travel many miles a day for pleasure—and do not always get it.

Just a glance at the picture on this page will bring pleasant memories of the old-fashioned picnic of the long ago—and not so long ago.

Evidence there is a-plenty that the old-fashioned picnic is due for a revival and survivors of the picnic era will welcome back an old friend while the younger generation that knew not Joseph will soon warm to this intimate friendly gathering of lovable home folks.

Glorious Grand Trunk Picnics

Not so long ago the Grand Trunk basket picnics were a feature of every summer, both in Belleville and Brockville, divisional points, and the eats under the trees, the health and the happiness generated at these events left a memory ever pleasant. Even the little boy who was not provided with a basket, or a lunch box, or a family, or anything that faintly resembled Folks of his own, fitted into the picture when he was claimed by several picnic groups and filled to bursting with those wonderful home-cooked viands which never gave an ache or a pain of indigestion but generated that mellow friendly feeling which goes with well-cooked food of the simpler kind.

Grand Picnic Pies

Do you remember the picnic pies? Oh, Mother o' mine, what a pie you used to dish up, and how much better they tasted at a picnic than anywhere else.

Do you remember the dancing? No fancy city orchestra. Just a fiddler and a piano, and how that fiddler could fiddle, especially if irrigated regularly with Corby's Special or Wiser's Red Star.

As we intimated before the old-fashioned picnics are coming back because they are too splendid a thing to pass out of the picture.

Charlie Hanna's Picnics

One of the most enthusiastic promoters of Get Together Picnics was the late Charlie Hanna, who served as Mayor of Belleville and Alderman, and also as member of the Dominion Parliament. Charlie's greatest picnic achievement was probably the Civic Picnic, representing the city officials and their families and friends. This picnic, held at Massassaga for several seasons was a great success and a great promoter of Good Fellowship. It will be remembered that Alderman Robinson was one of the Moving Spirits of the Civic Picnics, ably assisted by Alderman Woodley, one man whom age does not wither nor the years destroy. Charlie Hanna was also an active member of the city band and promoted several band picnics which were most enjoyable affairs. His services as Director and President of Belleville Fair were more successful, perhaps, because he had the picnic spirit of Good Fellowship.

There will be picnics galore, and there will be more genuine enjoyment at these old-fashioned picnics than anything else could offer.

Famous Old Picnic Places

Massassaga used to be a favorite place for picnics, but there were others at Oak Lake, Moira Lake, Twelve O'Clock Point, Presqu'Ile, and dozens of others not far from Belleville.

This year being Dominion Election year there will, no doubt, be political picnics, and the mind reverts back to notable events of comparatively recent history when public policies of great importance first reached the public from the lips of Dominion statesmen at Stirling and Marmora.

The Country Fair

The return of the old-fashioned picnic as pictured on this page is an evidence that the best that is in people cannot remain submerged forever and keeps returning to the surface, and the picnic, like the country fair, is one place where good fellowship reigns supreme, only the picnic is less strenuous than the fair, which holds its important place in the scheme of things as they are in this day and age—and the little country fair survives despite the growth of great national and international exhibitions, for the country fair is founded upon Good Fellowship and Neighborliness, and the fact that George meets Bill, and Henry meets Fred and Anne meets Minn, and Julia meets Mary Ann and the folks from way down below the creek bottom.

No getting away from it, folks, it's Good Fellowship which gets to the roots of human nature, and which if rightly applied can solve every vexing problem which is giving this old and ever new world such tremendous growing pains now.

It's just a little friendly co-operation that is needed to combat incipient selfishness, greed and lack of co-operation, elements which have combined to make trouble for everybody. Just the friendly soul-warming conception of the immortal Burns' fiat "A Mon's a Mon for a' that and a' that."

Harking back to the old-fashioned basket picnic wherein each family brought a big clothes basket full of good things to eat—enough for themselves and any friends who might drop in—enough for several meals in fact. A peculiarity of the picnic atmosphere was always the constant desire to eat—what with swimming and running races and climbing here and there a tremendous appetite was aroused.

A Juvenile Tragedy

The writer remembers a Grand Trunk basket picnic of the long ago, where he went au solitaire, that is to say, unattached. A paper box crammed full of eats promised protection against incipient starvation, and all was well in the juvenile heart with visions of a day of great joy.

Also on the boat were some of the tough lads who always crash the gate, carry no lunches, toil not, neither do they spin, but never miss a meal—you know the lads that used to live down near the gas works, or somewhere.

These lads were all fine swimmers and divers so when the boat reached the picnic place almost the first suggestion was a place to swim. Trailing the lads from down under, the writer decided to swim himself—first carefully hiding the cardboard box of eats, thinking no one witnessed the act.

A glorious hour high diving and swimming feats, and an appetite just as big as all outdoors, seemingly, a rush to get into our pants and shirt the uniform of the day, and off to the cache where the eats awaited.

A Raided Cache

Sad to relate the eats were gone, so, suspiciously so, were my erstwhile companions, and so, a hungry, disillusioned lad with tears almost reaching the outlets, crept sadly back to the park proper where many groups were enjoying delicious looking eats. Rows of luscious pies caught the eye and almost stopped the breath—but while grown-ups profess to be able to drink to someone only with their eyes, to a hungry lad, eating when confined to eye service was very inadequate.

Sunshine Again

However, the sun broke through the gloom, when one particularly jolly family party, with lads and lassies about the age of the hungry lad, summoned him to the banquet spread out on a clean white table cloth on the grass, and told him to pitch in and see how much he could eat.

God was in His heaven and all was well with the world after that.

A Girl in the Picture

When boyhood days were past and gone the old-fashioned picnic still held its charm, but generally there was a girl in the picture—dancing in the moonlight, and holding hands all the way home in the back of the boat—perhaps a hastily snatched kiss or two—strictly contraband, but all the better for being stolen amid protests.

Next to the old-fashioned basket picnic the rural fair held a large share of our affections—not the great, hurly burly, midway noise-generating fair of the larger centres, but the quiet, little country fair where we knew everybody, and everybody knew us, and where one might reasonably be expected to be invited back of the pavilion occasionally to try a snort of some neighbor's mountain dew, or Corby's Special Selected—all in good-natured fun.

Stepping in 3 Minutes Flat

The trials of speed, the name applied to the trotting races so as to come under the fair law and not jeopardize the government's grant, were more exciting than the two-minute trotters of today because you knew the owners and the horses—knew them since they were knee high to a colt, man and beast. The three-minute trot brought out the fast ones and oh! Boy! how they did burn up that three-to-a-mile track, with all the neighbors yelling for their particular favorites and bedlam let loose when the leaders came down the home stretch and the winner led by an eyelash or a boot-lace under the wire.

And how those old boys in the judges' stand did strut their stuff—how they paced back and forth in the small space and discussed horse and horse handlers by and large. Occasionally their optics rested on the crowd, but just to see that their high position was duly recognized and fully admired. Occasionally some of the judges would duck down out of sight, and those in the know said that there was always some liquid refreshment for the officials at the foot of the ladder. At any rate they would bob up serenely, seemingly refreshed and with lustier voices than ever.

Cincinnati Reds Allowed Tie Game By Decision of Loop Prexy

Fall's Big Show of Baseball May Be All-Ohio Proposition As Indians And Reds Hold On

Cincinnati Now Only Game And a Half Behind Giants

BEAT CARL HUBBELL

"Pinky" Higgins Breaks Record For Consecutive Hitting

(By Bill Boni, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Instead of the "subway series" that looked so likely when the big league firing started in April, this fall's big show of baseball may be an all-Ohio proposition.

Cleveland Indians, who hammered the Yankees back into third place yesterday 10-5 already are pacing the American League, Cincinnati Reds on the strength of the 3-2 battering they handed Carl Hubbell are just 1 1-3 games behind the National League-leading Giants and can jump that gap by taking the two remaining games of their series with Terry's Terries.

It's not such a long shot either. The Giants, struggling along minus lead-off man Joe Moore and with a revamped outfield, have dropped their last three starts. The Reds on the other hand, are riding a streak in which they have lost only three out of 14 games and have scored out of the second division into second place.

Tied Off on Hubbell

They weren't fooling when they teed off on Hubbell, either. The southpaw screwballer, making his third unsuccessful attempt for his 300th big league victory, was belted for a pair of homers and three runs in the third, and four hits and three more runs in the seventh. Six of the Reds' seven safeties off the Hub went for extra bases, including a four bagger by Ival Goodman that hit high up on the right field upper deck and a triple by the same gent that, just to show his versatility went to the ball park in deep left.

Meanwhile big Jim Weaver was balancing the heavy artillery with some fancy four-hit pitching. When he threatened to lose control of the situation Bucky Walters took charge and didn't allow a hit the rest of the way.

But the Reds' harsh treatment of Hubbell and their "subway series" assault on Yankee Red Ruffing wasn't of the days' fireworks.

Higgins Makes Record

In Detroit Frank (Pinky) Higgins wrote a new chapter into baseball's book of big league records and at the same time erased a famous name. The Red Sox third baseman, with four hits in each half of a double-header with the Tigers, ran his streak of successive safeties to 12, bettering by one the previous mark set in 1920 by Tris Speaker.

Hiser Rocky Colavito hit a homer in each game to tie Boston's Jimmy Foxx for the lead at 14 circuit clouts the Sox winning the first by 8-3 and taking the nightcap 3 to 2 to edged into second place again, four points ahead of the Yanks.

It was a big afternoon, too, for Harry Kelley. The veteran Washington right hander won his third game of the season and made it a good job as he shut out the White Sox 7 to 0 on five hits. In the other American League game Cleveland-trained also pitched five-hit ball and the Browns whipped the Athletics 5 to 2.

Cubs Shade Phillies

In the National League the Cubs took advantage of the effective relief pitching of veteran Lon Root to shade the Phillies 4-3; Jim Tobin went down the Cardinals with five hits to give the Bees a 3-1 decision and the Dodgers playing their second night game at home were left still needing their first victory after the Pirates' fireworks, as they bowed to the Pirates 9 to 3.

OSHAWA WINS OVER KINGSTON

Score 11-9 And Is The Most Loosely Played Game of Season

Kingston, June 22. — In a wild scramble here last night, Oshawa defeated Kingston by 11 to 9 to even closer to Peterborough in the Central Ontario senior baseball triangle. Both teams played loose ball, which, mid-night heavy fielding, accounting for the twenty runs Kingston's play was poor, six errors being committed and several hits allowed that might have been cut down with more alert fielding.

Although the champions collected a five-run lead in the fourth inning and held it entering the last of the ninth, when the Ponies got to Turner for three hits to put two on base, with a run scored when Leity Biddle was rushed to the rescue and he stopped the rally.

Heavy hitting was supplied by Hurst, of Oshawa and McQuaid of Kingston, who had homers with one on, while Paczkowski and Corkery clouted triples for the Ponies, while there were ten two-baggers, it was Kingston's third straight loss and Oshawa's second successive win.

Hitting the Ground

To most people some things have to be said countless times before their real meaning gets over. An example of this occurred recently in a lesson I gave to a physician. One of his outstanding faults was bobbing down during the swing.

Now I know that the average player doesn't realize when he is bobbing down. So I told the doctor that his fault was coupled with lifting the ground behind the ball. I added that every time the club head banged into the turf he could be sure that his head lowered at least six inches during the downswing. I covered these points many times and expressed myself about them in several different ways, giving him plenty of chance to grasp the full meaning of my instructions.

As a means of offsetting the fault I had him try to raise his head as he started the downswing. It took him 20 minutes to do this. Then he turned to me and said, "Oh, I've been lowering my head all this time." I was glad to have him discover so quickly, for he might have gone on like the majority of golfers without recognizing the fault.

Everyone tends to bend over too much and fall forward in the downswing, so that it is always a good idea to try to hold your head up as you swing down toward the ball.

ALABAMA NEGRO IN FINE SHAPE TO DEFEND TITLE

So-Called "Fight Mob" Regards Louis As a Shoo-in

WEIGH-IN TODAY

"Big-Thumb" Glove Is Out And Jacobs Barred From Ring

(By Gayle Talbot)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 22.—(AP)—The fight that has overshadowed all else in the fistic world for two years comes true at 10 p.m. E.D.T., when Joe Louis, the 24-year-old Alabama negro, defends his heavyweight championship against Max Schmeling, the 33-year-old German exchampion, at the Yankee Stadium.

A crowd of 80,000 is expected to be packed into the famous baseball arena, while the two gladiators shuffle out to meet each other for the second bright, hot night. The fans will have paid close to $1,000,000 to watch the pair battle under each other for records, or less in the event of a knockout.

Celebrities of every stripe will be there to watch the German try to repeat the knockout he scored over Louis in Jones age in the same arena, and to witness the efforts of the young Chocolate Bomber to throw one blot from his escutcheon.

Louis Favorite

Louis remains the 1 to 2 favorite in one of the biggest betting fights of modern times, but the odds shows of a majority of several hundred experts, who are here from every section of the United States and Europe. The so-called "fight mob" regards Louis as a shoo-in, a virtual cinch, and Promoter Mike Jacobs is frequently mentioned in little remains in the United States.

The two big men, each with a host affection for each other, were meeting at Madison Square Garden at 1 p.m. E.D.T., to weigh in and have their respective pulses clocked by Commissioner Medgina man, Dr. William Wafter.

Louis, in addition to being eight years younger in his opponent, is a little the taller and heavier, though not enough to matter.

Specialists Busy

It was reported specialists were getting as much as $100 for choice ringside chairs, originally priced at $30.

Schmeling has won one small victory before they enter the ring. The New York boxing commission rejected his demand that Louis not be permitted to wear the leather, or big-thumb' glove that the champion has favored in his recent fights. Both will have their ham-like hands encased in six-ounce everlast mitts, buttressed by plenty of bandage and tape.

Joe Jacobs Barred

For the first time in the United States, little Joe Jacobs will not be in the German's corner when the fists begin, the Commissioner having refused to restore Joe's second's license. One of Schmeling's following rewards this as a bad sign, but Joe doesn't worry Max. Nothing, in fact, bother Max except the fact, that he has to pay both United States and German income tax on his purse, which will be 20 per cent of the net. Louis will receive the champion's customary 40 per cent.

The probability is that Arthur Donovan again will be the referee, though his lack of weight, for the two judges, will not be known until the fighters have entered the ring.

ALL CLASSES IN GERMANY SURE MAX WILL WIN FIGHT

Berlin, June 22—(AP)—All Germany—from Little Hans and Gretchen to Papa and Mama Schmidt—is confident "Unser Maxe" Schmeling will take Joe Louis' heavyweight crown.

Fight talk is on everybody's lips, and although the championship fight in New York will take place in Berlin's early morning hours, about 3 a.m., tomorrow, thousands of Germans are sure to have their cars glued to radios for the blow-by-blow description.

German fans leave only one choice for Maxie—a come-back. His German admirers—and there are millions from Chancellor Hitler down—take the thought of defeat.

Newspapers do not say it but it is tacitly understood that a Louis victory would be taken here as a disgrace from the Nazi racial viewpoint. Some sports followers predict oblivion would be Schmeling's punishment.

Anny Ondra, movie actress-wife of the "Brown Bomber," joined with his "absolute optimism". But she will not follow the fight by radio—because "the excitement works on my nerves too much."

Max has written to her regularly and frequently and also has telephoned, she said, but the talks only a limp bit about Rochester Red Wings 3-2. The defeat sent the Wings down to fifth place as Syracuse pitchers moved into the first division by taking a double header from Jersey City Skeeters, 7-4 and 4-3.

Hy Vandenberg went the route for the Chiefs, gaining his fifth win in effective fashion to gain his fifth straight victory.

Syracuse ripped out 13 hits in each game with Tony Boogy seizing the spotlight with five blows, three in the opener and two in the windup. Odi Johnny Grabowski, who started the first game and was knocked out of the box, relieved Paul Gehrman in the second inning of the 10-run-ing nightcap, and pitched two-hit ball the rest of the way to gain credit for the win.

The Bisons' game with Baltimore Orioles was postponed because of threatening weather.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS SCORE TWIN WIN OVER THE LEAFS

Double Victory Sends Team Into The First Division

BEARS WIN AGAIN

Stretch Their Present Winning Streak To 12 Games

(By The Associated Press)

It appears the only way to stop the Bears from winning right now is for the opposing teams to miss the train to Newark.

The International League champions ran their current winning streak to 12 games last night by defeating Montreal Royal, 7-2 and stretched their league lead to 8 1-3 games over the idle Buffalo Bisons.

Bob Seeds belted his 28th homer of the season with Sammy Clements smashed out a triple and two singles in what was the 12th consecutive game in which they hit safely.

Behind his teammates, timely hitting, Jerry Donald won his fourth game of the season. He was touched for 11 hits.

Jersey City Giants cut the Bisons' second-place margin to five games by coming out Rochester Red Wings 3-2. The defeat sent the Wings down to fifth place as Syracuse pitchers moved into the first division by taking a double header from Jersey City Skeeters, 7-4 and 4-3.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

When Joe Louis climbs into the ring at the Yankee Stadium this evening to defend his world's heavyweight crown against Max Schmeling the German invader several Belleville fight fans will be on hands to witness the struggle. "Sandy" Burrows, Fred H. Deacon, Cecil H. J. Schling and Harry Robinson, Belleville's No. 1 fight fan, who hasn't missed a feature bout in years, dropped us a line enroute to Gotham yesterday telling his intentions on the subject. Harry calls Joe Louis to win via the K.O. route in the early rounds. "Joe has youth, 23 years to Schmeling's 33, and is a better counter puncher and carries a harder punch. I say ten or twelve rounds because Louis will have to be wary of Max's powerful fight look but the longer the fight goes the more it is in Louis' favour as Schmeling isn't as good as he was two years ago", predicts Harry Robinson.

Mingling with Harry at the Yankee Stadium will be over 5,000 Europeans, including two best heads from Hitler's own land, who have come to America, not to seek their fortunes, but to see the setting their fellow-countryman regain the world's heavyweight title. Two ocean liners have been chartered by German flight fans to transport Schmeling's supporters to the new world and the scene of the fight headlines. Because of these many millions will be listening in to the fight tonight, one will never know, but over 75,000 are expected to grace the Yankee Stadium with the general admission (ticket holders not having a much better view than we play at home, who will have to be satisfied with a word-description of the battle. The fight will be broadcast over the principal trunk radio lines of practically all of the better known individual radio stations. So in short if you don't get in on the beatitudes. The main bout is scheduled to go on at 10.00 p.m. unless weather conditions force a last minute change in the schedule.

More fight stuff: If Schmeling beats Louis he'll be the second oldest man ever to win the crown..... Only two years (or a month) have won the title when he was 35.... Max first came over here in 1928 as a champion remained champion longer than two years.....Jack Dempsey held it for seven years.....John L. Sullivan reigned the longest of them all—ten years and there you have it all.

At a sub-committee meeting of the O.B.A. held over last week end baseball transfers were granted to Millard "Sipsey" Davis, shortstop of the Belleville and Vinny Urtuski from Merriton to Kingston. The only way that the Delhi Akron O., to Peterboro transfer was granted, the manager's statement was also denied, which means if the ruling stands, Peterboro's O.B.A. games, his presence will endanger the amateur status of all players participating in any game with Dell. Up to date it looks as though Napanee and the Booth-McCrae Collieries are hopelessly outdistanced although the remaining four clubs are staging a lovely battle and jockeying for positions. Last spring the Belleville and District Baseball loop adopted a 45 game schedule with official dates for 30 of these games. If the remainder of the schedule continues as in the past, the softball brigade would do well in halting their schedule at 30 games, then commencing a slightly extended league final play-off series either of the round robin or place type. Tonight Chuck Barnett's Corbey A.C. nine must win over Hal Kemp's "grocery lads", or relinquish sole possession of first place.

Tonight's fight is not the only place in the sports pie, for this afternoon Berrell Fanning's intermediate race their most severe test of the current bey of Quinte League campaign when the local nine clash with Harry Doyle's fast-moving Picton squad over in Sprake Park. Both these teams are clashed against them while the winner will move into sole possession of the league leadership, as the chips are down and feelings are running high today that Church has the Picton nine sewn out of the professional ranks before a reinstatement can be granted.

Merrily the district softball boys roll along with four of Secretary Harry Knott's "cage" stories well out in front and it is safe in assuming Dr. Johnny Amey, Lee Clements and the National Grocery-men will gain the coveted play off berths. To date it looks as though Napanee and the Booth-McCrae Collieries are hopelessly outdistanced although the remaining four clubs are staging a lovely battle and jockeying for positions. Last spring the Belleville and District Baseball loop adopted a 45 game schedule with official dates for 30 of these games. If the remainder of the schedule continues as in the past, the softball brigade would do well in halting their schedule at 30

Meet Picton Today

The afternoon they meet what will probably be their stiffest opposition, when they travel to Picton to take on with the up and coming Ron Church-Harry Doyle squad. Composed of a fair sprinkling of the old stars battled for honors in the Intermediate finals in 1933, and some promising youngsters, the Churchian "Spaniards" have shown championship form in their appearances to date.

In their current performances they have shown surprising power, with the hickory, and have been beating the offerings of opposing pitchers all over the terrain. They have a good pitching staff and if their present form shows any degree of consistency they will prove a dangerous threat to the titular aspirations of the rest of the squads in the loop.

Leading Batting Ball

However, the Weirites themselves have been no shrinking violets with the willow. Triples, doubles and singles that have rebounded off their shillalegs to the tune averaged to forty-six all told, an average of almost twelve hits a game, which is not to be sneezed at in any man's league.

Ted Ketz of the baseball bonkaroos of the House of Weir are smacking the ball at well over a .300 clip, with Harold Reid leading the parade with a mark of .470. Close behind Reid's batting mark is Bonehead Bert Johnson who is equally at home on the pitching rubber, as he is in the batter's box. The last-named are crowding Reid with a percentage of .411 with the rest of the ball team log in behind.

Their ability to hit the ball, as evidenced in the above figures, has been one of the main factors in their drive for the top rung of the ladder. While the pitching has been of an erratic nature, the slugging possibilities of the team as a whole should more than offset any weakness in the box with the exception of course of the Kingston-Bellerive line-up when the Limestone lads suddenly came to life to lay a barrage of base hits down in that accounted for eleven runs in a few innings off a trio of the local efforts.

Where Are the Runs?

However, there is no cause for seriously worry about. Belleville has an unbeatable ball squad, that is proved with the best in these parts and the only fly in the ointment at present is the absence of the clicking of the turnstiles near the box-office which should by this time have been as yet turned out in any multitudes to witness the games, and it seems Belleville, the land of baseball balliteers, that at present represents the hub of baseball should receive support they should from local fandom.

With the handsome trophy presented by the National Billard Parlors to the leading batter at the end of the season, proving an incentive to the leading batsmen to make a battle for batting honors. Following is the batting average of the Weir squad after the games of June 19, completion of four games of the twelve-game schedule:

Player	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Reid	17	8	.470
Ketz	17	7	.411
Johnson	17	7	.411
Collins	14	5	.357
Empson	18	6	.333
Coughlin	16	5	.312
Weir	15	4	.268
Barriage	8	2	.250
Ketz	8	2	.250
Sinfield	8	2	.250
Green	17	3	.176

PLAY IN PICTON

They are not a wonder team—they probably won't be elected to the hall of baseball fame for feats extraordinary, but they are the pride of their members up to the Big Time, yet in spite of what some of the wise-cracking so-called experts who adorn the Main Stem at times and shoot in all and sundry assent the impossibilities of the lads who at least are trying to give the baseball-loving public some semblance of bygone diamond glories, the boys from the Island of the Air War and Burrell Fanning are at least making it mighty interesting for the rest of the squads in this Bay of Quinte Intermediate Baseball Loop.

They may not even win their group, they may fade away in the home run list, but one thing is certain right now that are setting a pace in the van of the remaining squads that is a right merry one, and should they win this Picton tilt this afternoon, they will be sitting pretty than Jackie Coogan's resources, astride the top rung of the loop ladder.

Have Won Three

As a matter of fact, they have occupied that enviable position for some time now, having consolidated that place by virtue of their win over the Kingston Limestone Cityites from Napanee. Up to the present they have garnered three wins as against one defeat. Twice they have humbled the Gibbsreville tackboard, has knocked off Jerry Arnold's Kingston 'Locos' on one occasion, and in their second meeting had the Limestone City aggregation at their beck and nod legs pulling inside, when the pitcher gets a curve ball threw up, and the enemy smashed it for a home run. They proved to be a weird exhibition in the last innings.

KI-T SOFTBALL

By the overwhelming score of 29 to 4 the 'Tigers' won the final play off game in the midget series of the Ki-T softball league, defeating the All Saints. The victory gives the Tigers the midget softball championship of the city in 1938.

A twelve run splurge in the second inning gave the ultimate winners a commanding lead, which proved to an easy victory. The evening previous these two clubs played seven innings of softball but were forced to call it a day because of the game was for the group championship. The game was umpired by Ernie Blake of the K.M.C.A.

The newly crowned league champion team was composed of the following players:

G. Rogers, J. Gatrom, R. Reid, G. Rose, G. Daverick, E. Barnum, Fingleton, Campbell, Harrington, R. Wright, J. Cook and E. Kolier.

The losing team was made up of Isaacson, Smith, Greaire, P. Smith, Marsh, Martin, Bell, Ellis, Sword, Philp, Burns and Arnott.

Sports Roundup

(By Biddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 22 (AP)—Contracts for a Max Baer vs. Schmeling return bout match in September were drawn up late yesterday by Mike Jacobs and Yucell Hoffman, Baer's manager.....Barney Ross, who retired after his Armstrong fight, still is getting offers to enter the ring.....All are being declined.....Lou Ambers packed his trunks and all his other equipment the day after getting beat but think he'll said Art Winch one of Ross' managers yesterday.

Johnny Vander Meer is getting a lot of attention here.....First bell boy at the Madelin adopted the ugreement not to accept tips from the non-hit star .... Tomorrow the Brooklyn ace will announce at the home plate at the Polo grounds where Johnny will be made a Colonel on the staff of the Governor of Florida.....Next presentee is the suitable gift by Frank Winchell, Tampa Hotel Tycoon, to whose establishment the spring prepares.

Up-State gossip has it that Babe Ruth was installed in the Dodger organization by Gen. Manager and soon will be announced as part owner.....Babe's batting eye is still 1.37 at Suffolk the other day, while the best Memove could do over the same route was .1.28.....Ruppert track the same day was 1.38 3-5.

Jimmy McLarnin is getting rich running a garage in Hollywood.....Nate Lewis, bald eagle of the Chic. Cubs, is batting better than .300 and the featherweight championship of Maryland the other night and is getting married.....Ted Kennedy Boxing Association as the No. 1 contender, is in town looking for Jake Mamad and Henry Armstrong.....Just to give you an idea that Barney Ross meant it when he said he was through with boxing, he won't even come down from Perrdela (where he is playing golf) to see Louis and Schmeling fight next week.

Well, this is "Der tag".....we still like Louis in 10, more likely in six.

Czech "Strong Man" in Oratorical Action

An intimate study of Premier Milan Hodza, of Czechoslovakia as he addressed 100,000 people at Bratislava,—capital of Slovakia, recently during the crisis resulting out of the Sudeten Germans' demands for autonomy. The premier praised the complete union of the Czechs and Slovaks and denounced those who would split the nation asunder.

This Twin Didn't Need His Brother

The man who usually is the recipient of the congratulations is handing them out in this picture. Glen Cunningham, RIGHT, who's set a multitude of records homeself, congratulates Wayne Rideout, one of the Rideout twins from Texas, after the latter had set a new mark of 2.03.2 for the three-quarter mile run at Princeton University meet. Cunningham finished second.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

Tobey Chandler stood on the porch; an old straw suitcase at her feet. Her eyes were dark and desolate in her pale face, her red mouth somber. She looked so unbearably, like a knife deep down within him.

"Why, Tobey!" He opened the door wide. "What on earth—?"

Tobey met her lips. She said humbly, "I had to see you, Red. I've — got to talk to you, ask you a favor—" her voice broke raggedly.

Red set her suitcase inside the hallway. It was pitifully light. With one hand on her elbow he propelled her into a small sunny room, the walls of which were lined from floor to ceiling with books. Tobey had never seen such a room. But her eyes came back almost immediately to Red's face.

Seated on the shabby leather couch beside her he was insisting gently, "Tobey, tell me what's wrong. What happened"

She could tell Red. She was in little surprise at how easily she could tell him all that had happened. Even though he had kissed her, spoiling their friendship, there was still this miraculous understanding, this complete lack of self-consciousness between them. Tobey had scarcely dared to hope it would be so, after last night. But she had no choice. She had come to Red. He was her only hope.

So now she told him. And even when she must describe that moment of utter, terrifying madness, that moment when the hot crimson tide of anger and hatred had enveloped her, choking, blinding, deafening her, she did not evade his gaze. For he would understand. Tobey no longer doubted it.

But her voice faltered a little trying to find words.

Red's face was curiously level, his eyes colder than Tobey had ever seen them. "He struck you, Tobey?"

Frozen grey eyes sought her mouth and discovered there the reddened wound where her teeth had cut her lip cruelly when the force of that blow.

But Tobey said calmly, "His stirring me wasn't so important. The awful part was the way I felt. I could have killed him . . but I had nothing but my hands."

Her voice died away and she looked beyond Red, seeing again the long angry lines her clawing fingers had left down her stepfather's face; lines that filled slowly as she watched, with bright blood. She told Red about that, and of how she had run past Adam Thomas while he was yet too amazed to put out a hand to stop her, and had fled from him up the steep stairs to her attic room.

She did not smile, saying; "I pushed the chest of drawers against the door, Red. Wasn't that melodramatic? But he did come and try to get in — and then he went away."

Her mother had come to the door soon after that. Tobey scarcely saw her in. Julia's voice had sounded choked with tears.

CHAPTER VIII

"Now could you do such a thing?" her mother cried. "Oh, Tobey — why? Adam's terribly angry. He'll punish you when you come out — and you'll have to come out. He says you're not to go back to work even to graduate. You must stay here where we can know what you're doing. Oh, Tobey!"

But Tobey hadn't answered, crouched there tense and defiant behind her barricade. And after a while Julia went away too.

The wall separating the tiny, built-in room from the rest of the attic had never been properly boarded up. Tobey knew of an opening almost a foot wide in the back of her closet. So she had waited her chance and when Adam went to the barn to milk and Julia was busy with the chickens, she managed to get through this, leaving the chest still standing against the door.

"They won't realize for hours that I've gone," she told Red. "I walked to town and paced my things at Mrs. Merriam's—"

Red interrupted. "But what are you going to do?"

"I'm going to Chicago." Tobey said it simply, as if going to Chicago were an everyday proceeding in her life. But Red noticed how the knuckles of her clenched hands stood out, how white they were. "That's the favor I have to ask. Oh, Red, take me with you! I'll get work there and never come back. I can't stay at home — " the carefully controlled voice rose a little. "I can't, something dreadful may happen. I have to go!"

Red could see that. Impossible to imagine her staying after all that had happened. And yet, the thought of Manning without her — that, he told himself firmly, would be about enough of that!

He assured her staunchly, "Of course you must go! And I'll be glad to take you. But first, let's talk to Dad."

Nothing in Tobey's personal experience of fathers had prepared her in the least for John Collins.

His first remark after Red presented him was, "You haven't had your breakfast, have you?"

And he stood there smiling down at the stiff, obviously frightened girl on the couch, the girl who regarded him so warily out of enormous dark eyes.

Tobey began with an odd shy dignity, "Why, no. But it doesn't matter—"

"Ah, you're wrong there. Breakfast is the only truly important meal of the day. To do without it is to face life unprepared, to go into battle without armor. To face fate foolishly. Red, make some coffee. I could do with another cup myself. And Hannah's biscuits are terrible lighter than usual this morning. If such a thing is possible."

Without understanding at all how it had come about, Tobey found herself seated opposite this pleasant, grey-haired man at a table spread with snowy linen and laid with gay yellow-patterned china. Sunshine and bird song and the scent of flowers drifted in through old high windows and Red made cheerful clattering sounds in the kitchen. Tobey realized that she was very hungry. The smell of coffee was torture in her nostrils.

After she had eaten they talked. Or rather, the two men talked with Tobey only bothering to put in an occasional word, feeling the while curiously comforted and cared for, feeling strangely safe.

When he had heard all his son had to tell him John Collins didn't say as Tobey feared he might, "She must go home at once and should stay with her family. This is all nonsense and I won't hear of it!"

Instead he remarked simply, "You must have some money, Tobey. I insist upon that."

And when she demurred, color creeping upward across her cheek bones, Red backed too, "Of course she's got to have money. That's one thing I wondered about. How much would you say?"

After some discussion Red and his father agreed upon fifty dollars. It sounded like a great deal of money to Tobey.

She never remembered a great deal about that ride to Chicago. Red tried not to think about what lay behind her, and he seemed to touch about what lay ahead. Red's presence helped.

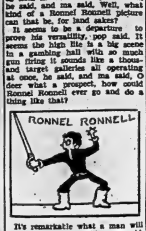
"Of course you'll get a job." Red told her. "Don't go doubting it. Won't want to get rid of you. Nice family — something of that sort. Until you do there's a room at Dad and I always stop at when we're in Chicago. It's small, but nice and not expensive."

During the day and a half it took Red to transact the business which had brought him to Chicago, Tobey shut the thought of his ultimate departure from her mind. But with Red gone she was thrown abruptly upon her own resources. The Kerrik, whose spare room she rented, were a middle-aged couple, childless, who set great store by their privacy.

She was fortunate in securing work almost at once.

"Not much of a job, maybe," she wrote to Red within a week of his departure, "but steady and with a chance of working into something better. I'm in the credit department of Blaine's, an exclusive women's furnishings store. Remember the State Street window where we saw those models made out of something like suede, with eyelashes all of two inches long? That place."

Five persons, including an entire family of four, were wiped out when the automobile skidded and down a six-foot embankment and turned over in eight feet of water, near Chatham, Ont., One of the passengers of the car Deslrie Charron, 6, INSET, escaped from the submerged vehicle by smashing



SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper mc wal looking in the paper at the movie page on account of having made pop promise he is to take her to one, saying. There only seems to be an alternative of 2 choices, Willyum, there's Ronnel Ronnell in Drifting Harts and Ronnell doesn't even so much as hold hands with any of them, he said, and ma said, Well, what kind of a Ronnel Ronnell picture can that be, for land sakes?

It seems to be a departure to prove his versatility, pop said. It seems the high Ho is a big scene in a gambling hall with sic much gun firing it sounds like a thousand urgent galleries all operating at once, he said, and ma said, O dear what a prospect, how could Ronnel Ronnell ever go and do a thing like that?

It's remarkable what a man will do to prove his versatility, pop said. I understand there's a swell race between a train and a racing car, with dozens of breakneck escapes, and another race between 2 airplanes 5000 feet in middair with a grand climax of a head on collision, that sounds like the end of the world, let's go, he said, and ma said, but Willyum, after all, it needs after all, at that rate we mite as well take a chance on The Rangers Last Stand. If a Ronnel Ronnell picture can be anything like that there can be anything in a name any more, so what do you think? she said.

This is a woman's world and it's all up to you, pop said.

And he winked me a private wink, proving he had made it all up, and I dont know where they went.

De Valera Scores Victory In Eire Elections

The Fianna Fail government of Premier Eamon De Valera, INSERT, was swept back into power in the recent Eire elections, as it crushingly defeated an attempt by William T. Cosgrave, former head of the Irish Free State, to return his party to their former power. A general view of historic College Green in Dublin during one of the final election meetings is shown ABOVE.

HE WAS AFRAID TO CROSS A STREET

Lost His Nerve After 12 Months' Agony

Suffering from acute rheumatism in both his knee joints—treated in hospital twice without result — so unnerved that he was afraid to cross a street—how readily every rheumatic sufferer will sympathize with this man. Read what he says:

"For 12 months, I suffered pain and misery with acute rheumatism in both my knees. Twice, I was treated in hospital—but it was no use. I could not walk up or downstairs. I was afraid to cross the street, for I had lost all confidence in myself. Fourteen days ago, I started taking Kruschen Salts, and already I am a new man. I can walk with a smart step, go up and downstairs with ease, and cross the street with complete confidence. My rheumatism is getting better every day."—D.L.

In a good many cases, rheumatism cannot resist the action of Kruschen Salts, which dissolve the painful crystals of uric acid — often the cause of those aches and pains—and assist the kidneys to eliminate this poison through the natural channels.

BONE IN HAND BROKEN IN FALL

Herbert Baragar, 10, Fell From Bicycle When Bike Strikes Truck

Hurled to the pavement when his bicycle in some unaccountable manner caught the side of a truck proceeding in the same direction on Coleman Street shortly after one o'clock Tuesday, Herbert Baragar, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Baragar, 60 Octavia Street, sustained a broken bone in his hand, bruises and shock. Treatment was administered at the scene of the accident by Dr. Austin Walters, and the injured boy rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by Police Constable William T. Evans, where an X-ray examination was made.

The truck, driven by Fred Steinburg, 188 Clarmont Avenue, Toronto, was proceeding north on Coleman Street. Baragar is said to have ridden alongside, when his bicycle in some way caught the side of the truck. The boy was thrown to the pavement, while the rear wheel of the vehicle passed over him, but badly wrecking it.

Police Constable Evans 'investigated the accident, and assisted in treating the injured youth.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, June 22.—(Special) — Victories by two teams of the Trenton Softball Association were responsible for the toppling from first place of the smart Grahams' Garage nine, Yourex Billiards taking the leaders by the lopsided score of 15-5 at Bayshore Park while the R.C.A.F. aggregation bested Wooler 10-5 in an interesting game played on the Airmen's home field on the aerodrome. By virtue of their wins both the R.C.A.F. and Yourex move ahead of Graham's in the standing, but the race is exceedingly close.

Led by Tommy Cain and Gord Bell who both played standout games and smacked out home runs to aid the cause, the Yourexites scored in every inning of their game against Graham's, the latter looking rather disorganized and off-color. Sam Ellis on the Yourex mound pitched steady ball, and with his team-mates smacking the pellet all over the lot had little to worry about. An innovation at the game was the draw for the gate prize, the first of the season, and won by Bob Joyner. It is expected that for a short time at least a gate-prize will be awarded each night.

At the Airport Wooler put up a good effort against the Flyers but could do no better than take the small end of a 10-3 verdict. A small crowd watched the affair, but some good ball was served up. Trepanier in centre field for the Airmen came through with a sparkling running catch, while McColl for Wooler tallied the longest hit of the game, a triple to left. The victory left the Airmen on top of the league with Yourex right behind and Graham's a step behind them.

Badly Shaken Up

Irving Galna, well-known local merchant, is resting comfortably as his home today following a Sunday car crash in which he was badly shaken and bruised and the car almost a total wreck. Galna, it is reported, attempted a U-turn on the Belleville highway at Riley's Pavilion on Sunday afternoon, when a Michigan car crashed into his vehicle and flung it into the north ditch. Two occupants of the Detroit car were taken to Belleville hospital, but the driver was unhurt. The Galna car, a new one purchased barely a month ago, was returned to Trenton and is now in the school garage where many have gone to see it.

School Closes Friday

Hundreds of school children of the town are waiting anxiously for the end of the week, which is in turn the end of the term and the beginning of the long-awaited summer holidays. Most of the teachers of the various schools will be seeing out within a few days after the end of the term for various universities and summer schools, where they will take summer courses. At Dufferin school pupils of the entrance class, who were successful in securing their promotion to high school without final examination, were given their certificates on Monday morning. An informal party was held and lunch was served, and Principal Frank Shercott in a few words wished them well in their further school careers.

Ladies of St. Peter's church are serving their annual chicken supper to large crowds the first three nights of this week.

Principal W. Geo. Spencer of Trenton High School together with Mrs. Spencer and family expect to leave Trenton next week for their summer cottage at Port Erie, where they will spend most of the holiday.

Miss Flora MacDonald of North Trenton teacher of vocal music in a score or more of rural and urban public school rooms in Murray and Sidney townships, is planning a summer course in music at Toronto.

Protest Upheld

At a special executive softball meeting held in the office of President George Gooley last week Wooler's protest of their game against R.C.A.F. 1 few days previously was upheld and it was decided to replay the game on the Trenton diamond, when time permits. The discussion arose as a result of Umpire Bowler's ruling with regard to an incomplete inning and a run, which was scored afterward. Wooler tied the score, but the ruling was that the run which created the tie was not to be allowed.

For a time at least, in a further effort to bolster interest in softball locally, it was decided to sell numbered tickets to the stands with a draw midway during the game and the lucky number-holder receiving the gelt.

A letter of appreciation to the council and especially to Councillor Percy LaPleur for his work, in improving the softball park was suggested and the executive were unanimously in favour of it.

Enjoying Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hadley are enjoying a prolonged motorcycle trip through southern states, and friends and relatives locally who are communicating with them learn that they are finding the outing wonderfully enjoyable. Mr. Hadley, well known locally as a leading optometrist, is a motorcycle enthusiast on the side, and the present trip on a new machine he purchased this spring has been a real thrill both to Mrs. Hadley and to him.

Something went seriously wrong on Saturday when the attempted flight of an R.C.A.F. Fairchin from Ottawa to Trenton ended in a crash at Minden in the Muskoka area. The pilot was in charge of Sgt. Robt. Marshall of Trenton, and flying through the haze apparently the pilot became confused and lost his course. At any rate he flew about attempting to identify some landmark, and finally, out of gas, crashed on a forced landing in a bay field near Minden. Unfortunately the field was soft and the plane nosed over so violently that it was almost completely wrecked. Marshall escaped miraculously with only a few bruises and shaking up, and returned to his base. The wreckage of the plane followed by truck on Monday. An investigation will probably follow.

Unloading of several new pursuit planes from box cars at the C.N.R. station on Tuesday attracted a number of spectators. The planes are shipped "knocked down" and aircraftsmen from the R.C.A.F. station arrived with trucks to partially assemble them and transport them to the aerodrome.

CHURCH PROBLEMS ARE STRESSED

Presbytery of Kingston of Presbyterian Church Meets In St. Andrew's

The Presbytery of Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada met in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville on Tuesday the 21st inst. In the absence of the last moderator-elect, Rev J. A. Kotfend who was recently inducted to the pastoral charge of Iroquois and Dixon's Corners the immediately preceding moderator Rev. R. K. Earle presided over the meeting.

The Rev. Dr. Boudreau of Picton was apointed to serve on the committee of church life and work in the room of Rev. J. A. Kotfend, and Mr. Geo. West, elder of Madoc as member of Home Mission Committee of Presbytery.

Report of the Commissioners to the General Assembly were heard.

Mr. J. A. MacMillan of Burnbrae stated that a very impressive sermon was preached by the retiring moderator.

One of the promising features of the church's work was what was being accomplished in the north. Bright hopes are entertained with respect to that cause. Strong pleas were presented for adequate financial support, for home mission work. Individual members of the church should take a deeper interest and give greater support in missionary work. Each one should measure up to one's responsibility. Mr. MacMillan spoke of the friendly cooperation on the part of the commissioners with respect to the task of the church as a whole.

Rev J. W. MacDonald of the Roslin charge expressed his delight at being present at Assembly. He also spoke on the enthusiasm manifested in Home and Foreign Missions notwithstanding difficulties which had to be met on the part of missionaries home and foreign. Reports on progress however were most gratifying and the responsibility resting upon the church is that of providing sufficient financial support. The existing deficit of the church was a subject of keen discussion in Assembly, the conclusion of which seemed to be that the several congregations should endeavour to meet budget allocations. Mr. MacDonald also spoke of the work of the Board of Education, in reference to necessary provision made for financial support and education facilities for students for the ministry.

The Clerk of Presbytery, Rev. Dr. Dougan reported appreciation of the oratorical powers displayed by outstanding representatives of the Church and how each in one's own fashion presented more forcefully his view point of the vital problems which the Church was called upon to face. His presentation of that phase of the Assembly's personnel was most interesting. Reference was made also to the suggestion that there is need for review of the curriculum on the course of study for students in the church's theological colleges.

Dr. Dougan offered the suggestion that, with respect to the appointment of church missionary superintendents, certain ex-moderators of Assembly who have had the advantages of travelling from coast to coast during the term of office, get together and offer names of qualified persons for these important offices.

On motion, unanimously carried the commissioners were commended for their diligence and thanked for their interesting report.

Rev. J. H. Douglas reported the dedication of the newly built church at Ernestown which was observed on Sunday last the 19th inst.

The next regular meeting of Presbytery will be held in St. Andrew's Church Belleville on the second Tuesday of September.

Riot Follows Eviction of Vancouver Unemployed

Damage estimated at $80,000 was done during the height of the riot that ensued when R.C.M.P. officers reinforced by members of the local police, employed tear gas and batons to evict Vancouver unemployed from the post office and the city art gallery. The men had occupied the buildings for several weeks in an effort to attract public attention to their plight. A similar protest has been lodged against the federal government by C.C.F. leader J. S. World Disarmament Question is Raised in British House

BRITAIN IS READY TO COOPERATE IN ANY PROPOSALS

Many Influential Britons Believe Disarmament to Come After Appeasement

BOMBING FROM AIR

Qualitative Type of Disarmament Abolition of Most Deadly Weapons

London, June 15—(AP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that the United States government had intimated it was preparing to make definite proposals to secure world disarmament.

Asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, if Britain were willing to "join with the United States government in making definite proposals with a view to securing a halt in the arms race," Mr. Chamberlain replied tersely:

"The United States government have suggested they are going to make an attempt."

Declines to Elaborate

The Prime Minister refused to elaborate on that statement.

The discussion was opened when Mr. Henderson, son of the late Arthur Henderson who was president of the world disarmament conference, asked the Prime Minister whether the British government agreed with a recent speech by Secretary Cordell Hull favoring disarmament.

Mr. Chamberlain replied:

"Yes," sir, His Majesty's government are in full agreement with

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Service Meteorologist

Preparation: It pays to select favorable places for garden and to do best where protected from the wind and get the maximum amount of sunshine. A low spot or a place protected by bushes, hedges, trees or walls receives less wind than a place on high ground or in the open. Wind not only does mechanical damage but also greatly facilitates evaporation both from the plant and from the soil. Evaporation increases (1) with the temperature of the evaporating surface increases, (2) with wind, (3) with dryness of the air, and (4) with diminishing air pressure. The garden can protect against wind more effectively than against the other factors.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 16—(CP)—Synopsis—Scattered showers this morning eastward across the lake region, has caused thunderstorms in western and northern districts of Ontario, also northwestern Quebec, while in other parts of eastern Canada the weather has been fair and moderately warm. It has been cool in Manitoba but moderately warm farther west with thunderstorms reported in northern Alberta. Pressure is high over Manitoba and Hudson Bay, also the Maritime provinces and Atlantic States.

Planets and Stars Forcing America Into Major Crisis Say Astrologers

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 16—(CP)— Some major upheaval, possibly war or a revolution, will envelop America on May 11, 1941.

The prediction comes from two expert astrologers, who have accepted a challenge from Lord Spencer, Jones, astronomer royal, to predict well in advance the significance of a series of important planetary conjunctions on that day.

The astrologers are Hon. Ralph Shirley and Sheila Wynn.

Dr. Jones ridiculed the claim that disposition of the planets at the moment a person is born has a direct influence on his personality and that by plotting their positions at any time after birth, influence for the future can be obtained.

"Astrology is rubbish," he said.

On May 11, 1941, Dr. Jones said the heavens would offer the following phenomenon: Mercury will be in conjunction with Venus, Saturn and Uranus; Venus will be in conjunction with Jupiter and Uranus. There will be a full moon. Saturn will be in conjunction with Venus and Mercury and Jupiter will be in conjunction with Uranus a few days previously. Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus will all be close to the sun.

Nella Webb declared interpretation of these signs would depend upon the country about which the prediction was being made.

"But I would say that they mean some kind of war or revolution in America, religious or labor in origin," she said.

Said Mrs. Shirley: "I should say the conjunction of Saturn with Uranus, passing through Gemini means a major crisis will be manifest in America. The last time there was a similar occurrence, the Napoleonic wars undermined the ordeal of the civil war, the previous occasion the war of independence."

FISCAL YEAR OF 1937-38 EVENTFUL ALSO DRAMATIC

Finance Minister Makes Statement in Presenting Budget

EMPLOYMENT GAINS

Dunning Says Canada Has Followed Easy Money Policy

Ottawa, June 16—(CP)—The fiscal year 1937-38 was eventful and dramatic, said Finance Minister Dunning in opening his budget speech today. Last year he had stressed the disposition of Canada in economic progress on the preservation of peace and lessening of international friction. No one then could have forecast the degree to which international relations had become disturbed in the interval.

Canadian economy, however, had given a good account of itself under the shadow of disturbing world events. The physical volume of business had expanded eight per cent from March to November, 1937, and then a decline had set in until April, 1938, when it was nearly nine per cent under April, 1937. Since then it had advanced 5.3 per cent.

Good Crop in Prospect

In neither the United States nor the United Kingdom had there been the same reversal of the downward trend as in Canada. The lag between the downward trend in Canada and other important countries was more remarkable in view of the crop failure in Western Canada. Crop prospects for this year were favorable.

"A critical examination of all the factors bearing on the case can convince that, had it not been for economic depression and political tension abroad, our recovery would have continued its upward trend with only a moderate slackening in its rate of advance," he said.

"In each of the last two years I have had to refer to the failure of employment to keep pace with the striking gains in business activity and to point out that this was a condition usually met with in the early stages of recovery from business depression.

Budget Highlights

An over-all deficit for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1938, of $13,775,000.

Expenditures totalled $350,467,000 and revenues, $336,692,000.

Revenues reached the highest point in history, exceeding the previous high record, 1928-29 by $55,853,000.

Bank of Canada on March 31 was $3,937,727,000.

Since February the downward trend in unemployment in Canada has been reversed.

Total export trade was $1,145,000,000, an increase of $77,000,000 over 1936-37.

Total import trade was $799,000,000, an increase of $127,000,000.

Canada's favorable trade balance of $345,000,000 was reduced more rapidly than industrial production.

Further increases in employment are expected from stimulation of the construction industry, from housing and municipal assistance legislation.

Normal equilibrium between farm prices and other prices has been restored.

Unofficial estimates place Canada's total national income for 1937 at $4,250,000,000, an increase of 8 per cent over 1936.

But for unforeseen increases of $29,000,000 in relief expenditures due to the severe drought, and $7,000,000 in the Canadian National Railways deficit the budget would have disclosed a surplus.

New Dominion bond issues totalling $250,000,000 were floated.

CROP PROSPECTS BEST SINCE '32

Western Farmers Agree All Conditions Point to Record Crop

Ottawa, June 16—(CP)—Crop conditions in the wheat-growing areas are better than at any time since 1932, Finance Minister Dunning told the House of Commons in the course of his budget speech today.

REMOVAL OF HALF OF GIRL'S BRAIN CURES EPILEPSY

Dr. McKenzie of Toronto Reports Apparent Complete Cure

CONVULSIONS CEASE

Doctors Told of Full Meal Given Patient by Needle

San Francisco, June 16—(CP)—Apparent complete cure of epilepsy by removing the right half of a girl's brain was reported to the American Medical Association today by Dr. K. G. McKenzie of Toronto.

Before the operation the girl had several convulsions daily but there have been none since, Dr. McKenzie said. With half a brain she carries on in a "remarkably satisfactory" manner.

Full Meal by Needle

By Dorothy Roberts
Associated Press Science Editor

San Francisco, June 16—(AP)—A full meal by hypodermic needle—an improvement on the old idea of a meal in a tube—became reality today as a discovery announced to the American Medical Association today.

The discovery enables a doctor to inject proteins, the "ham, egg and milk" of menus, directly into the blood. Heretofore the needle has been confined to injecting sugars, water and salts.

How Needle Saves Lives

The needle meals will save the lives of persons unable to receive food. This happens not infrequently after surgical operations. While the patients do not directly starve to death, their partial starvation weakens them so that other complications kill them.

The needle meal leaves only fats and vitamins out to complete the "meal in a tube."

Solution of the protein injection puncture was reported by Dr. Robert Elman, of Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis. He injected amino acids, of which proteins are made.

This amounts to detour around nature's own methods. When meat, eggs, milk and other proteins are eaten, the body does not use them directly, but breaks them into amino acids. These acids it rebuilds into the proteins peculiar to human body.

$86.23 Out of $100 In Revenue Comes From Taxation

Ottawa, June 16 (CP)—Of every $100 of revenue collected by the Dominion Government $86.22 comes from taxation and the public debt is the biggest contributor at $26.72, Finance Minister Dunning disclosed in his Budget speech today.

Income taxes yield $13.29 of every $100 collected, Customs Duties $18.09; Excise Duties $10.07, manufacturers, Intermediate $1.19, stamp tax etc. $6.38, and other taxes 38 cents. Non-tax revenues provide $11.93 and other receipts $1.24.

Of every $100 expended by the government interest and other charges on the public debt takes the largest single slice—$25.81.

Special expenditures like unemployment relief and farm payments take another $12.92, government enterprises including the Canadian National Railways deficit $8.45; pensions and treatments for veterans $10.29.

Old Age Pensions require $5.40, Defence Services $4.06, and the combined government departments $13.20.

Civil pensions and superannuations, write-down of assets and capital expenditures account for $1.25.

Italian-Yugoslavian Military Alliance Reports Again Revived

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 16 (AP)—Reports of a military alliance between Italy and Yugoslavia were revived today as political observers attached importance to the sudden departure for Venice of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich. The Premier's visit was declared to be private, but in political circles it was believed he planned to negotiate with Italy's Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, regarding a military pact.

While Spending Sinks Germany Into Red, Nation Experiences Boom

Berlin, June 15—(AP)— Nazi Germany's spending for rearmament, public works projects and the four-year self-sufficiency plan is sinking the nation into the red at the rate of 7,000,000,000 marks ($2,800,000,000) annually, according to a reliable estimate.

Despite this, the expenditures are continuing without apparent let-up—and Germany finds itself in the midst of a boom, governmental-financed through credit inflation, which informed quarters said could continue indefinitely.

The amount of government outpouring of money is reflected at least partially in the cost of rearmament, conservatively estimated by authoritative sources at 15,000,000,000 marks ($6,000,000,000) since the Nazis came to power in 1933.

This trend is further shown by the fact that 80 per cent of new construction is public. Moreover it is authoritatively predicted that investments under the four-year plan will run into billions of marks, including the costs of new iron works and factories for making synthetic materials such as staple fiber and artificial rubber (buna).

Germany's annual deficits can only be estimated, because the government has not published a budget since 1934. The only official figures available are those on the public debt and tax revenue.

ALLEGED LEADER OF GAMBLING RING HELD IN TORONTO

Manny Feder With 37 Others Picked up in Police Raids

EQUIPMENT TAKEN

Toronto, June 16—(CP)— Manny Feder, alleged overlord of a Toronto gambling ring, was on $2,000 bail today after a police raid on the Brown Derby, a suburban resort, and Feder's luxurious suite in the Royal York hotel. Thirteen other persons, along with Feder, are charged with keeping a common gaming house and 24 others are charged with being "found in."

Combined squads of city and Provincial Police swooped down from a remote assembly place 30 miles north of the city early last night. A squad directed personally by C. I. Carroll, the chief provincial officer for Ontario, battered in steel and concrete doors at the Brown Derby and arrested 30 persons.

Canada Cannot Afford to Attempt Economic Self-Sufficiency, Dunning

Ottawa, June 16—(CP)—Canada cannot afford to attempt economic self-sufficiency, cutting away from world trade, Finance Minister Dunning stated in his budget speech today. To attempt it would mean increased production costs and a permanent and substantial reduction in the Canadian standard of living.

As a world trading nation, Canada is subject to influences which lessen the evils of international friction and political tension but also cooperate "in all efforts to restore the market of the world to the normal interchange of goods and services."

In a review of Canada's trade in 1937-38, Mr. Dunning set the aggregate trade at $1,946,783,000, an increase of $154,582,000 over 1936-37, despite depressed conditions in the United States, Great Britain and other countries. The export trade totalled $1,146,800,000, an increase of $27,000,000. Although imports had been declining since January 1938, the total for the year was $799,000,000, an increase of $127,000,000.

Excluding gold, Canada's trade with the British Empire, imports and exports, showed $1,000,000 an increase of $56,495,000. Trade with United States totalled $830,570,... 000, an increase of $72,503,000.

The fiscal year resulted in a favorable trade balance of $345,000,000 a drop of $100,000,000 from 1936-37. Trade balances with the United States, year 1927, the favorable trade balance with United States Gold exports established a further credit of $146,000,000. The tourist industry brought in $150,000,000 and after deducting expenditures of Canadians abroad there was a net credit of $170,000,000.

This left a total trade balance, visible and invisible, of $527,000,000 which enabled Canada to meet all foreign obligations of interest and dividends and, at the same time, pay off foreign indebtedness or repatriate Canadian securities held abroad to an estimated amount of $215,000,000.

DUNNING STATES FAITH IN SOUND MONEY POLICIES

Deficit Predicted in Budget Speech One Year Ago Was $35,000,000

ECONOMIC SITUATION

Gov't. Program in Housing And Other Activities to Bring Revival

Ottawa, June 16—(CP)—A deficit of $13,775,000 for the government's fiscal year ending March 31, 1938, was revealed to the House of Commons today by Finance Minister Dunning in his annual budget statement.

It was declared by a minister of the ministerial faith in sound money policies, a review of Canada's trade and finances and an optimistic appraisal of economic trends for the future.

Revenues Highest

Total revenues were the highest in Canada's history, $516,692,000 and expenditures, $530,467,000. That meant an increase in the net debt of $13,775,000, the nearest Canada has come to a balanced budget in recent years. The deficit in 1936-37 was $77,851,000 and in 1935-36, $156,266,000.

"While naturally I am disappointed to have to report a any deficit," the Finance Minister stated, "I be-

Franklin P. McCall, 21, Admits Holding Jimmy Cash Jr. For Ransom

McCALL SHAKES HEAD

Miami, Fla., June 16—(AP)— Franklin Pierce McCall, 21, was sentenced today to die in the electric chair for the kidnapping of Jimmy Cash Jr.

Cautioning the crowded courtroom to keep quiet, Circuit Judge M. F. Atkinson called the minister's son to the bench.

"You plead guilty to the offence as charged of kidnapping and holding James Bailey Cash Jr., for ransom, of?" he asked. "Have you to say for yourself?" he demanded.

Prisoner Shakes Head

McCall merely shook his head.

"I find you guilty as charged in the indictment," the judge declared, "the same being a capital offence under the laws of Florida, and I sentence you to be held until such time as you shall be delivered by the Superintendent of the State Prison at Raiford, there to be held safely until the death sentence shall be carried out."

McCall heard his doom without flinching. His face was impassive and his looked straight ahead. Afterwards, under heavy guard, he was taken to an elevator and returned to his cell.

Tempted by Thought of Ransom

McCall told the court at a hearing yesterday how he carried out the kidnapping and said he was tempted by the thought of the $10,000 ransom.

Courtship of the five year old boy was found in a thicket about 10 days after the kidnapping by Federal Bureau of Investigation Agents. The spot, At the hearing yesterday, he said the child "must have strangled." while he was "choking" him on the way home to his home. He described how he put two handkerchiefs around the youngster's face and held his mouth and nose.

He added, however, that Germany was "trying to come to an agreement with the Federal Czech-Nazi chief economic adviser to the British government, "in a spirit of mutual understanding with the aim of compromise that will meet the interests of both parties."

Sees, No Legal Obligation

In a speech here Funk, successor to Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as the German cabinet, asserted "there is no legal obligation for the German Reich to take over these (Austrian) debts."

Mr. Hennicker-Heaton attributed the present state of "chaos and unrest" to the faulty upbringing of the individual. The tragedy of the British Empire was the child training of the individual. It was damaging to the state and to the highest development of the human race.

"Indeed, more children are ruined by parental love than lack of it," he said.

Fine Alfalfa Cut On H. Locke's Farm

The first alfalfa seen being cut in Campbellford area was on the farm of Henry Locke, R.R. No. 3, Campbellford on Monday of this week. Mr. Locke told a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer that the crop is an excellent one, and he is very optimistic over the outlook of the crops for the season. All that is needed now is a rotation of showers.

Rye, The Ontario Intelligencer representative learned, is now beyond the milk stage and would not be so much affected were there less rain.

Sweet clover is being cut. The hay crop and all the grains look excellent.

MAY START WORK SOON ON HIGHWAY

Department Representatives Attend on County Council

Possibility that work on the proposed two-lane highway on that part of No. 2 highway between this city and Marysville, will start in the near future was intimated here yesterday by Department of Highways representatives in the city to interview Hastings County Council with regard to the securing of property along the right of way.

Hesitancy or failure on the part of property owners whose land or buildings border or take in the proposed new highway, to arrive at suitable terms for the disposal of these lands or buildings was hinted at being one of the major reasons for the delay in the construction of the new road, representatives stated.

With these deterrents rapidly being taken care of, the prospect of starting construction operations in the immediate future looks exceedingly bright, it was added.

Belleville Native Sets Record As Alderman in Montreal

Ald. Winchester H. Biggar Outstanding in His Vigorous Attitude

Alderman Winchester H. Biggar of Montreal, who is a leading figure in Montreal City Council was born in Belleville, Ontario. Montreal Standard makes him the subject of an article which appeared on June 11th, in which he and several other Belleville sons are referred to in connection with their honorary association with Upper Canada College.

The Standard under the heading of "The Man of the Week" speaks of Alderman Biggar in these words:

"Most people in the mind of Montreal just now is the man who took on the whole City Administration in the Spring a couple of weeks ago, and beat them hands down, forcing them to yield on every point of attack; Alderman Winchester H. Biggar.

Born in Belleville, St. Helen's Island, which culminated in a smashing victory for Mr. Biggar at the polls. Votes to one in the morning of May 25 towards the close of a marathon City Council meeting is only the beginning. It was barely over the smoke had not quite cleared away when he launched another attack, in the matter of the apartment of office furniture and supplies for City Hall Departments. Now he is here driving shaft after shaft home in the new drive.

This is his form of attack: First, he gets a lot of information about purchases, prices paid, and what not. Then he comes out into the open with a demand that the information be given to the officers whose business it is to handle it. Then these officers, he would be if yor or I bought them and not Concorcas Salaia.

Probably he will have the civic authorities next week worrying for a reason why they ought to let him make an inventory while he and his partners men will be busy collecting the information he is going to ask for the week after.

Good Detective Work

That is smart chess-play; good detective work; baffling tactics; call it what you like it's Biggar. And it's got the Montreal City administration on the run.

What he has done with furniture and equipment there are some little matters of doubtful claims and payments for damages that appear to him to show signs of careless handling, to say the least. And there he will have a powerful ally in J. J. Penverne, reputed to be so bluntly honest he can't see a million dollars even though it is chalked on the barn-door in front of his sole. Mr. Penverne's day is coming soon, too.

Who is this West-End alderman who can take a City administration and turn it upside down and shake it out; who can get a three to one favorable decision from City Council by bringing him and whip a line up behind him and whip it watering, vacillating administration into line? Who can massacre the French language all through a council meeting and make them like it?

He is a living contradiction to what old adage which is still hard to slay, that the clever boy is school don't get anywhere in later life.

He was Head Boy at Upper Canada College, Toronto, in 1913. His father was head boy there in 1872, His uncle was head boy there in 1911. His somewhat runs in the family. He was born in Belleville Ontario, on September 1865. Leaving Toronto he came to McGill and entered the course in arts but broke his course in order to take part in the World War, in 1915. In 1919 he came back and resumed his studies, graduating Bachelor of Arts in 1920, with first class honors in economics and political science. In 1921 he graduated B.C.L., taking the Prince Edward Torrence Gold Medal. He practised law with Walsworight, Elder and Mcdougall until 1931 when he entered the service of the Confidential Insurance Co. of America, Mortgage and Loan Department.

Prominent Positions

He made his first appearance in the political field in 1928, when he ran for the aldermanic seat in Notre Dame de Grace, winning by over a thousand majority. He has held that seat ever since. In 1930 he became Leader of the City Council and in 1932 he was selected as Montreal City Council's representative on the Protestant Board of School Commissioners.

In 1934, chosen as one of Montreal's representatives on the Metropolitan Commission, that body elected him as its president. He still holds that office. Under his administration the cost of running the Commission has steadily come down while the assisted municipalities as well as others under the commission's control have forged steadily upward into better financial shape.

In 1936, the Union of Canadian Municipalities elected him as their chairman. At the same time he was taking a leading part in the work of the Canadian Conference of Mayors. When these two bonnes fused, and formed the Association of Mayors and Municipalities Ald. Biggar was chosen honorary secretary of the new body.

Obituary

LATE WILLIAM W. GOODFELLOW (Rosslin)

The funeral of William Wesley Goodfellow took place from the family residence at Rosslin, Ont., on Wednesday afternoon, June 15, to St. Paul's Anglican Church in that village where the burial office was conducted by the rector, the Rev. F. C. Besser.

The funeral was under the auspices of Carter's Loyal Orange Lodge No. 305, Rosslin, and the ritual of the order were performed at the graveside in Rosslin Cemetery by officers of the lodge. The attendance of Orangemen was large, there being a large representation present from lodges at Moneymore, Plainfield and Shannonville in addition to the members from the Rosslin district.

The I committal service of the church was conducted by the Rev. F. C. Besser. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

The bearers were Messrs. Raymond Sullivan, John Colden, Elmer Cross, Stanley Carter, Donald Foote and Merton Wilson.

JOHN M. ROMBOUGH (Foxboro)

After a lengthy illness John Matthew Rombough passed away at Foxboro, Ont., late on Wednesday afternoon, June 15.

The late Mr. Rombough, who was in his 83rd year, was born in Rawdon Township, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Rombough. For some time he resided in the Township where he was born and about sixty years ago he moved to the Foxboro district. In religion he was a member of the United Church and well respected by all who knew him.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. John McPeen, Sidney Township; one son, Mr. Earl R. Rombough, Foxboro, and one brother, Mr. George Rombough of Bonarlaw.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. NELLIE W. SPRAGUE

Trenton, June 16 (Special)—The death occurred on Monday, June 13, of Nellie Ward Sprague, widow of the late Albro N. Sprague, at her home on Lorne avenue, in her 77th year. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon from the residence with service following at the Glenwood Cemetery Chapel in Picton and interment there. A son, Nostrom Sprague, survives.

Ten Fail to Appear When Names Called

Ten local young men, who city officials testified had been summonsed to appear in special police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, failed to answer to their names on charges of failing to pay their 1937 city poll tax.

Five delinquents did appear, however, and were given until the 29th of the month to raise the assessed tax or face penalties in default.

"If those men who were summonsed today failed to appear they are not in court on the 29th of the month, they will be committed in default," Magistrate Butler announced at the close of the proceedings.

City Solicitor A. B. Conger, K.C., and Assessor T. E. Ketchenson appeared on behalf of the corporation, presenting the charges of failing to meet the city poll tax. All today's delinquents admitted they were in default, but contended they could not meet the assessed costs at this time. "Pay your taxes before the 29th, or the court will have to commit you in default," warned His Worship.

No arrests were reported in the city during the past 24 hours.

STRAWBERRIES DOWN TO 10 CTS.

Mid-week Market Flooded With Berries of Fine Quality

An abundance of early-seasoned strawberries forced the price of that farm commodity down to 10 cents per box during today's local market trading. Vendors opened asking 25 cents for the boxes, but as the day's market continued and became flooded with this early season fruit, the price dropped. The specimen of berries offered were exceptionally fine and found a ready market when the price was lowered to 10 cents per box shortly before the noon hour.

New potatoes were offered for the first time this season, the vendors getting 10 cents for a quart box measure. Only three vendors displayed new potatoes, two of which were extra fine specimens, considering the earliness of the season. Farmers reported splendid crops in the fields and predicted a fine crop of all farm produce this year as well.

No changes were noted in the general range of seasonable farm products, however. The prices of asparagus, green onions and other spring vegetables remained unchanged from last week.

Hastings County Rate Cut 4 3-4 Mills

By error a heading in yesterday's issue stated that "County Rates 4 3-4 mills, 1938 Rate stands at 10 1-4 mills." The important word "cut" was left out of the first part of the heading, which should have read "County Rates Cut 4 3-4 mills. The reference to the Hastings county rate for 1938 as 10 1-4 was correct.

Satin Slippers

By KAREN ASHERAND

Claire Carter was applying lipstick to good advantage on a perfect cupid's bow, looking over her shoulder into the mirror behind her as her alluding little self.

The new waiter had been most attentive all week. Already he had asked her to a college dance. He was a rah-rah boy, working for his tuition. Nothing so classical as this young Adonis had ever come into Claire's life before. His being there in the same restaurant with her made it easier to be on her feet all day. To carry trays to impatient consumers. To receive pointy tips which, however small, served to eke out the pittance allotted to the Yellow Canary's help.

Reand was at the bar ordering drinks for the jolly 3rd quartet at the window. On his way over to their table he slid over to her and whispered out of the corner of his mouth so that the boss wouldn't notice, "Can you go?"

"I told you I couldn't," she whispered back. "I can't get those satin slippers. I can't go barefoot."

"Let me buy them for you."

"No; thanks."

"You can pay me back next pay day."

"No. I gotta give all my money to Ma this week 'count of her operation. She's paying off the doctor. All one of the college dames."

"I wouldn't enjoy it. None of them can dance like my Yes do."

Claire approached her table with the appropriate smile on her lips. The smile passed unnoticed by the man sitting there writing after nately studying the menu and scribbling on scraps of paper!

"Just a club sandwich and coffee" he ordered abruptly and kept on scribbling.

Gertie on the next table interrupted her on the way to the kitchen. "D'ya know who that is?" she asked in an excited stage whisper indicating the scribbling person with her thumb. "That's Meriand Ross the novelist. You lucky bum! You would draw that table. He ain't married either. He's as easy to look at as Rand."

Claire brought back Mr. Ross lunch and took a good look at him. He was easy to look at she admitted to herself but he looked as if he needed sleep and plenty of it.

He paid and left a dollar tip for her or to his lunch except to bolt it absently. Then he handed her a dollar bill and left without waiting for his change.

It was Gertie who picked up the scraps of paper from the floor where he had dropped them. She crumpled them in her hand and started to throw them in the rubbish container.

"Say gimme those" demanded Claire "You aren't going to throw those away?"

"Land's! them are no good!" exploded Gertie. "Looks!! Some of 'em are scrawled on wrapping paper, little bits of scraps!" She handed them to Claire who smoothed them out with tender fingers.

"They belong to my customer" Claire said. "I bet they're precious to him. Writer folks scribble on these paper if they can't find any thing else. I'm going to send them to him."

She thrust them into her pocket and the minute she was off duty she slipped into a telephone booth to look up his address. Meriand Ross. Her lips carmaed the name even as her pen wrote it on a restaurant envelope. Rand stamped it and mailed it for her.

The next day Meriand Ross appeared at the restaurant and asked to see the manager, "want to talk with the person who mailed me back my notes" he requested.

Rand was standing beside the boss. "It was Claire Carter sir," he hastened to tell him.

Claire was sent for.

Meriand Ross held out his hand and Claire laid hers into it.

"You don't know what those notes meant to me," he told her. "I was nearly crazy when I found out I had lost them. They were the finishing chapters for my new novel. 'Rising Tide.' I sent it off today. You're a smart little girl. I felt that I had to reward you some how thanks."

He smiled down upon her from his famous height withdrew his hand and left. Claire pulled and shut her eyes. In her hand was a crisp crackling slip of paper. She dared not look at it. She had never received a reward before. Perhaps it would be the price of a pair of satin slippers. Rand was looking at her proudly. She could feel his eyes on her and she opened her eyes and suddenly had a share in the bit of paper in her hand.

It was green. On one side of it was written in Meriand Ross' bold scrawl: "Give to bearer one complimentary copy of 'Rising Tide'."

On the other side there was nothing.

BOY'S AND GIRL'S GOLDEN AGE

The Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn season is near at hand for many of those who will be getting out of school when the term is ended and the examinations have been written. Older persons remember the days of summer vacation and look back in reverie on the carefree days, when adventure could be had at any time with the aid of a little imagination and enterprise. Even the smallest islet and pond were the scenes of innumerable adventures, which live in the memory till life is over.

Boys of today living in a more sophisticated mechanical age, still are boys and find romance in everything. This is a perpetual land in which boyhood dwells, where the cares of life do not weigh on them and ambitions do not thwart the pure flow of imagination.

Out into the next two months will go many thousands of young boys who will have their pleasures made for them in a sense by their parents but still these boys will find a way to make their vacation an enduring memory in the imagination. Still more thousands will trust to their own initiative in which they are not lacking and mak high holidays in the thorough enjoyment of everything that offers.

Girls too make of the coming months one which elevates their mind and spirit and body. Their realm is largely the same sphere as that in which the boy lives, and is as real and vital.

These are the boys and girls who have not yet reached the stage of youth who have to face life's problems on graduation from school, but those who live in the pure serene air of joy, in the golden age.

EARTH TREMBLES

A little something else to think about in the lands in western Europe has come in the form of earth tremors, which were felt particularly in Belgium and the British Isles on several recent occasions. To nearly every person a report of the rocking of the earth in England, Belgium, is news. The Rhine Valley has plenty of rockslips on record.

Though the extent of the tremors these several days was wide for reports came from afar, nothing was indicated in New York, though the seismograph usually which reports movements of the earth where mountains are being pushed up showed no record of the European tembler.

Rockslips are going on all the time as the earth's crust adjusts itself, though some countries are more subject to the tremble.

It is not so many years ago that a quake was experienced in eastern Canada which was felt in Belleville district, as people were wakened out of their sleep in the early morning by the agitation of their homes.

Recent tremors in Britain indicate nothing unusual and should cause no alarm.

COMMON SENSE

It was some time ago that a report was heard of a small group of Americans living in a district in Maine, which juts into Quebec, and which is practically cut off from commercial relations with the United States. They have to deal with Canada mainly because nature has spread a barrier of forest between them and the rest of Maine. Then came a surprise when a bill brought up the question as a proposal in the Commons that this piece of Maine be annexed to Canada. But the war drums on either side of the line did not beat, there was no mobilization of soldiers. The proposal fell through as there was a flaw in the bill and it will not be revived. Canada does not want annexation of the smallest bit of ground, because she has learned the great lesson of democracy. And the "nine" in which the dwellers in the isolated area are situated is to be proposed, be remedied by arrangements which will permit these people to buy at the nearest point which is Canada and carry home their supplies without duty.

Sense, that is what that is. That is what fear-burdened Europe needs. If the like of the Czechoslovakian situation in Europe were ever to rear its head in America, it would be tried by that test of common sense and there would be no threats even from the most powerful of states. It is all because people of North America trust one another, realizing that two peoples can live side by side in amity and goodwill. The pity is that Europe licks old wounds and feels old twinges of pain because of past enmities. Yet England and France have taught the world a lesson of peace.

WEDDED

We two went down to the tossing sea,
Where great gulls wheeled and swung,
We paced the sunny pebbled strand,
The waves their white foam skyward flung—
We held each other's hand.

The sweet years fled, we too are old,
White our hair as ocean's spray;
Again we stand where sea meets land,
We watch the breakers' rhythmic play—
We hold each other's hand.

And this we know—we two are one—
Our dream is of a timeless strand.
All blue and gold, where he and I
Shall still together pace the sand,
Still hold each other's hand.

THE LONG SUMMER VACATION LOOMS AHEAD, the quiet drowsy summer when the appeal to just laze around is sometimes overwhelming. School ceases and a whole parcel of young folks are released to—what? Let's consider the lads. God bless them—the future generation of leaders in the business and professional world and in politics. Vacation is an important time for them—time for deep thought and a checking up, time for decision as to what objective to aim at in life. A long, lazy vacation would mean a decided loss in morale and opportunity, besides adding to the burdens of parents, already carrying as much load as they can possibly carry. Consider carefully, lads, and let your vacation be constructive and valuable, let's not end the summer with nothing much beyond a severe case of sunburn and a few fish stories. One lad we know is capitalizing his vacation already in cash and experience—he is sailing in a big freight cargo carrier between Chicago and the Atlantic coast. What an outing, and getting paid for it? Another lad crossed the ocean in a cattle boat and secured a job in England two days after he landed. Another bright chap of Belleville made aviation his objective, studied aviation here, worked his way across the big pond in a cattle boat, applied and was accepted in the Imperial Air Force where he is making good, and has had one vacation trip home since joining up. Another young chap in Belleville worked during vacation on a construction job, most of the time engineer, conductor and motive power on a wheelbarrow loaded high with bricks. Breaking into the workaday world in vacation time, whether for wages or experience only, means acquiring a lot of experience which will prove very valuable in the years to come. School is but a memory and success in life depends entirely upon individual effort.

There's a sign on a fence near Pine Bluff, Arkansas, which reads as follows: "Notice! Trespassers will be prosecuted to the full extent of three bulldogs and one mongrel which never was over-sociable to strangers. Don't loaf around here unless you can whistle and get loaded with sofa pillows. Darned if I ain't gittin' tired of this hell raisin' on my place. Signed B. Grimson."

JAPAN IS CERTAINLY HAVING PLENTY OF TROUBLE IN CHINA. The short, shorp undeclared war is stretching out indefinitely —and with a smile that is childlike and bland the heathen or Christian Chinee can smile as peculiar as in the Galloping Gulch days of Bret Hart. Now the Chinese have turned the flood waters upon the invaders and the Japs are floundering in the yellow mud of the yellowist of rivers. There are some observers who say that Japan cannot win, even though they do not lose by force of arms.

Chamberlain's First Year

Neville Chamberlain, Premier of Great Britain, has completed his course in office a year in that position and there will be quite a widespread feeling that he has made good.

He has had a difficult task in following Stanly Baldwin, who always inspired complete confidence and who enjoyed the respect and the trust of the people in an extent almost beyond parallel in the case of other occupants of the position.

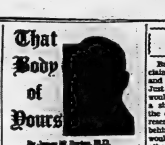
Chamberlain had scarcely assumed the reins when a number of correspondents, largely of the Liberal variety, commenced to intimate that he was not the man for the job and Winston Churchill was thought to be asked to take hold.

There is no more brilliant personality in England that the said Churchill. But even those who admire his qualities the most would not feel some qualms with regard to his efficient occupancy of the post of First Minister.

A devastating critic and on occasion a scathing fine speaker, whether in the House or on the platform, he apparently lacks the elements of stability which are residents of the Old Land desire in their public leaders. This is largely the reason for his exclusion from the Recent Cabinets.

Meanwhile Chamberlain has held steadily on his way manifesting calm judgment in more than one threatening situation and adding his own opinions in a firm though not dogmatic manner, as it is recorded that he is always ready to consider the viewpoints of his colleagues.

The most disturbing incident in connection with his Cabinet occurred around the resignation of Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, which came most particularly towards Italy, the Prime Minister did not agree.



There are those who consider that Eden was absolutely right in his contentions and there are those who think a good deal of a visionary but with no disappointment there over Eden's doubt that a better understanding has been reached with Mussolini. Largely of these latter, we still think that if Duce will not carry out his part in the new relationship but that remains to be seen.

At any rate some accord was reached at a time when the Berlin-Rome Axis seemed to be most threatening and public appreciation was at once relieved to that extent.

Under Chamberlain's auspices the armament expenditures by John Bull have been greatly increased on land and sea and in the air, while still Britain retains its colonial nature are to be undertaken.

At the same time no one doubts that these preparations are for peace and no aggression and that Britain's First Minister and his associates are bending every effort to bring about a solution of many European threats and difficulties with out resort to arms.

—F. R. S. in Brantford Expositor.

The saddest sight in life is not the adult who is confined in a mental hospital because, of every ten that enter, perhaps six may came out cured. These mentally patients have their complete development mental and physical, and have lived for a time a normal life.

The saddest sight is that of the little child who has not, nor will he ever have, his full mental and physical equipment. He is doomed at birth to a life where everything must be done for him and as he gets older others may have to be protected from him. He is the child whose thyroid gland is absent or nearly absent and little or no thyroid juice is being manufactured. He is an idiot.

Fortunately research workers have been experimenting on these children who have little or no thyroid gland, and have found that just as the removal of all or a certain part of the thyroid gland will slow up the child in its mental and physical thyroid or goitre patients, so will the use of thyroid extract in these doses that are prescribed children cause them to develop mentally and physically.

Unfortunately this condition—lack of a thyroid gland— cannot usually be discovered in the child until six months to a year old and sometimes the parents may be two or three years old before the condition is discovered. The earlier the treatment is given the sooner the child begins to catch up or approach the normal in both mental and physical development.

In the Maritime Provinces, Perth, Pr. E. Ice Fort reports the history of a child who, in 1926 at the age of 1-2 years, showed the symptoms of idiocy due to lack of thyroid juice or secretion. Treatment was given and a complete absence of the thyroid gland. A part of a human thyroid gland was taken from the body of a man who had been suddenly killed was immediately transplanted into the abdominal muscle of the child. Three days later the mother says the child had lost much of his useless fat and the expression on his face was greatly changed. The parts which were much behind in development began to grow rapidly and his intelligence improved. The child continued to improve although not to a rapidity as that at the age of 1-2 years. Now at the age of 12 years the child is almost normal and physically is still improving showing that the thyroid graft is still manufacturing juice.

The lesson for parents is not to hesitate to speak to the physician if their child seems heavy, slow and not as right as they think it should be.

Condominium in the Pacific

British and the United States condominium of Canton Island and a series of atolls in the Pacific. The location is unique—one that would be if Italy and Russia had a similar sovereignty dispute, how the dispatches would be announcing reserves of force in the shadows behind them, how the nationals would be pointedly ignoring each other waiting the chance to slit one another's throats. As between Westminster and Washington, on the contrary, there is only cordiality. It is said there is talk of a condominium for the British and American residents of Canton Island meanwhile live on the best of terms.

Condominium is not a novel idea. Britain and France jointly administer the New Hebrides; British and Egyptian flags fly side by side in the Sudan. Condominium would not, you may consider to the act of the United States in giving air mail concessions there to Pan-American and laying down that that company's employees must be the sons of the United States; the license is not exclusive and other nationals might be employed by a British company.

It is said that both the British and the United States residents of Canton Island have designed their own flags in stainless steel or, in concrete in front of their respective groups of huts. Already registered their formal assertion—not incompatible, with condominium, as witness the Sudan—they are just two

Successors to Britain's Throne

The daughters of the sovereign (King George VI.) are in the order of succession to the throne, and after the younger daughter—it is understood that Princess Anne, born in 1936—the Duke of Gloucester; then the Duke of Kent and his children; then Princess Alice and her children; then Princess Marie Louise and her children; then Lady Maud Carnegie and her son; then the Queen of Norway; then Prince Olav of Norway and his children; the children of the late Princess Victoria, the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg (his eldest daughter, Queen Marie of Rumania, having formally renounced on her marriage all possibility of claim to the British throne); then the third daughter Princess Alexandra of Hohenlohe-Langenburg and her children; then the fourth daughter (Princess Beatrice, Infanta Alfonso of Orleans and her children; then the Duke of Connaught and his children; then the Princess Patricia, Countess of Athlone, and her daughter.

Everything then exhausted the families of all Queen Victoria's sons we learn," to the distaste, "to her grandsons, beginning with the house of the late Empress Frederick, the late Kaiser and the late ex-German Emperor at his head, is wisely out of practical bounds, and the problems to pursue the investigation any further."

ETHIOPIAN SPOILS

"I chatted the other day with Rev. Dr. R. Brown who has spent some years in Ethiopia prior to the Italian conquest. He was there when the Italians made what he told us of Mussolini's men flying low over villages with the air and mowed down men, women and children with machine guns in punishment of the Abyssinian's failure to hand over his conquered territory. It is almost too horror. Yet from what we learned of Ethiopia it was not worth starting a world war over.

The Ethiopians have just changed masters. Italy has not much of an absolute monarch. He kept his people in poverty forced levies. He took what he wanted of their cattle and lands without so much as by your leave. Italy has a population of 44,000,000 and is the most overpopulated nation that was conquered by the Italians and no room to settle the human freedom was at stake. Doubtless the Ethiopians preferred the dictator of their own race and blood to one of white face from Europe and they had a right to continued existence as an independent nation. The Italian invasion of Ethiopia was a dastardly wicked, and can no more be justified than the Japanese conquests of other days.

The Ethiopian believers in the League of Nations and its principle of collective security. We cannot, in fact, say that it will be right to expect Great Britain to go to the rescue of Ethiopia all by herself. The day will come, we hope, when all the nations of the world will agree that any aid any nation attacked by an aggressor, but at present it is not a fact. The refusal by Britain to refuse to acknowledge the fact that Italy has now conquered Ethiopia and that it will drive Mussolini and Hitler closer together and endanger world peace. It is not worth the life blood of a Canadian boy to restore an Ethiopian dictator to the throne of Addis Abeba, no matter how much sympathy with him and his subjects.—Midland Free Press.

ADVERTISING CANADA

"Canada," said Lord Tweedsmuir to the visiting Scottish farmers the other day, "never makes enough or too much for the failures and too much for the successes." There is much truth in that remark.

The world hears about our Western drought, but nothing about our railways, but much less about our Eastern accommodation. Perhaps the world does not realize that just a small population in half a century has made a success of its pioneer settlements, has made a good start in the development of rich natural resources, is one of the finest trading countries on earth. Sometimes it is the fear of boasting or officiliga ye fail to hear these facts from Canadians themselves.

The trouble is that our accomplishments go into the blue books, our difficulties are news, and only our successes are not sufficiently understood abroad. Perhaps it isn't news, but it is a fact of first importance that alongside an English-speaking nation of 11,000,000 we have preserved and developed a British community, solidly devoted to the British tradition. The progress of Agriculture, of industry, of mining alone, not to mention the drought is news, but that progress has been a vital factor in world history of the past half century.

There isn't much we can do to tell the world, but we shall just have to carry on in the knowledge that even in the United States many people still believe Canada a place of perpetual ice and snow known chiefly as the home of the Mounted Police, but we need have no fear of the world's not in the end account.—Ottawa Journal.

PAYING THE DEBT

A question answered in parliament shows that 30 per cent. of all the money collected by the Dominion government goes to pay interest on the Dominion's debt. The total revenue is $2,373,000,000 and the annual interest paid on it is $1,000,000.

What this means may been seen by going back 26 years. In 1912 the debt was $463,000,000 about two millions—more than three billion dollars less than it is now; the annual interest bill but $13,500,000, The interest bill that takes up 30 cents out of every dollar collected by the government now has to be earmarked for interest.—Ottawa Journal.

JUVENILE STUMPERS

An extraordinary number of stories have bobbed up recently about boys and girls scarcely out of their cradles being the oratorical platform during political campaigns.

The latest tells of a seven-year-old Cleveland girl who has been taken up some forty times of various candidates since the age of four.

Her speaking voice is loud and penetrating. Her gestures are graceful. Her delivery is unusually good for dramatic effect. No audience is too large or too small for her. She is never ill at ease.

I don't always know what the big words she uses mean, but I get the most of phrases. I can always remember the good speech, but I forget the one before that.

A wonderful plan suggests itself. Obviously, we have a natural-born orator. In a typical of her contrivers she is simply the average politician in the small. Why not turn the field of stump-speaking over to the children, body, stock and barrel?

With the eyes shut, nobody's notice the difference. And the men who would otherwise be wasting their energies yelling in the tents would have a good time and leisure to make a start toward unemployed themselves for the jobs they're after.

REEVES CLAIM ALL PAVING CHARGES HAVE BEEN PAID

Claims Based on The Interpretation of Certain Statute

HEATED DISCUSSION

Claims of reeves of urban municipalities of the county that they had paid in full moneys advanced by county council under agreements made some years ago for the purpose of paving streets of the incorporated villages and towns precipitated a strenuous argument that took up the major part of the afternoon session of Hastings County Council yesterday.

The claims were based upon the interpretation of a statute that, it was stated by the urban reeves, entitled them to a 75 percent rebate on that part of their county rates that goes towards maintenance of the county road system.

According to the agreements, some of which were claimed by the "gentlemen's agreements" the two mill subsidy to these municipalities was to be foregone, and applied on the moneys advanced them by the county, for the purpose of paving streets.

While actual figures proved that substantial amounts of these debts to the county were outstanding, the urban reeves claimed that non-payment of the rebate automatical. ly paid the debt, and in some cases "overpaid it."

Various Angles Aired

Heated discussion followed as various angles of the case in question were aired by members. Rural reeves aligned themselves in such cases against their fellows of the towns and villages, as argument followed argument. Decision in the matter was left over until today after members of the council had been asked by Warden Henry Larkin to "sleep on the question, and arrive at some solution to-morrow."

Injection of the question: "Did the county receive a subsidy on the money they extended to urban municipalities?" that brought an affirmative reply, added fuel to the argumentative flames.

"We have paid for our pavement, and more besides," declared Thomas Cranston, Stirling stated, "especially if the county received a subsidy from the government at the time. However I think that was an inadvertent mistake, for I don't think the subsidy was thought of when the agreements were made."

Warden Henry Larkin agreed with Reeve J. L. Thatcher that the villages had been dealt with fairly. "I think these agreements should be lived up to," he said, "as the municipalities involved have received the benefit of the expenditure of money over a period of years."

Sidney Reeve Demurs

Reeve Roscoe Rokeon demurred. "It looks to me as if the villages and towns had a grievance," he said, "especially if this county received a governm.nt subsidy to finance the building of these roads. Why should the villages be charged the full amount?"

Reeve Cranston: "We have had to re-surface our street several times at no cost to the county."

Road Supt. Langlois: "In these agreements there is a clause that the county must maintain these streets."

Reeve Sayers Tweed: "Four thousand dollars have been spent on our street but the road needs a sealed surface or it will go to pieces. I would say the road has not been finished."

Reeve Weir: "I am willing to live up to the gentlemen's agreement made by Madoc, but I would like to see a different system of payment such as a set amount every year."

Reeve Linn: "As I see it it seems to me the county built there roads, and are now making the villages pay for it."

Not Unanimous

Suggestions at this point that all agreements be wiped out after five years, received the approval of several members of rural municipalities with reeves of villages involved demurring.

Dr. Lumb here moved that the village of Bancroft be paid 75 per cent of amount spent on village streets in 1937 amounting to $368.62.

Reeve Rollins: "This thing should be figured out on an interest basis. The villages are kicking because they are not getting anything back. They have their streets but they are not saying anything about the rural municipalities, who helped pay the interest on the money borrowed to build these streets."

Dr. Lumb: "All I am asking for is what should have been coming to us in April of this year.

Sticks to Statute

I am not asking for any back money just what is coming to us under the statutes."

Warden Larkin: "If these rebates are to be paid the regular grants will have to be eliminated. We can't pay both."

Reeve Davis: "We should forget this petty squabbling and think of the county as a whole. Let us be fair and take the bitter with the sweet."

Warden Larkin: "Bancroft has already received a grant of $400 this year and the proposed rebate of $368 brings the amount paid back to $320 over what Bancroft paid in county rates. Is that being fair?"

Further discussion being productive of no decision Warden Larkin brought the argument to an abrupt end when he suggested members "sleep on the question and arrive at a decision tomorrow."

Communications Read

Several communications were read to council during this session among them being a request for the annual grant from officials of the Red Cross Hospital at Coe Hill, and letters of appreciation for grants made to the Salvation Army, Toronto and the Canadian Institute for the Blind.

Unanimous consent of council was given the request of Reeve Sprague of Madoc Village that letters of sympathy and wishes for a speedy recovery be sent to Reeves James A. Moore of Elzevir and Geo. Spencer of Tudor and Cashel, who were unable to attend this session due to convalescence from operations for appendicitis.

Notice of a bylaw to bring in equalization assessment for the county was made prior to adjourn. ment. This important phase of county council activities will be placed before council for discussion some time today.

ANNIVERSARY WILL NOT BE OBSERVED

County Council Votes "No Action" on W. C. Mikel's Proposal

Stressing the fact that the one hundred dollars allotted as expenditure for the affair was insufficient to stage a celebration worthy of the circumstances surrounding it, Hastings County council yesterday afternoon voted "No Action" on the proposed ceremonies commemorating the centennial anniversary of the building of the Hastings County Courthouse, that occurs this year.

The committee appointed at the special session held some weeks ago to investigate the possibilities of holding the celebration stated in their report, that the amount granted by council was insufficient for the purpose of staging ceremonies worthy of the event.

Following the report, a motion voting "no action" was carried.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., who addressed council on this subject during the special session held for the purpose of organizing the county tercentenitennial, again offered his services should council decide to hold the celebration, in a brief address to that body yesterday afternoon.

He pointed out the advantages to be gained by the county through advertising, tha: would ensue following the celebration. "Attention of the country would be drawn to this county," he said, "while newspapers of the country would carry the story to thousands of people".

Since his address to council some weeks ago, he had received several communications, regarding the holding of such a celebration, the speaker pointed out. He had received numerous of the co-operation of the Belleville City Council and of the Trenton Town Council, kind of the Trenton Town Council,

"An expensive affair would be inappropriate to the occasion, Mr. Mikel declared : "I would suggest Dominion Day or Labor Day as an ideal date on which it could be held, while high dignitaries of the country, officials of other countries and others could be invited. A celebration dinner, provided by some church organization of the city could be held during the day. I think it would be valuable publicity for Hastings County, for that is the sort of stories people like to read", the speaker said in conclusion.

Chic Small Hats Go Well With Suits Of Summer Weight or Sports Things

Combinations of Materials Are Frequently Used in Them

By LESBETH

THE PERKY little hat that goes well with the smart tailored summer suit, the one or two-piece dress or with spectator sports clothes, never was more becoming and fashioned with more youthful gaiety than this season.

Combinations of materials, such as seen in the gray straw with felt crown worn by Jane Bryan, featured this player, are frequently seen. This one has a simple banding of grosgrain ribbon and tailored bow in the back.

Still another well fitted style is the white felt worn by Marie Wilson. Banded with black toyo straw with a feather bow trimming, it is a clever little chapeau.

Then there is the beret type—always a favorite. Ann Sheridan goes to tea wearing this flat beret in black straw, which sports a grosgrain bow at the apex, giving it a very perky appearance. Only one of these hats has a veil—a very unusual thing this season.

Large Brims Appearing

The larger brims are appearing in greater numbers right this minute, and will continue until August, when the fall hats always make their appearance.

Paris milliners are busy making new hats for private clients to wear at the races, and other social functions, and as attendance must always be ahead of the season, for autumn.

Petos planned in honor of the Louis XIV tercentenary are having a great deal of influence upon fall millinery in Paris. There are many bicornes, one of which is a three-cornered shape which fits the head in the back and has no brim. At front and sides there is an aureole cut with a point at center top and one at either side. One hat this shape is in royal blue felt with violet grosgrain ribbon binding around the edge of the aureole and the base of the brim.

Tiny tricornes tilted forward à la pompadour, are also of felt, with edges bound in contrasting colored grosgrain. Black with navy centre and draped in a veil of the same orchid shade is particularly attractive, with the veil showing a design of black apple blossoms.

Pastel ribbon trimmings on black felt hats are favorites with the milliners; and there are small canotiers in pastel felts with black veils. The veil, by the way, seems a style that is to be with us in the autumn as it was in the early days of the century.

Fur early fall felt is the only material being used at the moment, and the trimmings often are of velvet in bright colors.

Oiled silk peasant kerchiefs tied over the heads and under their chins were seen at the Paris races, worn by young girls, to avoid damage to their coiffures.

Chain Letter Acquaintance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

During the chain-letter craze, I began to correspond with a boy in a distant state. He was my age and in the same year in high school. He wrote very interesting letters, and we continued to correspond and have been writing for over three years now.

He's thinking of coming to see me this summer, and if he does, how should I greet him? He's considering bringing a friend. Should I invite him to stay at our house and take him sight-seeing, or should I ask him and his friend to board with us at our home? I am only me to depend on as a breadwinner? Or should I suggest that they board with us and take their meals at a restaurant?

Puzzled

As you really know nothing about this young man, except what he chooses to tell you in his letters, it would be a safe r plan to let him board and lodge in some place beside your home, until you find out what sort of a person he really is. When he sets the date of his visit, you might suggest places where he might board and lodge.

Having him stay at your home strikes me as somethin of a risk.

Long Job if He Leaves Home.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been adopted but not legally. And I can't get along with my parents now that I'm older. I have a job, but if I leave home, I will be unable to keep the job. I've been looking for different work in my spare time.

The girl I go with is a grand person, but if I should introduce her to my adoptive parents, they'd pick her to pieces. And I won't stand for that.

Conrad S.

You'll probably not like my advice that you watch your step and avoid a break with your adoptive parents. They must have thought a good deal of you to have brought you home and given you their name if you break these bonds. It may be that you can be honorably reconciled later on.

As for picking the girl to pieces is that likely if she's a creditable girl?

His Mother's Welfare Not His Concern

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My father died when I was a child of four. I'll admit my mother worked very hard to keep a home for us and give us good education. I lived over the family when I was 18 and kept things going till my two sisters were married, and my brother on his own.

I went to many confusd pri vy my own domicile. The girl I want to marry is not favorable to have mother live with us. And I am willing to make a down-payment of $2000 to have mother admitted to an old lady's home. But she cries whenever I suggest this, and says she has always been dependent till she lost her health. But I side with my girl and feel that we ought to go with ourselves.

I admit mother was splendid in the way she looked out for us children and kept our home together. Still youth and age have different problems.

A. M. C.

Have you ever considered, my dear sir, that when you're old you will have the problems which age bring? And your children, if you have any, will probably feel you and your welfare as much of a burden as you are now finding your mother's welfare a problem.

I think some better solution to your mother's future could be found than putting her in an old lady's home. When I get a letter like yours, I always think of a certain European proverb "The Lord doesn't pay all his bills on Saturday night".

Reply to Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have received a formal wedding invitation from friends I have known for years, and I am even more friendly with their daughter who is to be married. While I know such an invitation calls for a formal reply, yet would it not sound too proper under the circumstances? Is another reply is 'in order, will you kindly give me an idea of what I should say for acceptance of the invitation?

2—Is it correct to wear a hat at the reception?

S.

1—This is not the correct point of view to take about a formal invitation of any kind:—No matter how well you know the people who are sending the invitation, no matter how well you know the bride-to-be, you should do the proper thing and accept the invitation.

. . . that is, to send a formaly-worded reply to the invitation. As a matter of fact, this is not only a question of propriety, but has also practical advantages, as the replies arrive, they are sorted into "Acceptances" and "Regrets", and the hosts' plans are regulated accordingly. If you wish to appurtenment your formal reply with a note of good wishes to the bride-to-be, that is very charming to do, but first you must send your formal reply.

2—You do not tell me whether the reception is in the day-time or evening. If in the day, you wear a hat to the reception; if in the evening, you wear evening clothes and no hat.

Engagement Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Would the following wording be correct in announcing the engagement, where the father of the bride-to-be is not living:—

"The engagement is announced of Ann Mary, daughter of Mrs. Brown and the late William Henry Brown, Toronto, to Mr. John Alexander Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Green, Ottawa. The wedding will take place in June."

2—When referring to a minister and his wife, is it correct to say, "Reverend and Mrs. Arthur Jones" or "Rev. Arthur Jones and Mrs. Jones"?

3—When addressing an invitation to a doctor and his wife, is "Doctor and Mrs. Thomas Reader" the correct form?

4—At an afternoon house wedding, with about thirty-five guests, should the bride's mother and her sisters, who are living at home, wear hats?

5—Should the groom's mother receive with the bride's mother as the guests are assembling for the wedding?

K.

1—This form of engagement announcement is, in general, correct. However, there are several details that should be changed. The name of the bride-to-be should read Miss Ann Mary Brown. And daughter of Mrs. William Henry Brown and the late Mr. Brown of Toronto.

Or the form may indicate that the announcement is made by the bride-elect's mother: Mrs. William Henry Brown announces the engagement of her daughter, Ann Mary. In both forms of announcement, the street-address may also be given.

2—We should never say "Reverend Jones" . . . therefore, "Reverend and Mrs. Arthur Jones" is not correct. We should say either "The Reverend Arthur Jones" or "The Reverend Mr. Jones". When we address an envelope to a minister and his wife the best form of address to use is "The Reverend Arthur Jones and Mrs. Jones."

3—While it is correct to address an invitation to "Doctor and Mrs. Thomas Reader", it is far better form to write "Doctor Thomas Reader and Mrs. Reader".

4—At an afternoon house wedding, the bride's mother, who is the hostess, and the sisters, who would be co-hostesses, would not wear hats.

5—It is proper for the bride's mother, if she wishes, to invite the groom's mother to receive the guests with her at a house wedding.

Great Hope Is Seen in Boys' Clubs

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D. Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

THERE'S A NEW kind of club in the heads of policemen. It is the Boys' club.

Already 24 New York City there are 75,000 underprivileged boys who are members of the Police Athletic league of that city. Last year 40,000 boys joined this organization supervised by police-men intent on helping the city's them lads co-operate with the law and be good citizens instead of considering every blossom in the natural enemy of childhood. Playground sweets, sports contests, stunt nights and the continuous activities all over that great metropolis have helped reduce its juvenile crime appreciably.

The same general plan is operating in many cities. Whether initiated by the police, religious leaders or business men, the movement has acquired momentum and promises to be very effective in stemming the crime wave.

Ex-President Speaks

Former President Herbert Hoover is president of the Boys' Clubs of America. Speaking in Chicago recently he said:

"I have lately been abroad. I was naturally interested in the organization of boys and girls, for that has declined under Hitler into Jobs. The Fascist countries have devoted themselves to this organization as never before in history. The Fascist program embraces much that we try to maintain in our Boys' clubs and Boy Scouts and our multitude of institutions devoted to youth.

"That is, they systematically examine them physically, undertake to build up their bodies, to give recreation, to find their occupational bents and to give encouragement and faith in the future. It is practically compulsory. And with it all they incessantly pound into the Fascist mode of thought in these children. They build for regimentation for submission and for mental and moral subjection to their masters. They build the egotism of race superiority. They deny the right of criticism and free expression. Their concept is every individual simply a molecule in a mass-directed state. It all has a military complexion of the deepest dye.

Not What We Want

"That is not what America wants. We want to build the sense of voluntary action, to build up personality, to create a sense of personal responsibility. We want to build for moral discipline, not regimentation. We want to build for the dignity and character of the individual. We want education in truth, not propaganda. And just as Fascists build their boys to support a Spartan state, we want to build our boys to support a democratic state."

Wedding Breakfast And Dinner Combined Asked

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Fruit Cup or Ice Cold Fruit or Juice
Chicken a la King or Chicken Salad or Chicken Patties
Hot Rolls Olives Pickles
Scalloped Potatoes
Ice Cream Wedding Cake
Coffee

Someone has asked me for a menu for a wedding breakfast and dinner combined. This is not a very original one, and practically anything that you consider less expensive and can easily obtain and cook may be substituted for the chicken. This menu is a popular one, however. I added the scalloped potatoes to make it more hearty. They would be unnecessary for a wedding breakfast. Not being a conventional person myself, I don't see any good reason for serving food that is too expensive for your pocketbook. So if you can obtain chicken more easily than chicken, use it. Veal may be substituted for chicken and creamed. Home made pickles are the best in the world, and your own relished jams and jams and jellies will be more appreciated than the most expensive of store delicacies. Your favorite and most successful cake recipe may serve for the wedding cake, if you make, instead of buy, it. The following white layer cake recipe will serve, and you can double the recipe if you wish to make a large cake.

Today's Recipes

WHITE LAYER CAKE. — One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup milk, three level teaspoons baking powder, two cups flour, whites of three eggs, beaten stiff. Cream butter well, then add the sugar, creaming it in a little at a time until the mixture is very smooth and creamy. Sift the flour and baking powder and beat the whites stiff. Add the sifted flour and baking powder alternately with the milk, and at the last fold in the whites. Bake in layers and frost while still warm, adding more coloring to decorate with if you wish. If you have a pastry bag you can put the names of the bride and groom and the date on top of the cake, or ornament it with any desired design.

Crossroads

By Kathleen Norris

Tony, one could look on and on into the tops of these oaks, and never grow tired of them and never find any other look. Look how all the light is against the branches and how golds on the leaves. If we could understand just one oak—

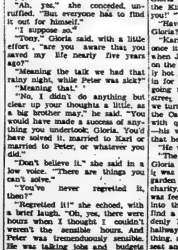
"You're a born reporter to have dirty.

"Ah, yes," she conceded, unruffled. "But everyone has to find it out for himself."

"I suppose so."

"Tony," Gloria said, with a little effort, "are you aware that you saved my life about three years ago?"

"Meaning the talk we had that rainy night, while Peter was sick?"



"Meaning that."

"No, I didn't do anything but clear up your thoughts a little, as a big brother may," he said. "You would have made a success of anything you undertook, Gloria. You'd have solved it, married to Karl or married to Peter, or whatever you did."

"Don't believe it," she said in a low voice. "There are things you can't solve."

"You've never regretted it, then?"

"Regretted it!" she echoed, with a brief laugh. "Oh, yes, there were hours when I thought I couldn't, weren't the sensible hours. And Peter was tremendously sensible. He was talking jobs and budgets and living quarters; you remember we were in my car, driving for a little while? And then—

"Then you began writing the radio things?"

"No, he began that. He began writing them for this Florry La Page—remember her? The girl who had the old-lady voice so well. And then I began to look them over and change them a little and put into them things I'd actually heard the old people say, at the Bayview, you know, and so the whole thing started."

"To be made into several other radio things," Tony observed.

"We were lucky," Glory said immediately to retract it. "No," she went on, "it wasn't luck. Peter'd had months, years of struggle then, trying to make good; he'd learned his success. But the truth is, Tony" she went on thoughtfully, "we knew, we both knew, that it would be all right. Somehow we went into it all—had to, as it were—knowing that it would be all right. The other thing would have been all wrong. No, for any other woman, perhaps, but for me. And that I found it out in time I owe to you."

"You owe nothing to me," said Tony. "Sooner or later our hearts get broken in this life, and then—if we've anything at all in us, we learn something."

"Why look ye here or there?" she quoted with a low smile. "Lo, the Kingdom of Heaven is within you!"

"Have you ever seen him since, Gloria?"

"Karl? Once. Twice, really, but once it was only a glimpse. It was when Jimmy and Peter and I were on the top of a bus. It was a terribly hot day last summer; we'd come up to the Metropolitan Museum and were going to a place on Fifty-seventh Street. Some woman gave her car, that I thought it was an added richness in my life, to have had it. And afterward Mary's coming and Jimmy's bitten leg pretty well healed, the memory of those twenty minutes," Gloria ended, laughing. "I chose what I wanted, and I still want it."

"Funny!" she echoed. "It all came back," she said simply. "One doesn't get over it, ever. We were both thinking of it, Peter and I, as we said, but I know his hands were as cold as ice. Just mine, too."

"You talked?"

"Yes. Past, you know, as if we could never stop. And then quite suddenly he got up and went away, and I wandered out to the dining room and found some coffee of something. But it stayed with me for days—the old feeling—the excitement of it," She stopped.

"The strange thing, Tony," she went on presently in a different voice, "is that if we'd been man and wife all those years I wouldn't have felt that thrill would I?"

"You could think that?" he asked.

"No, I couldn't. But you'd said that years ago, you know, that it was only when one refused love—just sort of love—that it lived. I told him that day that I'd never be sorry we'd cared for each other, that I thought it was an added

"Well, and what of it?" Tony growled. "That doesn't mean anything. The men women mother are risky? And less of men, if they had the woman's end of it to do, would be like that about their children."

"I think so! And, for that matter Peter's as cracked about the children as I am. We do everything with them—we take them everywhere. We're planning already for their holidays—picnics and house parties and their friends with us for holidays. And consequently," Gloria added, with a little self-conscious deliberation, "we're pleased about March."

"March, eh? Is that the way it is?" Tony said, after a second. "Kitty gave me a hint that there'd be a Gloria to keep the name going."

"A daughter would be Gloria, we think."

"And a son Peter?"

"No, Peter says 'not, I say not. We're all for 'Anthony Rugby Rudd.' Beg may be wave!" Gloria said, with a little break in her voice.

"Ah, toy dear," Anthony said.

It was quite dark now in the garden. They could not see each other's faces. They could hear laughter and clatter from far away, where Kitty had all the children together in the kitchen; they could hear the breathing of the lost, the sleeping. Gloria sat down below the oak trees.

Man Won't Wed Baby's Mother

He Makes Home but Refuses to Marry the Woman

By VIRGINIA LEE

WHAT QUEER "critters" we mortals be, are we not? I have just read a pathetic letter from a young woman who is married and yet not married. She is the mother of a small baby and is living with the baby's father, hoping some day for him and doing everything a wife would do—and yet there has been no wedding. They got the license one time, but didn't get married.

The young man seems very fond of the baby and of the girl and seems perfectly willing to support and maintain a home for them, but hasn't so far gone through the ceremony which would make him his wife's legal husband.

His mother wants him to marry the girl, and the girl herself is very, very unhappy, because she isn't doing right. What is to be done? They started simply because the girl is so worried about the matter.

If his mother and his love for you cannot persuade your baby's father to marry you, why not try to get some outsider, an older person, preferably, or at least one who has some influence with the man to persuade him? Possibly he has some idea that he does not believe in marriage. But surely, when he knows how hard mail must be for his child if he can't legally claim him own father, he will be willing to go through with a simple ceremony which will make all things legal.

Poor babies, I don't know why they should be penalized for their parents' faults. Don't quarrel about the matter. That never helps. Try persuasion when you are calm, most likely to listen to you, and count on his mother's help, to get him to legalize your position and the baby's. And good luck to you.

NO NEED OF A DINGY KITCHEN IN THE HOME

There's no need today to put up with a dingy kitchen or to wield the scrubbing brush there. Everything can be washable in the kitchen—paint, wallpaper, linoleum or other washable coverings for the walls; varnish, linoleum, or fellcase covering for the floors.

Bright accents of color, if you wish, can come from the paint pot. Housewares counters are full of attractive and colorful accessories that can liberate the towel with which it is wiped. The more absorbent the towel, the better the dish can be is for bacteria, especially if lung cleaner than the towel with which moist and soiled.

Fresh towels should be used for each batch of washed dishes. If the dishes have been well-washed and the towels used for no other purpose than wiping, swishing in warm soapsuds and through rinsing, augmented by weekly boiling, is all they need. Always spread dish towels well on the rods to dry or better still, hang them out of doors for a dose of sunshine and fresh air.

Dish Towel Deliciousness

Whatever the advantages of wiping dishes dry — and there are advantages—it is better to use the quick and air-dry method than to dry them with unclean towels, contrive and colorful accessories that can liberate the towel with which it is wiped. What Causes Itching Ear? Dr. Clendening Explains

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT IS ONE of those things that looks like nothing except to the sufferer that has it. To him it is a serious disease. I refer to itching of the ear and the canal in it. In spite of the advice, which is good, that you should put nothing smaller than the elbow in the ear, it is nearly impossible for him to keep from scratching it with matches or toothpicks. Which, of course, as he knows as well as anyone, only makes it worse.

Ordinarily enough, it has been found that it is due to a fungus infection. There may be several of these small vegetable organisms, yeasts or thread-like growths. They grow rapidly in warm, moist environment, and the neglect of getting the ears perfectly dry after the bath is one of the causative factors.

Contrary also to popular belief, the presence of wax in the ear does not tend to cause this condition. In fact, wax is likely to stop the growth of the fungi.

Ordinarily the symptoms are simply itching. What makes it annoying is that it is an itch where you can't get at it. So does the match and the attempt to scratch it. This often results in abrasion and infection of the skin with a widespread inflammation that may involve the whole external ear. Sometimes this is quite serious, as it may spread over the skin of the neck.

Treatment Effective

Treatment is quite effective with simple mycotiecide drugs. The best of these is crestin in olive oil. Naturally it should be applied by a physician. It should be put on with a cotton plug and left in not longer than 12 hours.

If there is pain, gentle syringing with oil or water should be done before the application. If secondary infection has occurred it should be treated with ammoniated mercury. Other drugs that have been shown to be effective are iodine in liquid petrolatum. Castellani solution (carbol-fuchsin—a saturated alcoholic solution with 10 per cent resorcinol added) turned in 2 per cent glycerine. As in the case of ringworm, a common fungus disease, athlete's foot, may cause respond to one drug and some to another, depending on the nature of the causative fungus.

Prevention of reinfection is important, and if swimming is indulged in the ears should be thoroughly dried afterwards and a plug of cotton lightly impregnated with a weak solution of ethyl alcohol should be applied for a few minutes. The fungi are easy to kill when they are on the surface, but are not so simple to destroy when they have penetrated the upper layers of the skin.

LOVELY STAR TELLS BEAUTY SECRETS

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

A FEW DAYS ago this department went to a party given for Olivia de Havilland. We were lucky enough to corner her and get her to give us some of her secrets for keeping beautiful.

Olivia's recent trip to Europe to recuperate from an illness brought on by overwork was, she laughingly confided, "less of a vacation than I had hoped for. But in the picture business, people learn to rest harder, just as they work harder, in order to get the most out of every minute. So I advised other girls who have really hard jobs to do the same sort of energy conserving that I do. It's really a lot of fun and you will feel so much better all the time."

Though she still is very young in years, Olivia is wise and knows that her beauty is very important in the sort of work she is doing, and she also knows that good health is the foundation of all beauty. So plenty of rest, good nourishing food and a few pleasant interests in life are "musts" on her program.

No matter how many tempting invitations she receives when working in a picture, she never, never goes out during the week. "My Sundays usually are spent swimming, lolling around and relaxing, or visiting close friends for a quiet afternoon."

The wild, fast night-life one isn't as far as Olivia de Havilland is concerned. You know how bad you look after a night spent out carousing till the wee hours of the morning. And since a star's popularity depends very much on her looks, she does all she can to keep them as fresh and sparkling as possible. So don't fool yourself and think that the beauty which makes a star your favorite can be acquired away through long hours spent in a cafe half-asleep.

No Rich Desserts

The charming young star confessed that after her work at the studio is over for the day she drives home and has an early dinner which usually consists of chops, or steak or beef with lots of vegetables. She dislikes rich desserts or sweets so milk and custards play a big part in her diet, especially now when she is still underweight. That's a good tip for you girls who feel a bit run down after a long hard year's work, too. After her light but nourishing meal, Olivia either reads her script for the next day's shooting, or washes her hair, letting it dry naturally, or catches up on her reading.

Aside from the sensible life that Olivia leads, she said she had few other beauty secrets.

She remarks: "I believe that lots of sleep and relaxation in the sun and fresh air, and the most scrupulous cleanliness as regards your person, make the sort of girl that is 1938's ideal."

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

The evergreen holly with its shiny, pointed, leathery leaves and bright red berries, is a valuable ornamental shrub. To grow happily it should be planted in a rich, moist soil.

If holly is planted in an unfavorable condition it may live but it will not thrive. Under favorable conditions leaf spots may develop as shown in the Garden-Graph. Spotted leaves when they occur on holly should be removed and burned. Do not pull the leaves off, instead they should be snipped off with a pair of scissors, close to the stem.

There is only one pest which affects holly, and this is the leaf miner which produces yellowish-brown mines in the leaves. The young of the leaf miner hatch from eggs laid on the underside of the leaves. To control leaf miner on holly spray with a nicotine-soap solution early in June and again in July.

Poems That Live

TUCKING THE BABY IN

The dark-fringed eyelids slowly close
On eyes serene and deep;
Upon my breast my own sweet child
Is sleeping.

Has gently dropped to sleep;
I kiss his soft and dimpled cheek,
I kiss his rounded chin,
Then lay him on his little bed,
And tuck my baby in.

How fair and innocent he lies;
Like some small angel strayed,
His face with warmed by God's own smile,
That slumbers unafraid;
Oh! that my soul, so troubled soul,
Still pure from taint of sin—
My thoughts are reverent as I stoop
To tuck my baby in.

What toil must stain these tiny hands
That now lie still and white?
What shadows creep across the face
That shines with morning light?
These wee pink shoeless feet—how far
Shall go their lengthening tread,
When they no longer cuddle close
May rest upon this bed?

O what am I that I should train
An angel for the skies;
Or mix the potent draught that feeds
The soul within these eyes?
I reach him up to the sinless Hands,
Before his cares begin.—
Great Father with Thy folds of love,
O tuck my baby in.

GROCERS HOLD BIG COLGATE SOAP SALE

LOCAL GROCERS ANNOUNCE BIG SALE OF SOAP

Here is an opportunity for local women to stock pantry shelves with Colgate-Palmolive Soaps cheaply.

Local grocers are enthusiastic about the sale because, from years of experience, they know that Colgate-Palmolive soaps represent the highest standard of quality obtainable. One grocer remarked, "The Colgate people are never satisfied until they produce soaps that they are popular. They have a fine toilet soap in Palmolive which recently they improved the formula of. The result is that they have a better soap in every way. Princess Flakes also sells well. Women often remark on its purity; how easy Princess is on their hands."

Dealers are particularly interested in the new Concentrated Super Suds, a granulated soap for home laundry use; developed as a result of laboratory tests which proved that all solid clothes contain dangerous germs. A famous laboratory certificate that confirmed tested Super Suds removes germs and dirt; washes clothes hospital clean. It contains a special water softener and gives extra rich, lively suds that seek out dirt fast with out scrubbing. Easy on clothes, hands and washing machines. Colgate's famous Cashmere Bouquet, Assorted Beauty Soaps, and Cashmere Castile, are also on sale.

Will Not Change Dividend Policy Says J. P. Bickell

Toronto, June 15—(CP)—Sharp division of opinion developed at the annual meeting of McIntyre Porcupine Mines Limited yesterday regarding the Director's policy of keeping cash reserves high and dividends low.

Replying to the several shareholders who could see no good reason why the annual dividend payment should be kept down to $3 a year on each share when earnings were running much higher, J. P. Bickell, president, declared the present policy would remain unchanged as long as he remained president.

This policy, said Mr. Bickell, would in due course provide a surplus that would give continuity to shareholders' investment in a nonchoice to the shares. He added that he was the largest shareholder and that his interest was 3,758,975; Wood Pulp $2,649,838 ($2,823,140); Gypsum $2,126,630 ($10,723,324); Automobiles and parts $2,246,228 ($2,055,446); Copper partially manufactured $6,431,311 ($4,267,247); Nickel, unmanufactured $3,986,942 ($5,354,625).

Irate Farmer with Shotgun Interrupts Bards' Gathering

Demands The 'Trespassers' Leave His Property — Stays Till End of Ceremony

IN EARLY MORNING

Aylmer, Que., June 15—(CP)—An irate farmer with a shotgun interrupted the solemn ceremony, attended by some of Canada's leading poets, held under the plane at Montebello Park near here early this morning as a tribute to the late Archibald Lampman, one of their most brilliant fellow craftsmen.

The poets attending the Archibald Lampman Memorial meeting in Ottawa came shortly after midnight to the grove where Lampman found inspiration for some of his noted works.

The Canadian Bards, including Wilson MacDonald, Lloyd Robert, Nathaniel Benson, Michael Gaziel, Eric Gaskell, Arthur Bourinot and James H. Hill, reached their fated spot to the day and recited in turn selections from their own works.

Suddenly the solemn communion was shattered by an irate farmer with a shotgun bursting in on the gathering to demand the "Trespassers" leave his property.

The purpose of the meeting was explained. The farmer's anger subsided and he remained gun at hand, until the end of the ceremony.

FORESEES GREAT U. S. RAIL LOSSES

Washington, June 15—(AP)—R. M. Hoyer of the Interstate Commerce Commission predicted today the United States probably faces the greatest railroad salvaging operations in history unless there are drastic changes in the carriers' situation.

The Commissioner expressed his view in dissenting from an I.C.C. decision permitting the Chesapeake & Ohio railways Company permission to acquire and dismember the bankrupt Minneapolis and St. Louis railway.

Ayres action on the application, Mayer contended, "avoids, rather, present issue, but it makes certain greater issues in the future."

The commission, in another important action yesterday, agreed in principle to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad's petition for authority to increase passenger coach fares to 2.5 cents a mile.

The present rate is two cents. The rehearing was set for June 27. The original request was turned down by a 6 to 5 vote.

WINNERS PACED BY LAURIE GIBSON

R. C. A. F. Mushballers Defeat Yourexs in Extra Innings

Trenton, June 16 (Special)—Paced by Laurie Gibson of hockey rugby and softball fame, who played an inspired game throughout, the R.C.A.F. mushball nine stopped into first driven seat of the Trenton Softball Association at Bayshore Park here Wednesday night when they bested the heretofore league leading Yeurex aggregation by a close 7-6 score in a game that was a thriller and went two extra innings before a decision was reached. Attended by one of the best crowds of the year the exhibition was a thrilling one and saw a number of sparkling plays pulled off. Gibson with a triple way to his credit in the first inning, continued to shine all the way through, meeting a double in the second and taking one of Sam Ellis high flies in deep right field for an astonishing putout in the fifth. His mates rallied round him for two other double plays, and Gibson himself stepped into the hero's role when he went to the mound in the sixth to replace Sicoli.

In all the game produced more thrills than any encounter this season, and although the nine featured by a prolonged and unsolved argument, which developed in the ninth, when Manager McCue of the Yeurexites attempted unsuccessfully to substitute a runner for Mcnin, who had reached first base. A few close plays were waved, mostly by the spectators, but in any case the decision made little difference as with the tieing and winning runs on base Emerson grounded out.

STRAIGHT LOSSES NOW NUMBER 11

Toronto Leafs Hitting The Skids at Terrific Rate

Toronto Maple Leafs, who have lost eleven straight games in the International League, are hoping they can pull out of their nose dive as well as Baltimore Orioles have been able to do.

The Orioles had thirteen games in a row before they came through with a victory over Montreal Royals. Since then the Orioles have won four of their last six games. They captured two of them last spring in a sweeping a doubleheader from Rochester Red Wings 8-4 and 6-0.

The Leafs, meanwhile, lost No. 11 and their fifth straight to the league leading Newark Bears 5-3. Charley Keller led an 11-hit attack with a homer and three singles as Beach won their sixth consecutive victory.

Despite their triumph, the Bears' lead over Buffalo was cut to seven games when the Bisons took both ends of a bargain bill from Jersey City 6-2 and 10-3. The third twin bill on the program saw Montreal and Syracuse check a split. The Chiefs won the opener 9-3 and Montreal the windup 9-1.

The Orioles allowed the Red Wings a total of just five hits in both games. Pat Malone and Bill Perrin combined to stop the Wings in the first bill, both hurlers going the distance, and Pete Blumetis twirled a three-hit shutout in the final.

AFTER YOU WINS SENIOR RACE

Semark's Boat Finishes Second And Joka Third

Crossing the finishing line 15 seconds ahead of Harry Semark's "Alaska", Maurice Callaghan's "Joka" first to win the senior class race in the weekly punt races staged on the Belleville Yacht Club off Victoria Park yesterday. An off-shore breeze sent the contesting craft off to a splendid start. There not being many second difference between the quartette of "A" class punts as they followed the gun.

Duke Smith's Joka, three winner in the "A" series was well up in the race until the last lap when Callaghan's After You moved up the lead, closely followed by Semark's Alaska leaving the Joka in the third slot. The light, but steady off shore breeze, proved to the liking of the "After You" with the race being completed after one hour and 30 minutes of racing.

STARRING ON MAJ OR LEAGUE MOUNDS

Pitching a nice brand of ball in the major leagues are these three old standbys of Detroit, St. Louis and Chicago. TOP DISHEY is Tommy Bridges, the main plank in Mickey Cochrane's Tiger platform, who seems to be back in big old-time form after a spell of ailing arm. The fellow raring way back to send over a high, hard one is Louis Norman Newsom, known to his compatriots as Buck. Buck can run Dizzy Dean a close second in the "I'm good" vocal sweepstakes, but this year he can go the Cubs' headache one better when out on the mound by hurling winning ball. He's won eight for the struggling Browns. The third party is Larry French, who has been allowing the opposition very few chances to score when they face Charlie Grimm's Chicago Cubs.

Belleville Bay of Quinte League entry took a firm grip on the league leadership by trounding Walt Gerow's charges right in Gilbankville yesterday. The Pinning-Weir nine haven't looked better this season, playing a fine brand of ball in the field while at the bat they made their hits count into runs as the box score will indicate. The piece developed into a sterling hurlers' duel with Speedy St. Louis ultimately besting Stan Sproule. Incidentally Pinkey did not scrap a potent bat counting a single, double and triple, scored a run and batted two runs across the plate for a splendid day's effort at the fourth base.

Although there was but a mere handful of spectators in the stands, those present were treated to a nice ball game, until the locals broke out in a belated ninth inning orgiasm and scored four to clinch the piece, winning by a 7-1 count. St. Louis had splendid control and teamed with Sonny Green to give the locals their best looking battery in years. St. Louis contined along nicely relieving in the fifth and eighth as Card opened the frame with a triple, first ball at the bat corner, as St. Louis took care of the three remaining batters. The whole team played heads-up ball and deserved their day's honors. Belleville now leads the Quinte loop parade with three wins in four starts.

Although play proved slightly strenuous and ultimately took its toll on some of the players, district tennis clubs moved out into the Quinte Tennis loop race yesterday. Down at Point Anne the play of Quinte Country Club netters took four of the possible six points of the day. The city men proved too strong for the "crescent village" male players, with Freddie Salmon getting some sturdy opposition in the men's singles before he won over C. Fraser, but in the ladies department the homesiers proved more efficient, although in the mixed doubles the competition was exceptionally keen and well played. Judging from the results of yesterday's play sterling tennis can be expected throughout the season. In the other matches played the Belleville skating Club netsters five matches to one. The Dufferin Street tennis club took the ladies' doubles with Marion McLean and Esther Mcericff being the only local winners.

Collectively the three clubs competing the C.O.B.A. this year seem to be of the same opinion—"the O.B.A. let us down, told us to paddle our own canoes, and we're doing with some exceptionally fine paddling." Time enough there have been wholesale inspections of Quinte baseball players, but when the O.B.A. refused to assist in the matter of supplying either a workable schedule or a fourth club therefore the "rabbit" loop magnate did a right-about-face, realizing the difficulty of operating a three team league, and imported new faces. Oshawa is the only club not to bring in new and proven talent, but even the Motor City squad is not without criticism. "Buzz" Bennett, their first string receiver, broke his regulation rule, when it comes to technicalities.

There is one angle the C.O.B.L. clubs have to combat the provincial baseball authorities upon. First we understand the O.B.A. is frowning on the C.O.B.L. for belated imports, but according to a recent O.B.A. bulletin, the winner of the senior O.B.A. series will play off with the champions of the St. Lawrence League next fall. It seems the Perth-Smith's Falls et al loop have an existing residence rule of some-where about June 15 so if the C.O.B.L., as potential O.B.A. winners, are called upon to meet the St. Lawrence loop winners, and such might be the case next fall, why should the far eastern league have the advantage of a belated residence pick, a privilege denied the C.O.B.L.? Last year the Oshawa club, winners of the C.O.B.L., lost money in Quinte O.B.A. playdown ventures. Why should they repeat this if an opportunity for an extended league play-off is offered them? The C.O.B.L. has afforded considerable revenue to the parent baseball body for years past, yes, more than any other basic league in the province for recent years, but, there's a limit to rigid restrictions especially when the shoe is laced so tightly it pinches.

Relative to the subject the Prisoners scribe had the following comment recently:

"There are several angles. The O.S.A. declined this year to help the loop get suitable leases or an interlocking schedule—in fact forbade them. And the O.B.A. developed all pretence this year of being tied in with the Amateur Union. On the other hand, the Ontario body has a March 15 residence rule and players may all be sharp-ed who move from club to club in the O.B.A. Yet the C.O.B.L. has lowered the ax for this year and goes its own sweet way. Well, it can't go indefinitely. Either the O.B.A. will toss the Central League out at the executive next June 15 or settle loop, or the C.O.B.L. will have to decline to enter the O.B.A. playdowns this fall, that is the winning club. The affiliation fee is paid, but the loop can default in O.B.A. finals—just operating in league competition for this season."

Frank Sedore's Point Anne softballers were in no way disgraced when they bowed to the Corby A. crew by a 7-5 count last evening, the game was productive of some nerve-racking moments. On the night's play the Corbys should have won in regulation time, but for the excitement of the fans the piece was carried into overtime. Chalk up steady pitching for Sedore's disciples as Cole's big and potent bat as the fellow on the other side gave Corbys take a commanding lead in the loop.

To hurl a no-run, no-hit ball game it usually an outstanding pitching job, especially in the major leagues, but to pitch two no-run, no-hitters inside of a week is nothing short of phenomenal and that's what Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati's sensational young moundsman has accomplished. On both occasions he walked a few batters, but failed to yield a single hit. No other major league hurler can claim such a feat. no-hit games in the same season.

FISCAL YEAR

Employment Increases

"I am therefore pleased to be able to report that during 1937 the increase in the volume of employment was for the first time since 1929 more rapid than the rise in industrial production, and also that since the downward trend in business began last December employment has declined less rapidly than other business indices.

"Estimates by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics of the total number of wage earners employed in all industries show that the number in employment was higher in March, 1938, than in the corresponding month of the preceding seven years, and only slightly less than in March of 1929 and 1930. The estimated number of unemployed wage earners was 456,000 in March, 1938, which was lower than in the same month of any year since 1931."

There was no better way of expanding employment than by stimulating building activity. The construction industry had already revived under the stimulus of the housing act and home improvement act.

Not Ready for System

"Under our system at least, government expenditures cannot take the place of private enterprises, and I do not think that our people are prepared to accept the alternative system of regimentation under which all or practically all expenditures would be government expenditures."

These principles led the government to propose the municipal assistance and housing bills now before parliament. For the most part they would involve the government in loans of self-liquidating character. There would be some loss but it would be amply compensated by the employment created and permanent improvements in living conditions.

Manufacturing Bright Spot

Manufacturing activity in the production of capital or producers' goods was one of the bright spots of the year, particularly in the iron and steel industry. The mining industry was responsible for the greatest stimulus to National economy and production was well over the previous year. Results in the Forestry Industries were less encouraging. Exports of Newsprint fell off toward the end of the year.

Referring to interest charges, Mr. Dunning said:

"There are some who appear to believe that the government should not pay interest at all or, indeed, should issue debt free money to finance its expenditure or to retire its interest bearing debt or to do both of these things. It is incredible that this hoary fallacy should persist after so many historical demonstrations of its devastating possibilities.

"Perhaps I underestimate the insidious appeal of a program which promises to make something out of nothing although I must say that for no one more than for a Minister of Finance should such a pgram have seductive charm.

"How much easier my task would be if I could draw on the accumulated savings of the Canadian people without paying interest thereon or if indirectly I could do the same thing by issuing credit against our natural wealth, that is, against the resources of farm and forest and mine and factory now owned by the Canadian people as individuals and not by the Dominion government."

Monetary Policy.

Discussing the monetary policy which has been followed in Canada in recent years, Mr. Dunning said:

"It has been an easy money policy designed to offset any deflationary tendencies and to ensure that ample currency and credit would be available to meet the needs of industry and trade. Its general objective has been to promote the maximum possible stable annual level of productivity and the minimum possible level of unemployment.

"It is a tribute to the skill with which the policy has been administered that while currency and credit have been expanded at a quite rapid rate, the substantial rise in production and trade which occurred has been consistent and has taken place without speculative excesses or other unsound features developing in our economy.

"To monetary policy must be given at least some share of the credit for the health and soundness of our internal economic conditions which I have reported. We may feel confident that it will adjust itself with equal efficiency to the changing conditions that may arise in the future."

Revenues, Expenditures.

The minister then tabled the statements of revenues and expenditures for the last three fiscal years.

	Estimates 1937-38	Actual 1937-38	Actual 1936-37
Ordinary Expenditures	410,964,000	410,964,000	410,964,000
Ordinary Revenues	310,200,000	310,200,000	310,200,000
Deficit (-) or surplus (+)		-100,764,000	-100,764,000
On Ordinary Account	-100,764,000
Special Expenditures	68,532,000	68,532,000	68,532,000
Less Special Receipts	3,000,000	3,000,000	3,000,000
Balance	65,532,000	65,532,000	65,532,000
Additional Capital Expenditures	4,430,000	4,430,000	4,430,000
Additional Government Owned Enterprises	44,833,000	44,833,000	44,833,000
Additional Other Charges	1,718,000	1,718,000	1,718,000
Total	116,504,000	116,504,000	116,504,000
Less Other Credits	3,304,000	3,304,000	3,304,000

Additional Deficit or Deficit Surplus as Above	90,345,000	90,345,000	90,345,000
Overall Deficit or Increase of Direct net Debt	12,775,000
Because of the late date of the Budget it was possible to present accounts in almost final form.

"For the fiscal year 1937-38, our revenue from taxation and all other sources aggregated $516,092,000. This total exceeded that of the previous year by some $63,538,000, and surpassed by $45,535,000 the previous high total of the fiscal year 1928-29.

60 Percent Increase

"The extent of our recovery from the low point of the depression is strikingly illustrated by the fact that our total revenue in 1937-38 represented an increase of more than 60 percent over that for the year 1932-33.

"Total revenue from taxation amounted to $448,852,000, and exceeded the total for last year by $62,000,000. Every major tax source contributed to this increase.

"The ordinary expenditures for the year totalled $410,964,000, an increase of $23,942,000 over the previous fiscal year. The ordinary revenues amounted to $310,200,000, so so-called surplus on ordinary account was almost $100,000,000. However, this surplus on ordinary account has only slight significance under present conditions in which relief and other purposes.

"The largest single item of special expenditures, was necessitated by the disastrous drought in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Appropriate Funds

"To meet the abnormal and unforseen problems created by this severe drought condition, the Dominion government felt obliged to appropriate funds by Governor General's warrants in order to aid the expenditures involved in purchasing and distributing seed and fodder for livestock in the drought-stricken areas, and in providing direct relief to farmers living in these areas."

Unemployment relief expenditure was analysed in the following table:

	1937-38
Grants-in-Aid to Provinces	$19,462,000

Centenary

Centenary—The President of the Woman's Association Mrs. H. Robbin opened her home for the June meeting. A chicken dinner was served at the noon hour, by the hostess and her assistants. Over thirty members and friends enjoyed all the good things provided by the ladies. Arrangements were completed for the re-opening of the church and also for a strawberry and ice cream social to be held in the near future.

The W.M.S. meeting followed with Miss P. Johnson, President, in the chair. A vote of thanks tendered to Mrs. W. Calvert for her fine donation to W.M.S. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. Nuon of Belleville, for kindness shown her. Mrs. Phillips was group leader and her program was on Temperance, a dialogue given by Mrs. Kelley, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. A. Calvert and Mrs. Milton Vandewater showing the effect of the drink habit among the young people and the part we can play in overcoming this evil, was splendid. The meeting closed with prayer.

HEADS IMPERIAL AIRWAYS

Director-General of the British Broadcasting Corporation for the past eleven years, Sir John Reith (above) has been appointed full-time chairman of Imperial Airways Ltd. The position, one of great importance in the British government's plans, had been vacant since March, following the recommendation of the Committee on Civil Aviation that a person be appointed who could devote all his time to it. Reith is 49, and was in charge of Britain's munition contracts in the United States during the war.

BRITISH WOMEN TRAIN FOR HOME DEFENCE IN CASE OF WAR

Following pointed speeches by Sir Samuel Hoare and other leaders charged with the duty of preparing the nation for action in the event of a new war, British women have flocked to join auxiliary and reserve organizations formed to take over much of the nation's home defence program if required. Here a class is absorbing a lesson in flying and in ground instruction for aviation. The scene is the Ramsgate airport. Instructors are supplied from trained government branches. This class belongs to the Women's Auxiliary Service, one arm of the Women's Reserve.

TRAGEDY MARS GRADUATION EXERCISES AT R.M.C.

Tragedy marred the graduation exercises of the Royal Military College, Kingston, when Gentleman-Cadet H. G. Campbell was found dying in his room of gunshot wounds. Cadet Campbell was thought to have been brooding over the death of his chum, Cadet R. D. Smith, who died, after a friendly scuffle with fellow cadets, last April. Owing to the last wish of the dying cadet the annual June ball was not cancelled. The March Past of the cadets during the graduation ceremonies is shown, TOP, while the Color Party is shown, LEFT. Standing like ramrods these cadets, right, are awaiting inspection by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie.

"Speedy" St. Louis Outhurls Stan Spratt Especially in Pinches

SERO HEAVY HITTER

Shortstop Clouts Single, Double And Triple in Pastime

Behind the steady pitching of "Speedy" St. Louis the Belleville "Orfuns" fortified their grip on the top rung of the Bay of Quinte League by virtue of a 7 to 1 victory over Walter Carew's charges in Napanee yesterday. It was the Belleville-nine's third victory in four Quinte League starts but was supplemented by timely hitting on the part of Surrell Fanning's kidlets.

From the outset the pastime revolved into a sterling hurlers' duel with Stan Spratt and "Speedy" St. Louis assuming the spotlight until the eighth frame, when the Belleville nine closed a one run breach and subsequently continued their offensive attack to cinch the game in the ninth with a four run splurge. The homesters opened a scoring rally in the fifth by virtue of hits by Spratt and Sweet but failed to capitalize on subsequent scoring possibilities, with St. Louis hurling superb ball in the clutches. Belleville was first to score on a sacrifice hit by Sweet. Struck out by St. Louis. Spratt to 1st. Base on balls, off St. Louis 1, off Spratt 1. Umpires: Thomas, plate, Loucks, bases. Time of game 1.35.

KI-Y Softball

Handing the "Bearcats" their first league reserve the "Tuf Bencers" made the juvenile team in the local Ki-Y league close as the latter sprung a surprise 2 to 1 victory on the league-leading Bearcats at Queen Mary School grounds last evening. In the remaining Reverside batting spree cheated the'game for Belleville, however. "Picky" Bero led the locals with the villor as he scuffed Spratt for a single, double and triple to drive in two runs and score one for good measure. Empson, Green and Johnson were the other more prolific hitters for the winners, while Sweet cuffed a triple and Kimber had two safeties to aid the homesters.

Although Spratt struck out ten to St. Louis' three, the latter hurled superb ball in the pinches and was given the much-needed timely support in victory. Each moundsman walked one batter.

NOAKES ON MOUND

Strikes Out Ten And Allows Only Five Hits

Lee Barrett's Belleville Kiwanis Juniors took a firm hold on the leadership of the Quinte Junior baseball league race when Bert Noakes hurled the Bellevillo nine to a 15 to 7 victory over the Picton juniors in the Prince Edward County seat yesterday. It marked the second consecutive win for the local kids over the Picton juniors in as many games played.

George Lee's juniors cuffed the deliveries of the home town hurler, Shannon, for five runs in the initial frame and subsequently shelled him from the hillock, to have Burgoyne finish the pastime and ultimately quell the riot of hits coming from the Belleville Kiwanis bats.

Not a single Picton batter collected more than one hit from the offerings of Noakes, while Jarrell clipped three, Guay a trio and Carson three safeties for the Belleville kids. A first and fifth inning rally assured the Belleville Kiwanis kids of victory, Noakes struck out ten Picton batsmen during the nine frames and limited the homesters to five hits.

COLE'S BIG BAT HELPS IN WIN BY CORBY NINE

Team Takes First Place by Winning in Eleven Frames

POINT ANNE TOPPLED

Eddie Schrieder Outpitches Luffman And Baw-

Take Art Cole's big bat plus the steady pitching of Eddie Schrieder and therein lies the solution of why Chuck Barrett's Corby A.C. nine are undisputedly tops in the Belleville Intermediate baseball loop today. Although it took two extra inning to decide the issue, the Corby lads were ultimately appeased and the home town nine won at Coleman Park last evening when the "Bay Corbys" team not only dispossed of Frank Point's Point Anne "cementmen" by a 7-6 score, but obtained a complete and firm grip on the league leadership.

The issue was always in doubt with the lead changing hands quite frequently throughout the piece. The Corbys nine moved into an early commanding lead by virtue of a three run splurge in the fourth, but Point Anne kept knocking at the door and were rewarded with a three run rally in the seventh, after scoring two in the fifth. Besides cuffing the spherioid for the circuit in the fourth and driving one run in, elongated Art Cole, the Corby initial sacker, contributed to the scoring and winning runs in the ninth and eleventh respectively. The win elevates the Corbys nine into undisputed possession of the league leadership.

Eddie Schrieder ascended the hillock for Chuck Barrett's winning nine and bested the mound efforts of two Point Anne hurlers, Stan Luffman, their starting pitcher, and Johnnie Bawden, who was ultimately credited with the duty. Bawden replaced Luffman in the fifth as the visitors moved into a commanding lead. Schrieder scattered the 12 Point Anne hits, garnered three hits, pitched exceptionally well, as the Corbys nine collected 17 safeties during the piece. McMartin, Cy Barriage, Reid and Cole counted two hits each, Cole pulling a double and circuit blow. Murney Green with three, Gaulin and Schrieder collected the most hits for the losers. The next league fixture brings Napanee to town to revisit the Belmonts. The lucky numbers for the draw were 291 and 356.

Night Ball in Brooklyn Draws Sell-out of 38,748

By SID FEDER

Johnny Vander Meer moved into baseball's hall of fame last Saturday. Now he owns it.

Cincinnati Reds' 22-year-old southpaw fastballer, in his first full year in the major leagues, reached a new all-time pitching high last night in Brooklyn by hurling his second no-hit, no-run game in a row.

In all baseball history, only ten pitchers ever have turned in two no-hit games over their entire careers. None ever had come through with two in one season.

And now, Johnny comes young Johnny, who started his baseball in a church league near his home in Midland Park, N.J., and then was given the go-by from three big league clubs, to toss two no-hitters in two consecutive appearances—all in the space of three days.

Last Saturday, pitching against the Boston Bees, he hurled the first nine-inning National League no-hitter since Daffy Dean turned the trick in 1934. Last night he repeated against Brooklyn Dodgers 6-0 before a sellout crowd of 38,748 that packed Ebbets Field to see major league night ball inaugurated in the metropolitan area.

Eight men reached base, all on walks, as his mates fielded perfectly, but Johnny pitched his way right out of every jam. Even in the ninth, when, with one out, he loaded the bases on consecutive walks to Babe Phelps, Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli, the Dodgers' "murderers' row" batting end of his control again to finish the job. In that spot, he forced a runner off the plate for the second out and got Lippy Leo Durocher to fly to centre on a two-and-two pitch to end the game.

As early as the fourth, Johnny had a bunch he might repeat his no-hit job. There must have been something in the way the Brooklyns were swinging, or possibly it was because his father and mother were in the stands, and "Papa" was seeing his first big league game.

"My arm felt as fine at the finish as it did at the start," he said after the game, and then left for his parents' home in Jersey.

No-hitters are nothing new to Johnny. During his sandlot days around home, he pitched five in one season, three of them in succession. That's when the Dodgers "discovered" him, signed him up and sent him to their farm in Fayetteville. At the end of that season, there was a mixup in the transfer papers and the Dodgers had to let the young "gold mine" go.

The Reds bought him from Durham, N.C., in the Piedmont League at the start of this season. They shipped him to Syracuse for the rest of the campaign for seasoning. And now he's back for keeps.

His classy performance completely overshadowed two other first-rate pitching jobs on yesterday's program. Jim Tobin, Pittsburgh Pirates' young right-hander, hurled a five-hitter in whitewashing New York Giants, 2-0.

The defeat, however, didn't cut the Giants' league lead any, since Boston Bees MacFayden duplicated Tobin's trick against the second-place Chicago Cubs to give the Boston Bees a 2-0 victory.

In the other National League the Cleveland Indians retained their half-game lead over New York Yankees when both came from behind to score victories. The tribe snapped a five-game losing streak to the Senators 6-4. The Yanks stretched their winning streak to five straight with a 6-4 decision over Chicago White Sox.

Bringin' Samuel Chapman hit his seventh homer as the Athletics made it two straight over the Tigers 7-4. Jimmy Foxx walloped No. 19 to pace Boston Red Sox to a 7-4 victory over St. Louis Browns.

The Cardinals collected sixteen hits to win a 9-7 slugfest from the Phillies.

FOXBORO MOVES TO TOP RUNG

Shannonville, Ont., June 16 (Special)—Vince Guay's nifty bit of hurling last night helped to boost the Foxboro Shannonville Hawks with two scratchy hits, shot the Foxboro team into a tie for the top rung of the league leadership by virtue of their 4-1 win over the locals in the regular South Hastings League fixture.

Ruby, who did the chucking for the homesters likewise turned in a good effort on the mound, permitting the visitors to four safeties but his mates' errors in the field spoiled what might have been a victory.

Foxboro sent one runner across the plate in the first inning, added a brace of markers in the second and their last run in the fourth. The locals bunched their two hits that came from the bats of Ruby and Houston in the initial inning to score their only run of the game.

TENNIS TEAM OF COUNTRY CLUB WINS MATCH

Strenuous play marked the opening of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League here as Point Anne yesterday when the Bay of Quinte Country Club netsters took four of the day's six matches from the Canada Cement tennis squad. The Country Club players won the men's singles, two sets of men's doubles and one set of mixed doubles, while Point Anne won one set of mixed doubles and the ladies' coubles matches.

Hard strenuous play coupled with the absence of June breezes stimulated perspiration in several of the day's matches being temporarily abandoned as one young lady was removed from the courts, having to retire owing to the sun's competition. Return serves are keen competition, while close net play featured one of the most bitterly contested tennis matches seen locally in years. The competition was most marked in the singles matches however, as the Country Club male netsters were forced to continue the play, with Miss Grace McCreery standing out as the better choice player in the ladies' singles. The tourney marked the opening of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League schedule.

The results of the day's play were as follows:

Men's singles—Fred Baines defeated G. Cowan, 6-2, 7-5.

Men's doubles—J. Archambault and Paul Dedeker defeated Fred Bowerman and Bob Hutchings 6-2; 6-3; while M. Mitchell and Art Cole defeated Ralph Hall and Ken Genereaux 5-7; 6-1; and 6-1.

Ladies' doubles—Helen Williams and Mavis Gilmour defeated Rose Lefler and Evelyn Jack 7-5 and 6-4.

Mixed doubles — Donalda Lefler and George Tulk defeated Shelah Burrows and Jerry Archambault 6-3 and 6-1; while Grace McCreery and Ernie Whittaker defeated Helen Campbell and Tom Bowler 2-6, 6-4 and 7-5.

ODDS ON LOUIS JUMP TO 11-5

Prediction of Outcome By Brown Bomber Cause of Jump

New York, June 16 (AP)—Professional gamblers impressed by a million dollar gate have jumped their odds from 8-10-5 to a jukey 11-to-5 that the champ will retain his heavyweight championship in his 15-round fight with Max Schmeling next Wednesday night at Yankee Stadium.

What caused the firming of the figures mostly was the fact that Louis finally, and for the first regular time in his career, opened his mouth the other day and said on his own initiative and without any promptings that he intended to knock Schmeling out quick, perhaps in two rounds.

"That's enough to suit me," said one of the big bookmakers. "All I wanted to know was how Louis really felt about it. They've finally got that boy mad. That's the one thing he needed."

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, June 16 (AP) — Max Baer has just completed a movie in which he plays a bad guy, a beading cast to watch Louis and Schmeling, one of whom he hopes to see still a little more of in September. . . . One New York magazine was taken in with that speculator story that Tony Galento night fight the Gorilla Carpentier that it called the Hippodrome to see if anything definite had been done about it.

The boys up at Speculator where he once trained, got a big kick out of Gene Tunney's "more" English. . . . One guy went up to Gene and said: "Mebbe you don't remember me, Mr. Tunney, but I'm the fellow who used to jolne your shops at Lake George." "Quite so," replied the ex-champ shoving out a hand, "no nice to see you again." . . . One hookie here predicts odds on Louis will be 13 to 5 by bell time.

Sports Editor Alan Gould who is just back from covering the open at Denver, was tagged a Colonel by Governor Ammons. . . . When his Browns hit the skids for fair, Gabby Street discarded No. 12.

They're experimenting with a new type football which may be the berries. . . . It is made over a last form and has no seams. . . . The ball has been tested on a kicking machine and through the toe rights as true as a die. . . . Coaches are said to favor it.

ber own," he added, "nor did the United States acknowledge the lease or the Southern States as binding upon the new State."

Funk also scoffed at the idea that the present Austrian region of Germany must be regarded as the legal successor to the Austrian republic.

Old Austria 'Wiped Out'

"The change in the legal status of Austria is an historical development brought about by a revolutionary act," he said. "Austria as it existed hitherto has been wiped out as such by the will of the people."

Payments due May 1 and June 1 on Austrian bond issues already have been defaulted, Great Britain, France and other guaranteeing nations and the bank for international settlement, have protested to Berlin.)

The Economics Minister, speaking at a celebration of the 400th anniversary of Schusting House, headquarters of Bremen's Chamber of Commerce, branded the United States as "virtually the centre of disturbance" in world economics.

Rides Gravy Train

He extolled Germany as the opposite of the United States in the matter of economic stability.

Funk urged that national credits take the place of international credits in dealings of nations with each other.

The economics Minister held that delay in Anglo-American negotiations seeking a new trade pact was due to the world economic crisis. He then asserted the chief reason for confusion in world markets lay in the system of reparations payments and international political debts.

Referring to the debts of other nations to the United States he said that "no sensible person believes these debts ever will be paid."

S. A. CITADEL BAND VISITS KINGSTON

Winnipeg Organization Play Unique Program as Centenary Feature

A rare musical treat, one that was enjoyed to the full by those who attended, was afforded citizens of Kingston and district last night when the Winnipeg Citadel Band, one of Canada's premier Salvation Army musical organizations delighted a large audience in the Kingston Salvation Army Citadel with a concert that formed part of the centenary celebrations of the city.

Outstanding in the variable program were marimaphone duets played by Bandsmen Beason and Halskrk, while the versatility of the visiting musicians was brought out in many delightful instrumental and vocal solos.

Another feature of the program was the rendition of the "Lost Chord", Sir Arthur Sullivan's beautiful work, and one of the most quartette that drew rounds of well-merited applause. Instrumental trios, quartettes and a number of selections by the entire band under the baton of Bandmaster Henry Merritt rounded out a musical fare that was enjoyed to the full.

Perhaps a novel feature of the programme was the number of selections offered by the various groups that included the authors of the selections to be played.

The band was given a civic welcome by a number of the Kingston City Council who spoke in place of Mayor R. J. Stewart who was absent through illness. Further welcome to the visiting musicians was extended by Major Alderman the Hon. T. A. Kidd, chairman for the occasion.

A large number of out-of-town Salvationists attended the concert among whom were fifty members of the Belleville Corps headed by Major Alderman.

UNVEIL TABLET TO MEMORY OF WM. C. MacDONALD

Point Anne Public School Honors Friend And Benefactor

Point Anne, June 16 (Special)—On Wednesday, June 15, an interesting and dignified ceremony took place in Point Anne Public School grounds when a tablet to the late William C. MacDonald who passed away June 2nd, 1937, and was engraved tablet to his memory were unveiled in the presence of the children of the family, the trustees of the school, pupils and teachers of Point Anne School and numerous friends.

Mr. William Armstrong spoke on behalf of the trustees and pupils and introduced Inspector H. Clarke who spoke briefly on his associations with Mr. MacDonald for 30 years.

The late Mr. MacDonald was trustee and secretary-treasurer for the years 1890-1937 inclusive and was also trustee for a number of years before when the school board was only a frame building. It was through the efforts of Mr. MacDonald that a fine two-room stone school was erected in 1908 to which additions have been made from time to time until today a beautiful edifice stands on the site of the old frame school.

Mrs. Clarke then unveiled the picture and tablet and Rev. A. E. Pepper made fitting reply on behalf of the assembled family after which Mr. Armstrong presented a copy of the picture to Mrs. William C. MacDonald. The pupils of the school were then lined up and marched past the memorial to pay their silent tribute to the memory of one who was always the children's friend.

Piles Go Quick

With Dr. Leonhardt's Prescription

Many sufferers from itching, bleeding and protruding piles have found out that quick relief can be had with an internal medicine.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower bowels is the cause of piles. The veins are congested and flabby, the bowel walls weak. That is why an internal medicine is needed. HEMROID should be used. HEM-ROID stimulates circulation, relieves the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel, shrinks the piles and restores the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, who spent several years of his professional life in finding the cause of piles and the medicine that would remedy them. His medicine succeeds because it tends to correct the cause.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, if you want to try HEM-ROID, you have our promise to give you back your money if you do not find quick and satisfying relief. Only 75c at druggists.

J. S. McKeown or any druggist can supply you.

'DOLLY IS DEAD' SCREAMS START COUNTY REEVES

Fear That Some One Had Fallen is Removed as Broken Mama Doll is Discovered—It Had Fallen From Bicycle

The thud of a small body as it fell to the sidewalk, accompanied by childish screams that "Dolly is dead" startled a group of staid Hastings County councillors out of their usual placid attitude late yesterday afternoon as they stood conversing near Shire Hall.

Rushing to where a small boy lay on the sidewalk sobbing bitterly, while a little girl, sob-shaken, stood over him, the alarmed county fathers gently picked up the prostrate boy.

Tears ran down the faces of the youngsters as they noted their worst fear that "Dolly is dead". Noticing the boy was unhurt, they looked about for Dolly.

A second later they found her remains. On the sidewalk near where the boy had fallen a large "Mama" doll lay, smashed in a thousand pieces. The boy riding on his sister's bicycle had failed to the sidewalk carrying "Dolly" with him in what proved for the doll a fatal plunge.

Gently picking up the "remains" councillors escorted them to the sobbing children who sorrowfully wended their way homewards but refusing to be denied the pathetic administrations of a member of their party. Dolly received on the scene of the "tragedy" a few minutes after the accident occurred.

Many Tempting Dishes Prepared at St. Thomas' Guild Cooking School

Miss Mulhall Demonstrates Advantages of Using Gas For Cooking

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. Thomas' Church the second annual Gas Cooking School arranged by the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday opened in St. Thomas' Parish House, yesterday and introduced to the ladies of the city a very charming personality, Miss Margaret M. Mulhall, who is in charge of the School.

Mr. W. J. Vanderlip addressed the ladies to the school and the session was formally opened by Mr. George A. Reid, chairman of the Belleville Utilities Commission.

Miss Mulhall at once was very much at home on the stage, which was converted into a model and efficient kitchen and bright with summer blossoms, proved a most delightful setting for the demonstration.

She prepared a very appetizing meal and each day's class has completed the members of the audience earnestly hoped that they would be present from the drawing for attendance prizes took place.

Each day Miss Mulhall aside to give her audience dozens of useful hints that would prove timesavers to busy housewives, but she had a fund of amusing stories, kitchenette and otherwise during her first lecture trip to the West.

Many times it is asked the demonstrator if none or jars in the kitchen will make a good lid for a pot. Miss Mulhall pointed out that more often than not the opening of the oven door when juices the cake.

And each day the oven door until the cake has been in the oven for twenty minutes,' was her advice.

Mr. Vanderlip, in addition to chair Mr. Vanderlip, representing the Gas Department of the Belleville Utilities, discussed the advantages of cooking with gas. He stressed its speed, efficiency, and the fact that replacements were never needed on gas stoves. He also spoke on his hearers to ask him any questions on gas cooking any complaints as it was the aim of the Commission to give its customers satisfactory service in all times.

Rev. A. B. Payne was asked to assist in distributing the prizes and with the unanimous approval of the audience, he was presented with the chocolates.

Simultaneously city police under Detective Scott took over Fedor's hotel room and found the gambling gambler as he entered whistling. Fedor is alleged to have rushed at the Inspector with a telephone he tore from the wall, the instrument a fatal charge of obstructing police.

Fake Dice Found

On his way to the station Fedor is alleged to have thrown away a key, which Detective Scott found. He then entered a vault in Fedor's apartment at the hotel and seized equipment and cash. Among the devices found there are said to be sets of "top and bottom" dice, which serve as level up. The officers were repeated to have found $7,000 in the vault.

Customers and operators at the Brown Derby were removed to headquarter, in two police vans. Most of the persons in the establishment were found huddled in corners as the officers broke down the entrances with axes. Hall cash in the vault in the name of the secret dawn were said to have been tunnel leading to a parking lot.

Inquiring into the death from a rifle bullet of Cadet H. G. Campbell at Royal Military College, Kingston, Coroner's jury found that the young cadet died from a self-inflicted wound. These officers, Capt. D. R. Small and Capt. A. E. Snelgrove testified by Cadets J. O. Alexander and C. A. E. Couture are pictured as they attended the inquest. Capt. Youthful actress, avoids strenuous dieting

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

THEN AGE girls should realize that it is better to be slightly overweight than under. They should never attempt starvation diets to attain a slim figure. Emaciation leads to fatigue, nervous tension is another result of the skin-and-bone condition. The undernourished girl is not going to be the life of the party because she is not in possession of health. She's the type that bursts into tears for no reason at all, gets moody, finds school work a burden.

Reducing is a popular subject of conversation among the young things. They watch their weight, have a horror of taking on adipose condition. Why worry? During the growing period it is necessary that the body be well fed. Youth is active, doesn't get any too much sleep, and youth is not made of wire and fiddle strings, as poets imagines. A little fat won't do a bit of harm.

Emaciation brings along a lot of by-products that do not make for an attractive appearance or for good health, either. It is responsible for pallor, hollow cheeks, poor teeth, sluggish circulation, blue fingernails, sometimes thinning of the hair.

If you are 15 or 16, find that you have taken on an extra pound or two, forget them. Eat your three squares a day like a good girl. Enjoy outdoor sports; they will keep you in normal shape. We're all against starvation diets for growing girls.

The Sturdy Male

By J. FREDERICK WHITE

Joe looked ruefully at his carelessly packed bags at his one and only trunk leaning precariously against the wall at the apartment which until that very morning had been his love nest—their love nest —and then looked out at the gloriously peaceful spring Sunday.

Olga was gone. That was the only thing of which he was certain. The rest was all a muddle in his mind. His hate for George Adams who had caused their quarrel by riding Olga down town in his flashy roadster, the words they had tried to shout at each other as the battle raged, her smashing climax when she stormed haughtily out the door—all was a bewildering blur.

He dropped to the edge of the bed and thought of the picnic they had planned for today. They had wondered if she would come back, groped in his mind for any reason why she should. Finally, none, he shifted to self-pity, and was immediately sad. Hope gave way to despair, and he knew she was gone forever.

With vague thoughts of enlisting in the navy, the army, or in some foreign legion playing caprichenoff in his mind, he grabbed his hat turned toward the living room.

A knock came at the door and before he could answer it, the door swung open and somebody shouted, "Joe! Olga! All set!"

Bill and Mary! Come to go on the picnic. Joe ducked into the bathroom, trying to keep them. But Bill was an aggressive person.

"Come on out, kiddo!" he called. "Here are Bill and Billie. Mary all set for a day of romping in the fields and pastures."

Still receiving no response, he began to explore the apartment. As he entered the bedroom he stopped short and uttered a low whistle. Then he spied Joe's form through a crack in the door which he had closed accidentally in his haste to avoid them. Bill pushed it open and stared at the miserable one he had found all alone in manner.

"Hi, Bill," Joe almost moaned.

"Dodgin' callers?" laughed Bill with a nod back into the bedroom. "Nope," denied Joe. "We split, that's all."

Bill pulled the door shut behind him and leaned against the wall.

"Serious or just temporary?" he inquired.

"I dunno."

"Anything I can do, fella?"

"Nope, not, Bill. She did the leaving. Then his misery flowed over and he blurted out the whole story. "I got sore because she rode down town yesterday with that guy Adams. I wouldn't have minded only she told me about it in a way that burned me up. You know, conveying the idea that she couldn't understand why we didn't have a car. If she hadn't gone with that asphalt cowboy before I married her it wouldn't be so bad, either. He hasn't enough decency to let her alone now, and it gripes me. So I took it out on Olga instead of beating h—l out of him."

"Yeah, but where is she?"

"Home. That old lady of hers will keep her there, too. She'll glory in this."

"Well, it looks to me as if you let Adams get away with something and now you're going to let your in-law chisel in too."

"Oh, yeah?" Suddenly aroused, Joe grabbed a comb and brush and pushed them through his unruly hair. "I'm going over to get her. Maybe I'm goofy to try it, and maybe she won't listen, but I'm going....I'm going, I tell you!"

"Listen," said Bill, "you and Mary stay here and I'll go over and the chariot and I'll have her back in an hour. I'm going to get her back if I have to drag her—hear?"

* * *

Mary spied her first. She recognized the question in Bill's eyes and telegraphed to her the answer that Joe was still there, and led Bill out into the hallway.

"She's ripe for a make-up," the latter informed her as they sallied out the doorway. "We'll wait."

Olga dropped her ring into a dish wondering how she would be received. Coming from the kitchen Joe spied her and stopped short, unable to believe his eyes. Then he advanced with open arms and a cry on his lips.

"You told me," Olga said when the chance came, "that if I didn't come back to you, you certainly weren't the kind to come crawling after me. Not the kind to give another some men I'm awfully proud of you, dear."

Worn Out Footgear Harmful

MARY CARLISLE
Wears sensible and properly-fitted shoes.

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

HAVE NO love for your old shoes; they are your accomplices. Some women hang onto their old shoes for years. It is a mistake.

Worn slippers that have affiliated themselves, fallen into a state of wreckage are a menace because the foot has to adjust itself to them. Toes slide too far forward, there is no support for the waist of the foot. The result shows up in the form of ingrowing nails and pannful, calloused patches.

The busy housewife should wear an oxford with a fairly low heel. It is the only sensible shoes for tramping the domestic treadmill. Between the big toe and the end of the shoes there should be at least half an inch of space. The sole of the shoe should be as wide as the sole of the foot. Place your foot on a piece of paper draw an outline. You'll be surprised. Those pretty thick kid castings in which you dance through the merry evening probably aren't as wide as they should be.

Shoes that slip and slide are as harmful to the structure of the foot as the shoe that is too short or too narrow. The little bunion that results from the large toe inward should be checked out of the window. If worn it may result in a bunion.

Is It Wise to Confide in A Child?

Writer Sees No Harm in Parents Sharing Worries With Young

(By LISA GRENELLE)

Mrs. Henry was worried, terribly worried. I've forgotten exactly what it was about, but it was serious. It kept her awake at night and made her really irritable.

Mr. Henry said she had no one to confide in made it worse, of course. She could have confided in her daughter, Mary, to be sure, and that would be sympathetic, sensible child; but after all, she was only 16, and Mrs. Henry wanted to spare her.

But one day Mary came home early from school and found her mother crying. Then Mrs. Henry told her all about it. And Mary was as sweet and sensible and soothing as could be. She proved to be such a comfort, that after that Mrs. Henry often talked to her about her troubles. She even asked Mary's advice on family problems.

Depended on Her

Thus Mrs. Henry came to depend on Mary more and more as time went on, until it almost seemed as though they had changed places. Her friends and neighbors said it wasn't right, that Mrs. Henry leaned too much on Mary, too much for the child's own good. It spoiled the child, they said, and made her more serious than a girl of 16 should be.

Perhaps they were right. Perhaps we shouldn't expect too much from a child of 16. Mary however, did get something out of the experience besides premature responsibility. She acquired a sense of importance, a knowledge that she really was needed in the world. Her mother's dependence on her made her feel strong and intelligent and responsible and these are pleasant feelings at any age.

The situation also helped to develop the child's initiative. And of course it increased her affection for her mother. We always love those who are dependent on us.

Was it worth the price? What do you think? Are the supposedly carefree years really so precious? Isn't it, perhaps a good thing for mother and daughter to change places occasionally?

The Maiden's Choice

By EDWARD A. LAWRENCE

Mary Ann Christie was bring very gay; oh so very gay and blithesome. She was a pert little lassie, exuding gaiety from eye port. And the bathing costume helped. It was green, and it fitted her divinely — or her mirror had lied—and the red cap was also saucy.

The short flight of sand-accented steps that led from the Beachmont bathhouse to the beach was no more difficult of descent than the run of steps, but from all the attention she was receiving from her escorts, she might have been descending the north face of the Matterhorn.

She looked up at Tom Bascom quickly. She smiled at Tom Bascom, drug salesman and ex-athlete, and at Prof. Alexander Talbot, specialist in romantic languages, who loved them both; Tom Bascom's rumbling joviality, and Alex's Byronic features and soft brown eyes.

But one couldn't, she knew marry two men—and at the same time.

Mary Ann shook off her escorts and ran into the encircling sea arms flung wide. A breaker tossed her up, the undertow turned her down and flipped her over on the streaming sand.

She arose gasping and spluttering but with a sudden idea stabbing at her brain with the bursting pungency of a bee. Oh, such an idea, so simple, so definite, so very definite genius it was.

Tom Bascom, she saw, was standing waist deep in a shelling fresh of green water, beating his chest and making bestial sounds. She looked about for Professor Alex. He sat on the sand, hands wrapped around his knees, grinning shyly.

"Well, baby," said Tom Bascom, striding shoreward with a wave of foaming picturesquely from his copper-colored shoulders, "I'll take any sunbath now with the prof. Don't forget to remember how to swim."

Mary Ann glanced at the beach thereabouts. Empty. Good! She turned and walked out into deeper water, wondering what sort of a swimmer Alex was. That slender type she understood. She stretched out into a gliding crawl.

Mary Ann crawled steadily on in the general direction of Europe.

"He—elp," she wailed. "I'm drowning. Oh, save me—nlp—"

The blue water stirred restlessly and a head broke through, bobbed, danced.

The red cap bobbed up again like a red buoy.

Consternation may have been said to reign on the beach. The lifeguard on his tower a hundred yards away dropped his copy of Spencer's prose epigrams and scrambled unphilosophically from his perch. Umbrellas were overturned as the bikinis males rallied to the rescue. A bell tolled dismally.

Mary Ann wallowed about for an instant observing with satisfaction the commotion she had instigated. Holding her nose, she sank again in the middle of an eerie wail.

"Drowned you," she bubbled.

When she arose from the third and last dramatic appearance, she was dazzled by what appeared to be an apostolic windmill churning in her direction. She caught the flash of a brown face and a ballet flash of white, twinkled and chaos followed.

When Mary Ann returned to the world of stern reality, she found herself on a wall of hairy legs and faces with fishy eyes, staring. Her head ached intolerably. Tom Bascom had gallantly pushing people back. Alex sat beside her on the sand, with a face as white as paper.

"Mary Ann," he whispered.

Mary Ann struggled feebly to sit erect.

Tom Bascom stood up. "Ah, ha," he said, "here we are, just as good as new." His teeth flashed confidently in his bronzed face. "Sorry I had to swat you, babe," he rumbled.

Mary Ann looked at Tom Bascom for a long, long time. He seemed to drop lower and then rode into obscurity. But one picture she saw clearly: A big, flabby, red-jowled face, full of fatigue, dew, and sand and roaring fir his dinner, and—the red cap. She knew it well.

She turned to Professor Talbot.

"Help me to my berry," she quavered; "I can walk."

Alexander Talbot leaped to his task with alacrity.

The crowd, satisfied, drifted away. Mary Ann, aware of the trend of events, went through a pantomime of his heroics for the edification of the life guard.

Some distance apart, Mary Ann paused and looked up at Alex Talbot for a long, long time. What she saw there in reality her memories.

"You can't swim, can you, Alex?" she asked.

"Well," replied the professor cheerfully, "no."

Mary Ann smiled. The plate she knew was clean.

"Does the proposal still stand?" she asked. "If it does," she hurried on breathlessly, "the answer is yes."

This sound photo is the first picture to have been made of the wreckage of the airliner which crashed in the Sierra Vista mountains, in California, last March. The bodies of nine passengers aboard the airplane were found and the wreckage discovered by Search parties had bought the airplane for days after it was reported missing, but it was not until June 12 that the wreckage was discovered by a young prospector.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, June 16—(AP)—Selected stocks took on a mild rallying tinge in today's market, but dull proceedings generally were colorless.

Leaders slipped a trifle either way at the opening. Things looked up a bit later when selling continued extremely light and buyers were tempted to take an favorites in small volume. Gains or minor fractions predominated over the final hour, although numerous issues were unchanged.

With the latest tape idle throughout, transfers were at the rate of about 300,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 16.— (CP)— The Toronto market turned dull today following a fairly active early session and prices also tapered off moderately in the late phase leaving only the Mines, especially the Golds, with a margin on the upside. Noranda and Lamaque were high for the year and the Base Metals generally had more gain than losses to show at the close but the day's best tone was not maintained. Industrials cold down and the Western Oils showed little net change. Volume was around 700,000 shares, off about 200,000 shares from the previous session.

Mining shares continued to make headway on the upside on Toronto Exchange today, particularly the Junior Golds while the Industrials lost a little ground and the Western oils were quiet and steady from the opening. Volume eased off slightly from that of the previous session.

Features of the early trade in the Gold section were Naybob, Preston, Queenston, Sullivan, Read Authority and Macassa all selling higher in active trading.

Waite-Amulet was slow at the start but it improved in price and volume as the session advanced and other Base Metals were steady. Western Oils posted minor gains. Canada Dredge 28½, Calmont and Noranda.

Dullness ruled in the Industrial section and there were some soft spots. Imperial Oil sold down to 15 1-2. Steel, Banks and Utilities were mainly unchanged and the construction stocks a little stronger.

GIRL FALLS OFF MOVING VEHICLE

Zella Jane McCullough, Cordova, Sustains Fractured Skull

Falling from the side of a moving automobile, upon which she was apparently clinging unknown to the driver, eight-year old Zella Jane McCullough, Cordova, sustained a fractured skull and severe head lacerations when she struck the steel fender of a car driven by her home last evening. The girl was rushed to the Havelock Hospital in a serious condition. Motorcycle Patrolman Hatch of Marmora stated today.

With other playmates at a ball game, a number of children boarded the sides of a motor car owned and driven by Mr. Babcock of Cordova, but upon orders from Mr. Babcock all the children were ordered off the vehicle, but apparently little Zella Jane remained on the running board without the knowledge of the driver. As the car gained momentum and was passing over a low structure bridge the little girl apparently fell off striking her head on the steel girders.

Mr. Babcock assured Officer Hatch of the little girl prior to the accident. "I ordered all the children off the side of my car, but apparently little Zella Jane got off the little Mc-Cullough girl must have got back on without my being aware of the fact," Mr. Babcock assured the officer.

CROP PROSPECTS

"He who ventures, to make a crop forecast in the middle of June must take his courage in his hands," said Dunning said, "but I think we can safely say that even the southern drought triangle the improvement in moisture conditions during the past month, although current rains are needed in individual districts, is sufficient to thatcher wheat gives a more effective insurance against rust than has ever been known before.

"The adequate preparations being made by the farmers to deal with the somewhat less, intense, but perhaps more widespread invasion of grasshoppers, should assure that losses on this account will be relatively small.

"In other words, although we are only in the beginning of the critical period of the wheat crop, we may agree there appears to be a better chance at this time in the last 10 years, for that buoyant optimism which is ever the keynote on the western prairies.

"Even with a lower world level of prices a good wheat crop would, in my opinion, do more than anything else to stabilize and revitalize our whole economic life, to establish confidence and to usher in a more normal balance between the west and east."

Eggs Advance One Cent

Toronto, June 16.—Advances of one cent per dozen were recorded by fresh eggs in yesterday's session of the local produce quarket, while butter was easy. Cheese ruled steady.

Dealers raised prices on the egg market as current receipts continued to arrive in limited volume. Demand readily absorbed offerings. Ungraded eggs changed hands at 21c for grade A-large, 20c for A-medium, 19c for B's and 18c for C grades, with prices for the retail trade functioning to 28c for A-large, 27c for medium, 24c for B's and 22c for C grades. Although the production section of the market showed no change, the tendency was toward higher levels.

Fresh receipts continued to exceed the demand in the butter market, with buyers still remaining on the sidelines. Offerings were showing a slight accumulation. Wholesale action was alleviated to some extent by the slightly easier quotations. Ontario creamery solids were offered at the previous prices of 24½c for boxes.

Montreal, June 15 (CP)—Eggs and butter prices held steady while cheese was off slightly in fairly active trading on open produce market today.

Butter in lots to retailers was quoted at 23½c for No. 1 solids, 24c for No. 1 prints, 24½c for No. 2 solids, and 25c for No. 2 prints.

Graded egg shipments in cartons or less were 26c a dozen for A-large, 24½c for A-medium, 23½c for A-small, B-large, and 21½c to 22c for C. Receipts: 1,078 cases.

Cheese was offered bid for Ontario white, 14½c bid for Ontario colored, 13½c for Quebec white and 13½c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 3,320 boxes.

BRITAIN IS READY

the sentiments expressed by Mr. Cordell Hull in his recent speech and they are always ready to cooperate with other nations on the subject.

Mr. Chamberlain is known to favor the "qualitative" type of disarmament, such as abolition of the most deadly kinds of weapons—perhaps bombing planes.

This, he believes, is the type of disarmament most likely to escape cavil.

Great Britain herself is in the midst of a gigantic rearmament program and recently has taken the leading attempts at disarmament in view of unsettled world conditions.

Loan Floated Today

Only today she floated an £80,000,000 ($400,000,000) loan to help finance the rearmament program, part of which originally was set at £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) but now is expected to exceed that by 50 per cent.

Many influential Britons believe disarmament can come only after a general appeasement has been reached with dictator-ruled nations and that this appeasement is not likely to come until Great Britain is fully rearmed.

During his exchange with Mr. Henderson the Prime Minister said the British government was willing to abandon the practice of pollen air bombings on India's northwest frontier and in Palestine if this would help in securing "a general agreement to abolish bombing from the air."

Henderson's Question

Mr. Henderson had asked if the government were not willing abandon police bombings and added: "The civil population of Iraq, Japan, Spain and other countries are using this practice in order to neutralize the moral effect of protests which His Majesty's government have made in respect of bombing civilian populations both in China and Spain."

Mr. Chamberlain emphasized that British air bombings were not carried out until 24 hours' notice had been given the populations to evacuate.

George Lansbury, Labor, asked what such people were to go when they evacuated their homes.

Opposition shouts of "shame, shame!" rose when the Prime Minister said, "I have read there are numerous caves in the vicinity."

COMMISSION TO HALT BLASTING

Prospecting on Proctor's Island Near Presqu'ile is Reported

Presqu'ile Park Commission has ordered a stop to blasting operations of treasure hunters on Proctor's Island which have been carried on intermittently for a week in search of a treasure of $50,000.00 believed to have been buried on the island by his great grandfather many years ago. This is said to be modelled in the hunt by a prospector and investor who has been using a modern blasting machine "to search for" the purpose.

Brighton, Ont., June 16.—(CP)—Grant Quick, chairman of the Presqu'ile Provincial Park Board said today he had been considering blasting operations on Proctor's Island, part of Presqu'ile Park, without its permission and that he intends to visit the scene today and "see those blasting himself, myself."

Mr. Quick said he didn't know what they were looking for, but reports are current someone is digging for old or buried treasure on the island. Some years ago he knew the Parks Board had not given anyone permission to start excavating on the island. "I was over to the island last week-end and found all the time," he said. "I am going over again."

Blasting on Rock

The Parks Board Chairman said he knew nothing of what blasting had been done in solid rock. "I found a claim stake with a tag bearing the name of J. Mc. Sprey," he said.

Mosley Snelgrove, former resident of this town left the island to live last February, it was learned. He later was joined by W. C. Spry of Toronto, said to be a prospector. It was not known whether Snelgrove and Spry were the men doing the blasting on the Rocky Point Island which is two miles, off shore. Odd-time residents say there's no gold in these parts.

EQUALIZATION

Finance Committee for report to council.

A total of $12,462.15 in indigent accounts had been paid so far this year, the Finance Committee said. Prompt attention to cases and the filling out of questionnaires, would reduce this total, Dunning said, figures. Chairman Robson said.

The fact that so much delay in getting reports on peddlers operating in the county, is another reason why are selling their wares without purchasing licenses.

By-laws Authorized

Motions by-laws authorizing the county to borrow money; to equalize the assessment of municipalities; to levy rates on county municipalities for current purposes for the year 1938; to delete a certain road from the county system, and place it back on the municipal system which it runs; and to provide for meeting the cost of education of county pupils attending Vocational Schools, High Schools and Grade A and B continuation schools, were passed before council.

Adjustment of a number of indigent hospitalization accounts of county municipalities was made prior to adjournment of the morning session.

DUNNING STATES

Here there is cause for gratification over this close approach to a balanced budget after only three years of very large deficits.

Deficit Lower Than Forecast

"It will be recalled that for 1936-37 the realized deficit was $77,451,000 as against the budgeted deficit the budget speech last year I did not venture to forecast any figure for 1937-38 of less than $33,000,000.

"That we have done so much better than that forecast is all the more gratifying when we consider the increase of $1,000,000 now added to the annuities reserve and the substantial unanticipated increase in our expenditures resulting from the crop failure in Western Canada.

'Fallacy' of Debt-Free Money

It was on the general subject of monetary reform that Mr. Dunning struck the highlight of his speech. He called it a "thory fallacy" to suppose governments should pay interest or could issue debt-free money. As Minister of Finance he would make his task easier than to issue credit against the wealth of the nation but to him it was an inflationary proposal that would lead to a short and unhealthy prosperity.

Mr. Dunning hoped the depression in the United States was reaping the bottom and that remedial policies would be adopted. In Great Britain and European countries, the armament race should produce a short-term acceleration of business although none of us look forward with confidence to the ultimate results of a program which involves the heavy if necessary, drain on the resources of the leading nations upon preparation for war."

Internal Economy Sound

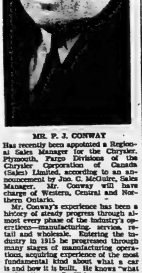
The Finance Minister then continued: "Any improvement in conditions abroad will strongly reinforce the influence of the favorable factors which are at work within our country. Our internal economy is sound, our price structure is in reasonable balance, ample credit accommodation is available for further expansion, and our people need not be afflicted by fear and uncertainty.

"Expansion in our major industries has shown what is relatively a moderate decline in the face of grave world conditions elsewhere since February our index of physical volume of business has been tending upwards. More work which in my opinion also give a vigorous impetus to further progress. I refer to the important of these in the steel industry, prospects for a good wheat crop, for good agricultural conditions generally. The mining industry may be counted on to provide further stimulus.

Plans for Construction

"Finally, I am confident that the Government's attitude generally in relation to housing, municipal improvements, and to the development of northern development generally, we may expect to see during the coming year the beginning of a more vigorous revival in the construction industries and the manufacturing industries which depend upon it. Backed by the wholehearted co-operation of all classes of the population, these should make it a current year a reasonably satisfactory one."

In his review of government finances for the past year, Mr. Dunning told of collecting $516,802,000 of revenue, and the expenditure $623,538,000 from 1936-37 and $5 from 1937-38 from 1938-39. The previous record year for Dominion revenue. Of this total $144,000,000 was from taxes, mostly from the sales tax, income tax and customs.



Ordinary Expenditures

Ordinary expenditures in the nation till, he spent $410,954,000 on the ordinary expenditures of government departments, an increase over the previous year. This money was spent $207,000,000 for running the departments of the government, $100,000,000 for public debt, payments subsidies to provinces, paying of age pensions, war pensions and $ the new old age pensions program.

Counting only ordinary expenditures, the national treasury would have reported a surplus in excess $100,000,000 before debiting the extra-ordinary expenditures were taken into account, an over-all deficit resulted.

$43,947,000 For General Relief

For instance, $43,947,000 was spent for general relief and $34,585,00 for special relief in the western drought area. In addition, the Canadian National Railways, Trans Canada Air Lines and other government-owned enterprises needed $44,832,000, leading to the over-a deficit of $13,775,000.

MR. P. J. CONWAY

Has recently been appointed a Regional Supervisor, Canadian Dairies Plymouth, Fargo Divisions of the Canadian Dairies Corporation (Sales) Limited, according to an announcement by C. Nicholas, Sales Manager, Mr. Conway will have charge of Eastern Ontario and Western Ontario.

Mr. Conway's experience has been a history of steady progress through almost every phase of the industry's operations—manufacturing, service, retailing and wholesaling. Entering the industry in 1915 he progressed through various positions to the position of supervisor, acquiring experience of the most practical kind about what is wanted and how it is built. He knows "what makes the wheels go round" and Mr. Conway's career included valuable assignments with Canadian Dairies Limited in 1929. Continuing his steady progress Mr. Conway became Assistant Regional Sales Manager for Western, Central and Northern Ontario. He now becomes Regional Sales Manager for the same territory.

Mr. Allan Mackay, who has been in the automobile industry, both retail and wholesale, since 1916 has been promoted from his position as District Sales Manager, to the post of Assistant Regional Sales Manager vacated by Mr. Conway.

Dunning Announces Removal of Sales Tax on Builders' Supplies

BUILDING TRADES EXEMPTED FROM THE SALES TAX

All Major Products Entering Home-Building to be Exempt

STIMULATE INDUSTRY

Excise Duties Unchanged But Gift Tax is Raised

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—Hundreds of Canadian industrial plants supplying the building trades are exempt from the eighth per cent sales tax today as a result of the Dominion budget presented by Finance Minister Dunning.

In an exhaustive review of the national bank account, the Finance Minister yesterday announced most of the products going into construction of homes would be freed from the sales tax.

He left taxation at its present levels, stressed the soundness of Canadian currency and left revision of tariffs until bi-lateral agreements are reached between Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

The treasury, which reported a deficit of $117,705,000 in 1937-38, is budgeting for a deficit of $23,000,000 in 1938-39.

As a general stimulus to the construction industry, the government announced from the list of all the major products entering home-building, included in the list were bricks, tile, cement, stone, plaster, lumber, sash doors, shingles, blaster boards, fibre boards, wallpaper, paints, roofings, plumbing fixtures not including bathtubs, furnaces and builders' hardware.

With the exception or building supplies and such products as benzene, fuel oil, farm implements and equipment and supplies for fishermen's boats, the sales war tax remains in force.

The only change in the excise taxes was to exclude tires and tubes when used as original equipment on cars, trucks, trailers, tractors and motorcycles. Excise duties were unchanged.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Master, Meteorologist

Ocean travel! Many are now thinking of crossing the oceans in July which is a very favorable month. In the North Atlantic the past month are infrequent and not generally severe. The storms are mostly of tropical origin because of the West Indian hurricanes, moving north and then east across the steamer lanes, but these are rare and about two in five years. Fogs are usual along the Grand Banks. In the North Pacific, July temperatures average between 52 and 65 degrees. Sailing by way of the Panama, steamy will be encountered west of Mexico, but they average only two in three years. In the West Indies are occasional typhoons, but they are under close observation and navigators are warned of their presence.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 17—(CP)—A shallow disturbance is moving eastward across Ontario and a trough of low pressure extends from Alberta northwestward to Alaska, while pressure is high over the Hudson Bay region, Northwestern Ontario and Manitoba. Thunderstorms have occurred in many parts of Ontario and Northern Quebec, and light scattered showers in Southern Alberta, while in nearly all other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair. It has been warm from the lower lake region eastward to New Brunswick, also in Saskatchewan, but comparatively cool in the Lake Superior region.

Dog Seizes Irate Bear by Throat As Girls Drag Senseless Brother Away

Pocatse, Sask. June 17—(CP)—Pete Herrington, 14, owes his life to the bravery of his two sisters and to their large collie dog.

The lad, hunting cows, spied a young bear cub behind a log and stooped over to pick it up only to be struck a terrific blow by the huge paw of the mother bear which had come up behind. Pete was knocked unconscious.

His two sisters, Florence and Marion, were watching and without thought of their own safety they and the dog rushed forward. The dog seized the bear by the throat while the girls dragged Pete to safety. The dog eventually drove the bear into the bush.

Pete is proud not only of his sisters and the dog but also of the marks of battle on his neck and back. Pocatse is 100 miles east of Prince Albert.

STREET PAVING QUESTION LAID OVER BY MEMBERS

County Council Forms Committee to Investigate and Report in December

LENGTHY ARGUMENT

A motion that the former road superintendent members of the Roads and Bridges Committee and the reeve of the village of Marmora, a committee to investigate the circumstances surrounding the drawing up of agreements said to have been made some years ago between the county and villages with regard to loans made for the payment of street paving and place a recommendation before council at its December sitting concluded a lengthy discussion that yesterday afternoon reached a heated stage when arguments flew across Shire Hall.

Failing to reach satisfactory agreement on Wednesday afternoon, the question was laid over until yesterday at the request of Warden Henry Larkin.

San Francisco, June 17—(AP)—Forgotten drugs in the storehouse of forgotten drugs has come a new treatment for epilepsy, which surpasses anything heretofore known.

The discovery was described to the American Medical Association here today by Dr. H. Houghton Merritt of the staff of Dr. James J. Putnam, of Boston City Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

Unusual Experiment

These two physicians tried an unusual experiment. They went to the storehouses of rare chemicals, which are manufactured by great chemical firms, and tried out on a few ounces of each, mostly as scientific curiosities. Only about 100 of these on epilepsy. They selected

INSURGENT DRIVE IS SLOWED DOWN

Stiffened Gov't. Resistance Apparent South of Mi-lares River

Hendaye, June 17—(AP)—Insurgent General Franco's drive down Spain's eastern coast against Valencia was slowed down today by stiffened government resistance south of the Mijares river.

Government advices said defence forces counter-attacked against the insurgents about 35 miles north of Valencia and recaptured the village of Villarreal on the east side of the river after desperate hand-to-hand battles through its streets.

The government massed all available men and munitions in the sector to stem the insurgent tide and placed its forces under the direct command of Colonel Hipolito Mendiondo.

The vast concentration, however, impaired the effectiveness of troops defending Castellon Province, in southern Spain.

Dispatches from the Penarroya sector said the insurgents' three-day drive was progressing steadily at the rate of five miles a day.

In the far north, the bat of the government-held Seo de Urgel division escaped into France, leaving control of the border from the Bay of Biscay east to the little republic of Andorra.

Tires of Farm, Wants Calgary Life, Woman Smashes Windows, Dishes

Goderich, Ont., June 17—(CP)—Mrs. Salomia Cole, pretty young Goderich Township farmhouse, was in court again yesterday for running amok. Her home was laid in various ways in the next outbreak means ball, but the father-in-law just shook his head and said if she was to be left at large he would put up the money to send her back to Calgary.

Tired of the farm, Salomia wants to leave her husband and go back to her mother and city life in Calgary. Refused the money to go, she has broken just about everything in the house where she lives with her husband, two children and father-in-law.

Salomia, her husband—who is also dear and dumb—and an interpreter, Salomia's farmhouse, was the usage as Magistrate Gordon Longworth looked on bewildered.

The interpreter interrupted long enough to explain that the woman, a Canadian-born girl, knew little English and perhaps did not realize the seriousness of her acts. She can read and write Russian, though.

So another interpreter was obtained. This one, however, could only speak—not read or write—Russian.

About the only English Salomia could read or write in previous court appearances was, "I want to go back to Calgary." Yesterday she couldn't write Russian or English, because her index finger, cut when she took to smashing glass again, was swathed in bandages.

'DAWN PHANTOM' GUNMAN SLAIN, SON OF CONSTABLE

Father Suspects Son And Goes on Extra Duty to Catch Gunman

COPS TRAP YOUTH

Wife 'Expected it' And Father Says 'Work is Done as it Must be'

Chicago, June 17—(AP)— The "Dawn Phantom" gunman accused of 28 early morning holdups during the past two months was revealed in death today as a policeman's son.

Policeman Ernest L. Keen suspected, from victims' descriptions, the robber was his son, Harold, 23, former convict. He went on extra duty in an effort to catch him.

Seven detectives trapped young Keen last night as he approached the home of a friend. They said he reached for his weapon, so they fired pistols and a machine gun. Eighteen bullets killed him.

Harold's wife, Blanche, 21, an expectant mother, was told of the shooting at the Detective Bureau where she had been detained.

"I expected it," she said.

Policeman Keen was telephoned. "The work is done," he said, "as I knew it must be."

Local Humane Society Investigates Methods Of Shipping Livestock

At the regular meeting of the Belleville Humane Society held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms last evening, encouraging reports were received by Inspector Frank Dr. Tennent regarding the efforts of the members to remedy the conditions under which livestock is shipped through the district and other points in this area for prior to sale on the city market.

It was reported that through an appeal by the local society a guarantee has been received that cattle being shipped through by rail will receive water and adequate attention while in Belleville.

Complaints regarding the manner of boating cattle and fowl on the market have also been investigated and remedied, it was stated. More careful watch will be kept of this matter in the future it was decided by the committee. The local group, Inspector T. Taylor who attended the annual meeting of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at Toronto presented an excellent report of progress made.

GREATER BERLIN DREAM OF HITLER

Reconstruction Will Cost $1,440,000,000 And Take 12 Yrs. to Complete

Berlin, June 17—(AP)— Weeks of work by wrecking crews have cleared the way for Chancellor Hitler's ambitious project for the reconstruction of Berlin, which will cover at least 12 years.

Hitler has declared he is not building for this generation, but intends to make a magnificent capital for a greater Germany of centuries to come.

Authoritative estimates of costs of the program already drafted indicate the cost probably will be 5,000,000,000 marks ($1,440,000,000) but accurate figures are unobtainable, because the city is rebuilding is to be financed by the state or municipality, while private enterprises will make their contributions.

Building Begun

The program was inaugurated Tuesday when 18 building projects were begun simultaneously in different parts of Berlin. Hitler himself laid the ceremonial stone for a building which is to be headquarters for the tourist enterprises.

One imposing new feature to be given Berlin is a forum, an inspiration of Hitler. May visit of state to Rome, to be created in the centre of the famous Thergarten.

Knapp May Put up Bond Not to Use Car

Knapp's car will be impounded and taken into the custody of the police for three months, Magistrate Browne ordered. He sentenced Knapp to 14 days in jail, in addition to imposing a fine and costs of $18 a month before he can recover his automobile at the end of three months, unless he puts up a $500 bond the automobile will not be used during the three-month period.

Dunning Imposes Check on Tax Dodgers

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—Finance Minister Dunning yesterday struck a blow at the Canadian tax dodger who has a residence in another country to avoid paying income taxes here.

In his Budget statement, the Finance minister made no changes in income tax rates for individuals or corporations, but announced several changes in the regulations to tighten administration, thus it was hoped to get increased all along the line.

In the future when an individual or corporation, ordinarily resident in Canada, makes use of any transaction involving another country, such as setting up residence there or forming a company there, the facts will be reviewed by the Treasury Board at Ottawa.

If the Treasury Board decides it is a straight business proposition, there will be no income taxes assessed, if it decides it is an attempt to avoid Canadian income taxes, the taxes must be paid "to the same extent as if the transaction had not taken place."

The Treasury Board, in reviewing transactions of this nature, will look at the substance, rather than legal form, it will be possible to appeal the board's decision to the Exchequer Court.

150 Rochester Club Men Are Welcomed To City

Acting Mayor Mac Haig Presents Huge Golden Key to Guy Michael, Arrival of Party by Steamer 'Toronto'— Chamber of Commerce Welcomed by John McIntosh, President and J. O. Herity, Manager—Day is spent in City and Environs

No prettier sight could be imagined than that of the Canada Steamship Company steamer Toronto coming up the Bay of Quinte from the Bay of Fundy passenger carrying one hundred and fifty members of the Rochester Club bound for Belleville on a Goodwill and Friendship visit. This beautiful steamer gliding along with consummate effort on the bosom of the bay, the waters sparkling in the early morning sunshine with a faint mist lazily rising from the surface and being rapidly pushed back by the sun, while the brilliant colors of green and gold by the Prince Edward County shore, made a picture not soon to be forgotten.

Leaving Toronto on Thursday night at ten o'clock the huge passenger liner with accommodations for one thousand or more passengers made a leisurely journey down Lake Ontario, arriving into the Bay of Quinte and arrived opposite Belleville about scheduled time. No difficulty was experienced in navigating the channel for the 3 ft. Toronto draws but nine feet of water and no difficulty was encountered making a landing at the Government Dock.

Huge Golden Key Presented

The visitors were welcomed by Acting Mayor Mac Haig who presented a huge golden key to Guy Michael, manager of the trip for the Rochester Club. Cordial welcome was interposed by John McIntosh, President of the Chamber of Commerce, J. Owen Herity, Manager of the Chamber of Commerce and other leading citizens, replied to by Mr. Michael on behalf of the visitors for the Rochester Club and others. Jamie Clarke, the well known Costume Elk, and a gave a Scotch welcome with the bagpipes which are greatly appreciated by the visitors.

The Collegiate Institute Band under the direction of Ross Hunter serenaded the boat and the visitors on their arrival and then paraded through the steamer to wake up passengers who had slumbered through the opening ceremonies. Among the numbers played were "The Star Spangled Banner", "America", "God Save the King", "The Maple Leaf Forever".

An interesting spectator of the first Rochester Club visit to Belleville was Captain Redfearn, formerly Master of the Toronto, who is now a resident of Belleville.

Boat Arrives Ahead of Time

Due at Belleville at eight o'clock Daylight Saving Time the Toronto arrived in plenty of time, indeed slightly ahead of time, a habit the boat is said to possess on all occasions.

Says Holding of Jews for Ransom Proof Germany Needs Foreign Money

London, June 17—(CP-Havas) —The Star (Liberal) today said Germany may demand ransom for female members of the Rothschild family now detained in Vienna, as well as for Baron Louis Rothschild, head of the banking family's Vienna branch.

The newspaper said London financial circles were convinced the holding of important Jews for ransom was new evidence of Germany's acute need for foreign currency.

According to the Daily Herald (Labor) the ransom for Baron Louis was fixed at £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) as "compensation" for taxes suffered in 1931 with collapse of the Creditanstalt, giant bank of which he was president.

Socialist sources said a close friend of the Vienna Rothschilds, an English captain, had made several trips to Paris and London since the Baron's arrest and imprisonment, and the Nazis expected all branches of the family to contribute to the ransom.

They added that Baron Louis, first sent to a concentration camp, is now held at the Hotel Metropole, Vienna headquarters of the German secret police, and that he has been allowed to see no one, not even his lawyer.

Baron Alphonse and Baron Eugene, his younger brothers, are now in Paris.

CLAUSE PROPOSES MORE FREEDOM FOR CANDIDATES

Would Make it Illegal For Candidate to Sign Party Pledge

OTHER CLAUSES UP

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—The special House committee preparing a revision of the Election Act today considered the bill a clause to make it illegal for candidates for parliament to sign any document or pledge "that will prevent him from exercising freedom of action in parliament, if elected, or to resign as such member, if called upon to do so by any person, persons or association or persons."

The committee adopted the clause without recorded discussion though there were some expressions of dissatisfaction from Pelletier (SC-Peace River) and Robert Fair (SC-Battle River). The later declared the clause to protect candidates but forgot the electors.

Joseph Robichaud (Lib. Kent, N.B.) wanted the committee to go further and would have it made an offence for anyone to tender a document for signature to a candidate if such document would restrict his freedom or action in parliament.

TAX EXEMPTIONS TO HELP FARMER

Removal of Sales Tax on Building Materials Great Relief

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—Tax exemptions in yesterday's budget speech should greatly stimulate new construction will affect the average Canadian farmer more than anything else in many years, Agriculture Minister Dunning.

The income tax exemption of building materials from the eight per cent sales tax will have a direct effect on the cost of construction, maintenance and repair of farm buildings.

The aggregate of the eight per cent tax on lumber, paints, glass and other building materials used by farmers has run into tens of thousands of dollars. Effective tomorrow this eight per cent tax is off.

Of equal benefit to the farmer is the exemption from sales tax on harness, harness parts and materials used in their manufacture.

The importance of fur ranching has been recognized in the exemption from sales tax of all feed prepared for the rearing animals. Feed for foxes has hitherto been exempt but the change today will extend the exemption to feed for rabbits, minks, muskrats and other fur bearers.

Reno, Nev., June 17—(AP)— James McDonald, 3rd, youthful multimillionaire scion of Maine, Calif., and Boise, Idaho, who speed in shuffling wives has outpaced even blase Reno, was marriage bent again today.

The 34-year-old heir to a $12,000,000 oil fortune, who was twice divorced and once married in Reno yesterday, said he would wed June Kearns of Canada, California, in Carson City today.

Yesterday McDonald was divorced by Mrs. Alecea McDonald, who charged desertion.

Within an hour he married Doris Marie Cunningham of Reno.

A four hour later court divorced him, charging cruelty. An agreement providing for custody of their 16-month-old son was not made public.

McDonald announced plans for his marriage to Miss Kearns and said they would honeymoon in Yosemite National Park.

District Judge Benjamin F. Curler granted both of the divorces decrees and officiated at McDonald's marriage to Miss Cunningham.

DOMINION VIEW IS THAT ESKIMOS ARE NOT INDIANS

Supreme Court is Asked to Decide if They Were Indians or Eskimos

QUEBEC ESKIMOS

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—Thousands of years ago migrant tribes from Asia paddled their frail barks across the Bering Sea to North America through the succeeding centuries their descendants spread over the whole American continent. The Supreme Court of Canada today was asked to decide if those primeval wanderers were Eskimos or Indians. Were they members of only one ethnological group which evolved, through sub-species, or were they, in the beginning, separate racial groups entirely?

Who is Responsible?

In a reference involving the Dominion and Quebec governments the court has the task of determining if the Dominion is responsible for the welfare of the Eskimos in Quebec Province. The Province says yes, basing its claim on the argument that Eskimos are Indians and Indians are wards of the Dominion. The Dominion says no, because Eskimos are plain Eskimos, and not Indians, and therefore Dominion does not extend to Eskimos except in

FOUR BOUND TO KEEP THE PEACE

Alleged Men Engaged in Fist Fight at Point Anne

Differences, that resulted in a fistic outbreak in Point Anne last Sunday night, were culminated in today's local police court, when four defendants of Point Anne were bound over to keep the peace under individual bonds of $200.00.

Alex Somakowski, "Big Mike" Yoseplnjo, Andrew Wiaskin and Joe Somakowski were the four men arraigned into Magistrate Butler's court this morning on charges of disturbing the peace by fighting in a public place and also of committing an assault on Constable B. Bennett who preferred the charges. It is said the four men were engaged in a fight when he arrived last Sunday night. "They were outside fighting between two houses" said Constable Bennett.

"That is not in a public place," reminded Crown Attorney S. C. Norman as his Worship dismissed the charge upon the latter statement of the chief witness.

When arraigned on the charge of common assault Joseph Somakowski was the only witness called before His Worship terminated the proceedings after the four men were before him and bound them over to keep the peace.

STRANGE PRISONER GRACES POLICE CELL

A rather strange prisoner graced the cells at the police station last night when a rabbit was taken into custody and was still confined to its cell today. The apprehension of Peter Rabbit came as the result of vigorous protests emanating from east hill residents regarding their gardens being destroyed by night, apparently the work of animals. Last night the guilty rabbit was caught red-handed in an Albert street garden and immediately taken into custody. The disposal of the animal was still puzzling Acting Chief Arthur Harman this morning, although one reporter did suggest the setting was perfect for a rabbit pie.

Honesty has its own reward, at least one local citizen found that out last night. Brown. 37 Olive street, Toronto, was found inside the wallet. A few minutes later Mr. Brown walked into the police station to claim his property. His wife had later contacted him from Toronto, following Sergeant Booth's call, Mr. Brown being a commercial man. A substantial reward was left at the police station for the honest person who found the wallet, proving honest is the best policy.

TODAY — "WILD-WOOLLY" — "GLAMOROUS NIGHTS"

The old swimming hole, the tent in the backyard, or on an island somewhere, out of sight of home, where water and trees and hills and valleys meet, where clothes cease to worry and pants and shirt constitute most of youth's wardrobe—oh for the long lost days of long ago when we lived in a land of make-believe—when we dreamed of pirates and Indians like Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn vitalized. The youth of today are more than lucky in having camp life made possible for them, camp life supervised by grown-ups where a lad can learn to swim the right way, save life and learn woodlore with the names of the birds and the plants and trees, initiated as it were into the wonderful mysteries of the forest, and even learn the habits of the feathered and furry denizens of those same forests, with their proper names and peculiarities—learn also how to fish in modern manner, discarding the old home-made line and bent pin for the joy of casting with fly and other lure to test wits with the games of the deep.

Moira Boys' Camp, situated near Madoc, is marvellously well equipped to provide a complete outdoor education for the manly boy who yearns to peer behind the curtain which hides Nature in her most interesting moods.

Joy of Camp Life.

Camp life and camp experience hold a challenge to every red-blooded boy. Love and enthusiasm for the out-of-doors is deep-rooted in youth. To get relief from man-made houses and return to Nature where the hand of God is seen, is a desire of boy and man alike.

To wander beneath the blue dome where the sun shines, the fresh breeze blows, the grass springs underfoot, to swim, to paddle, to fish, with gladness and health teeming on every side, brings joy inexpressible.

Camp Fire Stories.

To gather about the camp fire for the stories and the stunts, then watch the fire dying embers, see the silent stars look down, to listen to the noises of the night, to sleep with an abundance of fresh air, fragrant from field and wood, is a wholesome, health-giving experience. The boy who shares the camping and hiking, the camp craft, camp craft, out-of-doors cooking, athletics and aquatics of a well-supervised camp, is fortified with a never failing source of happiness for the balance of his life. He develops skill, he learns how to get along with other people, he catches the spirit of unselfishness (the hope of manhood)—and the character development leads him into a larger spiritual life.

The Great Master.

The example of Christ, the great Master, who sought the woods and the mountains for physical strength and solitude for the renewal of life—may well be imitated.

Every hour of the day and its activities are outlined and supervised from Reveille and Setting Up at 7.00 a.m. to Lights Out at 10.00 o'clock, including morning dip, flag raising, breakfast at 8.00, services, breakfast dishes, Bible study, tent inspection, group games, swim, dinner 12.30 p.m. (very important), rest hour 1.15 p.m., afternoon program 2.15, afternoon swim 4.15, supper 5.30, and supper dishes: baseball 6.30, camp fire 8.00, tent devotions 9.30, lights out 10.00.

What a marvellous day, and to think that a boy can enjoy all this camp life and learning for the small sum of five dollars a week. Dad would spend more than that on fishing tackle alone for one of his outings.

The Old Cow's Breakfast.

Let's dream again of the long ago, of the lad with the "cow's breakfast" hat, mostly in one piece, ragged shirt open to the waist, suspenders reduced to one strap and a nail or two, bare feet with the big toe wrapped in voluminous folds of not too clean rag, a stone bruise or two to keep the wounded big toe company—and ho! for the ole swimmin' 'ole—those were the happy days.

Council Extended Invitation to Attend School

Invitation to members of county council and county officials to attend a School for Municipal Officers to be held at Queen's University in the autumn in conjunction with the Department of Municipal Affairs, was extended by R. M. Winter, M.A., director of the Department of University Extension, during the afternoon session yesterday.

Municipal representatives from as far as extending from Cobourg to the Quebec boundary are expected to attend the school Mr. Winter pointed out in a brief address to council.

Intensive study of important phases of municipal work including accounting, auditing, municipal returns, budgeting, assessment, taxes, statutes and the social services, including Public Health with stress placed on tuberculosis will be made council was told.

Last Few Days

While plans are still in a more or less tentative stage, the school will in all likelihood last three or four days with sessions taking place in the morning and afternoon only.

Active co-operation of council and officials was urged by the speaker who pointed out the fact that the success of the school depended mainly upon the attendance of municipal representatives in the prescribed area.

Universally representatives as well as those of the Department of Municipal Affairs, will attend the School while active co-operation of municipal officials "now in harness" will be invited, Mr. Winter told council.

At the conclusion of the address, Warden Ketcheson expressed appreciation of council and assured the speaker of the co-operation of Hastings County Council in this important work.

City Briefs

Older residents cannot recall when mosquitoes, flies, flies and other winged pests were as numerous as experienced by fishermen and campers in the Lake of Bays district as at present. Even Victoria Park last evening became almost unbearable for visitors owing to the numerous hordes of mosquitoes.

Weeds in the bay have already attained a thick and healthy growth during the past week, so dense that boat owners are spending a considerable part of their time dredging propellers from the tangled growth.

One of the poorest years for bike buyers in local experience to this season, according to S. T. Montague of Montreal shipper at the Belleville district. Sheep hides are particularly poor owing to the weakness of the breed, while the mats cases badly deteriorated through numerous spots and holes for which no reason can apparently be given it was stated.

Slipping on the lower sill of the post office steps on Friday afternoon, James Wilkins, Napanee, suffered a badly wrenched ankle. Leaving his automobile in the city, he returned home by taxicab.

Complaints have again been registered in this city of noisy and vile language on Victoria Park evenings from groups of youths frequent the park until a late hour at night. Last evening a resident requested police and wire were insulted by some youths when they walked into the park shortly before ten o'clock.

Bass are still on their spawning beds in the bay and the season is late this year, it is reported by local fishermen. According to many the Tuesday catch will be opened this year before these fish have actually left their spawning beds.

Vacant land along the bay shore is experiencing considerable demand this season and prices for land have gone up. Several cottages are being built along the north and south shores this season.

POLICE COURT

Orrall Brickman, Belleville, was sentenced to serve 30d. less than he appeared before Magistrate Ponton this morning. Earlier today, Brickman having pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication in a previous court.

"This is the third conviction for this same trouble of one year," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C. before sentence was passed.

Roland Chasser, Montreal, will be committed to the Ontario Hospital, His Worship stated after reading the medical report rendered by Dr. Doyle, government psychiatrist. Chasser was found lying alongside of the shoulder of the road on highway No. 2 some days ago, but when picked up it was established he was feigning injuries. In his report Dr. Doyle is reported to have stated that Chasser was a "chronic delinquent".

John Kellar, Thurlow, appeared on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident, which occurred on Highway No. 37 on the evening of June 8th last. "A south bound car raced me into the ditch where my car rolled over. I became dazed and did not know what happened. I did not get home until 4.00 a.m., not immediately notified the police," stated the accused man. During the course of cross examination Mr. Donnan and Jacob Goodman counsel for the defendants, clashed verbally, the latter questioning the Crown's right to bring out certain evidence which Mr. Goodman held was irrelative. During the course of the proceedings Keller admitted purchasing three bottles of wine from the Belleville liquor store, but repeatedly denied he had consumed any portion of the wine that day.

His Worship reserved judgment, while Mr. Donnan instructed Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine, who had investigated, and preferred the charges, to thoroughly check the Liquor Store sales slips for the day of June 5th, in an effort to discern the possible times of the purchases of the wine.

A charge of child delinquency, held in camera, concluded the proceedings.

Canadian Business Generally Approves the Dunning Budget

Widest Acclaim Comes From Construction Industry

PRAISED BY BANKER

By The Canadian Press

Canadian business generally welcomed today the budget of Finance Minister Dunning that featured removal of the eight per cent sales tax on two score items used in the building trade.

The budget, making no provision for tariff changes in view of negotiations towards a new Canadian-United States trade agreement, was likewise given approval for its comparatively small ever-all 1937-38 deficit, placed at $12,775,000.

From the construction industry, through which tax removals are expected to reach the general public most effectively, came the widest acclaim. Building men saw in the government's action a positive move toward stimulating construction throughout the country. Fishermen, tire manufacturers and breeders of fur-bearing animals also gave general approval to tax dejections aimed at helping their industries.

The Minister's statement on the country's present financial condition drew commendation. S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, pronounced the budget "a good one—if Mr. Dunning can balance his budget at $13,000,000 and balance the Canadian National Railways deficit and other expenditures he is doing a marvelous job."

Long-Needed Move

Gordon West, Toronto, President of the Canadian Construction Council, said elimination of the sales tax from building materials, "is a very considerable long-needed move and I am sure the building trades as a whole will be delighted by this change." He estimated the sales tax cost in a building at about four per cent of the entire cost.

From the laborer's viewpoint came approval of A. Lyon, general secretary of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, who termed the change as "a move likely to mark the beginning of the end of eight bad years for the construction workers."

In Kitchener, John A. Martin, general manager of the Dominion Rubber Company, said removal of the excise tax on tires and tubes, used as original equipment on Canadian-made passenger cars and trucks, was "a move in the right direction" but believed there would be little effect on the general tire market.

A. G. Partridge, President of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, said in Toronto the move was "a big assistance to tire manufacturing."

Can Save Money

Two outfitters of fishing schooners at Lunenburg, N.S., Donald Henry Winters, and E. F. Zwicker, said sales tax exemption of certain equipment for commercial fishing meant "money could be saved."

Opinion that exemption of compulsory contributions to pension funds from income taxes, provided in the budget, would not prove satisfactory came from Sydney Frank Vice-President of the Edmonton Journal, Conservative organ. The equitable proportionate contribution from all companies, would not necessarily result, he said, whereas pension funds should be operated entirely by the federal government as a charge against companies "existing on the credit of the people's resources."

The budget provision for co-ordinating Dominion and Provincial tax on a share of stock at $1 or more will mean little change in actual revenue, said Norman C. Urquhart, President of the Toronto Stock Exchange, but will simplify making out tax sheets and so save a great deal of work. Each share will be taxed one-quarter of one per cent, the federal tax was one-tenth of one per cent.

Mines Greatest Stimulus To Economic Progress

Ottawa, June 16—(CP)—New production records for the Canadian mining industry this year were forecast today by Finance Minister Dunning in his budget speech. He described it as giving a greater stimulus to the economic progress of the country than any other industry. The value production was estimated at $457,000,000, an increase of 26 per cent over the previous year and a new record.

Thirty new gold mines were expected to come into production in 1938, increasing existing capacity by 11 per cent.

100-Mile-Long Blanket of Water Spreads Rapidly

Shanghai, June 17—(AP)—A hundred-mile-long blanket of muddy water emerged rapidly southward through Honan Province today as half-naked Japanese engineers, aided by thousands of Chinese peasants, labored desperately in rushing garrisons to mend breaches in dikes of the Yellow river.

Continuing rain, however, appeared to doom their efforts as the Yellow cascade pouring through wide breaks in the dikes met with west of Kaifeng reached the walls of Chowtzukow, nearly 100 miles south of the normal course.

An Associated Press correspondent, flying over the flood area, reported the river appeared to be changing its course to join China's other great river, the Yangtze.

The yellow torrent was flowing into a tributary of the Hwai river, whence it would reach the Yangtze below Hankiang, former Chinese capital.

DEATH BARES HOARD

Here is an old portrait of Fred Schroyer, who died at the age of 72 in his Masontown, Pa., home. Thought to be a recluse without funds, Schroyer lived in a house which had neither lights, running water, nor other conveniences. When his heirs got a locksmith to open an old safe, they found a hundred $1,000 bills, liberty bonds and other negotiable securities valued at nearly $500,000.

KID KAR DERBY PLANS MATURING

Merchant Assoc. to Cooperate by Staging a Parade of Decorated Floats

This year's Kid Kar Derby again sponsored by the Kinsmen's Club on July 5th, at 6.15 D.S.T. is showing more interest than ever before. It has been asked why it is staged this year on a day that is not a holiday and Chairman Bill Hurst informs the press that the Kinsmen Club is endeavouring to have all the Belleville citizens that they can to view the parade and whereas in former years the derby was held on the holiday and many of the citizens left to other attractions, with this in view the local Kinsmen Club expects the largest crowd to ever view a local event.

Many entries are now in the hands of the committee and with the entry closing date being July 2nd the young executive are busy with new contraptions to really scare more speed. As this year's derby precedes the big circus by just a week and one in every four entrants are prize winners—the boys are counting on seeing a circus once more with their winnings. Also the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association are co-operating with the Kinsmen Club in staging a parade which will boast many floats for which prizes will be given.

STREET PAVING

Motion followed motion and amendment motion and amendment as the discussion reached the argumentative stage shortly after recess. Councillor Ellis was absent.

Stirling Reeve Leads Debate

Reeve Thomas Cranston of Stirling, who claimed that the village had overpaid the county "time and more over", in view of the fact that the county had received a fifty per cent. subsidy from the government, and had charged his village with the full amount of the money loaned, merely stuck to his guns throughout the lengthy argument. He demanded cancellation of payment of monies claimed by the county to be owing then by Madoc on the "gentleman's agreement" had been made.

Leaping to his feet at one stage of the debate the Madoc reeve stated emphatically that "the Reeve of Stirling at the time this agreement was supposed to have been made states that no such agreement was entered into and furthermore those that say so are—well—prevaricators".

Reeve West of Madoc Village, advised that a written agreement had been made between his village and the county and did not ask for cancellation and was willing to pay this amount pending the decision that a better system of payment would be to have part of the county grant money applied on the payment of the loan used for maintenance and the balance be applied on the loan as usual.

Rural reeves aligned themselves on both sides of the question and arguments became hotter as the debate progressed.

Motion Made

Reeve Cranston— "I have information that no agreement existed between the County and Stirling with regard to paving. Asked to sign an agreement the Reeve refused. Stirling has paid in more than the road has cost the county and I hereby move that an agreement existing be cancelled".

Reeve Larkin—"If there is no agreement, it can't be cancelled".

Reeve Cranston — "That is the case. At this thing be laid over until January session".

Reeve Chamber — "If Stirling made no agreement it would only be fair that it be given a rebate".

"I think these agreements with the villages should be settled on some certain date. Let us lay this over until the January session".

Reeve Cranston: "Why should this county get the full amount from the villages when the government paid one half the cost?"

Reeve Chamber: "We pay the cost to the county plus the interest, Reeve Churcher pointed out.

Asks Question

Reeve Sayers: "If villages must pay back what the road cost the county, what".

"In my case," Reeve West, of Madoc stated, "what we paid up is to have part of the money due us applied to principal and into the sinking fund as for the pavement maintenance. It would furnish work for our unemployed."

Clerk Denyes: "There has been considerable money spent in these municipalities since these agreements. This should be deducted from the amount owing".

Had No Agreement

Rural municipalities had no agreement and received no favors, but they contributed to the cost of pavement, Reeve Jordan declared.

"I think the village of Stirling has paid more than they got and I think the agreement should be cancelled" Dr. Lumb, Bancroft, asserted.

Reeve Cranston: "We have overpaid the county under the agreement, but are not asking for any rebate on this."

Reeve Robson: "The villages are entitled to some consideration. If the government paid 1-3 of the original cost of these agreements there should be some arrangements made for them to get back part of this subsidy. As it is, it doesn't look fair to us."

Would Issue Debentures

Warden Larkin: "Had Stirling received the $1,000 from the county would they have had the pavement laid?"

Reeve Cranston jumped to his feet. "Yes. They have issued debentures and had them paid for by now," he said.

Reeve Sayers— Had the county not loaned Tweed $4,000 two years ago they would have had a lot more of pavement in our village. We should appreciate what the county has done, and not be too exacting.

Warden Larkin—"This thing must be unloaded on the Road Committee to retile, remember that. Everyone could be satisfied over a further period of ears".

Clerk Denyes noted here the Municipal Act governed the agreements as a "dangerous one".

An amendment that the matter be referred to the Road Committee and reeves of the villages involved, was made by Reeve Robson.

Another amendment that the matter be laid over until the December session was moved by Reeve Sayers— "This is the only wise course," he said. "By that time the Chairman of the Roads Committee will be here, and he will be able to throw some light on this subject". Reeve Sayers Ns Agreement

Reeve Cranston again leaped to his feet— "The Reeve of Stirling at that time tells me there was no agreement made, and he goes further to say that whoever says there is, is a prevaricator".

Discussion grew heated here. Members rose to their feet in argument. Words flew across the hall and corridors rang with the voices of members raised in argument.

Road Supt. Langlois threw some oil on the argumentative waters with a suggestion that a committee be appointed to investigate procedure of other counties and bring in a recommendation as to what to do, at the December session.

Reeve Linn declared that the man who can straighten this out is in Kingston. He should wait until he comes back so that we can get some satisfaction".

Wait For Road Chairman

Warden Larkin declared himself in favor of laying the question over until December when Reeve Moore, Chairman of Roads and Bridges will be available.

Motions were made thick and fast. Discussion again became warm as arguments developed between groups of members.

Calling for order Warden Larkin asked that a motion arriving at some decision be made. Reeve Jordan moved that former road superintendents, the road committee and reeves involved investigate the matter and bring in a recommendation at the December session.

The motion carried and peace again reigned in the council chambers.

To make sure those melodies are properly sung, producer Darryl F. Zanuck has placed the vocalization in the capable throats of popular Tony Martin and marvelous Marjorie Weaver, the romantic interest of this hilarious musical comedy.

Eddie Piel

A radio announcer sends its latest scout, Tony Martin, down to Kentucky to get some real hillbillies. Marjorie Weaver, waiting for an audition, overhears the plans and rushes back to her theatrical boarding house to tell the Ritz Brothers.

They do down to the hills, disguise themselves as mountaineers, get mixed up in an old feud—a hoodwink Tony Martin into putting on a broadcast in the mountains...and then the smoke clears away a romance nearly goes on the rocks, is patched up and—but fains on the radio comes to every ne.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building.

THE SAME WAY OF LIFE

In the New York Times on Wednesday appeared a significant editorial, which declares that the United States while under a neutrality act is not neutral now in any situation "which involves the risks of war nor will it remain neutral in any future situation which threatens to disturb the balance of world power." After reference to the overwhelming sympathy of the people of the United States with China to such an extent that it has winked at and approved a flagrant violation of the whole spirit of the Neutrality Act by the Roosevelt Administration, the Times points out that "the truth is that no act of Congress can conscript the underlying loyalties of American people. These loyalties have in the past prevailed and may prevail again even over our desire to remain at peace."

The Times notes that statesmen abroad who fail to reckon with this fact because they are "impressed with the Neutrality Act may say about cannon and high-explosives and long term loans and short term loans, or because they think that the United States lies at too great distance from the scenes of potential conflict in Europe to be interested in the points at issue, enormously miscalculate a well-established American habit of choosing sides the moment any issue basic to this country's faith is actually involved."

On the Chinese situation, the Times states "We have cost our influence in advance of any ultimate decision on the soil of China against any possibility that Japan shall profit from this gesture with our approval and support. We will not recognize as valid Japan's claim to one square inch of Chinese territory conquered by force of arms. We will not facilitate through such recognition the development of a new code of property rights which would encourage the investment of foreign capital. We will not permit our own capital to go to the aid of Japan in making her conquest a paying proposition . . . To that extent at least we have aligned ourselves with China in her present struggle. To that extent and more we are partisans in Europe, we find in Europe we find not only the issue raised by imperialism writ large but the issue of dictatorship against our own democracy."

The Times sees in Czechoslovakia "a frontier in which men are prepared to fight for the traditions of democracy, for the right to think as they please and to vote as they please, for the right to worship in their own way; for the right to walk the streets as free men who are equals of those who sit in the seats of power for the right to be secure against arbitrary power against the verdict of the drumhead court and the dry rot of the concentration camp; for the right to live under a system of government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed; for the right to follow, according to their own rights and without permission of a ruling clique, the pursuit of liberty as they have known it and of happiness as they have hoped to find it."

The editor sees in the democracies of Europe, Britain, France and the Scandinavian countries, the likeness of the way of life which the American has chosen. "He knows that these democracies are the outposts of our own kind of civilization, of the democratic system, of the progress we have achieved through the methods of self-government, of the progress we still hope to make tomorrow . . . . He knows that despite geographical remoteness and a traditional desire to avoid entanglement in other peoples' quarrels, we are inevitably the natural allies of the democracies of Europe."

That statement goes far. Then the writer continues: "The vast power of the United States is not used effectively today in defense of international democracy because the American people do not wish to commit themselves in advance to any policy which involves even a potential risk of war . . . We detest war, dread its human cost and fear the consequences it might have for our own democratic institutions. With the other democracies we have no wish to involve ourselves into a paradoxical situation in which our desire for peace is so evident that the aggressor nations are encouraged to resort to acts which bring closer the very war we fear . . . ."

The Times writer thinks that there is small likelihood of change in foreign policy in the near future in the United States beyond the repeal of the Neutrality Act, and believes that there is no reason to believe that the American people will agree at any time in the near future to be bound by commitments to help maintain world peace, because such are not in the traditional foreign policy of the U.S.. But the aggressor nations will make a mistake if they leave the U. S. out of the calculation for "we shall be fully prepared, if war on a large scale envelops Europe, to choose the side of the democracies."

This would mean at least a great moral support as in 1914-16, which would be a great factor "favoring our friends in the interpretation of laws governing our relations with other countries . . . At most it would mean, as it meant in 1917, a decision on the part of the United States to intervene."

The Times tells the statesmen of aggressor countries that there are vital American interests in all parts of the world, "It is important that they should realize the real depth of American loyalty to the whole set of principles and methods and traditions which goes by the name of democracy."

The editorial closes in these words: "No remoteness from the scene . . . . can isolate the U. S. from the consequences of a major war. No neutrality act can prevent the American people from throwing their natural allies. In any ultimate test of strength between democracy and dictatorship, the goodwill and the moral support — and in the long run, more likely than not the physical power of the United States — will be found on the side of those nations defending a way of life which is our own way of life and the only way of life which Americans believe to be worth living."

These words are cheering words, because they indicate what the real attitude of American democracy is, and how it is part of world democracy. This is the expression of the outstanding United States newspaper.

THE BOB O LINK

Down in the clover meadow,
Lush in the green of June,
Robert of Lincoln is singing,
List to his merry tune.
Nearer and nearer swelling
The notes of his joyous strain,
As he swings on the swaying grasses,
Cheering our hearts again.
Oh! but his heart is happy,
List to his bubbling song —
A shower of liquid music,
Jubilant, clear and strong.
A welcome to thee, bold singer,
A comrade so bright and gay,
A part of the merry chorus,
A sprite of the summer day.
Hope in thy song is breathing
For the far days to be,
Joy in thy song is welling
And a glad ecstasy!
Oh! deep in the heart may we cherish
The thrills that thy glad notes bring,
With ever the heart and spirit
A part of thy song and spring.

HOW TO BUILD HOMES WITHOUT

WALLS, FLOORS, DOORS, OR WINDOWS, might make an interesting topic for an afternoon dinner address, and there is no doubt that the Government officials concerned with the working of the Dominion Housing Act could make such an address. Attention is now focussed on the provisions of the new Dominion Housing Act which is to be put into effect and into circulation in an attempt to pep up business in general, but let us consider some interesting angles which have developed in connection with the original Dominion Housing Act, angles which helped to multiply the grey hairs in the heads of government officials.

If a few hundred Canadians are wondering today why they are not getting their homes built under the Dominion Housing Act they might do well to get out the copies of their applications and find out just what they did wrong. Applications received by the lending companies are in many cases both comical and pathetic, officials state. Eager to build their own homes, but entirely inexperienced in planning such a project, many people have sent in applications accompanied by house plans that would be impossible to follow. One such applicant drew a series of pictures of different and distinct kinds of houses. Each one had a door in the middle and the benders had the lads from Lennox County tied up in distinct and distinct kinds of knots. Each one had a door in the middle and the benders had the lads from Lennox County tied up in distinct different and distinct kinds of knots. Each one had a door in the middle and Smith's pitching shaped like a star. The battery work was fine and the infield work fast and accurate enough to satisfy the most exacting fan. The outfielders had little to do. There were considerably less than a million people present when His Worship Mayor McFee removed his coat, stepped into the box and let go an epicure which drew forth an enthusiastic cheer from the crowd. At the end of the box the score stood 2 to 1 in favor of Belleville. Yohn hit one to third which Derry fumbled, the Belleville man making the first station. He made second on a beautiful slide, coming up standing with a considerable portion of Hastings County sticking to his garments. The next minute he was off for third. Rose made a perfect throw to catch him, but in the finest runner did Derry in splendid style, coming home the next minute on Hubbard's hit. In Belleville's half of the 8th they got some more. Orrell opened the batting double which sent two runs across the plate. Mr. Dunstan then was umpire and his popularity fluctuated. Taking the decisions, however, he was a very fair umpire.

The following composed the team: Belleville: Devow, Campbell, Walkins, Brannan, O'Neil, Smith, Yohn, Hubbard and Reeves. Napanee: Rose, Shorts, Richards, Warner, Hilmer, Trumble, Morrell, Derry and Wood.

30 YEARS AGO

June 17th., 1908.

A husky bunch of ball-tossers from Napanee blew into town yesterday afternoon and proceeded to stack up against Belleville in the first scheduled match of the Eastern Ontario Baseball League—that being the high sounding name of the association which the Belleville Baseball Club is connected with by presence. Incidentally it may be stated right at the start that we knocked several bales of hay out of the Napanee aggregation, and the gentleman by the name of Smith, who pitched like two cents. There was rather a lonesome looking crowd present, but the game was a good one, especially from the Belleville point of view. The fact that both teams were dressed almost alike had a rather disturbing effect upon the spectators. The Naps had grey suits and purple stockings and the Bellerille boys had grey suits and red stockings. The vickers were a husky looking bunch and some of them when they came to bat made a name as though they were going to lose the ball in the wilds of Prince Edward County but they didn't. In the field, boys, the lads from Napanee were right on the job with large pieces of pie which helped Belleville to victory. Mr. Derry, who hails from the Napanee, has our thanks for a couple of very thoughtful errors which helped to make victory sure for us. The centre fielder for Napanee also went to sleep once and allowed a fly to drop on the Dominion of Canada when it should have got. The Belleville team one and all played excellent ball. Mr. Smith, in the field, knows up the benders had the lads from Lennox County tied up in distinct different and distinct kinds of knots. Each one had a door in the middle and Smith's pitching shaped like a star. The battery work was fine and the infield work fast and accurate enough to satisfy the most exacting fan. The outfielders had little to do. There were considerably less than a million people present when His Worship

Eskimos Have Perfect Teeth

At a conference of dentists in Montreal the other day a professor of that science at Columbia University who had worked for 15 years in the Labrador and Alaska regions, stated that the Eskimo have the most perfect teeth in the world. It is a rare thing to find an Eskimo who has not the full number of 32, and their dental condition is due to the fact that they chiefly subsists on hard meats. Decay of Eskimo devilop teeth trouble is invariably due to associating too much with white men and acquiring a liking for the white men's soft food, including bread and sugar.

Eskimos do not need tooth pastes. And according to observation by explorers and hunters they do not need baths. Some say: the Eskimo never go in the water unless chance tips over their kyaks. Mr. Steffanson, who knows the Eskimos better than anyone else, asserts that he goes in the water for a swim. He that as it may, they never go in the water for the purpose of having a bath. The water where they live is invariably too cold. They are very healthy people, however, so long as they adhere to their own ways of living, and in other respects—no teeth cleaning and no bathing—they go contrary to the cherished principles of white men's hygiene. The only Eskimos with poor teeth are found among old women whose molars have been worn down by many years of chewing leather to make it pliable.

There is a lesson in this for parents. Give your children plenty of hard, chewy foods and discourage them from taking too much food that can be swallowed easily and from eating too much starchy and sugary articles of diet.

When Men Stay On Relief

Some time ago we paid tribute counted slowly to four between shovelfuls. In some cases I have counted to as high as forty between shovelfuls—and by now, they are skimpy shovelfuls at that." ()

One would be blind indeed to attempt to demonstrate we have nothing like that in Canada. We also have men like this, who are satisfied to remain on relief rolls, making no particular effort to secure work. In other days there was no relief and even lazy men had to hustle to get enough to live. In some cases that incentive has disappeared.

And probably the worst effect is felt on the children who see the men who should be the head of the winner failing to exert himself. It should not be forgotten, however, that there are many men anxious and willing to work, who are continually seeking jobs. These, in the men who get, first preference when jobs are available—as it should be. Often have we said it, and it can be repeated—the worst effect of unemployment is implanted on morale Niagara Falls Review.

YOUTH'S FOLLY

It is to be noted in the health reports for Ontario that there is an increase in the incidence of tuberculosis among those in the years between the ages of 10 and 21. This is attributed by Dr. Cody, Minister of Health, to lack sufficient rest, proper food and warm clothing, mainly due to the tremendous activity of the social life today getting back to the Elizabethan type of living would seem to be the remedy.

LEARN TO SWIM

The story of a drowning in Little Long Lake is that one man, unable to swim, clung to an overturned boat, and was able to reach shore while his companion, a good swimmer, struck to swim to shore and was unable to reach it. There have been many similar instances. A knowledge of how to swim is valuable and, no doubt, has enabled many to save their lives. But quite apart from that, it has prompted people to take chances which have in the end proved fatal. Perhaps it would be in setting any rule for guidance as between holding to an overturned craft and attempting to swim. Circumstances, which are different, govern each case.

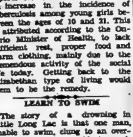
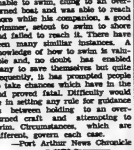
KILL THE UMPS

The unalienable right of a baseball player to get mad and have a fight with the umpire should be held by a police court judge in West Virginia.



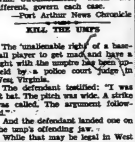
The defendant testified: "I was at bat. The pitch was wide. A strike was called. The argument followed."

And the defendant landed one on the ump's offending jaw.

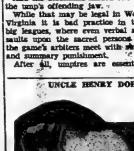


While that may be legal in West Virginia it is a bad practice in the big leagues, where even verbal assaults upon the sacred persons of the game's arbiters meet with swift and summary punishment.

After all, umpires are essential cogs in the game. And wise players submit to their decisions even though occasionally a decision is close and disputable.—Detroit Free Press.



Life Ends Tragically



Bringing a tragic end to a natatic career, Dr. William Wallace Campbell, president emeritus of the University of California and formerly director of Lick Observatory, committed suicide by jumping from a window of his fourth storey apartment. Becoming despondent over ill-health, Dr. Campbell left five suicide notes before plunging from the window.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Personal Day Scientific Management of the Patient Before and After Operation

Perhaps you or a loved one underwent a surgical operation some years ago and you clearly remember how your food intake was cut down a purgative was given and sometimes an enema. By the hour of the operation you may have been "clean" inside and outside but you were very weak. It is thereto very interesting to see the before and after treatment of an operation today.

Dr. W. J. Bridges, New York, in the New York State Journal of Medicine, outlines a five point program combining of five procedures to be followed and five to be avoided.

1—Commencing five days before operation a diet low in fat and rich in starch should be started, avoiding the more indigestible starches and vegetable foods. This is done by using potatoes and adding sugar to the food wherever possible. The patient is allowed to eat a half pound of hard candy or soft gum drops on each of the five days before operation.

2—Fluids should be definitely increased.

3—Table salt—a little over two level teaspoonfuls a day for the five days should be taken, and it is not unusual to observe a gain in body weight of from two to four pounds at the end of the five days.

4—Any gastric clearing of the intestine should be done at least forty-eight hours before operation.

5—A mild "quieting" medicine is given to quiet the mind and to prevent any stomach or intestinal upset.

The five procedures to be avoided are:

1—Opium in any form, particularly morphine, should not be regularly given.

2—It should not be necessary to administer fluids in any form for from eighteen to twenty-four hours after operation, provided the patient was given plenty of fluids during the five days before operation.

3—While the diet should be subjected to the needs present, a fluid diet is more easily digested than one that is pasty. Only a very small amount of fat is given for the first two days after operation.

4—The alkaline ash diet—fruit, vegetable juice—not given to be of any special benefit before or after operation.

5—The injudicious admittance of visitors is to be avoided.

The first few days—the starved week, patient undergoing the shock of an anaesthetic and operation—and then think of the method of today, with plenty of fluids and food and get to get strength, maintain the circulation, and keep fluids in the body. We can understand why patients and physicians do not fear operation as they did a few years ago.

TWINS GET MIXED UP AS CLAUD STROUD PLANS TO WED

If you're easily confused don't bother reading this. It seems that one twin, already divorced from a twin, will marry another twin, whose twin will be best man, while the groom's twin, who has twice married and twice divorced other twins, will be best man. Just like that! Getting down to identifications the left is Claud Stroud, of the famous radio and screen pair who will marry of Hollywood's up-and-coming Brewster twins. Claud's brother, Clarence, right, will be best man and Gloria's sister, Barbara, (the other one in the picture), will be bridesmaid.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, June 17—Nightly drilling of recruits of "A" Co. of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has been taking place on the grounds of the local high school for some time, and a number of spectators are being attracted to the scene. Under the tutelage of Company Sergeant-Major H. Weese the recruits are rapidly improving, and the company looks very good indeed. This week the unit will go into camp at Barriefield from July 30th to August 3rd and as last year will be accompanied by "the Midland and the Stormont, Dundas & Glengarry units".

Officers and N.C.O.'s of the company met at the office of Major H. D. Graham officer commanding "A" Co., on Monday evening and formulated plans for the coming season. Attnongsting the transfer of Capt. Rl. Matthews to the position of staff captain for the brigade, Major Graham stated, that Lieut. A. A. Motion of Colborne, would succeed him as second in command with Lieuts. A. J. Reddick, A. H. Norrington, and H. S. Campbell and Second Lieut. J. Bosco commanding the four platoons.

Company training is carried on each Tuesday and Thursday evening and some forty-odd men will be recruited in all to attend the summer camp.

Proud Entered

Returning from Wooler on Monday evening after besting the Woolerites 3-1 in a close game scheduled by the Trenton Softball Association there, R.C.A.F. members present the following that a protest had been entered by the villagers regarding the outcome of the fracas. According to report only two of the Fliers were actually put out during the running of the game, and when the mistake was later discovered Squdron Leader Stewart that play would have to recommence at that point. A meeting of the league executive has been called by President George Cobley at his office for Thursday evening at 8.00.

Mrs. Nugent Heard

Monday evening's regular Rotary Club dinner took to itself a festive appearance when upon their arrival Rotarians invited their "Rotary Anna" as guests to hear an address delivered by Mrs. Agnes C. Nugent of Trenton and St. Petersburg, Florida. The speaker recently left this town to assume the managerial duties at "a Lindsay hotel.

What! Another a vagabond

Saving is the only true test of believing in the average case, and though it has been a long time since any sea-serpent or Ogo-pogo stories were from Trenton or any portion of the Bay of Quinte for that matter here's one for the book.

Skirting tranquility on the R.C.A.F. bench during the game between the Airmen and the Toronto nine at Bayshore Park on Wednesday evening, two serious, eye witnessing a local policeman and the other the humble representative of this sheet cast their eyes out toward the tranquil surface of the bay. It was the lady with pointed finger to trust the feathine eyes to row farafield—and in some excitement she pointed out to the extremely nervous denizen of the somewhat limited depths of the bay which apparently consisted of a long, sinuous body some three or four coils of which disturbed the water as it moved and projected some distance above it. Moving along at a good swift walking pace it made its way parallel with the shore of the park and some hundred odd yards out. No boats were near it at the time and its progress was easily discernible in the calm water.

Heaven forbid that Trenton should boast of a sea-serpent in addition to its already complicated relief problem, but there is no doubt in the minds of at least two Trentonians that the Bay of Quinte harbors some strange sort of marine creature of an estimated length of ten or twelve feet. It may be for those who will scoff, but this is one snake that didn't come out of a bottle—believe it or not!

Weddings

DOUGHTY—MOORCROFT

Eldorado, (Special)—The United Church at this place was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday June 8th., when Laura Estella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moorcroft and the late Mr. Thomas Moorcroft, was united in marriage to Robert Blair Doughty, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doughty of Cooper. Rev. B. S. Smith officiating.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Fred Moorcroft, entered the church to the strains of the bridal chorus, played by Mrs. S. B. Smith. She wore a white shantukin travel suit with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

The bridesmaid Miss Alma Moorcroft sister of the bride, wore a dress of white lace with navy bolero.

The groom was attended by his brother Mr. Roscoe Doughty. The church was beautifully decorated with pink and white peonies and potted ferns.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. J. J. Wilson of Shirley sang "Beautiful Garden of Prayer".

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother where a dainty informal luncheon was served to twenty-five guests by Mr. Kenneth Rollins and Mr. Murl Wartman and Misses Phyllis Parks and Margaret Gasbel. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service, to the bridesmaid a gold compact, to the groomsman, a Yardley shaving outfit; to the ushers tie clips.

Upon their return from a short motor trip, Mr. and Mrs. Doughty will reside on the groom's farm at Cooper.

150 ROCHESTER

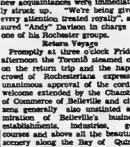
In charge of the party was K. J. Priester, of the Canada Steamships Company, a very popular official, who looked after the welfare of the party in a manner which could not be excelled.

One of the distinguished guests of the Rochester Club officials on the trip was H. Somerville, Manager of The New Willard Hotel, Washington, D.C. Mr. Somerville's visit to Belleville was particularly interesting by reason of the fact that the assistant manager of the New Willard is a former Belleville resident, John Lynch. The visiting excursionists represented very fully the industrial and business activities of Rochester.

One of the busiest men at the government dock following the arrival of The Steamer, Toronto was John A. McIntosh, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, who on behalf of the Chamber members, reflected the true hospitality of the Chamber in making the visitors feel immediately at home.

How the Day Was Spend

Dozens of cars were secured through his efforts with which to transport the guests to the Bay of Quinte Country Club where a large part of the day will be enjoyed by the golfing-minded excursionists. The cars were donated free and generously by their local owners following brief requests by the Chamber president.



Many other visitors had arrangements made for sight seeing trips from the city to Presquile and the Trent system in the Marin Mail Boat, piloted by Captain Redfearn, one-time skipper of the Toronto. All other cars were volunteered by Chamber members and others to assist in the motor trips through the desirable district.

Scenes About the Docks

A spirit of jovial carefreeness permeated the south end of the city and the dock as the visitors disembarked from the large boat which was waved to the excursion dock, her funnel trailing drifting smoke from inactive boilers, awaiting their return. Scores of local residents gathered on the dock and new acquaintances were immediately struck up. "We're being given every attention, treated royally", assured "Andy" Jones in charge of one of his Rochester groups.

A Mark for Verays

Promptly at three o'clock Friday afternoon the Toronto steamer cast off her ropes and the happy crowd of Rochesterians expressed unanimous approval of the cordial welcome extended by the Chamber of Commerce of Belleville and citizens generally also unstinted admiration of Belleville's business establishments, industries, golf courses and above all the beautiful scenery along the Bay of Quinte and the fishing possibilities.

It was you don't happen to know, when you can't remember, you can't forget, and it's only a matter of time until you say cocktail fact is the correct implement.

Mae West, buxom blonde siren of the screen, is pictured as she prepared to give her deposition in the suit of playwright, Mark Linder, against the actress for one million dollars and an accounting of profits from the picture, "She Done Him Wrong." Linder in his action contends that he wrote the script 64 a stage play under the title "Diamond Lil" in which Miss West starred 10 years ago on Broadway.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Expects Man She Marries to Pay Her Debts

Dear Miss Fairfax:

She's a very attractive widow who had a considerable fortune which she dissipated in extensive travel. Through hard, conscientious work, I have been able to build my own home, and put aside a little nest egg.

I am considering marrying this lady, but hesitate, inasmuch as I have also had a number of debts, which she has suggested I pay. She has several brothers who are professional men, and it seems to me she should go to her nearest of kin and not someone whom she has known only a matter of months.

Puzzled

It shows an unmistakable hardboiled quality for a woman to suggest to a man, to whom she is not even engaged, to pay her debts. Is her fortune, forsooth, a dowry to get a job and pay off this old indebtedness. She's probably the type who regards men as banks.

He Won't Come To the House

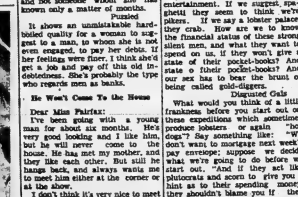
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man for about six months. He's very good looking and I like him, but he will never come to the house. He has met my mother, and they like each other. But still he hangs back, and always wants me to meet him either at the corner or at the store.

I don't think it's very nice to meet a boy on the outside when you have a perfectly nice home, and no opposition on her side. Please settle this for all of us.

Mary B.

I agree with you that it is very nice to meet the boy friend on the corner occasionally, but when the Bashfulness is probably the cause of his queer behaviour. After a while the time he will walk right into the parlor.



Spaghetti or Lobster Newburgh—What Shall a Girl Order?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're appealing to you—a group of girls who can't discover when we go out with one of our friends what they want to spend on an evening's entertainment. Are we supposed to chatell they seem to think we're pikers. If we say a lobster palace they crab. How are we to know the financial status of these strong silent men, and what they want to spend on us, if they won't give a hint—or buy pocket-books? And state o fiheir pocket-books? And our sex has to bear the brunt of being called gold-diggers.

Disgusted Gals

What would you think of a little frankness before you start out on these expeditions which sometimes produce lobsters or again "hot dogs"? Say something like: "We don't want to mortgage that week's pay envelope; suppose we decide what we're going to do before we start out. "And if they act like plutocrats and scorn to give you a hint as to their spending money they shouldn't blame you if they find themselves in the lobster palace.

Prize Package

By FRANCES L. BARRY

"You may be a mystery man," smiled Sylvia, with her favorite wide-eyed stare, half-innocence, half audaciousness, "but I know one thing, at least, about you; you can dance, Mr.—"

"Mickle is my name," her tall partner informed her. He adjusted her wrap, and the feel of his arm across her shoulders sent a delicious little shiver down Sylvia's spine. She recognized the symptom. "So you had it."

"Mickle is not a very high-sounding name at all!" he was apologizing. "I'm usually called Micky—by folks who like me"

"Just so—Micky!" purred Sylvia. She was not surprised to find the arm that had adjusted her cloak was still about her.

She supposed he was a college man. Most of the crowd were. What was it Marian Maxson had said in introducing him? A "mystery man."

Then he kissed her.

"I've been waiting for that kiss," he told her the eight long seconds. The first one I had from you was only a tempting sample."

Sylvia smiled. A premonition of disaster was upon her. When before had her lips been bruised in this fashion?

She was reminded. Rudely reminded.

"You weren't so dressed up that day", the brazen voice behind was telling her. "But you were just as pretty. Angel is beginning to pall. You were like Aphrodite rising from the foam. Aphrodite in the scarlet bathing suit—and a chip on her shoulder."

"How amusingly you recall the situation" applauded Sylvia icily. "Please take your hands off."

The scorn in her voice was such that she felt it must reach him. The man stepped back before her blazing eyes.

"So that is why your face was so familiar," she said in calm anger. "I think that I could have slapped the one and only Micky, Micky, the lifeguard, Micky, mower of lawns and digger of clams, Micky of the Outlook House, handy man of Outlook Inn. I've had seeing you for three summers in overalls. I hope it is no longer the fashion to recognize you in evening clothes."

"Sylvia—" he stretched out a placatory hand.

"Miss Selkirk, please. You have presumed far enough. I suppose you think you've got me where the one and only Micky, Micky, the handy, lifeguard, mower of lawns and digger of clams, Micky of the Outlook House, handy man of Outlook Inn, can be seen posing

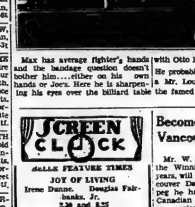
THAT'S A MIGHTY BIG FIST . . .



Of course Joe Louis' fist aren't this big in reality, but they must look as big or bigger when they come hurtling at one's jaw. The colored champion is not being handicapped by the record ruling of the New York boxing commission that allows twice as much gauze and tape to be wrapped around the fighters' fists as was allowed last time Louis and Schmeling met. Louis has brittle hands and many critics claim that in his last fight with Max, the scarcity of bandages slowed him up as his hands became sore during the progress of the bout.

. . . BUT IT ISN'T WORRYING MAX

Max has average fighter's hands and the bandage question doesn't bother him . . . either on his own hands or Joe's. Here he is sharpening his eyes over the billiard table the famed eight ball.

with Otto Petro, former cycling star. He probably has a mental image of a Mr. Louis tucked neatly behind the famed eight ball.

Joe Louis Tapers Off His Training For Bout With Max Schmeling

Cincinnati and the Pirates Closing Fast on Giants and Cubs in National Loop Race

Virtually Tied For Third And Only 4 1-2 Games Behind

INDIANS HOLD ON

Both Cleveland And The Yankees Win on Thursday

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer)

The way Bill Terry's Giants and Cholly Grimm's Cubs have been showing signs of hitting the skids off and on for no reason at all, things may yet start to pop in that two-horse National League race.

The rude Reds from Cincinnati and Pie Traynor's rejuvenated Pittsburgh Pirates are virtually tied for third place today, just three games back of the Cubs and only 4 1-2 out of the top. The Giants have won only seven of their last 17 games, and the Cubs have taken two out of seven.

Take the Pirates. For years they've been famous for getting away from the barrier fast, then falling asleep. They've been famous, too, for being the perfect sleepers for the Giants.

Yet they've won 11 out of their last 16, the latest a 10-3 beating they pinned on the Giants yesterday. And even more amazing is the fact that they've whipped the New Yorkers five times in nine games, four times in the last five meetings. Last year, they won only four from the Giants altogether.

Then there are the Reds, Johnny Vander Meer is pitching no-hitters all over the place, Paul Derringer is coming back, and Buck McCormick and Schnozzola Lombardi are finding a "vocals" in just about every pitcher in the league.

Reeks Beats Giants

The Pirates' rookie Bob Klinger skyrocketed into the league pitching lead by handcuffing the Giants with five hits yesterday for his third victory in a row, and his fifth against one setback for the year. It was the second straight loss for King Carl Hubbell.

While that defeat shaved the Giants' National League lead to 1 1-2 games, the American League race remained a neck-and-neck struggle between the Yankees and Cleveland Indians. The Tribe continued half a game in front by whipping Washington 4 to 1, on Bobby Feller's eight-hit shoving. Monte Pearson and Bump Hadley combined in a one hit performance as the Yanks trampled Chicago White Sox.

Tommy Bridges pitched a six-hitter and fanned eight to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 12-3 win over the Athletics. The Red Sox finished strong and walloped St. Louis Browns 12-8.

Claude Passeau's six hit pitching gave the Phillies a 3-2 margin over St. Louis Cardinals.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 17 (AP)—Mike Jacobs doesn't have to sell another ticket to be in the clear on Schmeling and Louis....That doesn't mean he has a sell-out yet, but the fight that's going to lay an egg.... You'd be surprised at the lack of Saturday money with so many of the top flights experts out on the Louis-Schmeling....Odds are 7, 8 and 9 to five depending on where you bet....That 11 to 5 flurry of Wednesday didn't last.

How about Ma Scotty Reston, who handles sports in London for the Ap!....All he did was lick two American Walker Cup players on the same day....He took Johnny Fischer by one hole drank a beer and polished off Marvin Ward, 3 and 2.

At Speculator the other night, Max Schmeling sat down after dinner and autographed 165 photos which will be included in a souvenir book Mon Annenberg publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, will give away at a party after the fight....Reliable reports from up that way say a sizeable percentage of the citizens in Yorkville (New York's German section) are pulling for Louis—They are piqued with Schmeling.

By the time the Red Sox get through paying their minor league obligations, player investments and all, the club dropped $180,000 last season....But owner Tom Yawkey wears the same old grin....Bitterbaumer's feud in the majors right now is going on between Joe McCarthy and Jimmy Dykes....Last winter Dykes pooped off: "When the Yanks sold him (Tony Lazzeri) they sold their brains"....And in a recent series after the Sox had trimmed the World champs three straight McCarthy bawled: "For blankety blank sakes are you going to let that bunch of semi-pros take you?"...The Sox now are Berlin....(Brooklynese for bolting)....Incidentally since McCarthy threatened them with morning practice the New Yorkers have won six straight.

LOUIS TO MAKE HIS OWN FIGHT AGAINST MAXIE

Blackburn Takes Off Pressure And Puts Joe on Own

PLAN INDEFINITE

Trainer Thinks Louis Could Win by Plenty if He Used Left

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 17 (AP)— Jack Blackburn, having tried for a solid month to make a rip-tearing fighter out of champion Joe Louis, and with some success, has taken off the pressure now and has told Joe to go ahead and make his own kind of fight against Max Schmeling next Wednesday night.

At yesterday's workout at Pompton Lakes, the negro trainer told Joe: "All right, chapple, I've taught you all I know here, from now on you just fight the best you know how, and that'll be good enough."

That is as much as anybody knows about the sort of battle the big amber-colored boy will wage against the cool veteran who knocked him out two Junes ago.

Going to Wade In

Joe himself, still sore stoutly that he is going to wade into "Smellin" from the first bell an' knock him out," no matter how many times he gets cracked by the German's right hand in the process.

Julian Black, one of Louis' two managers, claims that "Joe, if he wants to, can cut Schmeling to pieces with his left."

Ringside experts who have been gazing at the negro for weeks are, if anything, more mystified than usual. After the champion's workouts it is interesting to watch 20 or 30 of them get together and try to interview each other. Yesterday a group of them—Jimmy Dundee cornered and nearly questioned his cauliflower ears off until he finally confessed that he thought Louis had a good left.

May Make Difference

The reason everybody is trying to figure out Louis' plan of battle is some of the experts think it could make a big difference in the outcome. There are those who are certain that Schmeling will knock the chatter better than neglected beer if Joe tries to force the pace. They say the bookmakers would not be laying 11 to 5 odds on Louis if they thought Joe intended to do anything as footish as that.

The closing days of training are at hand as the advance sale soars toward the $600,000 mark. Louis will complete his heavy work tomorrow and Sunday, while Schmeling will continue to box through Monday. Tuesday there is to be a special meeting of the Athletic Commission to smooth out the details.

Schmeling finds resting as hard as working at this training camp at Speculator, N.Y.

The German challenger didn't do any real work yesterday, except a 10-mile jaunt over the roads, but three broadcasts, one to the United States, one to England and one to Germany kept him busy all day.

NEWARK BEARS SAILING ALONG TO ANOTHER FLAG

Score Seventh Straight Triumph by Beating Rochester

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Come Out of Slump to Plaster Birds by 11-5

(By The Associated Press)

There seems to be no stopping those Newark Bears in their drive toward another International League pennant but the fight for the three other places in the post-season playoffs is turning out to be a battle royal.

While the Bears hung up their seventh straight triumph and stretched their league lead over Buffalo Bisons to eight games by defeating Rochester 11 to 3 yesterday the rest of the race grew tighter than a drum.

Jersey City Giants moved closer to the second money position by nosing out Montreal Royals 6 to 5 and moved past Rochester into third place and Syracuse Chiefs advanced into a virtual tie for fourth with the Red Wings by walloping the Bisons 9 to 5. Even the last place Toronto Maple Leafs who broke an 11-game losing streak by pounding Baltimore 11 to 5 are far from out of the contention.

The Little Giants came from behind with three run rallies in the seventh and eight innings to nip the Royals. Successive singles by Manager Travis Jackson a pinch-hitter and George Myatt drove in the tying and winning runs.

The somnolent Leafs finally roused themselves out of their deep slump by smashing out 15 hits against four Baltimore pitchers. A five run splurge in the seventh lighted the game for the Toronto club.

Tommy Bridges, Tigers—Panned eight in pitching six-hitter, and drove in three runs himself beating Athletics 12-3.

Bump Hadley, Yankees—Pitched hitless ball in 5 2-3 innings relief trick for 5-1 decision over White Sox.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox—Hit two doubles and two singles and drove in four runs in 12-8 win over Browns.

Dempsey Almost Regained Crown In The Battle of the Long Count

Manassa Mauler Puts Tunney Down With Left Hook and Then Forgets Neutral Corner Rule—They've Been A rguing About the "14 Count" Ever Since

JACK DEMPSEY, AGAINST GOOD TIMMY IN 1927, CAME CLOSER THAN ANY OF THE TRUE BY-CHAMPIONS TO REGAINING THE HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE.

COPYRIGHT, 1938, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Jim Corbett came close to recovering the world's heavyweight championship when he beat Jeffries for 22 rounds, only to run into a haymaker and take the count in the twenty-third.

But of the heavyweight champions who tried to come back, Jack Dempsey came closest of all. He missed by a few fleeting seconds.

Dempsey, maker of melodrama at Toledo where he massacred Jess Willard; at the Polo Grounds where he pounded Luis Angel Firpo into the earth after being hurled out of the ring at the end of a flying tackle, and at Boyle's Thirty Acres, where he toyed with the Orchid Man of France, did not fall the 104,000 who packed Into Soldier Field at Chicago to see his last magnificent gesture.

That was 11 years ago. In the previous year, the Man Mauler, then 31 years old, had met his nemesis when Gene Tunney stabbed Him Into a puny pulp in ten rounds on a rainy night in Philadelphia. Yet there were thousands who refused to believe that Tunney could do it again, thousands who strung along once more with the man with the killing punch.

Neutral Corner Rule

It was his own failure to comply with a rule that Dempsey can blame for his failure to become the first heavyweight to win back the title. One of the regulations the Illinois boxing commission imposed for the fight was that, in event of a knockdown, the man scoring the knockdown was to go to the farthest neutral corner. The referee was then to begin his count until the fighter scoring the knockdown complied. Referee Dave Barry explained the rule to both fighters at the start of the bout.

In the first round at Philadelphia Dempsey had come out fighting. But at Chicago he started more cautiously. He was wary of that snaky Tunney left, and try as he would to manoeuver him into a position to make him a target for a good right, Tunney was unable.

Tunney threw a flock of wild right hands in that Chicago fight, but it was not until the fourth round that he finally hit Dempsey with one. It landed high on the temple, but staggered the ex-champion. Jack covered up.

Though Dempsey was bleeding from cuts on his face when the fifth round started, he seemed fresh, and the action began to pick up in this round. Tunney kept trying to cross with a long straight left hook and was careful to stay out of reach of Dempsey's left hook. In that round Tunney inevitably tied Dempsey up.

Momentous Seventh

In the seventh Dempsey crossed with a long right that hit Tunney on the face, and Tunney retreated. Dempsey followed, and planted a left hook on the champion's chin. It was a terrific punch, and Tunney sagged, his back against the ropes. Rebounding, he took another left hook, then a right and a left, another right and left as he was sinking to the floor.

Barry began his count, but at "three" turned and saw that Dempsey had not gone to "the farthest neutral corner." He signalled to Jack to do so, but, Dempsey, confused, took no notice. Barry rushed over to Dempsey and pushed him toward the corner. Then he returned to Tunney and started the count all over again at "one." Gene took his time.

Just how long Tunney was on the floor is a disputed point. Certainly not less than 14 seconds. Some ringsiders said 30 seconds. But when Barry, his head was clear. He knew that his only safety lay in flooring Dempsey long enough for a murderous left, Tunney picked it off and retreated, starting to circle to his right. They were around and around, Dempsey swinging at the fleeting target, not landing a punch. Then, suddenly, Tunney stepped and fired a right into the Mauler's face. Dempsey buckled.

The Telling Blow

Then Tunney circled to the left, followed by Dempsey, who shouted, "Come on and fight!" Tunney kept slipping backward. Then, suddenly, Dempsey stopped and planted a vicious right under Dempsey's heart, that was the blow that won the fight for Gene, in the opinion of many writers at the ringside. It stopped the Manassa Mauler.

The crowd seemed to sense that Dempsey had fought unfairly. When the Mauler went down before Tunney in the eighth, there resulted little doubt. The next two rounds saw Tunney in complete mastery.

After the gong ended the tenth, and the formality of a decision had been enacted, Dempsey went over to the ex-marine and said, "Congratulations, Gene! I did the best I could!"

RALPH GULDAHL IS BEST GOLFER

Wins Western Open Tourney With a 72 Hole Total of 279

By Henry B. Jamieson

St. Louis, June 17—(AP)—Ralph Guldahl did it again.

And "he bears the title of the greatest man in golf today after another of his blistering stretch finishes in the western open championship yesterday.

Theburty Texan drew two pairs—successive United States open and Western victories—and came up with his third straight western conquest for a full house.

Birdie and eagle feathers fairly flew along Ralph's final 4-mile trail as he bounced in with a six-under-par 66 for a four-round total of 279.

The champion never was behind but at every turn he found the field of sharp-shooters placing their shots dangerously close.

Shamrin Sammy Snead was the man to wilt under the pressure. He rounded the three-meter flag in a 214 tie with Guldahl but lost his putting touch and came in with 286, two over par, for second money.

Ray Mangrum of Dayton, O., who eased unnoticed to a 144 level with the second-round king at the 36-hole mark, faded with a pair of 78's into a three-way tie for 10th with Clayton Smith and Harry Cooper, Canadian open champion.

Guldahl's share of the $2,000 stake was $700. Second place was worth $400 to Snead. Tunney Penna., who buzzed around with the 2nd. best 18-holeconi, 67, received $300 on his 286.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

The officers and members of the club wish to thank the Ontario Intelligencer for this column. It is my intention to make these notes as interesting as possible so do this I must have the help of all our members, any game of interest or any suggestions that would help make our club games more interesting would be appreciated.

July the 1st is only two weeks away. Have you paired up for our doubles? We have got to have at least twenty-five teams from our own club, so get busy and get in some practice you will likely need it.

Fifteen rinks took part in a men's tournament at Maple on Wednesday. Three teams going from our club two of them getting in the charmed circle. Sergt. Thompson won prizes fo rtwo games high and Charlie Symons one game high. Ah. Wonnacott just failed to click. Teams were made up as follows.

H. Middleton, C. McGuire, Frank Correll and Sergt. Thompson skip.

Bill Harden, M. Edwards, Geo. Woodley and C. Symons, skip.

Harry Stewart, Art. Wesley Chuck Davis and A. Wonnacott, skip.

This was a pretty good showing for our club so early in the season. The boys arrived home about 1.30 o'clock a.m.

On Wednesday afternoon mixed trebles were played on our own greens. The winners were Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Watkin, Mrs. Robson, Joe Black and Geo. Watkin.

The first death since we moved to our new greens took place when John Houston passed away after a lengthy illness. John was one of our officers for years taking a keen interest in all our activities. Our sympathy is extended to Mrs. Houston and family and we trust that in the near future Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Holgate will come back qo us so that we can pass the time at the game John was so fond of.

They say life is very uncertain so is bowling at least I thought so when Newt Wilbur handed me a 13-0 trimming just recently.

Theloh needs money, only half have paid the dues to date, what about you.

The grass on our greens is the best this year since the greens opened seven years ago. Charlie Doran is doing good work. His position is something like an umpire at a ball game. Hard to please everyone Jack, or, greenaman is as good as ever outside of a little lime trouble.

The club was very fortunate in their choice of chairman of games. Mr. Zeran is a hard worker and deserves the support of all our members.

It has been decided to hold a tournament (trebles) on our greens on Wednesday, July 6th. This game is being held for the express purpose of helping the financing of our club let us all get behind this proposition and make it a real success. The fee for the game will be 75 cents each. Good prizes will be given. Cpt. Judy will play on each team so keep the date open and let us have a 100% attendance.

"I don't see how anyone could be expected to support an entourage to participate in such a country as Japan, when you consider the policies she stands for today," was the way Wm. J. GOLF FACTS NOT THE GRIEFS

By Alan Morrison

Side Angle

I have often called hobbing up and down the worst fault a player can have in his swing. And I am continually on the lookout for other faults that encourage it.

One of these has to do with the angle between the left arm and the club. If you will take the trouble to stand so that you get a good view of a player's left side, you will appreciate the importance of this angle. When gripping the club addressing the ball or picking up the club to waggle it back and forth before the swing, the average player invariably bends his wrists so that the angle of the club is in relation to the left arm, at an angle of something like 110 degrees. It should be about 160 degrees.

Many players make a difference because the wrong angle forces the player to bend forward toward the ball. In this bent position he tightens his midsection so that there can ic no co-ordination between body and hands, So that he can stand erect enough to keep the midsection free from tension, the line between the left arm and the shaft should be almost straight.

Try to do this and you'll find that the nearer you come to having the two in a straight line the smoother your whole swing will be. The same thing applies to all clubs.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

The annual big league "all star" game will be played on July 6th at Cincinnati this year and no doubt one of the most certain starters in either league will be Johnny Vander Meer, the Reds sensational new hurling find. With already two no runners, no hit games to his credit, Vander Meer will doubtless be sent to action, especially as the game is to be played in Cincinnati. Johnny's home city. Carl Hubbell, Mace Brown of the Pirates, Cliff Melton, the Giants hillbilly pitcher and maybe Dazzy McPeirce of the Bees have outside chances of doing the hurling honors for the National League. No doubt the get-national younger Tiger hurler, Vernon Kennedy, will be one of the first chosen by the American League entry, while old Boo Grove and big Red Ruffing may get a call as well as one of the youthful Earl Feller and maybe the temperamental Johnny Allen, the latter two being outstanding Cleveland pitchers. We expect to see Bill Dickey, Yanks and Gabby Hartnett, Cubs, as opposition catchers.

Both leagues will have their No. 1 boys in the outfield, Joe DiMaggio, in centre for the Americans and Ducky Medwick patrolling left field for the National team. Unless he strikes his hitting pretty soon, Columbus Lou Gehrig may miss his first "all star' game, despite his more than 2,000 consecutive games record. "Lumbago Lou" faces strong opposition in Hal Trosky, Buddy Greenberg and Jimmy Foxx this year, but chalk Charlie Gehringer up as a sure-shot at second base to continue his unbroken record of playing every all-star game. Don't be surprised if old Pete Lapzeri pops up at second base for the National Leaguers, even if he is regarded as an American League performer. Mr. Cornsick of the Reds, although a pitcher by profession, seems to be the Nats, best bet for first-baseing. The infield and third base of both teams will cause the respective managers many worries, as regardless we expect Hitler's repeal itself. After taking a gander at the entire picture we'll have to string along with the broken leap boys and say the National League entry is in for its annual licking.

To date Belleville is faring exceptionally well in their two baseball leagues the local intermediates heading the Bay of Quinte loop with three victories and only one reverse while the Kiwanis Life Insurance 'tops' in the district junior loop with two wins in as many starts. Wednesday's reverse of the Gibbards at Napanee was the worst defeat suffered by any Quinte loop team thus far in the schedule. Up until that time no club had lost by more than two runs. Although the Panning-led squad did win at Napanee the locals were guilty of giving at altogether too many bad balls especially in the clutches. Stan Spratt whiffed ten Belleville batters but in the majority of cases he can thank the locals for going after bad balls. It is hard enough to hit the good pitches without giving after the poor ones. Incidentally Sonny Green is doing a great job behind the plate for the Wurtzie nine, receiving the sparkplug that makes the engine run so smoothly. If the locals continue to get the combination of good pitching, good fielding and hitting in the clutches they'll be a hard combination to beat.

We took a walk around the much-publicized renovated Victoria Park and viewed the sights under the moonlight last night. There is no question but the lighting system has really been wanted need and adds considerably to the comfort of the fans in general. A new diving tower has been erected and will be used by Y.M.C.A. but there seems to be need of a floating raft for the more expert swimmers. All that is needed for the construction of such a raft would be a couple of empty drums and some small pieces of lumber. Such a floating raft is always a welcomed asset at any swimming place especially where there is deep water. The cost would be very little. Incidentally the Parks Board are endeavoring to have additional play equipment erected at the Victoria Park for the assessment of the kiddies. At present there is only one swing. With the increased crowds of adults and children frequenting the park something in the line of amusement should be afforded the kiddies. For the smaller children a sand pile would be most acceptable and the city has plenty of sand which could be utilized at the Bridge Street during the summer months we'd imagine.

MAX Schmeling strenuously objected to the New York State Boxing Commission allowing champion Joe Louis to wear the special Chicago-made boxing gloves with the added protection to an overlaid thumb that was published yesterday. Schmeling did not protest too strenuously when the Commission granted Louis permission to use excess tape and gauze on his hands although he would be perfectly within his rights to protest. but when the "imported gloves" were suggested, Herr Maxie did let off a blast. The question is "are the New York State Boxing Commissioners merely helping the Louis case along?" Yesterday a not-sectarian anti-Nazi league put the boycott on the fight.

Twice within the week Carl Hubbell has failed in his attempt to bang up his 200th National League pitching victory, yesterday the Pirates knocking Hubbell from the slab in his second unsuccessful attempt within the week. Young Bob Feller hung up his second seasonal victory, however, as Cleve. land won from the Senators.

If you want to disprove the old saying: "youth must be served," the Kitsmen of the Intermediate of the local Kinsmen's Club, what team was their inter-club softball game last evening. It seems it was unearthed that Schmeling had the last laugh, however, the score reading something like 17 to 25 or more resembling a basketball count. The challengers were sent wending their way homeward, but by back street routes.

There's to be a gala field day with sweepstakes and all at the Belleville Golf Club on Sunday, Francis Carter informs us. The members are preparing to remain the entire day on the links, dinner being served at the club house.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

Tobey thought she had hated and distrusted him always, but she was mistaken. She had begun by adoring her father, a fact which served to make her subsequent bitter disillusionment more complete. She adored him when she was too young to realize the meaning of her mother's frequent tears, when she could accept at its face value Jake's oft-reiterated explanation that "Daddy wasn't very well just now". She adored him while she still could sleep through the terrible scenes that took place in the succession of tiny walled flats, or waiting, for there only a little frightened, not wondering, in the dark.

Tim Chandler was a big, vital, noisy man with black hair and with warm dark eyes which added to his abundant vitality constituted his daddy-god heritage from which him. Fortunately for her. There were other features of his, other traits less desirable to inherit. There were his heavy brows which met in a straight line across his forehead; there was his weak mouth. There was his black rages followed by tearful moods of self-pity followed top by insincere protestations of shame over his disgraceful conduct and extravagant promises to do better.

"I'll never touch another drop so long as I live, Julie, I won't forgive me," he would say.

And he would call Tobey to him and kiss the bruises on her thighs little arms, the ugly welts on her own hand made, saying over and over, "I'm sorry, baby. Sorry and ashamed — but things are going to be different now. You'll see. This time I mean it."

The child Tobey didn't expect him to carry out these promises. Of course he would drink again. Didn't he always drink? Of course there would be other rages. Other bruises inflicted without cause. Didn't she always bear upon her the marks of his cruelty? Sometimes they were very angry and flailed and sometimes they are philosophers. Tobey was a little of each. She learned early that Tim's promises were like her mother's quivering threats, were never either a promise to be taken seriously.

"I'll go back to my father," Julie would cry out at Tim sometimes in agony of fear and horror. "Tobey and I...he'd be glad to take us in! He never wanted me to marry you, I'll leave you...."

But Julie wouldn't do that. She couldn't. The very gentleness which had first attracted wild, boisterous Tim to her was merely the other aspect of her ineffectuality, her aimless futility.

Once Tobey asked Julie, "What's my grandpa like? Is he rich? Was that why he didn't want you to marry daddy — or —"

She paused then, overcome by an odd embarrassment. It was the same feeling she experienced at school when some child inquired about the telltale bruises on her arms. On these occasions Tobey would say simply, almost indifferently, "I got hurt." Offering no further explanation than that she didn't even occur to her to add, "My father did it."

Tobey couldn't remember when she learned that if one can sound sufficiently casual about a matter, about any matter, other people can be made to consider it casually too. But it was a very good thing to know.

Julia scoffed, "Rich!" laughing her high sweet laugh. Then she sobered and with a little air of pride lifted her chin. "My mother was, though, before she married and her family disinherited her. But Pa! He's got a little farm near Manning. That's the town where I was working when I met your father. I clerked at Beasiters', the dry goods store there. And Tim was traveling for a Chicago wholesale house...."

Tim had had many jobs since the one with the wholesale house, all of which Tobey had lasted weeks, some months; once he had held the same position for almost a year before an unusually lenient employer discovered the nature of the frequent "illness" that kept him at home.

They had lived, Tim and Julia and little Tobey, in Chicago, in Cleveland, in Detroit, then in Chicago again. But the flats they lived in were so amazingly similar that they seemed to merge together in retrospect into a composite memory.

Shabby flats in need of paint and general repair, the flats overrun by shiny brown cockroaches scampering out at night from the ancient plumbing, flats with dirty odorous halls from which sleep steps seconded.

But Julia had forgotten all that for the moment. Her mild blue eyes gazed past Tobey absently, while the breeze from the open window blew her pale hair into untidy wisps.

She was remembering a June day long ago when she and Tim Chandler first laid eyes on each other there in the faintly musty gloom of Beasiter's store. Julia was in the confusion of a small-town store all about them. She had been wearing a new rose-sprigged voile, carefully protected by a black-alpace apron ..... She had been married in that same dress scarcely a week later, Julia interrupted herself to say, in the neat sitting room of the Presbyterian parsonage.

"I'm wouldn't even come to the wedding," Julia said aloud, "for all they had in it for Tim. Tried his best to make me break up with him, but somehow Julia just couldn't do it. He never wanted me to marry you, I'll leave you...."

Tobey said then, her dark eyes wistful, her little elbows sharp on the table, "Mother, isn't Daddy nice like?"

Julia's awful! No conveniences as we have in the city. And so dead and quiet, just trees and grass and Pa. Pa is a widower, you know, Mr. Whitley, the old blind mare, and Mrs. Whitley, the old blind mare, and Mrs. Whitley died. It was the same feeling she experienced at school when some child inquired about the telltale bruises on her arms. On these occasions Tobey would say simply, almost indifferently, "I got hurt." Offering no further explanation than that she didn't even occur to her to add, "My father did it."

Tobey couldn't remember when she learned that if one can sound sufficiently casual about a matter, about any matter, other people can be made to consider it casually too. But it was a very good thing to know.

NORWAY'S NEWEST

The new liner cuts the crossing time between Norway and United States from seven and one-half to seven days.

pavement below, grotesquely long, grotesquely fat.....

Horribly, unbearably, Julia began to scream.

x x x

When old Richard Tobey first saw his granddaughter, he exclaimed in a tone of wonder and delight, "But she's like your mother, Julie! Very like. Why didn't you let us know? And why do you call her Tobey when she's Harriet all over again? Come here, little Harriet."

"Like Ma?" Julia echoed in faint surprise.

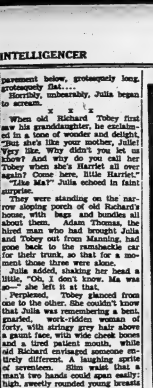
They were standing on the narrow sloping porch of old Rachael's house, with bags and bundles all about them. Adam Thomas, the hired man who had brought Julia and Tobey out from Manning, had gone back to the Ramshackle car for their trunk, so that for a moment those three were alone.

Julia added, shaking her head a little, "Oh, I don't know. Ma was so—" she left it at that.

Perplexed, Tobey glanced from one to the other. She couldn't know that Julia was remembering a bent, gnarled, work-ridden woman of forty, with stringy grey hair above a gaunt face, with wide cheek bones and a tired patient mouth, while old Richard envisaged someone entirely different. A laughing sprite of seventeen. Slim waist that a man's two hands could span easily; high, sweetly rounded young breasts under a tightly buttoned bodice. A sunny brown bang making a curly frame for wide grey eyes. A soft red laugh, not ardent at all, gloriously impatient, rather, for life, for living, for love, love.

He smoothed the sunny brown of Tobey's hair with a rough old hand that had trembled a little. But his tone when he addressed Julia was firm.

"You don't know? Then you know now your own age, Julie. This child's the image of her! Oh, her eyes are different, darker, but she's Harriet all right."



Adam came back then with the little trunk and Richard took charge and they went into the house. That small dark house, over the threshold of which Richard Tobey had carried his wife's bride long ago, that house which had been Julia's home and was now a refuge for Julia and her child, received again into its bareness, its utter familiarity after so many years, Julia thought dismally, resigning herself to the inevitable. Nothing ever will be."

After all the flats she had lived in, after all the journeys she had taken, Julia and Tim had come to city to another, something deep within Tobey, something of mind and sainted warmed to this quality of unchanging permanence in the house of her grandfather.

Old Richard never spoke to Tobey of her father. He never mentioned Tim to Julia, either. Perhaps he felt that Tobey, coming to him, bereaved to his daughter was sufficiently sharp without the added sting of a vindictive, "I told you so." Or perhaps he merely preferred not to bring up that that must surely lead to controversy.

He was very prejudiced. And Richard Tobey was old. His years numbered more than sixty, but he was old in many years in the way that men who till the soil rough a hard lifetime frequently are. His tall frame was stooped and rheumatic, his hands knotted and veined, but amazingly gentle nonetheless with animals or with a child's tender hands. His fierce old eyes grew gentle when he looked at Tobey, and Julia heard frequently Harriet.

They were great companions, these two. While Adam Thomas went about the routine work of the farm and Julia toiled in the house Tobey, when her own duties were finished, would go with her grandfather for long rambling walks, letting the sweet grass at his feet when he grew weary and sat down to rest, or picking wildflowers in the sunny meadows while he watched her from the side of a nearby tree. Or they would fish in the Big Fork which Julia had described to Tobey, coming back at dusk with a string of catfish and rich shared memories of dreaming about beside the sandy winding stream, hours spent in talk and silence, with confidences mutually given and respected.

It was from old Richard that Tobey learned of her grandmother.

In the small dark living room of the farmhouse there was a picture framed in tarnished gilt, a stiff, inexpert likeness of a plain old woman with dull hair drawn unbecomingly back, with hands folded patiently. For a long time Tobey had no idea who the woman was, but one day she asked her mother.

"Why, that's Ma." Julia told her. "Ma had it taken just about a year before she died — and we were so glad after, because we didn't have another picture of her."

Tobey's lips parted in sheer amazement. She said incredulously, "Not — Harriet?"

"Harriet"? Julia's brows rose. Then realization came to her and she smiled a little. Pityingly, not as Tobey but at the unlovely woman in the picture. "I suppose Pa's been telling you—"

The child nodded eagerly, dark eyes begging for reassurance. "He told me all about Harriet. How she was so gay and beautiful she was — and rich. One of the Chicago Fosters. She lived in a great stone house on Prairie Avenue. Only they were poored and cruel and disinherited her just because she married Grandpa. And he was a poor tradesman and had a stunning grey livery with big pearl buttons and Harriet Chandler brought her here—"

Three new tennis courts in Marmora which have been made possible through the generosity of Mrs. O. Deacon show that Marmora is to have a good revival of the old pastime this summer. A large number of local people, who, during the past winter have been following the indoor pastime of badminton have also joined the Tennis Club. Players from Cordova and Delora also patronize the courts. Entrance to the courts is through an entrance from Forsythe Street and also through the nursaries, the latter along the C. N. R. lane. The three courts are of double size and made of clay and the present patronage, though good, is expected to increase during the arrival of summer tourists.

Marmora's song writer, W. J. Cottrell is evidently one of versatile type having had a baritone ballad, "The Eternal Pearl" accepted by Peter Dewick Ltd., of London and also having received from them Safety First and Comic Songs as well as a Religious Poem has now been notified that his Control, entitled "Your Entrancing" has met with the approval of Julius Wright, noted English Composer, who composed the setting for Joy Rosetti's "Old Man Camera Waltz" which was favoured by His Majesty, King George V. Mr. Cottrell has copies for his music library.

New York, June 17 (AP)—Buying support dried up in today's stock market and early advances, running to a point or two subsequently changed into declines of as much.

'I DO'

Mystic words, these! Words that, in the wedding ceremony, change the lives and the buying habits of thousands of young Canadians annually. Words that create new consumers for your product, or new customers for your store.

The needs of such young people are many and varied. And as newspaper readers, they regard their daily newspaper as a guide to value in the personal and household goods they buy. If you tell your story to these newly married couples through the columns of daily newspapers, they will patronize your store and buy your products!

This advertisement was prepared by Newspapers Association by The F. H. Hayhurst Company, Inc., for the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service

MARKET COMMENT

Whereas a year or so ago, hoarders of gold in Europe were rapidly disposing of the metal on reports and rumours that a lower price for the metal was meant the entire opposite is the case today. Hoarders are frantically buying gold in the belief that devaluation of currencies is not far off and a consequent higher value for gold will prevail. This feeling, no doubt, is responsible for the very substantial demand for our senior golds, and in time should be reflected throughout the balance of the mining list.

In conversation with several leading brokers the impression is gleaned that substantial buying orders are in the market for gold stocks at just under prevailing quotations. These orders are emanating from European sources and although New York and London are also heavily interested.

In connection with the gold stocks, two things should be borne in mind by investors. First, there is a period of deflation when commodity prices and wages drop, a reduction in taxes and rates are enforced and as the price of gold remains fixed, the purchasing profits result. Second, an increase in the gold price, even if accompanied by higher operating charges, would also make for increased profits. Consequently, it is apparent that the gold stocks are excellent mediums to own during periods of either inflation or deflation and this explains their popularity.

Orders Are Now Appearing in the Markets

From the floor of the Stock Exchange it is learned by Financial Service that some good sized buying orders are now coming in lightly in the market. Some shrewd judgment as to yield at present prices is they feel certain securities are attractive at—if they get them all right but if they do not they generally swing to another stock.

Central Patricia—Currently treating 225 tons or better daily, ore results of the past several months suggest an increase in production in the medium term. Present operating costs easily permits earnings of over 30 cents a share annually of which 16 cents are paid in dividends. It is closely owned stockholders the Springer holds interesting possibilities. The yield at present prices for Central Patricia is 7 per cent.

McKenzie Red Lake — Currently treating 170 tons daily, monthly output is close to $100,000 which yield an annual profit equivalent to 16 cents per share. The dividend has been established at 12 cents a share annually and at yield at $1.08 is 11 per cent. A survey of the mine's ore reserves being made at present and an increase in production may take place in the near future.

Better Demand For Butter

Toronto, June 17.—Improved trading gave a steadier undertone to butter on the local produce market yesterday although former prices generally prevailed. Eggs and cheese showed no change.

Buyers, out of the market all week, were apparently in need of supplies and receipts moved more freely under the better demand on the butter market. Firmer prices were also reported for the United Kingdom and Montreal markets. One source reported business transacted at 34½c on the first-grade Ontario product, but the general figure was 34½c with 29 scores remaining at 33½c. A local buyer said that offerings were being withdrawn, and that prices as high as 34½c were being quoted. Weaker butter sold for shipment in the range of 34½c to 35c. No change occurred in prints at 36c to 36½c for top grades and 35½c to 35½c for 28 score.

The egg market presented a firm tone. Offerings continued light, and fair demand effected a steady undertone. Dealers reported graded shipments active all the unchanged prices at 24½c to 25c for grade A large, 23½c to 24c for medium, 22c for B's and 21c for C's.

Montreal, June 16 (CP)—Prices were steady on open product markets.

Butter in tubs to retailers was unchanged at 25½c for No. 1 solids, 24c for No. 1 prints, 24½c for No. 2 solids and 23½c for No. 2 prints. Deliveries were 882 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in carlots were 25½c a dozen for A-large, 24c for A-medium, 23½c for B-large and 21½c for C. Receipts: 955 cases.

REEVES, DEPUTIES PRESENT GIFTS TO MR., MRS. FOX

Handsome Travelling Bags Presented Former Reeve and Deputy Superintendent And Wife by County Members

For yesterday afternoon, the Hastings County fathers forgot the affairs of state; of taxes, and county rates and other current momentous municipal questions, long enough to present Mr. Simeon Fox, former county road superintendent and Mrs. Fox with handsome travelling bays in tangible recognition of the many happy associations formed during the former's tenure in the service of the county.

Reeve Noble Presents

In making the formal presentation to Mr. Fox on behalf of the members of the council, Reeve Charles Hollins spoke briefly of the many acts of kindness shown members during Mr. Fox's years in office.

"And as a slight token of the many happy years you have performed for us and in recognition of the splendid performance of your duty while road superintendent of this county it gives me great pleasure to present to you and Mrs. Fox, on behalf of the Warden and members of this council, these travelling bags, complete with kits."

Hearty applause greeted Reeve Hollins remarks that continued as Mr. Fox rose to his feet to thank council for the gifts.

Associations of Many Years

"I was associated with this council for a great many years." Mr. Fox began, "and the following years formed many valuable friendships and many happy associations. I have appreciated the many kindnesses extended me during my splendid sentiments expressed since my retirement from active duty. These things go a long way toward making the future brighter."

Mr. Fox briefly reviewed his career as road superintendent of the county. "I have always had the men attached to this council, and the ratepayers in mind and endeavored as much perhaps as a boss but rather as a friend." he said in an appeal for better treatment for the travelling men of the county roads system.

Co-operation with County Council

"I have always had the closest co-operation of members of this council," Mr. Fox added, and this year a long way in facilitating the work."

Mr. Fox expressed the appreciation of Mrs. Fox who was not present for the beautiful gift presented to her by members of the council. "She always looks back on the many pleasant connections we made while in the service of the county and these gifts will always be a reminder of the fine associations and friendships formed."

chemicals whose formulas might be effective against convulsions.

One of these was a synthetic drug called metrazol. One of a large batch of sleep-producers and it was found to have no effect on convulsions, under the name of diphenyl hydantoin.

Grand Mal Cases Improve

In the Harvard tests its proved to be a powerful anti-convulsant in a sleeping potion. It was tried on 142 patients, including the most serious form of epilepsy. All these patients had suffered for years from the disease, chiefly.

They had found no relief in any of the standard anti-convulsants, or old. Phenobarbital, which is regarded as one of the best drugs in preventing convulsions, had failed.

But the "forgotten medicine" brought relief to many of the 142. To all outward appearances they had not more epilepsy. Dr. Putnam said, however, it is likely they must keep on taking the medicine.

In 22 per cent of these cases there was a great decrease in number of convulsions. A few more were not benefited.

The committee decided to add a clause to forbid candidates, and their agents to promise the expenditure of public money in making money payments to any individuals, group or organization."

Mr. Pelletier said candidates would be glad to sign anything to get all if the suggested clause and the adopted one were interpreted literally.

The committee decided to leave the amendment over until the political expenditures act was discussed.

'Sheer Timber Murder' Says Reeve Rollins of Cutting Evergreens as Xmas Trees

Trees Cut Down, Tops Cut Off Without Owners' Permission

LAND DESPOILED

Nature Should be Given Protection Against Human Vandals, He Says

Describing the operations as nothing short of "sheer timber murder", Reeve Charles Rollins, One Hill, yesterday lodged a formal complaint to Hastings County Council against the indiscriminate removal of young trees from the timberlands of the north for use as Christmas trees.

"When they come to get these trees they do not bother with formality of obtaining permission from the owners of the land from which they annually take truckloads of young evergreens for the purpose of sale to people in southern cities, towns and villages." Reeve Rollins protested. "This procedure, in any other form, would be called plain stealing."

"It would not be so bad if these people sold all the trees they take from our lands, but I have seen piles of them thrown on your city and town dumps, or in fence corners, after their owners have been unable to sell them." Reeve Rollins continued. "And I consider it emphatically protest against the deliberate cutting of the tops of mature trees for this same purpose, while the trunks are left on the ground to rot.

Thousands of Acres Despoiled.

"There are thousands of acres in my part of the north country that are being despoiled annually by these cutters of young trees, and something should be done about it. This council has received notices from various sources regarding the reforestation of lands of the south country. We might better reforest our own lands as the natural way, that is by establishing protection by giving these acres back to the government of Ontario lands so that they could be forced to discharge the man. "However," Mr. Rollins continued, "we have given him every opportunity to compete with others for tracking and other work that is available."

There were no compaints regarding the caliber of the work done by Varsickle on the Hastings county roads. Roads were in good shape, but the foreman's appareat inability to make financial limits called for a change.

Reeve Thomas Cranston brought the mild discussion to an abrupt end when he told council that "the Department of Commerce capable of looking after its business and if they were fit to discharge anything on such grounds as these the council should stand behind it." A motion that "no action" be taken on this point.

The motion carried unanimously.

COUNCIL VOTES "NO ACTION" ON REINSTATEMENT

Petition Signed by Many Residents of County Presented

EXCESSIVE COSTS

Signed by a large number of residents of Hastings County" a petition asking for the reinstatement of Harry Vansickle road foreman of the Marmora area discharged last April by the Roads and Bridges Committee of Hastings County was turned down today by council after discussion of the case was aired by members in session.

Vansickle was discharged council was informed, because of his failure to keep the road operations in his section within the required expense limit. He was replaced last April by Mr. Robert Wright.

Members of the Roads and Bridges Committee of council said that Vansickle had been warned on numerous occasions to reduce expenses in his area but these warnings had failed to have any effect, expenses still mounted and it was felt that a change was necessary.

W. H. Langdon, county road engineer stated that when the facts of the case were brought to his notice last Spring he felt, that being new to his position, he was not justified in discharging the man, when he was not really familiar with the circumstances.

Made High is Claim

A check-up of Vansickle's work, Mr. Langdon stated, showed that on his area were too high, and as no explanation was forthcoming he was forced to discharge the man. "However," Mr. Langdon continued, "we have given him every opportunity to compete with others for tracking and other work that is available."

There were no compaints regarding the caliber of the work done by Vansickle on the Hastings county roads. Roads were in good shape, but the foreman's appareat inability to make financial limits called for a change.

Spanish Disquieted

Threats of domestic political quarrels also appeared over the Spanish war, which might split the Popular Front—the leftist parties supporting the government— and endanger the life of the cabinet ever quicted by yesterday's strong fears of foreign dangers.

The necessity of internal peace for the state visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth of England beginning June 28 also was a factor.

The Communist resolution sought to end French assistance to Spain and to reach the Spanish government.

Grimes Requested That Great Home Run Hitter Be Secured

New York, June 18 (AP)—Babe Ruth will return to baseball as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers, General Manager Larry S. MacPhail announced today.

In a brief statement which he declined to amplify, MacPhail said Ruth had agreed to terms and conference had been attended by Ruth, MacPhail, Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Dodgers, and Leo Durocher, shortstop and captain of the club.

Ruth will be in uniform for tomorrow's double-header with Chicago Cubs.

The Babe, greatest home run hitter in the history of baseball as a playing golf and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Officials of the Brooklyn club insisted that Ruth, who signed a contract covering the balance of the season, would serve as coach and Dutch all. Grimes, they said, would continue to hold his job as manager.

"It was Grimes, as a matter of fact," said one official, "who asked that we get Ruth."

One report, which could not immediately be verified, said the Babe's contract called for a $15,000 salary.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Tideman
Science Review Meteorologist

What are deserts? They are known as barren wastes, or places that cannot support a community and so it is natural to think of deserts as places with little or no rainfall. But strangely enough, rainfall alone does not determine a desert. In the tundras of the north, with less than ten inches of rain, the soil is mucky and waterlogged in summer. Some places with ten inches falling at the right time produce crops of wheat, while others with 20 inches on a sun-baked soil grow nothing, due to the rapid run-off. Then there are thirsty soils so porous that all the rains sink in, leaving none for plant life. Deserts are the result of a number of factors.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 18 (CP)—Scattered thunderstorms have occurred in southern districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan and unsettled, cool, wet weather has prevailed from the lower lake region eastward to the Maritime Provinces. It has been cool in the Lake Superior district but thunderstorm warm in nearly all other parts of the Dominion.

Pressure is quite low over the northwestern portion of the continent and the Rocky Mountain States and a widespread shallow depression covers Eastern Canada while the barometer is relatively high over Northwestern Ontario and the Pacific States.

Lake Superior—Light to moderate winds; partly cloudy and cool; Sunday, moderate winds, shifting to southeast, fair and somewhat warmer.

Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms. Sunday, mostly fair and warm.

Alberta—Mostly fair today and Sunday and becoming somewhat warmer.

Red Deer So Well Off Financially Officials Fear Jobless Will Flock In

Calgary, June 18—(CP)— Red Deer has such a favorable financial position that civic officials are beginning to worry, Mayor E. S. Nagy of that town 100 miles north of Calgary with a population of 2,900, told the annual convention of the Union of Alberta Municipalities.

"News of our good finances and credit balances bring lots of people to the city looking for work," he said last night, "and we don't need them."

"Just because we record annual surpluses doesn't mean we have no unemployment."

He had to "apologize" to the city council last year, he added, because it was discovered at the end of the year the surplus was $4,000, double that for which he had budgeted.

"There is nothing mysterious about how Red Deer got on her feet financially," the Mayor went on.

Revenues from the civic electric light and water plants were largely responsible for the city's good financial position. Most capital expenditures were made from current revenue.

Low-Rental House Dwellers Not Expected To Own Cars

Ottawa, June 18—Occupants of the new low cost, low-rental housing erected under Housing Bill now before the House of Commons are not expected to own automobiles, Ernest Finance Minister Dunning told the committee when the bill was considered in Committee of the Whole.

Denton Massey (Con. Toronto Greenwood) had asked if garages for cars be an item in connection with the housing units but Mr. Dunning said it had been decided against.

Where the government was satisfied that there was a shortage of people who were unable to pay an economic rent the minister did not object to garages for cars being provided. Provision could be made for commercial space in such housing projects where stores and shops might be carried on.

New Coiffure, Like Classical Style, Drawn Away from Ears and Temples

By Rachel Cayman
Copyright, 1938, by
The Hawes News Agency

Paris, June 18—(CP-Havas)—The new hair style is pushed back from the ears and temples and up from the head. Its objective is simplicity and brimmed with curls precisely placed.

Current hair-dress is influenced by the classical 18th century style as shown in the portraits of Watteau and Latour, and by the fashion prevalent in the early 1900's when the hair was pushed high on the head.

Short hair is good, but it must not be too clipped to prevent curls from being set except in cases of fashion. The main idea is to have the head look small and sculptured. Those women who prefer the 18th century style will wear their hair in rather flat and definite-defined curls at the temples, the hair swept back from the face and curls at the neck. For evening, curls are worn in more profusion and are frequently fastened into simplified hair-dresses adorned with ribbons, flowers and plumes.

Those who choose the 1900 influence, which is somewhat extreme, will arrange their hair less close to the head, slightly bouffant on the sides and sometimes with a few locks held at the nape of the neck under a wide barrette.

For evening, the barrette is replaced by combing jewelry generally in the shape of flowers.

Three modern interpretations of the former cornrolled effects are worn under flowered toques, sailor hats, Louis XV tricornes and bejeweled

HEPBURN DENIES HE MISLED VOTERS ON HYDRO AFFAIRS

Stated it Was "Long After" Election He Changed His Mind

FREE OF GRAFT

Attorney - General Makes This Statement at Close of Probe

Toronto, June 18—(CP)— Ten days of inquiry into affairs of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, long a debating platform for the province's two major political parties, were recorded today in testimony that will be presented to the special committee of the Provincial Legislature.

As the bristling, often bitter, probe ended yesterday, Attorney-General Gordon Conant, committee chairman, said there "has not been one suggestion of graft in dealing with Hydro affairs." Leopold Macaulay, Conservative leader in the legislature whose charges led to the committee's appointment, agreed with him. "That goes for Hydro life for years, back."

Mr. Macaulay, when the House was in session this spring, charged Premier Hepburn "misled" the electors in the election campaign which resulted in the Liberals' return to power last Oct. 6. The Premier, he alleges, was advocating a "back-to-Hydro" policy while negotiating secretly with the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company and other Quebec corporations for renewal of contracts signed by a Conservative government and cancelled by the legislature under Mr. Hepburn in 1935.

750,000 Gov't Employees In France are Instructed To Plan General Strike

Union Includes Railroads, Telegraph, Telephone, Postal Employees as Well as Civil Service—Strike Threat Issued Friday Night

Paris, June 18—(AP)—The Union of Public Service Workers today instructed France's 750,000 government employees to make immediate preparations for a general strike to force the government to grant blanket wage increases.

The Union includes railroad, telegraph, telephone and postal employees as well as the civil service personnel.

The central committee issued its strike threat last night after Premier Edouard Daladier had stifled labor opposition to an injunction of the union by adjourning parliament until November.

Pension Increase Recommended

A special session of the committee—the third within two days—was called this morning to plan the strategy for the tie-up, which would be particularly embarrassing to the government if it were called just before the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth for their visit June 28.

The government employees are asking a 10 percent wage increase to meet the rising cost of living and a reorganization of the franc.

Would Unbalance Budget

Daladier told them that their demands would throw the budget out of balance and upset his whole plan for reviving France's economic life. He promised to see what could be done in the 1939 budget.

Government employees, or "fonctionnaires," were given full France's vital services in the smallest village and town. They usually stand out at the age of 21 with an annual salary of 10,000 francs (about $333). This increases according to length of service to a maximum of 150,000 francs (about $4,150.)

Ride on Roof Subway Train Fatal to Boy

New York, June 18 (AP)—It was one of the last two Empire State boys to ride on a speeding subway train.

The boys, Donald Mintos Hall, 13, and William Layden, 12, stepped off the platform from a vine-clad fence on the outskirts of the city. They climbed to the roof of the car, and then the train dipped underground. The boys ducked low to clear them, and the boys—pants-stricken but helpless were knocked from the roof. Donald died in a hospital. Physicians said William, his playmate, escaped had little chance to live.

200,000 REPORTED TRAPPED BEYOND HOPE OF RESCUE

700,000 REFUGEES

Japanese Reported to be Caring For 200,000 of Them

Shanghai, June 18—(AP)—Chinese overflowing Yellow River, which apparently has saved Hankow, the provisional capital, from danger of a northern attack for many months, was declared by Japanese today to have trapped 200,000 Chinese beyond all hope of rescue.

The flood waters declared by Japanese military authorities to have extended over an additional area of 600 square miles in the last 24 hours.

The flood now covered 7,500 square miles. Two thousand villages and hamlets in the rich agricultural province of Honan were submerged, and 1,500 others invaded by the rising torrents.

With 700,000 refugees fleeing before the water, Japanese reports said there was no indication whatsoever of the flooding.

Eat Bark of Trees

Japanese said they were caring for 200,000 of the refugees but that the plight of thousands, their homes and fields inundated by mud and water, was extreme. Thousands, they said, were eating the bark of trees in desperate efforts to survive.

Many Japanese units were isolated, but it was believed their situation in most cases was not serious.

Federal Election Rumors Silenced, Trade Treaty Talk is Revived

Ottawa, June 18—(CP)— The Dunning budget apparently has silenced all rumors of a general election this year but it has revived talk of a fall session to consider trade treaties, with Great Britain and the United States.

For six months or more there have been sporadic rumors of an election in the fall, all without official endorsation. But they died —at least in the eyes of political observers here—when Finance Minister Dunning presented his budget Thursday. It was not regarded as a pre-election budget in any sense of the term, making no tariff changes, few taxation changes.

A fall session to deal with trade treaties depends, entirely on negotiations now proceeding in Washington.

If new agreements with Great Britain and the United States are signed, it will not be necessary for parliament to approve them before they go into operation.

SHARP PROTEST BY GERMAN PRESS OVER INCIDENT

Claimed Czech Plane Flew Over German Territory

PICTURES TAKEN?

Berlin, June 18 (AP)—A Czechoslovak airplane, apparently a military machine, which flew over Gerlachsheim provoked a sharp protest in the Berlin morning press today.

The Lokalanzeiger said it was understood the German government would make a "new, sharp protest" and commented, "excuses are useless".

A report from Lan, Bavarian village about four miles from the border, said the plane flew about for 30 minutes, its passengers apparently observing and photograph. ing the roads and buildings of the vicinity.

(The incident came just as Czechoslovakia announced the class of 10,000 reservists were called to arms. It was reported German troops were moving toward the border, was not confirmed. The government at Praha said, however, that the army would be kept at its approximate strength of 500,000 by the calling of the reservists due to begin their training this year).

Commenting on the border incident at Lam, the Berliner Tageblatt asserted, "Germany watches over the inviolability of its borders with the same energy and exactitude with which it concerns itself about the maintenance of peace."

FEW TRANSFERS OF SALES TAX

Officials of National Revenue Comment on Changes

Ottawa, June 18 (CP)—In only a few instances have there been a transfer of the sales tax from finished raw products under amendments proposed by the Dunning budget, officials of the Department of National Revenue here had said tonight.

They were commenting on a circular issued today by the British Columbia Association of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which claimed the result of Finance Minister Dunning's proposed sales tax construction materials was to transfer the tax from the finished to raw products.

Exemption List.

Before the sales tax was charged, a manufacturer could escape it on raw materials by obtaining from the certificate to the department. That certificate has been abolished, the manufacturer will pay no tax whatever. The same is true of the following products: Coke, building blocks, building stone, plaster, cement, lime, structural steel, paints, white lead and paint oil.

In purchasing products, the steel will be taxable but if clay is used, it will pay no-tax. In the case of lumber, a certificate of exemption has been transferred from the finished to the raw material because manufacturers heretofore were able to exempt their primary goods by certificate.

The same thing is true of such products as bricks, hinges, pulleys and window fasteners — the steel used as raw material will be taxable but not the finished product.

There were hundreds of carp caught, however.

COMMITTEE TO MEET

France Said to be Working With Russia Towards Evacuation

By GUY RHOADES

London, June 18 (CP)—The International Non-Intervention Sub-committee today prepared to resume discussion Tuesday of the British plan for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain, amid rumors Italy is unwilling to comply and is seeking a new definition of the conditions under which the London-Rome Pact might come into effect without Italian withdrawal from Spain.

Unconfirmed reports say Premier Mussolini has proposed to leave his troops in Spain in line with the promise they will not fight unless "flagrant intervention" by other countries occurs. The Duce is said to be disquieted at the progress of General Franco's troops and to be unwilling to leave a situation in which he already controlled only an insurgent victory will satisfy him.

Government Plans Charges.

The Earl of Plymouth, chairman of the Non-intervention Committee, is reported to have held preliminary discussions seeking to smooth the way for the British proposal, which remained blocked at the last meeting despite the actioning attitude of Israel, which at first refused flatly. Meanwhile French diplomats are reported to be working on the British scheme with a view to obtaining consent to the evacuation of foreign troops.

U. E. L. LANDING TO BE OBSERVED
Adolphustown Church Scene of Service on Sunday, June 19

A special anniversary service is being held in the Church of St. Alban the Martyr at Adolphustown on Sunday afternoon, this being the Sunday closest to the anniversary date of the landing of the first party of United Empire Loyalist shores on June 18, 1784.

This beautiful Anglican church was built as a national memorial to the United Empire Loyalists and was built in 1884 to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the Loyalist Landing, financed by the parishioners and generously assisted by descendants of Canada's Loyalist families throughout the Dominion. Consequently it has become known as the U.E.L. National Memorial Church.

The church is situated six miles east of Picton on Highway 33, which it is expected will become known as the U.E.L. highway. The interior is one of great beauty and interest. Memorial tablets and memorial windows are features, and include one in memory of Rev. Job Deacon, the rector when the first Anglican church was built on that site in 1832, and one to Rev. Canon Forneri during whose incumbency the church was erected.

The first church was known as St. Paul's. It did not become known as a parish hall, and in a state of disrepair. Parishioners are making an effort to make it more suitable as a hall and preserve it as a memorial to early days.

Rectors who have been in charge of the parish since 1832, previous to which it was a mission, were: Rev. Job Deacon, Rev. J. Maloes, Rev. Canon Grout, Rev. Canon Forneri, Rev. Canon Roberts, Rev. Canon Spencer, Rev. C. Pringle, Rev. A. Strothers, Rev. C. H. Quartermain, and Rev. C. C. Brazill, the present incumbent.

At Sunday's service, which commences at two o'clock, Standing of Time, Rev Cecil Wister, rector of Picton, will preach. Napanee talent will assist with special music. The beautiful drive to the historic edifice is well worth while and motorists should follow Highway 33.

John Wood, 82, Fishing for First Time Gets 7 lb. Pickerel

Veteran Ivanhoe Resident Now Wonders Why He Never Fished Before

AT BAPTISTE LAKE

At the age of 82 years, Mr. John Wood, one of the best known residents of Ivanhoe district, has experienced the thrill of catching his first fish, a seven-pound pickerel, landed at Baptiste Lake recently.

Though born and raised in this section where he has resided all his life, Mr. Wood who declared he "never had much time for fishing as a sport" had up until this week foregone the pleasure of angling many others travel hundreds of miles to enjoy. Persuaded by his friend Percy Wood, Inspector of the branch offices of the London Life Insurance Company, Belleville, Ont., to visit with him at Birch Cliff, Baptiste Lake, he took advantage of the visit to go fishing. The seven-pound pickerel, a fair-sized fish in any lake, provided the biggest thrill, not only of the day, but for many years past.

A convert now to the sport, Mr. Wood has declared himself now one of the keener members of the fishing fraternity, and is looking forward eagerly to the next fishing excursion at the lake.

Mr. John Wood, Ivanhoe, who at the age of 82 years proudly displays his 7-pound pickerel, caught in Baptiste Lake this week on his first fishing trip. Mr. Wood never found time for much fishing" in district,lakes others travel for many of visit. He is keenly thrilled on his first experience.

VISITORS ENJOY DAY IN DISTRICT

Many on Wharf to Bid Farewell to Rochester Guests

Not since the days of a decade or more ago when across-the-lake excursions were the city held such an interested crowd of citizens as assembled on the Belleville wharf just prior to the departure of the steamer "Toronto" for Rochester more than 150 Rochestarians headed back to the Port of Charlotte after spending the week-end visiting relations recorded.

Amid cheers, whistles, cheers and shouted "goodbyes" of a large part of the populace, shortly after 6 o'clock the big steamer backed from the dock, cast off and headed into bay centre bound for the Rochester harbour. The passage gap to return the way she entered port only to be diverted to the north. Reach to Lake Ontario. The trip through the Murray Canal, while it would have shortened the journey, was not made on account of the low bank of the canal.

A check up of the passenger list showed that all were aboard when the mooring lines were cast, after some delay occasioned by the tardiness of a few who had gone ashore journeyed through the district as far as Morin Lake at Madoc where they were the guests of local anglers. Others arrived late by taxi, and extremely difficult to negotiate. A game of golf during the afternoon at the Belleville Golf and Country Club also enjoyed a perfect day in the setting of this Bay of Quinte district.

"Good-bye, and come again" were the farewells of Belleville as the boat edged from the wharf of the government dock into the bay. And the return invitation was accepted by a hearty and cheerfully given.

"Everyone had a perfect time, and they all want to come again," it was jointly reported by Mr. J. McIntosh, president of the Rochester Club, secretary, and Alderman Mac Haig, representing the city fathers and welcoming guests. Appreciation for the effort of the city's businessmen, Chamber members, members of City Council and others in helping to create such a perfect day for the visitors was expressed by Mr. McIntosh and Alderman Haig.

GIVE CONTRACTS TO LOCAL FIRMS

Last Meeting Before Summer Holiday Held by Board

Members of the local Board of Education before adjourning their regular monthly meeting for the summer, until September, last evening, accepted two resignations of teachers and authorized the engagement of Ivra Horton for Queen Victoria School at an annual salary of $800, and the engagement of Miss M. Casey for the Collegiate and Vocational School. Best wishes were expressed by the Board on the success of the retiring teachers.

Tenders for washing the windows of the Collegiate Institute were awarded the Clare Window Cleaning Service, while Vernoll Muir was given the tender for sanding floors of four rooms in the same school. Work of painting rooms in King George and Queen Alexandra Schools was given Herbert Lawson, while Queen May painting during the summer will be by Curry and Davis.

The matter of the re-roofing of the Collegiate Institute, which will be gone into more thoroughly by the special Property Committee, will be recommended by Trustee Rev. A. B. Payne, and tenders will not be required for this work until the committee has thoroughly investigated.

Reports of Inspectors W. A. Jennings and R. E. Wallace of the Ontario Department of Education, who visited the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School recently, indicated that class work in the school had been well advanced and that the general organization was completely satisfactory, Hamilton was reported good.

"Above average teaching was of superior quality, some very good. None of it was poor," the inspectors reported. "The pupils' writing was good, while that of the boys' was fluent. Their drawing was very good," it added.

The work of Mr. Hamilton was particularly commended by the inspectors, who remarked upon the excellence of the Boys' Shop work.

In the monthly report of School Principal F. D. Constantine, the Board was advised that final promotion and departmental examinations would be held June 24, and will terminate June 29th. Candidates from Queen Alexandra School, Albert College, Read School and the Collegiate and Vocational are engaged in the exams. A total of 327 Middle School students are writing on 1300 papers and 124 Upper School candidates are writing on 400 papers. Special supervision has been named chief presiding officer for the exams.

"1937-38 has been one of our most successful years, and a fine spirit of harmony and co-operation has been evident throughout the year," stated the report.

Report of Nurse

In the report received it was shown that during the period from October 1st, 1937, to June 1st, one case of mumps and four of scarlet fever had been registered. During this period also 2,500 pupils had been medically examined, 56 being given special physical attention. Fifteen vision tests were held.

Under the heading of "Enquiries" Trustee Allin questioned whether some fill could not be obtained for the depression in the ground at the King George School to end the difficulties of the school yard after rains. The location, aptly described by Trustee Martin as a "frog pond" will be inspected by a committee to determine the best method of filling and leveling.

City Briefs

Anxious to complete the sale of some sheep to a local customer yesterday, a farmer from Thurlow ran into his handy trailer blown out. Called by Trustee Martin as a "frog pond" will be inspected by a committee to determine the best method of filling and leveling.

With colors of Old Romany flying, at half mast, in honor of the two lads cars, passed through the city early this morning after a brief stop at a downtown restaurant apparently for breakfast. While the party of adults and four cars were well-filled closed, two large and ferocious police dogs kept threatening guard of the cars while lying at length on the front fenders.

Suggestions for the improvement of Victoria Park, one of the most favored recreational centres in the city, continue to be made by residents of the district. The need for the grassing needs is a system of better paths or roads through the park. It is pointed out that the present ones are very rough and dusty, and extremely difficult to walk on by women with thin-soled shoes. The suggestion is made that the old present road oiling equipment is being used for the park and be thoroughly swept, and a layer of oil and fine crushed stone be applied.

First warning against the dropping of lighted cigarette ends from passing cars alongside roads of the district is given by fire ranging patrols and owners of summer residents who call attention to the extreme dryness of the grass and underbrush at present.

Foundation work of the new clay surface tennis court at St. Andrew's Church has been completed and work of levelling and filling is now being undertaken by church workers. The court, when finished is expected to be the best and most active surfaced on in the city.

An upper plate of false teeth accidentally dropped by a resident off the dock wall of an oil company opposite the park was rescued from the bottom of the harbor last evening by two youths after ten minutes of diving. A dollar reward was paid by the thankful owner.

The good-will excursion party of Rochester residents was convinced that fishing is good in this district. One of the last to board the boat before leaving the dock for home, just before three-thirty o'clock staggered with him a large size lake trout, and two large carp. He was greeted with suitable cheers from his comrades. What was not known, however, is that the trout was tied to the dock by a piece of line and purchased at an uptown store, minus the head, which was later found and sewed on. The two big carp were the real catch as an after thought. While the irrepressible fish purchaser claims the "catch" held up for view cameras carried by the excursionists were busy snapping pictures.

STONE - CRUSHER LOANED NORTH BY STANDING VOTE

Northern Motion For 'Gift' Defeated 18-11 in Council Session

KEEP IN REPAIR

Northern revve presented a solid front in applying for the gift of a stone-crusher for their municipalities, in county council session yesterday. Little opposition was encountered at first from the southern benches, but as details were aired and problems of cost of repair and maintenance crept into the question, a decided coolness on the part of the south was noticeable.

In fact the matter was settled by a standing vote, when an amendment to the motion, to the effect that "the crusher be loaned to the north, instead of being presented as a gift, providing it is kept in repair" carried by a 15-11 count.

Discussion as to the ways and means of providing a crusher for the north from those already covered by the county, brought out many proposed solutions.

A 18-year-old crusher is now in operation in the north. Road Supt. Langdon pointed out. He could see no reason why it could not be retained on loan from the county for the use of the north in general. It was of little use to the roads of the south, inasmuch as it will not crush rock sufficiently fine for the southern roads.

Reeve Rubbell of Faraday demurred at taking the crusher, if the north had to keep it in repair. "It would be cheaper for us to rent a crusher for what work we have to do, than to pay$500 for repairs," he said.

Crushers on loan to townships from the county, were supposed to be kept in repair, one operator said, and the machine returned to the place where it was obtained, the road supt. pointed out.

Warden Larkin expressed the opinion that the county was not in a position to sell or give away machinery on which the Department of Highways had paid a subsidy. Seventy percent of cost of repairs to crushers was returned by the Dept. to the county, he said.

Reeve J. L. Chrucher told council that a stone-crusher was badly needed in the north.

Cost of repairs could be borne by the various municipalities on a yardage basis. It was pointed out. Northern representation was concurred in this idea.

Reeve Robson voiced the opinion of southern revves in moving an amendment to the motion that the crusher be "loaned" to the north, instead of being presented as a gift, providing it is kept in repair. The amendment carried by a 15-11 vote.

Weed Spraying

Suggestion on the part of Deputy Reeve Chem. Ketchesen that council investigate the possibility of spraying weeds with chemicals and aeroplanes met with the approval of some members.

Reeve Robson, however, declared that mechanical killing of weeds would deprive many men of work. Reeve Linn agreed, "This age is becoming too mechanical," he said.

Assuming of Bridges

Assuming of bridges on the boundaries of Hastings and Peterboro counties, and Wollaston and Marmora and Lake Township, was recommended by Reeve Charles Rollins, who stated that the Roads Survey and Roads Committee inspect these bridges and bring in a recommendation regarding the taking care of these structures, at the December session.

Who Pays the Taxes?

FACTS THE HOUSEHOLDER OF OUR FAIR CITY SHOULD KNOW:

Do you know that the Housewife in Toronto and other centres pays eleven cents per loaf of bread, and a similar loaf of bread is transported hundreds of miles, and sold in Belleville at a lesser price (no taxes whatsoever being paid) with one point of view, TO PUT THE RESIDENT INDEPENDENT BAKER OUT OF BUSINESS.

'NO ONE ELSE HAD FINGER IN PIE'

Hydro Chairman Testifies Before Influence Committee

Toronto, June 18—(CP)—Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, told a legislative committee today that "nobody else had a finger in the pie" when negotiations got underway last November with Quebec power companies for renewal of contracts expired in 1935.

"The responsibility for those deals was mine," Dr. Hogg testified before the committee which is investigating charges Premier Hepburn negotiated the power contracts before last October's election. "I carried them out. They are no attempts on my part to evade responsibility."

Until the end of October, 1937, the "back-to-Niagara" movement had his entire sympathy and cooperation," the hydro chairman added. A cabinet meeting late in October "we got around to the desirability of cleaning up the power situation." Dr. Hogg, formerly Chief Engineer, was appointed commissioner to T. Stewart Lyon Nov. 1. He previously could not act until "the responsibility was shed."

"I felt sure there was a basis for negotiation and cleaning up the situation without working a hardship to anyone," Dr. Hogg said in telling of the cabinet conference. "I had certain ideas and was sure something could be worked out. I was told to go ahead.

Houses Fired Crops Flattened In Heavy Storm

Collingwood, Ont., June 18—(CP)—Lightning, rain and hail caused severe loss throughout the district Thursday night. Hay district in a violent electrical storm which fired houses and barns and flattened crops.

Homes and factories were without electricity for hours as the storm took down high-tension lines and played havoc with Hydro transformers. The Main Street here was brighter than day when a lightning bolt hit the Town Hall spire, splitting the flag pole and sending the big brass ball bounding down into the market square.

Worst individual losses were the breaking of Alvin Dales' Lisgarside home and Charles Holden's new barn at Banks Settlement, where livestock was rescued with neighbor's help. Numerous barns were struck during the storm district and three houses in the town itself, in one case the lightning travelling down the chimney and through a hole in the wall of William Hindle's house.

Crops were hammered down by hail in the size of golfballs in some spots and a cloudburst generally. Five hundred conversionists on the steamer Manitoba were held up two hours by heavy fog which followed the storm.

$5000 INSURANCE and $25 a Month Pension at Age 60 for $11.60 a Month

"CONQUER FEAR"

SAYS DALE CARNEGIE

Author of the famous book HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE

● "Fear defeats more people than any other thing in the world. To conquer fear is an important step towards success. If you read the biographies of great men you will find that some were go-getters and some were dreamers.

"But there is one quality they all had in common — they all had COURAGE."

● "You can't buy courage and you can't get it just by wishing for it. But you can develop it as you would develop a strong right arm. How? Simply by doing the thing you fear to do.

"Don't say: 'I'll do this next week'. Do it now."

● "Is there someone you are afraid to call on? All right. Call on that person tomorrow. You may be so scared that you will have to walk up and down outside half a dozen times. But don't let your fear get the better of you. Walk in and tell the other man what a struggle you had with yourself to get sufficient courage to call on him.

"He won't laugh at you. He will like you better for your frankness and respect you for your courage." !

FEDERAL BUDGET

The Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, expressed himself on sound financial policies, stating his opposition to debt-free money and his faith in sound monetary principles. He declined, he said in his budget speech on Thursday to issue credit against the wealth of the nation because it appeared to him an inflationary proposal that would not lead to a sound and healthy prosperity. He assured the people of Canada that the internal economy was sound, the price structure in reasonable balance and that ample credit accommodation was available.

On the question of the revival in construction, through housing and improvements, the Finance Minister was optimistic. In this he sees the possibility of a growth which will lift a great share of the burden off the country and bring much needed improvement in housing conditions. The removal of the sales tax on builders' supplies is felt by builders and contractors according to reports from different parts of Canada as likely to aid materially in construction, of which reference was made a few days ago.

One favorable factor today is the prospect of a bumper crop this autumn.

Another reason for optimism he said is that last year was the first to show a major increase in the volume of employment.

Mr. Dunning said that the people of Canada are not ready to adopt regimentation in which all expenditures would be government controlled. He stated: "Under our system, at least government assistance cannot take the place of private enterprise and I do not think that our people are prepared to accept the alternative system of regimentation in which all economic or practically all would be government expenditures." Hence the government had brought down the housing and municipal assistance bills.

In view of the present business situation, he did not think it wise to attempt this year to wipe out a possible deficit of the moderate proportions he had indicated (some twenty-three millions for next year), by imposing further burdens on industry and upon the people. On the contrary, he said, in the tax changes proposed the government was trying to eliminate certain anomalies and inequities, and in the second place to make certain important adjustments designed to accelerate the forces making for business recovery. Among these the main were those changes concerning the sales tax elimintion on 40 items of builders' supplies.

The budget speech opposed 'pump priming' as a means of trying to right conditions.

HITLER'S NEW BERLIN

Chancellor Hitler of Germany is projecting a greater and newer Berlin as a twelve year program. He stated that he is not building for this generation but for the Germany of centuries in the future. His plans will be carried out under Nazi ideals, no doubt.

Hitler has just been in Rome and has seen something of the glories of the ancient capital of the world about two thousand years ago. He has also seen mediaeval relics in some of the Italian cities, like Florence, Venice, which contain precious memorials and types of art which cannot be repeated because the artists who worked on the buildings and the cities were so supreme in their field that they yet excel the world. It may not have been the smaller things in Italy's records of the past but the more grandiose things which have captured his mind like the colosseum and other relics of the more powerful and weighty types of art in ancient Rome. Many persons know the German tendency to mammoth structures as contrasted with the lighter style of the French. Berlin is a beautiful city. What will be the new style? Will the architects who are to work on the projects and new constructions be allowed freedom to produce the best of which they might be capable or will they produce Nazi memorials?

Hitler has an idea of a forum. He saw that in what was ancient Rome. Will he grant a place to something of the German past of the Middle Ages which have left many lovely German structures which might help the modern German artists in their planning.

This is an opportune time for work of this kind when the work can be done by continuing the regimentation of the people. At some time in the future there may be a change when such regimentation cannot exist and when democratic freedom may come to Germany.

The twelve-year plan offers a further step for the maintenance of preservation of Nazi control. Oddly enough it comes in a time when there is much thinking on the question of air raids on cities, particularly capital cities in the event of war.

Now one thinks of the Germans who destroyed such magnificent Gothic structures like the Cathedral of Rheims in their mad rush for power, in 1914-1918, and how they it seems, would have wiped out every vestige of civilization of another people, and sees the same German people are projecting a great expression of modern German art and architecture for centuries to come.

Berlin has been one of the most famous capital cities of the world. It has stood preeminent in Teutonic culture with its museums, boulevards and parks and its university. It dates back farther than the thirteenth century when what are now parts of Berlin were originally poor villages which first rose to prominence under Markgraf Albert 1206-1220.

"NEIGHBOR NELL", (Nellie Revell), is one of those genial persons who take life, by and large, as it comes, and continually plays up the sunshine while minimizing the shadows. "Neighbor Nell" is a fountain of bubbling inspiration, and those who listen in on her radio programs certainly get something which helps to keep the old chin up and renew the capacity for smiling and the desire to smile all the while. "Neighbor Nell" wrote "Right Off the Chest" while a hospital patient where she lay for five years with a broken spine. That takes courage, a whole lot of it. "Neighbor Nell's" radio program comes on at 11.15, Daylight Saving Time, Sunday mornings, (11.15 Eastern Time), and for "shut-ins" and those who have a good excuse for not going to church we recommend this program as an inspiration for the entire Sunday as well as the rest of the week. "Neighbor Nell" refuses her Sunday morning program with the words: "Another Day, Another Chance", and she is assisted by an organist and vocalist, and there is no commercial to jar the harmony of the Sabbath Day with week-day reminiscences. Following verses were heard on this program recently:

SAND

I observed a locomotive in the railroad yard one day,
It was waiting in the roundhouse where the locomotives stay;
It was panting for the journey, it was coaled and fully manned,
And it had a box the fireman was filling full of sand!
It appears that locomotives cannot always get a grip
On their slender iron pavement, cause the wheels are apt to slip.
And when they reach a slippery spot their tactics they command
And to get a grip upon the rail they sprinkle it with sand.
It's about the way with travel along life's slippery track,
If your load is rather heavy you're always slipping back,
So if a common locomotive you completely understand
You'll supply yourself in starting with a good supply of sand.
If your track is steep and hilly and you have a heavy grade,
If those who've gone before you have the rails quite slippery made,
If you ever reach the summit of the upper table land
You'll find you'll have to do it with a liberal use of sand.
If you strike some frigid weather and discover at your cost
That you're liable to slip up on a heavy coat of frost,
Then some prompt decided action will be called into demand
And you'll slip way to the bottom if you haven't any sand.
You can get to any station that is on life's schedule seen
If there's fire beneath the boiler of ambition's strong machine.
And you'll reach a place called Flushtown at a rate of speed that's grand
If for all the slippery places you've a good supply of sand.

JUDGE JOSEPH BUFFINGTON, one of the "Four Old Men" of the United States Supreme Court, is apparently only old in age; snowy-domed but bright-eyed, alert and energetic at 82. He lives at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Washington and in his gay seventies slept in a pup tent on the hotel roof. He has stopped that but he runs down the stairs of the nine stories from his room regularly, like a two-year-old, spurning the elevator. He bounces a medicine ball and some of his neighbors complain that he frequently shakes the hotel when taking exercise. He keeps a rowing machine in his room and uses it daily. He is not fond of giving advice but to young men he said: "I NEVER HAVE KNOWN A MAN WHO REGRETTED DRINKING TOO LITTLE." To old men, he offered "UNLAX." All of which when added up amounts to this, that a man is only as old as he feels.

Letters to the Editor

WATER FOR ANIMALS

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer.
Dear Sir:—

As the hot weather is here food becomes secondary to water for our animals. In the snow season they can eat snow. Animals living near the bay and river can at any time get fresh water, also the birds. I write particularly for those confined to the premises, they oftimes suffer very badly for two reasons, they cannot help themselves from the neighbouring dogs' dishes and their dish is in many instances not washed out and renewed daily. I have seen numerous instances of this lately and in one instance there was not any water in the dish.

Now let us consider what the Good Book says about neglect and abuse and cruelty to God's dumb creatures. It says: He that loveth God's dumb creatures "is not far from the Kingdom." We cannot be cruel to them in any way and be in favor with Him who made them and loaned them to us for many advantages to us for the joy of life. In Britain the law prohibiting the abuse and neglect of animals and birds is very severe many times more so than our law and it is present persists the animal is taken from him and he is forbidden to own another. God gave us the dog and cat for our companionship and entertaining and amusement also for our protection if necessary. This is constantly proven by the saving of human life in many and various ways and often the sacrifice of theirs given so willingly and gladly because of their undying love and affection for us.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

Mr. Editor: As next week is set apart to draw public attention to the welfare of the animal I respectfully submit the above communication for their benefit and publication.

FOELON HOPE

Questioned by a newspaperman just recently a spokesman for the girl members of the Toronto Flying Club is reported to have said that they would not join combatant forces in the case of war. "We want nothing of war" is how the girls are reported to have defined their position.

We suppose that the women of Belgium just prior to August 1914 would have answered the same way if they had been questioned regarding their willingness to participate in war. The trouble is that Italy's invading army did not stop to ask questions of the Ethiopians the Japanese did not consider the comforts of mental attitude of the Chinese and neither will a fleet of bombing planes over Toronto ask the girl members of the Toronto Flying Club as to their willingness to accept a few bombs.—Oshawa Times.

Attacks of Asthma May Be Caused By Emotional Conflicts

As medical students have learned that the cause of asthma was unknown; all that could be done was to try to give the patient some relief by various methods. Then operation for nasal obstruction of the nose and throat became popular and some cases were relieved by operation, and others did not.

Within the past few years it has been found that certain foods, certain substances such as cat hair and ragweed pollen will cause this past as they cause attacks of hay fever. The individual is said to be sensitive or allergic to these substances. The removal of the individual from these substances has prevented further attacks.

However, for many years there has been a kind of research workers the belief that in some cases of asthma there is a nervous or emotional factor which affects the nose, throat and chest and brings on the asthmatic attacks.

Both the allergic tendency and the emotional tendency are present in the same individual and research workers at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minnesota, Chicago, Drs. Benjamin T. Rappaport and Theodore Corlett, have found a number of such cases.

These studies, covering a two year period, would seem to show that even in individuals who have undoubtedly been sensitive to various substances—asthma attacks may be started by emotional conflict. We find that the asthma attacks occur regularly at about the same time of day, the situation which seems to threaten the patient with the loss of his job, the time of day upon upon which he is emotionally dependent. Sometimes the illness of the very young child who is exceedingly dependent upon his mother has been accompanied by a temptation to do something which would estrange him from her, accordingly we find that asthma attacks are most frequent when periods when patients were striving, giving over a conflict, the outcome of which will be a decision as to whether or not to remain at home."

Where the relation between the allergic and the emotional factors is not yet entirely clear. In such cases, when the patient has solved the conflict he becomes free of attacks of asthma although he is exposed to the substances which had previously caused the attacks.

That there is an inherited tendency to asthma is known, that nose and throat defects may be causes is also known. It is interesting and of help to learn by this work of the Institute for Psychoanalysis that emotional conflicts can bring on attacks.

SPACE EYE

Engineering details of a giant 200-inch telescope that will double man's vision of interstellar space from its position atop a California mountain peak, were determined through tests made with a tiny "eye" in Philadelphia.

Engineers of the Westinghouse Electric company's turbine division revealed they had been called upon on to assist in designing and building a support fo the giant cosmic mirror.

The new telescope, which will scan the heavens from the crest of Palomar Mountain, California, will be the largest in the world, with power approximately ten times that of the 100 inch telescope in the same state. Engineers, thus faced with a problem which they had no precedents to guide them, turned to a device used to watch the complete structure of steel and glass.

Through the operations of this device, a combination of cells permit a view of the working inner parts — even the rivets — with such accuracy, construction details that will give the huge telescope rigidity and great rigid strength, to hold the heavy superstructure firmly in all positions and at the same time keep natural vibrations at a minimum.

An unusual arrangement designed by the engineers will float the mounting in oil, which pumps will maintain a supporting pressure of 250 pounds to the square inch.

Technicians have pointed out that, drawn plans frequently meet difficulties of construction and assembly and linear distortions become troublesome when they undertake the work. When, as in the case of Mt. Palomar telescope, the apparatus is designed for highly minute measurements and observations, the elimination of vibration as far as possible also becomes essential.

The famous wild flower Venus Flytrap grown nowhere except in an area of about 100 miles surrounding Wilmington, N.C., and when this land is more settled the famous plants will become very rare unless protected.

Interesting Tales Told of Early Life in Flinton and District

By Rose Richardson, Flinton)

Little is known about the Township of Kaladar prior to the year 1846. It is not probable that the population was ever very dense, as no evidence of any large villages have been found. Wild game was fairly plentiful, as it is likely that hunting parties frequently visited the district. A large band of Indians was usually camped on the west side of the Scootamatta River, on the site which is now occupied by the village of Flinton, and they had a burying ground on the east side, close to the present site of the Catholic Cemetery. The Indians are of this camp ground as late as the year 1867, as Mr. Charles Lessard can recall to mind, the times when the boys of the settlement had the habit of crossing the stream to play with the Indian children, and he still has in his possession, a handmade bark round there.

Indian settlements were more numerous in the vicinity of the larger streams, for the streams and rivers were the highways of travel, besides furnishing a convenient supply of food in fish, water fowl, etc. The Scootamatta was not a very prolific stream in that respect, but the varieties of fish were small, and the stream so rough it was difficult to navigate.

Early Explorers

Nevertheless, it was by the route of the Scootamatta River that Andrew Dunlop, one of the early explorers of the district, and from whom, and whose doings, one of the original lots of the district was created—the story well known to many of the older residents of the district—the story of the great silver deposit in the cave, which was later, and is now, known as Myers Cave. The silver mine may have been a myth, but Andrew Dunlop was a real person.

However, as a matter of real knowledge, that even before Myers' time, a white man, a prospector, a man of perhaps questionable character, judging by his employment, travelled this district, trading with the Indians, in furs, etc., following the usual course of one of the earlier traders, getting all he could for the very least he could give, and taking every advantage of the Indian ignorance of values, trading a specially concocted medium of exchange, where possible, liquor, or as they termed it, fire-water.

Nothing that some of the Indians had some very peculiar looking ornaments made of a white metal which, to him, resembled silver, he concluded that a deposit of the metal must be somewhere in the near vicinity, and tried to find the location, by plying the Indians more with liquor, hoping that in their drunken condition the location would be revealed. This was without success, but, having obtained some of these pieces he found that prevailed on a small band of Indians, by stories of the wonderful things he could get them and show them, to make up a party to lead him out to the front, to Belleville, where, at that time, there was an assay office. The route was by the water-ways, of course, and the party finally arrived at the site of Quinte.

However, some of the party (which had been well supplied with liquor, the whole way, which at that time run out) became suspicious, and the new sights and sounds of the larger settlements did not help matters. The samples had been kept secret by the white man, of course but the Indians refused to accompany him further, and became very antagonistic. They compared an night on a small island, and Brown slipped away, stole a boat, set to shore, with the small bag of samples, the result of which was swim in the cold water was severe illness, probably pneumonia, and he died in Belleville. The samples were submitted, and proved to have a large quantity of silver, but it is now thought that they never came from this locality, but were all or but the story was circulated, and at different times attempts were made to find the fabulous silver mine, but entirely without success, but the legend prevailed for many years.

In the spring of 1838, two Indians lived in a cabin on the east side of the creek at the rear of what is now the school yard. This cabin was built of split basswood logs, placed on edge with the split side outside. The inside was almost as white as milk, and the roof was made up of the same material. One of the Indians died there, and was buried on the bank of the creek. A few rods upstream, but the grave was not marked, and the location of the exact spot has long been forgotten.

In the following year a band of Indians were encamped about three miles north of the school house, on the head of Deer Lake. In the dusk of the evening, a great sound as blow a horn of some kind which could be heard for miles, and one seemed to know just why this was done, but it may have been to direct the hunting party to camp, or possibly the children or dogs.

Some of the party remained over winter and made maple sugar at the foot of the lake, using buckets made of birch bark, sewn with spruce roots, and made tight with the gum. When they were ready they sold the buckets to a white settler, but when the Indians found how thoroughly dry they leaked, and the white men could not repair them.

One reminder of the former occupation still remains. Almost three miles north of the school house may be seen, to this day, two holes bored out in the solid rock, one 14 inches wide and the other 30 inches in diameter, and 30 inches deep, perfectly round, the sides perpendicular and perfectly smooth. How these holes were made, and the reason for making them is a mystery, but some say that they were used as a mortar in which the Indians pounded their corn into samp, or to grind corn meal. Another theory is that they were used to boil water. Similar holes may be seen in different parts of the Township, usually in pairs.

Scootamatta Farmed

In the year 1844, a syndicate which was formed for the purpose of establishing fisheries in interior waters, opened a road from what was then known as Troy (now Actinolite) to Mazinaw Lake. This was known as the Mazinaw Road, or Trail. The northern part of the road followed an Indian trail which was found to be wide enough to drive a team of oxen through, and the road south of Flinton known as the "old road" is part of the original Mazinaw trail and it was by this road that the first settlers came into Kaladar Township.

The Township was surveyed in 1821 but the work was carelessly done, as may be seen by the jog in the line at the north house, one half of the lot is farther north than the other.

In 1853 or between the years 1850 and 1853, several lumbermen started operations in the district, among them being the Honourable Billa Flint, Alexander Fraser, Joseph Caniff, Sandy Sutherland, Bogart, and others. The only timber sought at that time was white pine which grew to an immense size. One tree was cut a mile north of the school house which made 700 feet of lumber, 16 square timber six. Another was cut near Flinton which was said to have made 7000 square feet of lumber from the first log. This lumber was taken out for square timber, the children from this section attended school in Flinton, when they could but in 1860, School Section No. 2 was divided and School Section No. 13 was formed. The school grounds were donated by Wilson Vance, and the school house erected by James Freeburn & Sons. The first death was caused by William McClackie, and the first school Board consisted of Thos. Herrick, Sec'y-Treas., James Braden, William J. Freeburn. The first inspector to visit the school was Frederick Burrows, father of Dr. Burrows, of Tweed.

The first school teacher was Miss Hessie Hornick, and, following her the next teacher to succeed her, was Martha Campbell 1882, Amanda Preis 1882, Minnie Wager 1883-85, Maggie Hornick 1885-87, Carrie Brunner 1887-1905, Annie Brown 1901-1904, Maggie McGuinness 1904-1906, Maud Hall 1905-1908, Katherine Wise 1906-07, Mabel Morrison 1907-1908, Nellie Campbell 1908-1909, Hedley Wright 1909-1910, Hannah Critchley 1910-1911, Mary Rodgers 1911-1912, Nettie Campbell 1912, Gertrude Reynolds 1913, Harriet Clow 1914, Hilda Knox 1914-1915 Edna Hannah 1915-1917, Magdalene Duff 1918, Victoria Carmichael 1918-19-1920, Jennie Demille 1920-1921, Mildred Gardner 1921-1923, Myrtle Ash 1923, Irene Murray 1923, Geo. Only a few investors are taking advantage of the current opportunity.

In spite of the intense bearishness which still prevails the security markets this week indicated that an upward movement may get under way long before it is generally anticipated. The general feeling around the Street is so bare that no real improvement is looking for before Fall. Veteran followers who know Lucien Boyer know that it usually pays to buck the public and it is interesting to note that the last summer the average follower of securities was getting ready for "a big boom after Labour Day". Events subsequent to that end-of-summer holiday are still too painful but no capitulate, state Drury & Thompson in their Market Letter.

LATE TOM POWER TO BE HONORED

Plaque Will be Placed in Queen's Hotel by Ex-Members Rifle Unit

Plans for the placing of a plaque to the memory of the late T. P. J. Power, by former members of the famous Belleville Kilties Band, that won world renown when it toured the globe years ago, received completion last night when a delegation of ex-members convened in the Royal Canadian Hotel to make arrangements for the unveiling that will in all likelihood take place in the lobby of the hotel in July.

Tentative dates laid down by the delegation call for the function to take place on July 18 and 19. These however are not definite and may be changed if circumstances warrant.

A parade of ex-members of the famous musical organization, numbering between twenty-five and thirty who will come from all parts of the province as well as this city will feature the pre-unveiling functions while a banquet will be tendered to the "auld laddies" by Mrs. Zita Ryan, daughter of the late Mr. Power, in the Queens Hotel.

A sightseeing trip by automobile will feature the afternoon activities while at night a specially prepared concert program, entertainment will be given by the Belleville Municipal Band. Outstanding in this part of the program will be the playing of a march, "The T. P. J. Power Memorial March" composed by Bandmaster Lieut. Reg. Hinchey for the occasion and dedicated to Mr. Power.

Another feature of the concert will be the presence of former bandsmen from all parts who will also be invited to wield the baton in various selections. Lieut. Reg. Hinchey, Bandmaster W. F. Robinson, conductor of the Hamilton Light Infantry Band, Lieut. J. Holden, Toronto, Lieut. J. Lomas, Brockville, one of Canada's outstanding clarinetists, and others.

HIS FIRST DRINK AT THIRTY YEARS

Detroit, June 18—(CP)—"Gentleman Gene" Tunney, the fighter credited with bringing scientific boxing into the heavyweight class, and now Board chairman of a Philadelphia Company, today ranked alcohol with religion and trains in the service to mankind. Speaking before the Protective Liquor Alliance of Michigan, Tunney underrated the world's champion said:

"Since the dawn of history there have been only three things which offer man escape from this vale of tears. They are religion, music and liquor. We in the liquor business have a duty to perform that is just as important as that of the Churchman or the musician."

Tunney said he believed it was his job to "preserve this escape mechanism" and to see that it was manufactured and marketed in the most orderly manner possible. He warned against political evils in the marketing of liquor.

He admitted he drinks all types of alcoholic beverage "in moderation," and considers drinking a social grace.

"I took my first drink when I was 30 years old—and retired from fighting," he said. "How did I happen to take to drink? Social reasons."

RUTH WILL RETURN

Ruth's Wife Delighted

Ruth's wife Claire, said the Babe was delighted at returning to baseball.

"After all you can't give 37 years ball without missing it," she said. "Of your life at a game like that."

Mrs. Ruth said that the Brooklyn offer had come as a sharp surprise to Ruth. He was out fishing in Peconoc Bay yesterday and did not learn that MacPhail wanted to see him until he returned to his home early last evening.

The conference, short and to the point, followed and Ruth was back in baseball for the first time since 1933.

PEAS, POTATOES MAKE '38 DEBUT ON CITY MARKET

Fresh Vegetables, Strawberries Vie For Shoppers' Favours as Fine Display

EGGS FIRM

If the good dinner connoisseurs of Belleville fail to have their fill of a real Spring repast on their dining tables tomorrow, it will not be the fault of vendors of farm and garden produce of the city and district.

For heading one of the most valuable displays of fresh fruits and vegetables on the city market today were new potatoes, green peas, asparagus, strawberries, spinach and other vegetable goodies, while in a secluded corner, a widewake vendor offered delectable quarters of Spring lamb for sale. As one shopper put it, "if one couldn't derive one of life's dinners from that offering, he didn't deserve to eat."

Only three quarts of new peas were available today. Shelled, and placed in glass sealers, they had already been sold by the latter day they were gobbled up by eager shoppers who paid thirty cents per quart for their favorite Spring dish. New Potatoes were fairly plentiful, being offered at the early price of $2.00 per bushel, with pecks, half-pecks and Spring lamb for sale. As one shopper put it, "if one couldn't derive one of life's dinners from that offering, he didn't deserve to eat."

Other vegetables on display were asparagus at 25c per bunch, large fresh radishes at 2 bunches for 5c, new cabbage grown in local gardens at 5c per head, in choice stocks at 8c per head; spinach 4 lbs. for 25c; rhubarb offered at 5c per bunch and other fresh vegetables were on sale at prices to meet displays seen this year.

Gooseberries were quoted at 15c per box and catered to a popular demand.

Brokers in Demand

Brokers again headed a variable market display in the inside market with choice young birds selling at from seventeen to 18 to 20 per pair. Brisk demand for these dinner delights resulted in a practical sell-out before the hour of 11 a.m. and other chickens were offered at from 16c to 18c per lb.

Egg prices showed no chance from the quotations of a week ago with "A" selects selling at 22c per dozen. Mediums demanded 22c; cooking eggs by telephone today and the Prime Minister's statements in the Commons today. He denied that he said anything that could be interpreted either by Herr Mr. Hitler or out of public life or persecute him; and the course of the British Government in the election last October, and since, is sufficient reference to the Prime Minister's statements.")

JOHN ROOSEVELT WEDS ANNE CLARK

Nahant, Mass., June 18 (AP)—John Roosevelt, youngest of Lindon Clark turned toward the altar of an ancient church by the sea here today for the marriage vows he declined to mark the end of an era for the Clan Roosevelt in the United States.

The marriage, set for noon, was underscored for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt as the minute when their son, John, five children had grown up and stepped from the threshold of family.

Four generations of Roosevelts, even 20 of them bearing the Roosevelt name, flanked by prominent members and others high in the governmental, social, financial and society, were given places of prominence in the pews of historic Union church for the Standard Episcopal, single-ring ceremony.

81-Year-Old Pastor to Act

The Rev. Endicott Peabody, 81-year-old headmaster of Groton School, who has married other Roosevelts and other Clarks in the past, and the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, awaited bride and groom at the altar.

Hours before the ceremony, Nahant police, bolstered by more than 100 officers from Boston, Lynn, Salem, completed preparations to handle one of the largest crowds in the history of this old town.

All automobile traffic, save for those of the wedding party, was shut off soon after dawn at the mouth of the causeway leading to the island, provided the only entrance to the peninsula, which is Nahant. Residents and Pedestrians were welcomed, however, if they could survive the three-mile walk to the centre of activities.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, June 18—Gaine of 15 to 30 cents were marked up for bacon hogs at Hull, London and Peterboro today. Other markets held steady.

Steady Increase in Production

Hog production has, for the most part, been profitable in this country for many years. This is proven by the steady increase in production which has occurred with few interruptions. It is possible for it to become more profitable with the economic—both of which are within the farmers' control.

Mr. Sly discusses the gap between the price of Canadian bacon and Danish bacon in England. This amounts to about 8 sh. per cwt. or $2.00 per hog. This can be done by producing more "A" grade, leaner 55/65 carcasses—we shipped only 25% of these in 1937—and by breeding for more uniform markings throughout the year.

2nd. By lowering the cost of production from 5 or 6 Dz. of grain for a pound of pork to 3 Dz.-4 Dz. This can be done by using tested breeding stock and efficient feeding methods.

Butter Prices Show Improvement

Toronto, June 18—Higher prices were recorded by butter during present week's sales of the local produce market, while eggs and cheese ruled steady.

Buying interest that got under way Thursday continued into yesterday's butter market and as a result prices rose 1c. Quotations solids turned over in good volume at 24½c to 25c for No. 1 grades. Undergrades advanced accordingly to range at 24c to 24½c. Offerings of supplies were ample for the demand, but offerings dried up at the 24½c mark. No holders were found willing to sell below the 25c figure. Buyers, however, were not at all partial to the higher rates, but it was doubtful if butter was available below the 24½c figure across the close of the market. Some of the purchases were reported for clearing purposes.

The Western make sold for 26c to 26½c, but only a few wanted at this price.

Supplies were still light on the egg market, a seasonal condition. Trading maintained a fair pace, which tended receipts to clear on arrival. Graded shipments sold on spot at 23c for grade A-large, 24c for medium, 22c for B's and 21c for C grades.

Montreal, June 17 (CP)—Prices were steady on open produce markets.

Butter in lots to retailers was quoted at 26c for No. 1 solids, 26½c for No. 1 prints, 24c for No. 2 solids and 25½c for No. 2 prints. Receipts were 1,197 cases.

Graded egg shipments in cartons or less were 25½c a dozen for large, 24c for A-medium, 23½c for B-large, and 21½c for C. Receipts were 1,197 cases.

ITALY SEEKING

The government here is facing opposition charges of favoring General Franco to expedite the Anglo-Italian pact, even at the expense of the British ships which have been bombed in Spanish ports.

Ad's Charge Mr. Boulogne Loses

"The Committee of British Ship Owners," Lloyd's Weekly has asserted large paid advertisements in the newspapers declaring public attention to the fact 32 British seamen have been killed, 50 wounded, 11 ships sunk, and 20 damaged.

The advertisement said every British ship owner is a non-intervention observer and that old firms are being driven from the Spanish waters, and for months British tonnage (1,000,000) sank idly.

Meanwhile, numerous International precedents are being established, threatening the future security and freedom of the seas, the London Times declared.

Possibilities

Three possibilities for ending or easing the International tension, further by withdrawal of "volunteers," second by the establishment of a neutral committee to investigate air bombings of civilian populations, and third by mediation resulting in a compromise peace, were discussed here.

At the same time Italian circles in London were without confirmation of reports from Rome that Premier Mussolini had formally asked Great Britain to put into effect the Anglo-Italian agreement as soon as Italian troops are withdrawn from the fighting line for more uniform markings throughout the year.

(The Associated Press, discussing the reports, said there have been indications recently that Premier Mussolini would like to get the 70,000 Italians he sent to Spain home before the withdrawal of foreign volunteers. Cincinnati Reds Make Small Gain; Picton Intermediates Win

Pennant Races in Both Loops As Interesting as the Bigtime Has Been in Many Years

Yankees Playing Same Ball as Last Year But in 2nd Place

GIANTS IN FRONT

Cubs, Reds And Bees Giving Leader a Real Battle

By SID FEDER

Step right up to baseball's slide-show, boys and girls, and get a load of as queer a pair of pennant races as the big-time has seen in years.

In the American League, you have the world champion Yankees playing virtually the same brand of ball as at this time last year. Then they were twelve games in front. Now, mark; now they're eleven. Yet last June 18 murderers' row was 37 games in front of the Tigers, with Cleveland Indians five games back. And today, Oeltjen and Crosetti are in second place, a game behind the tribe, while the Tigers are in fifth place.

Then shift your glance over to the National side and you get another freak that would warm the heart of a Barnum. At this time in 1937, the Cubs were in front of the Giants by one game, with the Cardinals three up in third place and Cincinnati Reds hopelessly bogged down in the cellar from which they never emerged.

Giants Showing Way.

Right now, however, the Giants are showing the way to Charley Grimm's alphabet, by three full games, the astonishing Reds are breathing hot on the necks of both, and Frankie Frisch's gas-less gas-house gang is doing its darndest to stay out of cellar territory.

The chief reason for the upheavals are the Indians and the Braves. Both have been shooting a philosophy of fight under new managers.

The tribe, after a temporary tailspin last week, has won three straight, the latest an 8-1 whipping Saturday the Athletics yesterday as Johnny Allen chalked up his eighth win of the year with a five-hit performance. Shine the Yanks' game with the Browns was rained out, this boosted the Indians' American League lead by half a game.

Everything Happens.

Over in the National League everything happened at once. The Giants stepped out of their batting doldrums, fired a sixteen-hit attack bombarding Jim Bivin and Lee Grissom for the Cards 10-3 behind Slick Castleman's steady flinging.

Since the Cubs were rudely humiliated by Boston Bees in both ends of a doubleheader, this added a game and a half to the Giants' lead. Jim Turner pitched a three-hit relief job, Bill Lee 1-0, on Ray Mueller's

Keeping Score Distracting.

Every week I hear of at least several players who came up to the ninth hole or the eighteenth with an excellent chance of breaking their previous best score, only to lose out by taking a six or an eight. The main reason in each case was one in which the player took an eight on an easy par three hole, said eight being the forerunner of his lack of concentration when confronted with the opportunity to make his best score.

Very often this lack of organization and failure to perform well under pressure is attributed to poor competitive spirit. This is a mistake, for in most cases the downfall is caused by some distraction such as counting the score as you go along. My good friend Octavius Roy Cohen once said that he didn't see why a golfer couldn't play well until the last hole as well as he does when on his own behaviour. There is something to this for it is easily possible after you get wise to the job of overcoming and avoiding distraction.

If you are inclined to worry about your score, by all means let somebody else keep the card. If agreeable to your opponents, let one of the caddies do the job, and forget the total until you have finished the entire hole.

BELMONT JUNIORS DEFEAT NAPANEE

"Lem" Carson Gives Great Exhibition of Relief Hurling

With "Lem" Carson hurling great relief ball the Belmont juniors came from behind to defeat the Napanee Mic Mac by a 5-3 score in a Belleville and District Softball fixture at Coleman Flats last evening. The victory elevated the Belmont kids into sole possession of third position in the league standing.

Tarrow started on the hilltop for the Belmonts, but after issuing three successive walks in the initial frame, was replaced by Carson, who went on to pester Napanee eight hits well while his team mates cuffed the deliveries of Howley, the Napanee mound ace, for ten safeties, including a triple by O'Neill and a double by Carson in assisting his own cause.

With three aboard and none out Carson limited the Napanee nine to one run in that frame, while he blanked the visitors the rest of the way, except in the fifth, when a walk, coupled by hits by Murphy and Miller chased the remaining two Napanee runs across the plate. The Belmonts evened the score in their half of the first, added two more in the fourth and one each in their half of the first, added two more in the fourth and one each in the seventh and eighth.

Rowbotham an dO'Neill led the Belmonters at bat with three safeties while Rankin clubbed a brace of singles. Thompson had two hits for Napanee, while Curry and Murphy hit doubles. On Monday night the Booth-McCrae entry entertain the National Grocers while the Belmonts go to Point Anne, and Corby's entertain Trenton in the city in an exhibition game tonight.

PICTON DOWNS KINGSTON 14-5

Five Pitchers Used During Struggle in Kingston Thursday

Kingston, June 18 — Picton improved its lead in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate Baseball League here last night with a 14 to 5 win over Kingston Locos. The visitors collected most of their margin in the first three innings when they got to three Kingston hurlers for eleven runs.

Abbott started on the mound for Picton and worked well until the fourth when he was nicked for three runs. Dalgarno relieved him and held the Kingston club in check except for the eighth when two runs counted against him. Walks and errors by Kingston helped Picton pile up its big haul.

SHANNONVILLE BEATEN BY LATTA, SCORE 4-3

In a regular South Hastings League game last night Latta nosed out Shannonville in the last inning taking the game by the score of 4-3.

For the Latta team G. Hall, their southpaw moundsman, pitched for three innings and was relieved by Dunning who held the Shannonville sluggers for the balance of the game —Hall striking out four and Dunning five.

For the losers Maracle pitched a steady game but a few costly errors did not help his cause.

Latta—Lawrenson, Dunning, A. Hall, J. Gowe, C. Hall, E. Simms, M. Colden, M. Bradden, Fargey, G. Parks, G. Hall.

Shannonville — Cook, Spencer, Maracle, Houston, Osborne, Hill, Maracle, Coutts, Barnhart.

Umpires—Holmes, plate; Hodgen, bases.

MRS. GOODERHAM WINS TOURNEY

Defeats Mrs. Mulqueen For Ontario Golf Title

Toronto, June 18 (CP)—An old superstition that the qualifying medallist never wins the tourney was set aside today by the crowning of Mrs. R. H. Gooderham of Toronto as champion of Ontario's women golfers.

Mrs. Gooderham, who led the qualifying round with at 81 over the tricky St. Andrew's course here, won the championship for the third time yesterday with a 4 and 4 victory over Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen, a clubmate from the Toronto Golf Club.

Runner-up in last year's champion, Mrs. Cliff Shuttleworth, of Hamilton Glendale, in the quarter finals, Mrs. Mulqueen soared to a 47 on the nine-hole nine while Mrs. Gooderham fired a par 40. The par figures were good enough to give Mrs. Gooderham a four hole lead at that stage.

She ended the match on the fourteenth hole, after going two over par on the first five holes at the inward nine, while a 4 on the 14th ended Mrs. Mulqueen's air.

Mrs. Gooderham shot her finest golf on the first nine holes. She fired three birdies, on Goodman's seventh listing homer; Berger belted homer, double and single in wind-up which Reds won 12-10.

Johnny Allen, Indians—Stopped Athletics with five hits and fanned seven in 5-1 victory.

Hank Leiber, Giants—Bagged four hits, including homer with the bases loaded, as Giants walloped Cardinals, 16-7.

Jim Turner, Ray Muller and Tony Cuccinello, Bees—Turner shut out Cubs with five hits and won first game, 1-0, on Muller's homer; Cuccinello drove in two runs in the nightcap which Bees won, 3-2.

Mace Brown, Pirates—Saved 4-3 win over Phillies by fanning batter with bases loaded in relief job.

Al Simmons, Senators, and Chet Laabs, Tigers—Former belted two homers to pace Senators' 12-10 victory in first game; Laabs got homer with bases full in initial contest and another four-bagger in second game Tigers won, 4-3.

JIMMY GLEESON QUITE IMPORTANT

Third Member of Bears' Outfield One of its Main Cogs

Almost lost in the shuffle among the great collection of minor league stars on the powerful Newark Bears of the International League is 22-year-old Jimmy Gleeson, who, despite the lack of a "scout" report on him, plays an important part in the Bears' success.

Obscured by the batting feats of clouting Charley Keller, and by the home-run slugging of veteran Bob Seeds, Gleeson, who rounds out the Bears' outfield with that duo, is a much better than average ball player.

Though he generally hovers around the 300-mark in batting, Gleeson is rated a tough customer in the "clutch".

Take last night's game with Rochester Red Wings. Gleeson made only one hit, but it was a homer in the sixth with the bases loaded and the Bears trailing. It climaxed a seven-run uprising that gave the Bears a 8-4 victory.

GOLF'S GREATEST

Goldom's greatest is Ralph Guldahl. A couple of years ago Ralph was not exactly setting the world on fire with his feats on the links, and things looked pretty gloomy for the Guldahl household. Now he's on top of the golfing world. At Denver this year he took his second straight United States open crown then journeyed to St. Louis where he captured his third straight Western open. Last year he won the Canadian open. Golf's greatest figure since the days of Bobby Jones is shown in three typical poses, eye on the ball, concentrating on winning; that smile of victory that's becoming a habit; and sending one more down the fairway.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

By Ken J. Calling

Ten days in advance to previous openings, the 1938 muskinonge season will be officially opened in the Province of Ontario. Through the facilities of the Department of Game and Fisheries and the co-operation of district Anglers Association the replenishment of muskinonge has been carried on for some years past, until this year the Department has graciously advanced the opening of the "lunge season exactly ten days, so on Monday morning those ardent disciples of Izaak Walton, who thrill at the tug of the "muskie" will be permitted to legally catch these fighting beauties.

It is estimated by the Department, that over 20,000 muskinonge fingerlings will head their sharp clocks early Monday morning and his themselves off to their favorite haunts. Incidentally, it is coincidental the County of Hastings is blessed with an ideal muskinonge fishing as one could wish to find any place on this continent. From the waters of the Bay of Quinte and our lakes in the north part of Hastings have been taken some fine "muskies" in the past, but there are just as good left for the next fortunate. Incidentally, a large muskie minnow, is usually recognized in some of the knowledgeable of 'lunge hall, but these fighting beauties will go for most anything, will eat almost each and every scion, also, that's why a spinner is considered a 'lunge bait.

When fishing for muskinonge it is always good practice to take along a gaff hook or large landing net, especially the former. I have been solid 'nine out of ten fish are lost after they have been hooked, and played alongside the fisherman's boat by we repeat—always carry a gaff hook. Frankly speaking we know the folly of leaving the gaff behind from personal experience—yes we lost a honey in Moira Lake after playing it for some time. Lifting a muskie into a boat by the line is dangerous practice, taken from the fighting fish, according to set rules. A lost tip the mighty hangs will virtue and hold, unless practically starving, while the lower is strictly taboo. Well we are available for those local baseball fan. There is nothing phony or up the sleeve, its all above board and the balls may be seen in Bill Cook's cigar store window next week. The ball bearing the autographs of the Yankees is a regulation American League ball signed by Frederick Harridge, while the other is a National League ball signed by President Ford Frick. In order to preserve the autographs the balls have been shellacked and in a fine state of preservation. There's no catch in the picture—Bill Shew, well known Montreal beverage salesman, got the ball, when in St. Petersburg Fla., last spring and yesterday gave them to the Belleville intermediates to be used as they saw fit. We believe the idea is what is commonly known as a draw, if that's lawful.

These balls are autographed by such players as Dizzy Dean, Joe Medwick, Johnny Mize, Frankie Frisch and the rest of the Cards, as well as Lou Gehrig, Red Ruffing, who happens to be a fine gentleman we saw his autograph, Lefty Gomez and all the Yanks. To a baseball fan these balls would be a highly prized possession.

"Doc" Townsend's Belmont kids avenged their whitewashing at the hands of the Napanee Mic Macs this week, by virtue of a 5-3 win over Joe Killorin's Gibbsdrville nine Tuesday evening. Interesting this week moved the Belmonts into third also in the loop standing. Incidentally, the Napanee and Kingston have been shouting high and hard regarding some alleged "undeserved decisions" at the hands of Belleville umpires, but perhaps last night will end such talk soon.

As guests of Belleville businessmen the Rochester Club 158 strong, really enjoyed themselves while in the city yesterday. Thanks to the untiring efforts of all local business men, our American cousins were across the non-fortified boundary in numbers, a fine day was spent. In all 22 of the visitors played golf and for the greater part were more proficient than our own players. Some of the Rochester golfers showed they knew all the ins and outs around the Bay of Quinte golf courses, by the way, to say the ocean effort. Others were taken to Moira Lake where their fishing prowess showed up to a fairly good average, all of the visitors returning with fine catches of bass and a couple with some speckled trout. The visit, we voted most worthwhile to both the visitors and the hosts, as the Rochester Club members will be back to the Belleville back to their native land and advertise it well. The spirit of goodwill was fully cemented and no doubt future visits will follow.

A new three hook out in the Bay of Quinte League last evening when Jimmy Clezie's Picton nine walloped the Kingston Locos 14-5 right in the Limestone City, to move into second place in the league standing. The Picton club pounded Abbott for the win, a ball game behind Belleville by virtue of two consecutive wins over Kingston this week. Now the league leadership will find some hard battling when the local nine journey to Picton for a league fixture next Wednesday afternoon. Apparently Skipper Harry Doyle does not believe in taking too many chances when the going looks tough to get hits, with the score standing 11-3 yesterday, Doyle and Church held a consultation and invoked Kitty Abbot in favour of Friday Dalmard, Vinny Strong, Belleville, Peterboro' and St. Catharines nines pitcher lasted less than an inning as the potent Picton bats rang out with hits at the Kingston pitching staff last night. Skipper Jimmie Arnlel introduced another new moundsman named Jease, but he followed Urunkl into the showers in the third, Cuthbertson finishing the game.

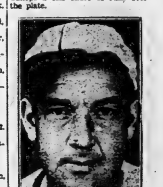
Major League Faces

BUDDY MYER
Washington Senators

Back in his 1926 form is the Senators' second baseman. A good fielder who hovered close to the .300 mark at the plate for years. Buddy climbed to that three years ago to take the American League batting title, the following year he took sick and was of little value to the Senators. Last season saw things improve and now, near the top of the league in the averages. It looks like a great year for a great, little infielder.



BILL M'KECHNIE
Cincinnati Reds

If you took a poll of baseball writers "Mild Will" would probably be voted best manager in the majors. He's won pennants for Pittsburgh and St. Louis, steered the Boston outfit to new heights last year, and is working his wonders with the Reds this season. Noted for his skill in developing and handling pitchers.

GUS SUHR
Pittsburgh Pirates

Gus is the durable Pirate first baseman who set a National League record for consecutive games a few seasons ago. He ended the streak to fly to his sick mother. In his ninth year with the team. Weak hitter for a first baseman, but he supplies a fair share of runs over the plate.

VIRGIL DAVIS
Philadelphia Phillies

A capable receiver who possesses a real punch at the plate is Davis who went to the Phils in the trade that took Bucky Walters to the Reds. It's his second term with the perennial cellar-dwellers. Should get more work now, the Reds having been overstocked with catching talent for some years. Ten year major league batting mark of .313.

Frankford

Frankford—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Landon, who are leaving for Toronto shortly, were presented with a lovely crystal bowl by their fellow United Church choir members after practise on Thursday evening. After a short program of choral singing and vocal solo by Miss Maude Cooper and cornet solo by Mrs. Floyd Ketcheson, the presentation was made by Mrs. Floyd Ketcheson, the address being read by Mr. J. Arnold Sickle. The address was one of appreciation for Mr. and Mrs. Landon's enthusiastic support of the choir's activities and their best wishes for success in their new work in Toronto.

Mr. Landon replied to the address with the autographs of 16 choir members and Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Lane. A half hour social period during which the ladies served refreshments.

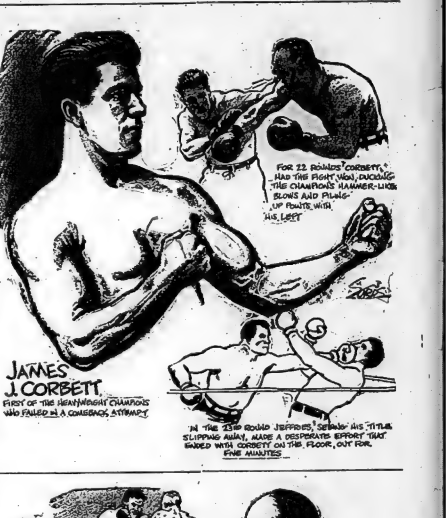
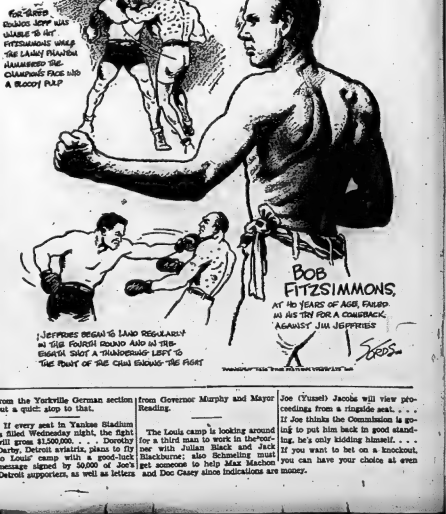
Sports Roundup



By EDDIE BRIERLY



New York, June 18 (AP) — Town filling up with flight folk and fight fans. . . . Odds still 8 and 7 to 5 with Louis on the fat end. . . . Lots of people don't understand it. . . . One: they threatened to lump to 11 or 19 to 5, but a flood of money from the Yorkville German section put a quic! stop to that.

If every seat in Yankee Stadium is filled Wednesday night, the fight will gross $1,500,000. . . . Dorothy Darby, Detroit aviatrix, plans to fly to Louis' camp with a good-luck message signed by 50,000 of Joe's Detroit supporters, as well as letters from Governor Murphy and Mayor Reading.

The Louis camp is looking around for a third man to work in the corner with Julian Black and Jack Blackburn; also Schmeling must get someone to help Max Machon and Doc Casey since indications are money.

"I'D SURE HATE TO FACE YOU, JOHHNY!"

The Babe is congratulating the Reds' rookie after he performed the amazing feat of pitching two no-hit, no-run games in succession, the first against Boston and the second against Dodgers in the first night game played in Brooklyn.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

At something in her mother's face she hesitated.

Julia continued the story. "And here she lived all the rest of her life. But she didn't stay young and beautiful. Women don't when they have to work the way Ma did and have so many children."

Somehow Tobey hadn't thought of that. She objected rather feebly, "Just you—and your brother who ran away."

"Three other brothers died when they were little." Julia enlightened her further. "And Ma was never awfully strong. How she stood the drudgery around here so many years I don't know. She was only forty when she died, but she looked seventy. At the very last"—the woman's voice caught—"it seemed as if she was simply too tired to go on. Poor Ma."

After that, when her grandfather spoke of Harriet Tobey thought of the sadness, instead of the harridan frame. And things were spoiled a little. No longer were those stories of his so much like fairy tales, thrilling, unreal, inapplicable to everyday life. Listening to him the child felt a dull, not quite comprehended resentment begin to smolder within her. Resentment against love which trapped people like Harriet and Julia and a youngster, more ardent Richard Tobey, resentment against marriage which held them entrapped.

But most of all, resentment against men who felt no sense of shame, of responsibility for the things done in the women they loved and who loved them. Old Richard had loved Harriet, yet he had taken her confidently away from the people, the places, the sheltered easy life she had known and had brought her here to this small alien farm to work, to grow weary and unwilling to die at last, perhaps not too unwillingly. And there had been Tobey's own father, drunken, bullying, yet professing to love her somehow—

Those old unhappy times seemed so far away now, so infinitely removed from the sweet consolation of living that enveloped Tobey. Sometimes still that last choking cry of Tim's would echo through her mind; sometimes she would see again his long fat face, grayed grotesquely among the little puddles of spring rain. But for the most part the memory of him had been pushed so deep down into her unconsciousness by new sights, new experiences and impressions, that a sort of protective layer had closed over it wiling it in, dulling its former acuteness.

In September she started in school and after the first few days of strangeness, of getting acquainted with the other children and accustomed to the novelty of eight grades combined in one room under one teacher, she liked it. Liked it as she liked everything about this full new life of hers, this real and dependable life that seemed to stand so firmly upon enduring foundations.

CHAPTER III

Each morning, with anticipation amounting almost to eagerness, she walked the two miles that separated the farm from the white-painted schoolhouse. And each afternoon she hurried home as eagerly to fling herself into the share of the farm work, gathering up eggs, feeding the chickens and shutting them in for the night, helping her mother about the house. Later, when the supper dishes had been washed and dried and put away carefully in the old deep cupboard between the windows, she would climb the stairs to her own little room under the eaves and undress by moonlight or wavering candle flame, secure in the realization that tomorrow would be just like make. Tomorrow she would do those things again, and tomorrow and tomorrow. For how could things change? Tim was dead and she and Julia were safe in the house of her grandfather.

A few days after Thanksgiving, when the snow lay white and glistening across the meagre acres he had tended so long, old Richard died. Julia, going into his room to awaken him for breakfast, found him forever imperious to her calls, resting peacefully, his fierce eyes closed, his stern face undistorted. They buried him in the little churchyard where Harriet waited, near the ling graves of his wife who had died in infancy. Here Tobey stood close beside her mother while the bitter wind swept with a sound like mourning about that small assembled company.

Afterwards they went back. those two and Adam Thomas, who looked strange and ill at ease in his blue serge, back to the dim hushed house of Richard Tobey. Tobey was glad to follow her elders back into the familiar kitchen. Neighbors had brought in food, after the kindly custom of farm people. On the great square table a shrouded chicken was dimly visible through the steamy sides of a covered glass dish. Beside it were fresh light rolls still in their baking pan and covered with a dish towel, a small earthenware crock of sweet butter and a coconut cake.

Julia sat down limply, pushing her hat upward from her white forehead, pulling off her gloves.

She said, "Doesn't it seem awful and—queer without Pa around? Who'd ever 'a' thought he'd go like that, such a big strong man?"

The hired man shook his head. "Goes to show a person never knows. Never in this world—"

The inner embarrassment that seemed to grip him hadn't relaxed. After a moment he turned to Julia, diffidently, his eyes on Julia. "I spoke to Jeb Peters this afternoon. About us two starting in and it'd be all right."

"Staying there?" The woman's brows rose. Her eyes were wary and shadowed in her pale face. "I thought you and me'd been talking about."

Adam Thomas shrugged. "Well, I certainly can't stay here. Not with things the way they are. People's talk."

Watching, Tobey saw her mother bite her lower lip. "I guess that's so. I suppose they would. But—what am I going to do?"

"I mean I won't work for you just the same," the man assured her. "I'm not the kind to run away. I can make it easy in all but the very first weather. I think it'll work out. I'm sure it will if you'll consider a proposition I made to Richard a long while back. He was thinkin' it over.

"Well, we hinted over farmin' the place on shares. That'd give me a —well, a more personal interest, don't you see? And after all, if I'm goin' to be put to the inconvenience of changing and, at his age, with something skin to fear.

Hearing these words, watching them, the child wondered why her mother accorded so willingly to his every word. Julia, who believed with such obvious interest and approval in all his plans, who was resting peacefully, his fierce eyes closed, his stern face undistorted. They buried him in the little churchyard where Harriet waited, near the ling graves of his wife who had died in infancy. MRS. J. FOBERT.

Treated At Scene.

The injured people were given treatment at the scene of the accident by Dr. J. G. Burrows, Tweed physician and rushed immediately to Belleville General Hospital by two ambulances, the Martin Funeral Home where the extent of their injuries was ascertained.

Dr. J. J. Robertson of this city is attending Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Fobert, with Dr. R. S. Gibson in attendance on Mrs. Rubbe.

The Keith car, according to Chief of Police Clare Hayes of Tweed, who investigated the accident, topped the brow of a rise on the highway a short distance north of Roslin where the driver, failing to notice a herd of cattle in the roadway in time to stop, jammed on his brakes in an effort to avoid crashing into the cattle.

Car Out of Control.

The swollen application forced the car out of control. It swerved sharply to the west side of the road, crashed into the ditch somersaulting five times before stopping, a wreck-ed heap near the highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fobert at their home in Tweed prior to the accident. Mrs. Rubbe, wife of a former Allisonville farmer and mother of Mrs. Laurel Boyd, of Allisonville, had been recently engaged as a cook in a Tweed hotel.

REPORTS, GRANTS

Road Report.

Expenditures for maintenance of the Hastings County roads and bridges system from December 1 to May 31 was $92,347.87, a decrease of $9,586.00 over the same period of a year ago, according to the report of the Roads and Bridges Committee presented to council.

This decrease, the report stated, was due to the fact that the proposed expenditure as authorized in the by-law providing for such monies which has January had been reduced as some $16,400.00 by the Department of Highways.

With the exception of two or three instances, the road system of the county was completed during the spring break-up period fairly well. Snow removal costs amounted to approximately $2,000.00 as compared to $8,150.00 of last year and $6,240.00 of the year previous to that.

Maintenance of roads has comprised the bulk of the work done to date the report stated, signing resurfacing must be completed this week, with a large amount of this work being done in the townships of Tyendinaga, Huntingdon, Hungerford, Marmora and some in Dungannon.

In addition to this work, special preparatory work has been done on roads that were to be treated with calcium chloride. Guard rails and posts have been erected on numerous dangerous curves.

21 Miles Covered.

With $6,200.00 set aside for the material twenty-one miles of county roads have been covered to date with this preparation. When completed sixty-one miles will have been treated with this material.

Approval of the purchase of a new power-maintainer has been withheld by the Department of Highways due to the reduction of county subsidy, the report stated. The existing machine, however, is capable of necessity working each ten hours per day.

Another effect of the reduction in government subsidy is seen in the fact that only one new paving job will be undertaken this year, the report stated.

The report was read by Deputy Reeve George Thompson in the absence of Roads Chairman James Moore, who is confined to hospital. Councillor Bateman read the report.

Publicity Report.

A delegation composed of representatives of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Kiwanis and others, will wait on the government in the near future with a view to the taking over by the Department of Highways, that part of the road that connects Foxboro with Maysooth to Algonquin Park connecting with a road running from Barrie's Bay to Huntsville, Chairman W. J. Deroche, Publicity Committee, told council in his report yesterday.

Opening of this road will induce the surplus tourist traffic expected to enter Canada by the eastern routes upon the completion of the International Bridge, to use the Hastings County roads en route to the vacation spots of the north and in this way bring valuable publicity and a goodly share of the tourist trade to Hastings County, the report pointed out.

A number of folders eulogizing the holiday and natural attractions of the county and city of Belleville had been distributed in connection with the Publicity Committee of Belleville City Council, while a grant of $50.00 was recommended to the Belleville Rotary Y.O.N. Committee towards the cost of erection of three large signs.

The report was adopted upon motion.

Grants

In committee of the Whole on Wednesday, council made the usual grants of $100.00 to Red Cross Hospitals at Bancroft and Deseronto; $75 to the Y.O.N. Belleville; $100.00 to Empire Cheese Exhibition to be held at Deseronto or Hastings; $75 to championship School Fair of county; $96.00 to Junior Agricultural work in county; $150 to Belleville Fair Board and $100.00 each of Hastings County Fairs.

Due to the great amount of controversial opinion, Reeve Dr. Lumb, Bancroft, stated he would withdraw his motion for 75 percent rebate of county rate for road maintenance.

Reeve MacWhirter withdrew his motion for grants of $200 to three district hospitals, in view of the fact that Department of Highways may have something of a better financial nature.

By-laws

Several by-laws received their final readings at the closing session. These included by-laws to authorize the county to borrow $181,055.00 for current purposes, to equalize assessment, to levy rates for roads and bridges expenditure namely the road from Mill Street to rain road from the county system, namely the road from Mill Street to George Street a distance of 300 feet in the town of Deseronto, to provide for meeting the cost of education of county pupils in Vocational Schools and Public Schools and Grades A and B Continuation Schools, namely $41,982.34, and to levy rates for current purposes amounting to $94,851.55.

Sharp Criticism of Hon. Ian MacKenzie Sounded by Col. Drew

Windsor, Ont., June 18—(CP)—Sharp criticism of Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Federal Minister of National Defence, whom he termed "a perpetrator of bogeys from Victoria," was sounded by Col. George A. Drew, former Ontario Conservative party organizer, in an address before the Essex County Conservative Club here.

Mr. Mackenzie is only giving Canada "defence by headlines," Col. Drew charged, and he maintained both the Defence Minister and Prime Minister Mackenzie King had reversed a policy set forth five years ago when it was unanimously decided arms should only be manufactured in state-owned establishments.

He charged Mr. Mackenzie with betraying that policy in agreeing to the sale of government-owned machinery and its removal from the government arsenal at Valcartier, Que., to the John Inglis Company at Toronto, where machine guns are to be manufactured. All organizations which flouted Ottawa with resolutions demanding the profit in the sale of the machine business should again rise and demand their wishes be respected, Col. Drew said.

Soft cots in Ashland, Pa., State the hospital must be their idea of heaven as Peter Rinkenbach, Jr., and his father, right, congratulated each other after being rescued from the "bootleg" mine shaft in which they were entombed 45 hours. Rescuers crew worked two nights, finally reached them almost 300 feet underground and brought them to the surface. An iron pipe, driven through the debris, supplied them with food and air. Examination proved them little the worse after their experience.

150,000 Reported Dead in Chinese Flood

One of the worst disasters in China's long chain of disasters is feared as the Yellow river swirls over hundreds of square miles of Honan province, taking a huge death toll, estimated by Japanese military engineers at 150,000. Heavy rains, coupled with deliberate destruction of the dikes by Japanese artillery fire and by Chinese themselves to impede the invader, are listed as causes of the great flood. The Japanese army itself is said to have suffered severely from the flood. One dispatch from Chinese sources said 5,000 Japanese soldiers were drowned and 7,000 more trapped.

This is another case of combining the usual and the unusual. Crossing the plate is Jimmy Foxx, first baseman for Boston Red Sox, who has just knocked the ball over the fence for a home run and sent two teammates over ahead of him in a game against the Indians. That's something Jimmy's been doing with amazing regularity this season. Running out to greet the fox socker is a Beantown fan, who figured the least he could do to reward him was offer him a drink....which he is doing. The other figures are Umpire Eddie Rommel, former pitcher, who is attempting to restrain the exhibitrant fan, Joe Cronin, Boston boss, awaiting his turn at the plate with a couple of bats in his hands, and Frank Pytlak, Cleveland catcher, standing by while the runs come pouring over. Jimmy doesn't seem to have noticed the thirst-quenching offer.

WAR ZONE TO BE EXPANDED, JAPAN WARNS

Purge Begun in Soviet Army to Bolshevize Soldiers

RUSSIAN ARMIES FACE PURGE OF LURKING ENEMIES

Red Star Tells of Uprooting of Groups In Forces

POLITICAL DRIVE

Present Purge Is Against Leaders of Previous Purges

Moscow, June 20.—(AP)— Red Star, official Army newspaper, today disclosed a purge in the political ranks of the army in the drive to Bolshevize Russia's soldiers.

The paper reported the dismissal of Jan Gamarnik, former Vice Commissar for War and Navy General B. M. Feldman and General Bulin had been "uprooted" during the past four months.

Gamarnik committed suicide a year ago, Feldman was executed for treason and the fate of Bulin, former Vice Commander of the Whites Russian Military District, is unknown.

The drive apparently was led by Lev Mekhlis, Chief of the Army's political Bureau.

"Mekhlis of the Defence Commissariat have run out of the ranks not a few lurking enemies," Red Star said, referring to a conference of party workers in the Commissariat.

Red Star's revelations followed the stories published yesterday in Pravda, organ of the central committee of the Communist Party, indicating further purging of Communist leaders in the Ukraine, Soviet outpost against a possible attack from Europe.

Ten party officials were mentioned, mostly by initials, as enemies of the people in an article by M. Burmistenko, secretary of the Central Committee of the Ukrainian Party. The latest purge, Burmistienko indicated, is directed against leaders of previous purges.

Boycott of 1940 Olympics in Japan Urged on U. S. by New York Times

New York, June 20 (CP)—The New York Times came out today for a United States boycott of the 1940 Olympic games in Japan.

The independent newspaper argued, in an editorial that the Olympic ideal of peace and goodwill was not promoted by the Berlin games of 1936 "even though the German Government saw to it that the groans of the victims in the concentration camps were not audible to the Olympic spectators." Such peace and goodwill, it continued, will not be promoted by the Tokyo meetings.

Contending the sending of United States athletes to Japan two years hence would "seem to be lending approval to a government which has lost the right to command it," The Times said: "Hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Chinese are marked for death because of their race by Tokyo Government has done. The right of an ancient and highly civilized people to be free and to lead its own life is being ruthlessly assailed. It is hypocritical, or worse, for us to make any gesture that implies a natural horror and revulsion."

LONGEST LIST OF MISHAPS IN YEAR SEEN IN WEEKEND

Twenty Persons Met Accidental Deaths By Various Means

NINE ARE DROWNED

(By The Canadian Press)

Twenty persons met accidental deaths, five when an automobile overturned into a water-filled ditch, as the week-end brought Canada's longest list of motor and drowning mishaps of the year.

Nine persons drowned, seven persons were killed in motor crashes and four others died violently. The toll threatened to mount as others remained critically ill.

Most tragic of all was the catastrophe that drowned five French-Canadian residents of Dover Township, near Chatham, Ont. Only motor accident took more than one life.

Storm Took Life

Storms which swept over Northern Ontario claimed Frank Painchaud the life of Alex Mageau, killed by lightning as he walked across a boom log in the Mattagami River, six mile, north of Timmins. Many thousands of dollars damage was done in the district.

Why the Weather?

By MAJOR A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Why snow lasts! Everyone has probably felt the force of heat on its spring, and how in summer vast fields of snow perpetually lie on high mountains. Over 200 years ago, Joseph Black, Scottish professor of chemistry, noticed that when ice melted into water, it took up a quantity of heat without changing its temperature. The "hidden" or "latent" or the "heat of fusion" which is the heat perfectly necessary to tear the molecules of ice or snow apart. It takes as much heat to just melt one pound of ice as to raise that much water 144°. Hence due to heat of fusion, the heat of the summer sun can not melt all the snow in summer from high mountain slopes.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 20.—(CP)—Synopsis—The weather has been warm over Ontario and Quebec, but conditions unsettled and showery in the Maritimes, while in the Prairie Provinces it has been warm with scattered thunderstorms occurring in southern districts. HIT-RUN SUSPECT CAPTURED AFTER TEN MILE CHASE

Arrested Man Gave Name As Wilfred Campbell, Brighton

ALLEGED CAR STOLEN

Thought by pursuing city police to be headed for No. 7 highway after he had struck a truck a team and wagon at the corner of Dundas and Church streets, shortly after six o'clock Saturday night, a man who gave his name as Wilfred Campbell, Brighton, was arrested by police constables William Evans and Douglas Ellis after a seventy mile an hour chase that ended seven miles north of the city on the Belleville-Tweed highway.

Campbell was lodged in the city jail until today, when he faced charges of leaving the scene of an accident, driving while drunk in charge of a car.

According to police the car driven by Campbell, said to be owned by Stanley Puff, Bancroft, crashed into a truck driven by Mrs. Le'a Johns, local gardener, and Mrs. Johns' daughter, Jean Painchaud, the corner of Pinnacle and Station Streets. The team was running on the street but were brought under control by Painchaud. Little damage was done to the truck. Meanwhile Campbell sped away from the scene heading for the highway.

Constables Evans and Ellis gave chase almost immediately and police notified, and acting on a "hunch" that the fugitive would seek to reach No. 7 Highway followed the Tweed road. Overtaking and speeding car which is travelling approximately seven miles the officers entered Campbell on the east side of the road. Not until they drew their revolvers did Campbell comply with their orders.

Then he was arrested and brought to the city, where formal charges were laid.

DETROIT WOMEN HURT IN CRASH

Miss Coleman and Mrs. Porie Taken to Belleville General Hospital

Two women, both of Detroit, Mich., were taken to the Belleville General Hospital last evening suffering from injuries sustained in a motor accident opposite the Trenton Airport, when their cars collided. The injured persons were Miss Grace Coleman, 28 and Mrs. Harold Porie, 30, who were in an east bound automobile driven by Harold Porie, her husband.

Miss Coleman was suffering from a fractured collar bone and lacerations about the face, concussion and facial injuries. Other passengers in Mr. Bigony's car escaped with minor injuries. The accident was investigated by Inspector Thomas H. Caldwell, while Dr. A. Wallers attended the injured persons.

Mr. Bigony was proceeding eastward on highway No. 2 when his car collided with another vehicle driven by Irwin Galna, Trenton. Mr. Galna was in the act of turning his automobile around at the Airport intersection when the collision occurred. The force of the impact drove the Galna-driven vehicle in the ditch, while that of Mr. Bigney's car swerved sideways and later turned over on its side in the centre of the pavement. The car had to be righted by passing motorists before the occupants could be released from the wreckage.

28 Executed for Treason Enrolled With Pioneers On Memorial at 'Falls'

Monument Unveiled By Prime Minister King At Niagara Falls Is Unique In Canada, Perhaps In All World—How Growth of Idea of Memorial Developed—28 Men Took Part In 1837 Rebellion

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 20 (CP)—Standing at Canada's Niagara Falls gateway, unveiled in a simple beauty of massiveness, is a monument unique in Canada and perhaps in the world. For inscribed on it is a story of the deeds and names of 28 men executed for treason.

The monument, the Clifton Memorial Arch, unveiled here Saturday by Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, part in the rebellion of 1837, a crisis in Canada's history more fruitful of result perhaps than any other. These 28, together with their leader, William Lyon Mackenzie, are now honored as pioneers of responsible government in Canada.

Vision Broadened

As the idea of the memorial took shape, vision broadened and the monument came to honor the 28 pioneers. The chief inscription reads:

"This memorial was erected to honor the memory of those men and women in this land throughout their generations who braved the wilderness, maintained the right of freemen, performed the common task without praise or glory and were the pioneers of political freedom and a system of responsible government which became the cornerstone of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

The Twenty-Eighth

On the memorial are the names of the 28 men who went to the scaffold for treason. They are:

Toronto—Peter Matthews, Samuel Lount.

Niagara District—James Morrison, Daniel Lount, Silas Fitzgerald, John Lamb, Daniel David Bedford, Sheriff Thomas Cornelius Kingsham, Joshua Gilliam Doan, Amos Perley.

Hamilton District—Silvester Lawton, Andrew Leeper, Joel Peeler, Nelson Aingerman, Jeremiah Swetz, Nils Scrotzevki Von Schoultz, Martin Wagner.

BUDGET DEBATE MAY BE SHORT

If Such Is Case House Will Prorogue About July 2nd

Ottawa, June 20—(CP)—Length of a budget debate that will start in the House of Commons today may decide whether parliamentarians will succeed in getting through their work before the unofficial deadline for prorogation—July 2.

There is still much work to be done if the session is going to be short, as it is expected to be. Government members may finish Committee of Supply and then their homes early in July. Heat often discourages protracted debate and it was 74 in the shade here yesterday.

The first speaker today will be Hon. J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South), one of the contenders for the conservative leadership who is making his debut as Conservative Financial critic, a task opposition leader Bennett has done himself for years.

Vancouver, June 20 (CP)—A stone-throwing crowd early today smashed six windows in the Federal Building where yesterday seven hundred unemployed jobless were evicted by police using tear gas and riot sticks.

The stone-throwers were among an estimated 10,000 persons at the Canadian Pacific Steamships dock as a gas-shrouded steamship left for 100 jobless, who left for Victoria at midnight. The delegation will meet Labor Minister George Pearson in Victoria to seek a work program.

The crowd gradually broke up after Harold Winch, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation member of the Legislature for Vancouver East, and H. W. Campbell, publicity head for the Relief Project Workers Union, pleaded for ordering it.

The windows broken were in the recent addition to the building and in the rear of the postoffice lobby where windows and glass wicket were shattered by the silverware

AFTER FIVE OF FAMILY DROWN WHEN CAR PLUNGES INTO CUT

Desirie Charron, Only Survivor of Tragedy Near Chatham

The family were: Charron, his wife, daughter and son-in-law and their two children.—were returning from a holiday visit with relatives in Raleigh Township. They were but a mile from home when the tragedy occurred.

Charron, shaken and nervous after the crash, could not explain how it happened. His wife was driving, he said, and the others. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin and their children, Vivian, 8, and Helen, two, were in the car.

Driving Moderately

"Suddenly the car appeared to go out of control, although we were driving at a moderate rate of speed," he said. "We slid down an embankment, the front of the car buried itself in the mud and it turned over."

Charron said he broke the glass of the left front door and managed to squeeze through the small opening. His cost his left eye in the splintered glass.

Charron found efforts to rescue others in the submerged car were futile. He ran down the road and met Clement Lee, a farmer, who went for help.

Provincial Constable Shelf and garagemen worked an hour before they could bring the car to the surface. The bodies were removed to undertaking parlors here.

Coroner Hall conducting an inquest has yet been made.

JEWS FORBIDDEN TO PURCHASE FOOD IN ARYAN SHOPS

Jewish Shops Painted Red Overnight In Berlin

PAINT SQUADS BUSY

Berlin, June 20 (AP)—For Jews of Berlin another day of persecution today extended what probably is the grim week of anti-Semitism since the Nazis came to power five years ago.

Now, after three weeks of raids and declarations of Jewish-owned stores, they found that, at least in the borough of Weissensee, they were forbidden to buy Aryan food shops.

A board-pasting crews appeared in that northern suburb, but instead of the Jewish stores that were the objects of red paint crews Aryan stores were the goal this time, Aryan proprietors, it was decided, would unhesitatingly find large red posters on their shop fronts reading: "We don't sell to Jews."

Jews, arriving at their places of business, found that Sunday night paint squads had invaded the downtown districts and had left no Jewish shop or nameplate untouched by red paint. Most of the night's raids, it seemed, concerned Sunday hair wave in downtown Berlin along Kurfurstendamm and Potsdam, two main shopping thoroughfares.

There also several thousand Jewish-owned business places in Berlin, in the downtown section, in the fashionable west end and in the poorer northern and eastern boroughs.

Intimidated and terrified by the unceasing campaign against them, many Jewish shops remained closed ed this morning.

QUEBEC GOV'T BUYS POWER CO.

Premier Duplessis Says It Will Be of Great

Montreal, June 20 (CP)—Premier Duplessis announced at a press conference today Quebec's Union Nationale Government has assumed control of Noranda Power Company, which owns and operates the power at Gatineau Power and Price Brothers which have not developed according to contract.

"I can say nothing in regard to details at the present time," said "but I am not making any misstatement of fact when I say the province will be signed and every aspect of the affair made known in the very near future."

The action—"another link in the government's policy of economic self-—would result in "very great" benefits to Quebec consumers, the premier said, "and we are now occupied with the matter of deciding that classes of consumers will gain first."

"Our move, when full details are made known, will evoke the praise of even our opponents. The question was a matter of the deepest interest to the entire province of Quebec but it required no more than common sense for its solution.

VALERA ASSURED CLEAR MAJORITY

Prime Minister of Eire Will Achieve Objective In Calling Election

Dublin, June 20 (CP)—Vote counting resume's in Eire early today with Premier De Valera needing but four of the 81 missing seats to be assured of an over-all majority in the Dail (House).

Predictions were freely made that his Fianna Fail party would receive 11 of these seats and thus have a majority of 13 over all by the election—a commanding majority over all groups in the House of 138 members.

When Sunday's counting was completed, Fianna Fail had 68 members elected, including Mr. De Valera himself and all nine of his Cabinet colleagues.

William T. Cosgrave, leader of the Fine Gael opposition party was re-elected with 38 of his followers while Labor, suffering a crushing defeat, had but five elected compared with a representation of 13 in the last House. There were seven Independents against eight in the old House.

A. BABCOCK HURT WHEN CARS COLLIDE

When the automobile in which he was riding crashed head on with another motor car, Arnold Babcock of Thurlow Township, sustained severe head lacerations and body abrasions near his home on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Babcock was later removed to the Belleville General Hospital where he was attended by Dr. H. J. Symons.

Provincial Constable William McBrien was called to the second collision at Corbyville shortly before 2 p.m. on Saturday. The officer today stated that the car driven by Mr. Babcock was riding in an automobile driven by Mrs. Lazerick, Thurlow, when collided head on with another motor car driven by W. H. Kerr, a neighbor. It is believed Mrs. Lazerick was attempting to pass another motor car travelling in the same direction, and failed to observe the oncoming Kerr motor car. Both cars stated they were badly damaged, o other serious injuries resulted, however.

Charges are pending, Constable McBrien added.

'Best Business In Five Years For A Saturday'

"Perhaps it was the weather, and maybe it was a temporary return to prosperity, but the fact remains that our sales did the best Saturday business it has done in a period of five years," the manager of a Front street store stated last Saturday night.

With Mr. and Mrs. John Public, not to mention the youth of the city and district, showing a decided tendency towards white shoes, these stocks moved at a rapidity that has not been equalled at this time of the year, for some time, he added.

A feature of Saturday's business was the number of sport model footwear in white and colors, demanded by middle-aged people." For the life of me I would think would ask for the more conservative type of shoe," the manager stated.

General Charles Lee of the American Army of Revolutionary days, loved dogs better than men. He took them with him his marches and they often ate with him at the table, sliding on their haunches in chairs.

Kid Kar Derby Entrants to Receive Crests

The popularity of the crests given by the Kinsmen's Club of Belleville to the various students teams winning the championships of their respective public schools, has resulted in a decision of the officials in charge of the Kid-Kar Derby being run here on July 5th to order crests for every youth who enters in this sports' classic of the year.

These crests will be of an original design and will designate the reason for which they are given. They will become the permanent possession of those youths who are eligible to receive them.

Marked enthusiasm formed the keynote of the meeting of officials of the club in charge of Derby operations held yesterday. Entries are coming in at a rate exceeding the fondest expectations of the executive and present indications point to a record number of youthful drivers answering the starting gun when it booms on the evening of July 5th.

DR. BERT HOWARD SPECIAL SPEAKER

Dependability Outstanding Virtue in Life, He Tells B. Y. P. U. Rally

Young People's Unions from Campbellford, Picton, Sidney and Port Hope met with the Belleville group at the annual sectional rally held in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Friday night.

Dr. Bert Howard, Principal of Albert College, special speaker for the occasion, was introduced by Rev. A. G. Sinclair. "The Christian Church needs young people with vision ability and dependability," Rev. Howard told the assembly. Drawing from his vast wealth of experience the speaker pointed out the point in his interesting and gripping manner.

It was shown that men with very little personal ability but imbued with deep loyalty and consecration to noble things by the inspiration they had given others to whom greater opportunities came.

The speaker pointed out that while some people have more ability than others service was not judged by one's degree of ability so much as the use made of that ability, likening the B.Y.P.U. convention thought "my all for Christ." Mr. Howard asserted this meant employing the utmost of one's individual ability in the service.

"Absolute dependability should be the outstanding virtue of our lives," insisted the speaker, "for ability without dependability is of little consequence."

Miss Edith Looker, speaking on behalf of the Belleville Union welcomed the visitors and in reply to welcome was given by Miss Ada Sparks of Port Hope. Solo selection was conducted by the Picton B.Y.P.U. Mr. Albert Gifford of Campbellford led a devotional hour. "He walks with me".

Miss Dorothy Pugh of Port Hope, Association representation of the Board of Religious Education, spoke appreciatively of the splendid financial support afforded the Board by the Hastings Association, of which Belleville section is a part. Rev. R. E. Hall of Port Hope, district vice-president of the Interprovincial Cabinet, outlined the 1938-9 program. Topics and instruction material for the coming year were already printed and available for distribution, it was announced. Satisfactory progress had been seen during the past year.

Mr. Gordon Bray closed with prayer, after which refreshments were served in the church basement. Organ music during the rally was provided by Mrs. Chas. Franklin.

Keith Roblin's Speedboat Capsized At Picton By Cross-Wave

Struck by a cross-wave from a passing boat as she was rounding a buoy in the Bay of Quinte near Picton on Sunday afternoon, the "Marguerite VIh", 22$-cubic inch speedboat, owned by Keith and Lawrence Roblin, capsized before she could be brought under control.

Keith Roblin, driver of the fast-travelling craft, which it is said can do better than seventy miles per hour, jumped from the speeding boat as it whirled in the water, escaping with a slight head bruise. The air compartments of the Marguerite prevented her from sinking to the bottom.

Later she was towed to the Prince Edward Yacht Club docks by other boats of the club. Deck planking of the Marguerite was torn and one hatch damaged. Her engine, recently overhauled, was thoroughly soaked and will have to be gone over again.

The Marguerite VIh" is an entrant in the famous Gold Cup races that will be run at the annual Exhibition Day regatta of the local Yacht Club on July 1.

LARGEST CROWD HEARS CONCERT

Third of Band Series Given At Victoria Park Sunday Evening

That the series of summer concerts played by the Belleville Municipal Band in Victoria Park on Sunday evening are growing in popularity, was evidenced last night by the presence of the largest crowd of the season that thronged the park to hear the splendid musical program offered by the band.

Automobiles lined the greensward near the shores of the bay at an early hour while the space reserved for parking in the centre of the park had a large quota of cars filled with occupants who enjoyed the program from the comfort of the family automobile.

Seats near the bandstand were at a premium prior to and during the concert, and the presence of a large number of hungry mosquitoes failed to drive away the Sunday night band enthusiasts.

Not only are the concerts attracting a large number of people to the park, but the improved boating and swimming facilities assembly. Drawing from his vast wealth of experience the speaker pointed out the point in an interesting and gripping manner.

HECTIC CHASE ENDS IN ARREST

John Nolan Charged With Taking a Vehicle Without Permission

Following a hectic 60-mile an hour police chase around city streets shortly after 1.30 a.m. today, P. C. Arnott arrested a man who police say is Nolan Nolan of this city, after the truck which he was driving crashed into a tree at the intersection of Richardson and Grier streets. Today Nolan appeared in local police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at which time the accused Nolan pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle truck, the property of the Modern Cleaners, without the owner's consent. Nolan was remanded in custody until Friday.

Shortly before 1.30 a.m. today local police received a message from Thos. Hutchinson, proprietor of the Modern Cleaners Ltd., to the effect one of the company trucks had been taken without his consent. The night watchman at the Modern Cleaners telephone police with the name of the person he last saw in the vehicle, Nolan being in the company garage. Later P. C. Arnott while patrolling the streets of the vehicle, found it being driven east on College street. A hectic chase around the block ensued, the truck swerving to the left in an effort to apparently "shake" the police car. The truck failed to negotiate the Grier and Strachan street intersection and crashed into a maple tree, the driver jumping from the vehicle and running into a nearby private house. Constable Arnott gave chase and later apprehended a man who police say is John Nolan of this city, also an employee of the Modern Cleaners Ltd.

When questioned by police before police court, Nolan contended he did not take the vehicle, but refused to comment further. The truck was examined by the chassis, Mr. Hutchinson announced at noon. Nolan was held in custody, following his plea of "not guilty".

Police Blotter

Increased motor accidents were witnessed in the city over the weekend as heavy motorized vehicle traffic was seen throughout the entire Bay of Quinte area. Several serious accidents were reported while others, not as serious, resulted in minor tender and body damage, with no injuries reported.

Shortly after midnight Saturday, Constable Evans and Arnott investigated an accident near the Albert College where A. J. Rinehard, Owen Sound, claimed his motor car had been sideswiped by a car driven by Charles McLaughlin, Toronto. The latter driver, who was attending a dent convention at the O.S.D., made it known to the officers he had been temporarily blinded by glaring headlights prior to the crash. The matter was amicably settled.

Donald Leslie, Ameliasburg district, reported the theft of his bicycle to police Sunday morning. Young Leslie parked his bicycle near Bridge Street United Church on Saturday morning, but upon his return the 'bike' was missing.

Fred McCoy, 24 Parker street, reported a number of boys were racing and running over his garden sun destroying the fruits and vegetables. Constables Arnott and Ellis later caught six local lads who were found nearby and upon questioning the boys, ordered the alleged offenders to report to Chief Kidd after school hours today.

Early today the police investigated a break-in at the premises of the Canada Bread Company. Entrance had been effected through a rear window, but only pies stolen, police ascertained.

British Scientists To Visit District

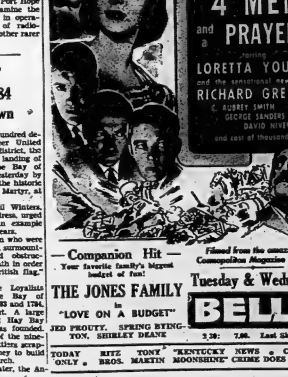
Headed by Lord Leverhulme, a distinguished party of scientists and research chemists from the British Isles will visit this section on Thursday of this week, it was told to the radium refineries of the Eldorado plant at Port Hope. The party will visit the section in a special car. It is also known where a stop over will be made in Belleville.

Among those expected to arrive are Sir Charles Bedaux, consultant of the department of scientific research for the British government; Dr. J. J. Fox, head of the British government laboratories; Dr. Alan Cohen, president of the Institute of Chemical Engineering. A delegation of United States scientists, including Dr. R. W. Crum of the United States Government Highway Planning Board, and Prof. Marston T. Bogart of New York, will accompany the visiting experts from Britain.

In addition to studying the processing of radium at the Port Hope plant, the party will examine the production methods now in operation in the extraction of radioactive lead, uranium and other rarer minerals.

Mark Loyalists' Landing in 1784 At Adolphustown

Attended by over five hundred descendants of the pioneer United Empire Loyalists of the district, the 154th anniversary of the landing of the first settlers in the Bay of Quinte was celebrated yesterday by a special service held in the historic church of St. Alban the Martyr, at Adolphustown.



The Rev. Canon Cecil Winters, Picton, in a brilliant address, urged the citizens to take an example from their Loyalist forebears.

"These men and women who were true to their traditions, surmounted all difficulties and obstacles that lay in their path in order to remain under the British flag," he said.

"The United Empire Loyalists settled throughout the Bay of Quinte district during 1783 and 1784, the speaker pointed out. A large number settled around Hay Bay where Adolphustown was founded. During the early part of the nineteenth century these settlers scrapped together enough money to build the first Anglican Church.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, June 26 (AP)—A repression in the stock market awakened from a long sleep today and posted gains for all of Saturday's leaders running to four or more points.

"It was the best rallying perform, since in nearly six weeks and virtually all categories participated in some extent. Volume expanded on the upturn but the ticker tape had no difficulty in keeping pace with orders. Transfers were approximately 1,000,000 shares.

Profit taking frequently was in evidence, but sold at a little appreciably easily and prices were around best levels near the final hour.

Wall Street lifted its head out of the pessimistic market and today and bid industrial stocks up 1 to more than 4 points.

Volume jumped up on the rebound with the first hour's turnover of 250,000 shares, the best for this period since May 27. There was a subsequent slow-down on profit taking, but prices generally were around their best near the fourth hour.

Favorites included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Anaconda, Kennecott, Texas Corporation and General Electric.

Majority of Canadian issues showed gains running up to around ½ point. In front was Bell Canada followed closely by Hiram Walker, while numerous issues were reinforced by Canadian Pacific and Dominion Canada 4's were a trifle higher.

National Biscuit hit a new high for the year, but most other specialties still had some way to travel before emulating this issue.

Gold showed much as Homestake, Dome and McIntyre lagged as dollar devaluation talk faded.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 26— The Toronto market closed higher all round today, in keeping with strong tone New York tone. Industrial issues were slow in getting into fair but afternoon action by the utilities, building issues, steels and senior oils at improvement of 1 to 2 points. Profit-taking trimmed the gains in the mining section in the last hour but while the western oils held the bulk of their gains, some of the industrials showed more action later. A bullish note in the New York tone helped in the attempt to harden the buying side.

International Nickel advanced a point. Noranda touched a new high for the year at 85 and Wabi-Kitchuet was up 26 cents to 84.26. Other base metals improved and the oil-vens rated higher.

In the gold list the juniors were the beneficiaries of buying at firmer prices.

Steels, building issues, utilities, and senior oils were favored in the industrial section. Imperial advanced to 18½ and International Peter to 34½. Two-point gains appeared for Consolidated and Dominion Tar pfd. Western oils picked up at the early afternoon and the tone was strong Calgary, Dominion, Royalite, Oxallo and Brown.

MARKET COMMENT

The rumour of an increase in the price of gold continues, and apprec-iable buying has been noted in some of the senior golds. It is reported that this buying is not emanating from the rank and file of investors but from informed and powerful institutions, thus lending color to the prevailing gold rumours. It is also stated that large orders for the gold stocks are in the market just under current quotations.

As yet the so-called junior gold stocks have been neglected, but once these issues get under way they become very interesting producers themselves. The present cycle is for a play in the senior, then the juniors and finally in the more speculative prospects of new productions. Everything stands out, namely, that everyone is in a "buying and producing" and this in time should be translated into a strong and active mining market.

One of the most encouraging signs, from a business viewpoint, is the gain in the past week of Noranda's index of the physical volume of business which is now 5.9 for the week ended June 4 to 51.8 for the week ended June 11th. This is the first gain for two months and may indicate a reversal of the downward trend.

During the next ten weeks it is possible that other weekly business indices will approach their 1922-23 lows. Consequently, there is some tangible justification that American business has reached bottom. Since the beginning of June commodity prices have struggled up from their lows. There is also some concrete indication of a revival of investment interest in high grade offerings, and the stock market refuses to follow business to deeper levels.

POLICE COURT

Wilfred Campbell, 28, who gave Brighton as his home address today was sentenced to spend thirty days in the common jail by Magistrate J. F. Deroche in police court after being convicted of drunken driving.

Campbell was arrested by local police following a complaint relative to his alleged driving on Front by the city on Saturday, but only after a lengthy chase by the police car. "Was there any accident in connection with this charge?" asked Magistrate Deroche. "No, your Worship," K.C. "Yes," replied Chief Kidd before Ellis Hornsby passed the fourteen day term.

Margaret Colby and Gerald Odell, both of Bloomfield, were jointly charged with bigamy, a charge arising out of their marriage in Kingston on Dec. 1927. The Colby woman entered a plea of guilty, Crown Attorney Payne representing the prosecution assuming the court that Mrs. Colby had been married two years ago at Havelock. "My client was informed by the late Police Magistrate and Justice of the Peace in Havelock, that provided she did not live with her husband for a period of five years, it would be all right for her to marry again," Mr. Payne said. Crown Attorney Payne and Mr. Donnan went into conference over the matter, later which time Magistrate White Colby woman entered a plea of guilty and was given one day's imprisonment. The charge against Ontiment, however, was postponed for one week.

"On my own witness' testimony the prosecution has proved that I caused innocent, but in the future I will have nothing to do with the complainants in these assault charges pay the costs," commented Magistrate Deroche to Mr. Worship had dismissed a charge of assault against a Bay of Quinte resort who had previously denied the charges preferred by a neighbor.

Reformation, 400 Years Ago, Celebrated by Bible Society

Four Centuries Have Passed Since Bible in English Placed in Parish Churches — Belleville Society Holds Annual Meeting

The four hundredth anniversary of the placing of the Bible in English in the parish churches in England was marked in Belleville by services conducted by the Rev. A. W. Hanford, fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of England, and a missionary who served for years in Nigeria, and by the Rev. Dr. Amuti, general secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Canada, both of whom addressed congregations of city churches during the day.

It was in 1538 that King Henry VIII issued a royal injunction directing the setting up in parish churches of "the whole Bible of largest volume in English" with instructions to the clergy to "provoke, stir, exhort every person to read the same."

Mr. Amuti pointed out that this event has had untold influence for good on art, government, law, literature, music, and on the whole character of the English speaking race and of the world. The publication in London of 1611 published by authority of King James, the Bible was largely persuasive in its influence. It is 154 years since the British and Foreign Bible Society was founded in London, England, with the intention of translating the Bible into all known languages as possible. The total of languages in which the Bible has been translated is 537, and of these 400 with translations of kindred societies the other 137 are in which the Bible is now available is over one thousand. Twenty new translations have been added this year. The circulation of the past year has been enormous. The total circulation takes the total publication to 920,000, 000 volumes. In Canada last year, the seven thousand copies circulated. Naturally there are decreases in the circulation of the Bible owing to the attention of the people, and the fact that there are so many new books on the market, but an increase in Austria, 101,000, in the circulation and a decrease of 68,000, which is an increase of 33,000.

Belleville Branch of the Bible Society held its annual meeting in the Bible House, Campbell street, with the drew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, Judge G. Hamilton, president, being in the chair.

The financial year in Belleville totalled $146.19.

It was decided that each church appoint two assistant secretaries to act as collectors.

Officers were elected as follows: Hon. president, Rev. A. L. Geen; president, Vernon Weir; secretary, Miss Ella Wills; treasurer, Norman Edward.

9,900,000 INJURED IN ACCIDENTS

Last year more than twice as many lives were snuffed out in accidents of all kinds in the United States than the number of Americans who died in the World War. Practically ten millions, to be exact, nine million nine hundred thousand persons were injured in the year, at least one member of every fourth family.

It was not the automobile that did all this. Cars killed 39,500 and injured 1,350,000, a huge enough total while the economic loss by car accidents was one and seven-tenths billions of dollars.

Yet in spite of the mammoth total of all sorts of accident deaths, the number decreased 4 per 100,000 population. The drop was due to lack of heat fatalities.

108 persons were killed daily in motor vehicle crashes in the United States.

Work accidents killed 19,500 persons, an increase of 1,000 deaths, probably as a result of more employment.

One brighter spot in the report is that the deaths of children dropped 8 per cent from 1936. One the other hand adult deaths increased.

"AS MANY CHANCES AS EVER"

It is thirty-five years since Henry Ford incorporated his well-known company and he says that the door of opportunity "is as wide open as it ever was." He adds, "The same door isn't open, but there are just as many chances as there ever were to get ahead." He also said young men could speed up improvements in the business by learning their eyes to the land."

Another prophecy of his is that car bodies will be made out of plastics largely from farm crops, which already are being used in some automobile parts.

He speaks of several doors of opportunity, that on the land, that of invention, and that of synthetic chemistry in the world of business.

Many persons are so used to the one door they know that familiarity or lack of imagination to see the other doors of opportunity creates one of the problems of today. Many men are unfit for new jobs because of being accustomed to the old jobs, some of which may have disappeared with the coming of the full swell of the age of mechanism. On the other hand there are those who can make their way and can actually create a new type of business because they have the zeal and imagination.

In the nature of man there will always be the door of opportunity but the tragedy is that many miss it.

Mr. Ford is one man who has found the door of opportunity and is the type who can seize the occasion to open the door of opportunity.

ADVISED TO FARM

A few days ago the graduates of a school were told to buy a little land and start farming, because farming is the most stable and essential of industries.

With hundreds and thousands of young persons being graduated from schools these days the reference to farming comes at an important time when it is likely to be considered.

Whether these students of the school in question follow this advice or not they and the country in which they live should not forget their relationship to the farm.

Scientific farming has come and will more and more play a large role in the life of nations.

THE OLD SLATE BLACKBOARD

New York has followed the tradition to the present day of slate blackboards in schools. It has been the theme of song and story, and is remembered with the old time slates and slate pencils scholars of another age used when scribblers were not.

But there is a possibility of a change—a spritely white or even green glassboard will probably take its place in that city.

The reason for the change lies in part in the increased cost for the maintenance of a glassboard would be less.

The old slate blackboard is attacked on several grounds—that it absorbs light, the greyish blackness mars the light in the room, causing needless eye-strain and lighter hues are favored. Besides the officials believe that black chalk on a white board will give better results.

But what should the new board be called? A "blackboard" or a slate blackboard or a glass blackboard, or a white blackboard? It would appear likely the "white blackboard" is to be the official name, though one official has preferred "white writing board".

Officials claim that the contrast of black chalk on a white surface is greater than white on black.

In brokerage offices a greenboard or a blackboard, but not of slate, is used in listing quotations.

THE WILD ROSE

In obscure and wayside places,
Remotest countryside,
Roses bloom, their pink, flushed faces
Kissed by winds that wander wide;
Bright and modest is their smiling,
Fresh the fragrance that they fling,
Weary hearts from care begwiling,
Sweet the solace that they bring.

Thou, dear heart, whose toil seems lowly,
Love and labor all in vain,
Though thou seem'st to toil obscurely,
Great may be thy need and gain;
As the wilding rose, whose glory
Gladdens all the vale and hill,
So mayest thou, who toilest obscurely
Scatter blessings at thy will.

A REPORT IN WORDS OF ONE SYLLABLE

was what he wanted, said President Roosevelt in appointing a commission. More reports in words of ONE SYLLABLE would be appreciated by everybody. Highfalutin' words and long and tangled and involved sentences may make grand 'ritin' but they also make plenty work for lawyers, and many headaches. The best writing is the plainest writing which anyone who can read can understand.

WAGES HIGHER AND PRICES LOWER, and back to the land for the young men—constitute a cheerful prescription for recuperation to cure the ills of unemployment—in fact to banish unemployment—handed out by that industrial giant Henry Ford, whom neither depression or recession seems to affect. Observing the thirty-fifth anniversary of the inception of the Ford Motor Company, Henry Ford said that "the door of opportunity is as wide open as it ever was. The same door isn't open but there are just as many chances as there ever were to get ahead." Predicting that a new era of prosperity is in the offing, Henry Ford expressed the belief that the upturn in business would come as soon as "the farmers that he returned to a policy of low prices and high wages, instead of high prices and low wages." Young men, he said, could speed the improvement of business by "turning their eyes toward the land." Eventually, said Mr. Ford, the Ford Company hopes to make its automobile bodies out of plastics produced largely from farm crops which already are being used in some automobile parts.

MUCH OF THE MISERY IN THE WORLD,

caused by unemployment, may be traced to the rush from the land to factories, its cause to be in crowded cities rather than in the grat open spaces of the country. Agriculture the basic industry, has created many other industries, which in turn have drained the farm of much of its best former material. Farming is the most interesting profession of all, and yet you will see good farmers slaving in a hot, dirty factory at dull, uninteresting jobs when they could be enjoying the greatest of all vocations out in the pure invigorating air of God's great outdoors. Note the graduates from Collegiate Institutes—fifty-fifty farm and city bred. How many will choose agriculture for a profession? Some graduation class recorded three out of a thousand to choose agriculture. If the trend of modern education is to lure young people away from the farms there is something decidedly wrong. "Back to the land," said Mr. Ford, is the solution of many problems, and he is opening vast tracts of land where young men and women are being instructed in modern farming methods—city lads and lassies learning to become farmers while farm-born lads and lassies seem to be having their mind drawn away from the farm by the bright lights of the city and the stiff collars, boiled shirts, and fine clothes which seem to be an essential part of going collegiate.

Not "Having Any"

After having slaved all his life to keep his head and his wife's head above water, a poor man hit upon an invention, patented it, and sold it for a large sum. "At last, my dear," he cried to his wife, "you will be able to buy yourself some decent clothes!" "I'll do nothing of the kind,' retorted his wife. "I'll buy just the same as other women are wearing."

The luxuries supplied are a bath room, hot air furnace and gas. The cost of the building when completed will be a little over $7,000.00

"I was given 300 feet of film, a camera and operator and Miss Louise Fazenda, and told to return that evening with a picture.

"Naturally I went to Santa Monica Pier, because that seemed to be the nearest place associated with fish. You see, making movies in those days was not quite as technical as now. I filmed three hundred feet of comedy with Miss Fazenda struggling with fish, landing a chinook and then discovered I had two hundred more feet to go.

"In those days that wasn't much of a calamity. When you needed additional footage you turned your camera in any direction and touched the crank. It happened that a bathing beauty contest was on at the time playing ball.

"At that time, I thought their bathing costumes were a trifle bold but the sun was going down. I had little time to argue high morals and ethics. We ground on and soon the girls were forming human pyramids, and finally I called for Miss Fazenda. She was to be caught in the middle of the pyramid.

"I sat in back of them," says Cline, "very much afraid for the worst. But I got my picture and got to the Bathing Beauties. 'They're great!' he said, 'You ought to make a series of them!'

"That's what I had in mind a long time ago," said the judge-picture thinking Mr. Sennett, not averse to the idea, called me and asked me to call them the Mack Sennett Bathing Beauties."

"I didn't realize then, and not fully until a few months later, what an important part Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties were to take in our national life. Discovering actresses was a new profession to sell the public more fish, these girls were responsible for a wonderful institution. More so than anything else, they did away with the fallacy that beauty had to be thin, and made women's bathing suits the oddest garments. Consequently human beings have ever worn. They accomplished a lot more. I think became comedy was the approach.

"Two months after the birth of these beauties, the world's beaches were overrun with bathing beauties in short, attractive attire. Beaches literally became beautiful.

"Mack Sennett had the series which lasted for some ten years. Each picture would gross around for 1,500 to 2,500 percent on each investment.

"Mack recalls, quite definitely, that the first Bathing Beauty film was entitled 'Mabel's Blunder.'

Man Mountain Dean, bearded behemoth of ring fame, arrived in Hollywood this week and his featured bow in motion pictures.

Dean reported for his movie debut with his wife, formerly Doris Dean, whom he left in Norcross, Ga., their home town, to run his gasoline filling station during his absence. The wrestler is a candidate for the Georgia legislature, and will return East to resume his political campaign as soon as he completes his role in "The Gladiator."

Worthen and Shayer have Astaire began the creation of his dance routines on March 7th, although the picture will not be before the cameras until May 9th. As in all other Astaire-Rogers films, the dance numbers in "Carefree" will be filmed with several cameras, and later various scenes, long and angle shots will be taken, to be cut into the complete routine sequence.

Much Heart Disease Can Be Prevented

Some one quite naturally asks the question, "At heart disease stands first, after the age of 35 as a cause of death, why should there not be a campaign to prevent heart disease as there is for cancer, tuberculosis, diabetes, and so many diseases of childhood?"

Men, who are the major portion of the wage earners are harder on the heart. Well, at least, one out of every five men dies of heart disease?

Dr. Joseph Pasgren Bishop, Jr., in Hygeia, says that 75 per cent of the cases of heart disease are due to three ailment (a) hardening of the arteries—40 per cent. (b) rheumatism—25 per cent. and (c) syphilis —10 per cent. The other twenty-five per cent of cases are due to being born with heart disease, infectious nerves, and too much or too little thyroid juice.

That is, with the knowledge that three out of four cases of heart disease are caused by conditions or ailments that can be prevented, there is thus something that can be done to prevent heart disease.

How can hardening of the arteries be prevented?

"Prevention of the hardening of the arteries type of heart disease lies in slowing up the wear and tear of the waistline (many overweight people have heart disease and high blood pressure), and also in the waste of energy, limiting the trash piled and controlling the diet. Take regular exercise and if you have passed the age of forty, go slow on exercise, take less exercise as the less work."

That is, live safely.

In regard to rheumatism, have teeth and tonsils examined, and try to prevent other infections.

Syphilis heart disease is 100 per cent -preventable. Neglect in the beginning may mean heart disease twenty years later.

If the heart is too rapid or too slow, due to the lack or too much thyroid juice, the removal of the thyroid gland or giving thyroid extract will cause the heart to beat at the normal rate.

Prevention of nervous heart disease means planning a quiet life with calmness of spirit.

I believe the above suggestions point to one logical conclusion and that is that just as we have our car or home kept in order, that we see our physician and dentist regularly. We should also learn at a very early older to try to live 'safely', that is within our strength, friends can rejoice. You have not learned what fear of falsecoin is. You have not learned to hide, fear heart or disguise your small acts by deceit. Nothing has yet whispered to you that there might be men and women in the world of vile witches in the hut old days who might wish you harm. Words spoken in anger or threats remain in a unknown language to you. Your remembered years have not yet been burned to ash, nor nourished your gallant spirit so you are ready for six and for what ever trials and trials the next year may hold.

For All Fathers

Why does your father address you thus publicly instead of more privately counsel you of his undying affection and regard? There are several reasons, the most important being that he can't help but remember when he was a boy, for all fathers of little girls and for girls and boys now grown up who may remember when they were six and may perhaps recall some of its childish ways and joys, too, his vanity tells that some time in the future when he is no longer here you may read these words and that they may recall to you things too sacred to mention in the ink and excitement of growing up into woman hood. But sense and experience tells him more than that. If some day you do find this yellowed column in a box of clippings you may read a bit of it and smile a little and say, with pardonable pride, "Daddy my father wasn't such a bad old egg. Or maybe you'll remember that Father's sentimentalist in a way, I suppose" and be relieved that it is all that fathers ask; and if only they could be sure of it pairings would be made easier.

The First Coming of Age

And Partly for writing and again speaking of other fathers and mothers as well, so say goodbye to one very happy period in your life and to look back on it and look in which you were simply a daughter. You have now become an adult, with a great sense of duty with its own special cargo—that which you have carried. When this happens about all that the father and mother can do it to watch from the shore and look for bright sails as they vanish toward that invisible port beyond their ken. And pray, even if wordlessly, for a happy voyage as they never pray for a safe return to their lives. So before all this great company of friends I wish you a specific and ritual as we have done so many times.

For My Daughter Who is 6 Years Old

By J. V. McAREE
in Globe & Mail

Good morning, Miss Muffet, and many happy returns. This is the day you have been looking forward with an intensity of excitement that was denied to both Easter and Christmas. Though you say that your birthday and Easter and Christmas are your three great days, this is the real one. For the next six months your father will tell you every morning that only so many days there are till Christmas or Easter. But after Christmas he told you how many days it was until Easter. But after Easter he wonders why the approach of your sixth birthday should fill you with such delighted tremors. It wasn't quite like that when you were four going on five, was it or has he forgotten? No, I don't think he could forget anything mentous happened in your life. You could not have been more eager for today if it were the day you were to become a bride, and your father hopes that when he reads you a fairy story tonight just before you go to sleep thinking the day has been worth waiting for, and that in time of disappointment will cloud its close. Nothing will really matter to you because today and that you have put behind you the formidable mile-post of six and that will go on record as a red letter.

Well of Happiness

You didn't realize then, and not fully until a few months later, when an important birthday came, that the years are something like a well of happiness. Each one is a thing in time, or if it isn't just part of space. To it is just something to put behind you as quickly as possible so that you can get—where? Not to yet learned that the journey is better than the arrival, just than the place at the end of the road, unless, of course, it is the place where lovers and the accomplices of things you've not learned are many more than you have known. Your father would, if he could, shield you from learning most of those things that have been so priceless thing that later you may forget, and that is the priceless thing called thing else. It, is the gift of being happy by yourself. You are a very sociable jolly little soul, given graciously to hospitality as we all know, but there are times you must be entertained. You have found everything mighty interesting since it is just yourself—that can provide you with contentment and joy, and that is the secret of an empty room.

She's Ready For It"

We agreed yesterday in a solemn moment that it was the last day you would be five, and another day the night you crossed that awful threshold. Well, at least the governess said then, "She's ready for it," and I'm not going to say that is not quite right just how a little girl gets ready to be six and assume the proper responsibilities, but as you have never failed to meet your responsibilities to date, you may be sure you will not fail now. Four and five we can have a reasonable belief that six will not be a disappointment. There are some omens in which all your friends can rejoice. You have learned what fear of falsecoin is. You have learned to hide, fear heart or disguise your small acts by deceit. Nothing has yet whispered to you that there might be men and women in the world of vile witches in the hut old days who might wish you harm. Words spoken in anger or threats remain in a unknown language to you. THE QUEEN'S GUESTS

Eighty unemployed in the Clyde Valley, each chosen because of a relative, are to have a day at the Royal Agricultural as the guests of Queen Elizabeth.

This is the happy sequel to the visit paid by the King and Queen to community centres at Lanarkshire.

Queen Elizabeth has written to Lord Nigel Douglas-Hamilton, the Secretary for special affairs in Scotland, enclosing her gift of £40, and expressing the hope that the work she saw being carried on in the Clyde Valley will be such that 30 unemployed members from each of the four centres should, during the week, also be her guests. —London Observer

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed In the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour two pounds of digestive juices into your bowels daily. If this bile flows freely, your food digests and the nourishing part is absorbed in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere hint of mercurial does "chug-a-long" at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes these gentle, sure Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two vital organs working right. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists.

SUGGESTIONS OF LEGACIES

Information Sometimes Useful in Hands of Debt Collecting Agencies

Baiting the victim with suggestions that an unexpected legacy awaits him, or sending information as to his correct identity is given, in a new form of debt collection, to a bet that has invaded Canada via the United States.

Typical of many cases reported to the Toronto Better Business Bureau are those in which are the complaints of Toronto men and women who have received letters from so-called "service bureaus" in Chicago and Kansas City. These letters ably mention that a sum of money awaits disposal from the estate of a person bearing the same name as the recipient of the letter, and that apparently the recipient need only provide identification and certain other data to obtain the money.

Information sought is equally useful in the hands of debt collection agencies however and investigation carried out by the Better Business Bureau, operating in the United States, in association with the Toronto Bureau, have uncovered an elaborate scheme in that connection. Once in the hands of the so-called "service bureau" the information supplied by the victim can be, it is passed back to Canada into the possession of collection agencies, the agency and the United States "service bureau" sharing the profits from any collections made through the bait letters. Of course, nothing further is heard of the supposed "estate."

83 CONFIRMED AT ST. MICHAELS

His Grace Archbishop O'Brien Officiates At Ceremony

His Grace Archbishop O'Brien arrived at St. Michael's Parish on Saturday afternoon when he was welcomed by the Academy choir which was massed on the lawn in front of the church, and also by the junior band playing in their usual excellent style. The Archbishop then repaired to the church where he examined in Catechism the class to be confirmed.

On Sunday morning he was accompanied in procession to the church by a number of Sanctuary boys and a guard of honor composed of Fourth Degree Knights.

Sacrament Administered.

After the ten-thirty Mass the Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to a class of eighty-three, composed of forty-six girls, thirty-four boys and three adults.

The Archbishop then spoke, explaining the beauty and need of religion in every person, not only in the individual citizen but in nations also.

"The world cannot get along without God nor can it afford to ignore Almighty God."

He explained the Sacrament of Confirmation and the gifts of the Holy Ghost, emphasizing particularly the gifts of fortitude and piety: fortitude, which also is the religious virtue of life up to his religion, whether at home or abroad and to respect the God-given commandments which he should at all times observe faithfully. The gift of piety was also stressed by the Archbishop, which means not only actual practice of one's religion but also inclines a person to be interested and participate in everything that pertains to God's church.

In closing his address the Archbishop besought the blessing of God upon those who were confirmed, their parents, home, and upon all the citizens of Belleville.

Singing Beautiful.

The singing by a choir of sixty-five boys and girls of the Academy was very beautiful. During Mass the children sang "Ecce Sacerdos" (Gounod), "Kyrie" (Gounod), "Angelus", "Marzo", "Cor Jesu" (Selected), "Agnus Dei" (Gounod), also the Confirmation hymn, "My God Accept," (Montain), "Come Holy Ghost" and "Holy God We Praise Thy Name".

Among the clergy present yesterday were Very Rev. Dean O'Reilly, Trenton, Very Rev. Dean Quinlan, Tweed, Rev. Father Carey, Read, Rev. E. M. Leacy, Deseronto, Rev. L. J. Byrne, Roslin, and Rev. J. J. O'Neil, Trenton.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Four Men and a Prayer" and "Love on a Budget"

Hollywood has made "Four Men and a Prayer," and the translation of this popular story, read by millions in book and magazine serial, promises to provide a number of surprises when it reaches the screen.

Of primary interest, comes the report that the film has not deviated from the original plot. Go when citizens of Belleville and vicinity visit the Belle theatre starting the scheduled run of "Four Men and a Prayer" on Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily they will find that this 20th Century-Fox production has passed up all the usual saccharine cliches of the love motif for the noblest of human instincts ...the unswerving faith of four sons in their father's honor.

Light-Hearted Loretta

Beautiful gay Loretta Young is practically the only feminine role in the girl whose love for one of the brothers secures for a glowing beacon through clouds of intrigue ...and even danger of her.

Her romantic interest is for pick-and Greene, which means that Belle theatre patrons will have their first glimpse of the sensational new British star, Greene.

Greene, however, along with Geo. Saunders seen at the Belle last week as Dolores Del Rio's leading man in "International Settlement" and David Niven and William Henry are the four men who forsake in their careers to lend their services to the world the menace which cashiered their beloved British army, Surgery Smith, out of the army in disgrace and force brought death to a great soldier.

Cast Is Large

In a cast of 3,000, encompassing the characters of 21 nations of the world, this picture has been assembled with all the sweep and grandeur of the book by David Garth and in the capable hands of John Ford, it has been placed upon the screen.

J. Edward Bromberg, John Carradine, Alan Hale, Reginald Denny, Berton Churchill and Barry Fitzgerald.

Change of Heart, Penny

A jealous hubby, a golf crazy wife and a mad-acting comedy play-boy start a three cornered fight to the finish in "Change of Heart" announced as the added feature attraction on the same program, and what a funny, funny fighting finish it is.

This 20th Century-Fox production featuring Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, is a great mirth-ful of fun, punctuated by conjugal warfare and connubial reconciliation of all places on the links of a golf club.

"Change of Heart" features Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen and includes a splendid supporting cast led by Lyle Talbot, Delmar Watson and Jane Darwell.

The Belle News of the day will be exhibited on the same program.

"Kentucky" Tonight

Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver and the Ritz Brothers in another big attraction at the Belle tonight for the last times in the uproarious comedy-fantasy-romance featuring, in its supporting cast are Slim Summerville, John Carradine, Wally Vernon, Berton Churchill and Eddie Collins.

2 Grand Shorts

Three grand short treats precede the feature attraction in another timely and compelling "Crime Does Not Pay" picture exposing the quasi-glorious dangers of various practices resulted in 100,000 deaths last year plus millions of dollars spent in worthless cancer remedies. Walt Disney's latest gay color cartoon "Donald Duck's Better Self" and the Belle Latest World News Events.

Ninth drowning victim was Joe Bretsch, 30-year-old farmer who was bathin a pond near a dam at Wilkie, Sask.

Samuel Mayer of Detroit died in an ambulance near London, Ont., just after the car in which he was riding skidded and turned over when the driver, Elias Silberscheine of Detroit, applied the brakes because of a soft tire. Silberscheine and his driver were seriously injured.

Death Accidental

First fatality reported from the Maritimes was the death of James MacAulay, coal miner, whose bicycle was struck by an automobile at Sydney Mines, N.S. A coroner's jury declared death accidental.

A similar verdict was returned Saturday night by a jury inquiring into the death of two-year-old Gisele Rioux, drowned in a pail by a motor truck at Trois Pistoles, Que.

William Turner, retired Buffalo mail clerk, died in hospital of injuries suffered when his automobile in which he was riding, driven by Fred A. Vetter of Buffalo, collided with another and crashed into a pole near Port Erie, Ont.

Gower Fleming of Cornwall, Ont., was killed when a car crashed into him as he was repairing the road. A collision his own machine had had with another.

Recommendation was made by a coroner's jury that Frederick Alexander's driving licence be cancelled after a truck he was driving, allegedly with faulty brakes, killed five-year-old Doreen Sorckoff at Saint John, N.B., Saturday.

One Suffocated

At Magazi Falls, Ont., yesterday George Armstrong was suffocated when fire swept his home. His body was found in an upstairs hall by firemen.

Harry Mullins, Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission employee at Riverside, Ont., mistook a live wire for a dead one and was fatally burned. J. Tsumura, injured in a logging accident, died in hospital at Victoria.

Good Advice About Constipation!

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do for constipation is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't bother with makeshift remedies. Find out what's causing it and correct it.

Chances are you won't have to look very far, if you eat the things most people eat. Most of them are pretty much "bulk". And "bulk" doesn't necessarily mean lots of fibre. It means a kind of food that "fills" your intestines and helps to their movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will like you as a dance and parties.

BUT, if you are tense, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

STAPLEY—SCOTT

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Moira, when Ida Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Scott, became the bride of Mr. Lorne Harry Stapley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stapley of the late Harry Stapley of Stirling.

The ceremony took place under an arch of evergreen and roses in pink and white. Wedding music was played by Mrs. (Rev.) W. J. Scott and Rev. W. J. Scott performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ashes of roses and sand crepe, with white hat and accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink and sweet peas. Mrs. Archie Bailey, Rawdon, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a yellow and brown flowered crepe with white hat and accessories. Her bouquet was of Talisman roses.

Mr. Archie Bailey of Rawdon was groomsman.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. W. Reynolds of Stirling sang "I Love You Truly".

A reception was served after the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a navy sheer flowered silk with shoulder bouquet of pansies, and the mother of the groom a navy sheer crepe with corsage of roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Syracuse, New York and other points. The bride wore for travelling a frock of navy triple gleer with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Rawdon.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Forsythe and Wilson of Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey of Rawdon, and Mrs. Dracup and daughter of Belleville.

W.C.T.U.

There was a splendid attendance at the regular meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held in Y.M.C.A. Parlour, the President, Mrs. J. Moore presiding.

The Spirit of the Master was present from the first note of the devotional which was so wonderfully portrayed by Mrs. (Rev.) R. E. Newman. Her remarks were based on 8th Chapter of Mark, where Peter acclaimed Jesus as the Christ the Son of God. The Temperance situation was similar to Peter, a failure in the midst of discouragement.

He recovered when he surrendered everything to his Heavenly Father. Thus must the Temperance cause surrender all to God.

Miss Phyllis May and Mrs. Doolittle delighted the meeting with a vocal duet.

Forty-six dollars was realized from the dinner and supper given the day of Temperance Conference, May 30th.

A vote of appreciation was sent in the Provincial Board of Directors for the use of the Church, for the Conference. The corresponding secretary read a letter from Miss E. Wright, in reference to the First Training School on Temperance to be held in Willard Hall.

Plans were arranged for the annual W.C.T.U. picnic at Oak Lake at which Dr. Beaven of Rochester, will speak.

The fourth annual y encampment of the W.C.T.U., which is to be held, received its share of consideration.

Three hundred and fifty Temperance Posters have been made or the children of the Belleville Schools.

One has to acknowledge the failure of the League of Nations in some things but it has succeeded in settling a number of minor disputes that might have led to war elsewhere. Also it has stimulated international co-operation in combatting great social evils, such as the drug traffic and the White Slave question.

Gifts For the Graduate

I My daughter is graduating from high school. Can you suggest suitable gifts for her to give to some of her girl friends who are graduating?

S—Would these gifts be left at the home of her friends, or how should they be presented?

S—Are gifts of flowers customary for college on the day of graduation?

H.

1—Costume jewelry is a favorite gift for graduation this year. Girls love, too, the colorful purses that either alone or ensembled with sports hat or belt or purse and handkerchief. Many girls say a locket could find a set of this kind with the class colors effectively (and fascinating.) A pencil or fountain pen (or the set) is a welcome gift, made charmingly individual by having the facsimile of the girl's signature imprinted on it. Or, any desk or travelling accessory is also a good choice. And, during the collegiate days of the graduate, many suggested books that the girls would like to possess personally. Consider, too, a purse for day use, or an evening bag. A large clothes brush, monogrammed, is another excellent gift. Or a writing portfolio.

3—These graduation gifts may be presented in any way that is convenient. Often the pleasantest way is to have them packaged attractively tied, perhaps, with ribbons in the class colors) and left at the home of the girl.

S—Yes; graduates are delighted to be complimented by their relatives and friends sending flowers just before the graduation exercises. These floral pieces make them feel popular, gives the day and occasion an added importance and gala feeling.

Graduation Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is seventeen years of age. He is to graduate from an academy very soon. His father and I are divorced and his father has married again. We are the best of friends, and I am at a loss as to the wording of the invitations to be sent to friends telling of our son's graduation. Would it be correct to say—"Theresa and John Cummings announce the graduation of their son, John, Junior?"

Reader

Undoubtedly the school from which your son is being graduated has printed invitations for enclosure or announcements, and these are the ones that you would send to relatives and friends. On these the names of the parents do not appear; they are officially issued by the school, and usually with them are enclosed the invitations of the graduate. If this is not planned by the graduating class, you may buy a blank form for you to send out forms of invitations or announcements of the graduation. Your son would write if you wish, write friendly little notes to close friends telling them of the graduation.

Commencement Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been appointed chairman of a tea to be given in honor of the graduates of a High School. I would appreciate your suggestions as to how the tea should be conducted so. Would it be necessary for me to receive?

M.

It would not be necessary for you to plan a program or any other special entertainment for this tea. Your guests will be quite well engaged with "chatting of this and that" and with partaking of the dainty tea-foods that their time will be completely occupied. The hostess is in the receiving line, artistic a setting as possible for the tea table, and you have several hostesses to assist in welcoming the guests and making the early introductions and group-arrangements. One co-hostess is invited to sit behind the tea-table, to preside at one end of the tea-table, and another might be asked to act opposite her, to preside over a coffee service, if coffee is to be served as an alternative. There also might be one or two other hostesses to see that the guests are supplied with and is served to the tea-foods.

Is careful to avoid overexposure in the sun

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

MANY A BEAUTY dances on the beach, gets sunburned, then decided blisters don't be a smart girl. She makes a mistake in so believing. Sunburn is not good for the complexion; it thickens the skin, in time causing it to become leathery.

It is time now to consider fastidious complexion care. Keep the skin well oiled. Use an oily foundation cosmetic before going outdoors. Remove make-up with cream; apply a heavy cream before going to bed. There's no sense letting a pretty face get weather-beaten.

Before breasting the waves, oil the face, neck and arms. It is all right to be a non-bathing-suit—plus while in necessary to well-being.—Then to that same complexion is very great a sacrifice.

Take sunshine in small doses. A complexion exposed is being enough for the first hot day. Even then it is best to have the skin lubricated.

Every woman likes to play with face packs. Because they make her look ghastly for the time being, she is pretty sure that they are effective.

An excellent mask that clears the pores of blackheads, does a mild bleaching job and leaves the skin surface smooth is made by mixing kaolin, which is refined Fuller's earth, with which hazel if the skin is oily, with olive oil if the skin is dry. Spread it on a clean surface, let it stay until it flakes, then rinse with tepid water.

In adult years nothing much can be done about bowed legs. The bones have taken on the circular curve. Spread it on a clean surface, let it stay until it flakes, then rinse with tepid water.

In childhood bowed legs are corrected by the final shoes that lift toe outer side of the foot.

If Child Picks Undesirable Friends

Unwise For Parent To Criticize or Oppose Such Chums, Openly

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Has your daughter become secluded in a friendship with you, as her parents, find it difficult to understand?

You aren't snobs, but you have some discrimination. Your daughter is quiet, carefully reared, has gone to good schools, has never met the people of undesirable purpose —but where could she have picked up such a girl companion?

You can't imagine. That new companion certainly is hardly the kind of girl liked by normal, well-brought-up, sheltered girls to pick as intimates, during adolescence, to study themselves, and wiser in the ways of the world.

Why? In revolt against parental domination, usually, and because sometimes such girls dominate and exciting. Or because such girls represent the great open spaces into which the sheltered girls are forbidden to venture. In choosing such obnoxious companions, they are asserting their right to choose, to direct their own lives, to make their own experiments—to stand on their own feet and live independently of you.

Natural Demand

And they're right. Their demand is natural and proper; it should be granted.

But it need not be granted in the form of this girl you object to. You may be right about this girl; probably are. She probably is a bad influence.

This is a situation that calls for careful handling. If you attempt to cut your daughter off from this friendship, you'll start a rebellion and arouse defiance and resentment. She'll disobey you, and you will lose your influence.

So don't criticize her new friend, or say you wish she'd play with nice girls of her own set".

Tend you see nothing wrong in her friendship for this girl, but don't overdo your interest in her friend; what it is in the girl that attracts your daughter, what she has to offer that your daughter needs.

When you've found that out, you can act. Find a way to give your child what she is looking for in the other girl—and the other girl will no longer be necessary. Give your daughter more grown-up responsibilities. Treat her, perhaps, more as if she were your own age, and no longer a child.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Harder Sledding For Heart-Balm Seekers

One of the great disadvantages in having different laws in our forty-eight states, especially divorce and other domestic laws, is that you can be legally married in one state and living in it according to the law of the state next door. The same difference holds good as to laws about breach-of-promise suits.

There are still some states in which a girl, under what current England calls "the wisdom of a witch", can get on becoming hat, a demure dress, a pair of high-heeled slippers and the etcetera of silk stockings when going on the witness stand to cry over her broken heart, and have the jury cry with her.

It's different, of course, if it's a mixed jury. Women jurors have second sight about these things and yield less ready to "tear-jerkers."

And now that good old once-Puritanical state of Massachusetts as last has joined the hard-boiled ones and refuses absolutely to see a heart on a sleeve.

Whether or not there is balm in Gilead, the Bay State Commonwealth sets it to become a thing of yesterday as it have ever been a Boston paper. The Governor of Massachusetts has already signed a bill which decrees that a written contract to marry shall not constitute an injury or wrong recognized by law."

Now far, so good. And in these days of economic independence of women, the better class of women will be glad that one more state has lifted them out of the pastoral sisterhood.

Spank Only When You Are Calm

Angry Parent Is Not in Condition to Punish Child

By GARET C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

YESTERDAY I virtually said that I believe those writers who for years have been telling parents never to spank their children have been responsible, to a large measure, for relaxing of home restraints; therefore, for increase in crime.

Parents who have taken these gifted writers of influence at their word have tried to guide their children during babyhood and early childhood merely by "reasoning with them". But it usually has not worked, even if it does read well, for good citizenship in the family, immediate neighborhood or community at large. It seems that runabouts unrestrained are hard to live with in the family and hard to live beside as neighbors. Nor are bus drivers, librarians, neighborhood merchants, teachers, Sunday school teachers, club leaders, doctors and dentists widely satisfied with the citizenship of many unspanked youngsters.

Nevertheless, mere spanking will not assure good citizenship. Many children who were at times well known as delinquents, were spanked occasionally, even brutally whipped as a rule. To be effective, spanking must be selective and administered by parents who have carefully planned together as one, by parents who have been blessed with understanding, sympathy, love, companionship and a happy family atmosphere; by parents who, moreover, who exercise self-control and are, a good example. Under such conditions, there will be but little spanking, probably none after the child is five, and no fear of such punishment of any sort thereafter; and the child will have learned the alphabet of good citizenship.

Have Not Read Carefully

Perhaps some parents who have read this writer's advice some spanking have believed they had approval of a child psychologist of professional standing to spank a child's bottom when about at any time they felt like it, or in any way they might hit upon. They have not read me carefully if they so believe. Indeed, my regular readers may have been impressed with the large number of times I have in this column advised, in the specific case at hand, a parent who writes me, not to spank or even think of spanking the child.

Nor would I ever approve spanking that became the habit of provoked. No one is fit to spank at all as a normal habit when he does not have complete self-control. Nor is there any sense or humanity in punishing a child except for a very definite and carefully thought-through purpose. When in doubt, let's do nothing.

Moreover, in many situations as those concerning table etiquette elimination, spanking is practically never desirable.

Nor should any physical punishment more than that of a few hasty slaps well on the buttocks over the child's bare fat thighs be necessary. Striking the child about the face or shaking him is far too hazardous to be resorted to. Nor can we afford to let him run off and shriek at him.

Then if any punishment to be effective, there must be many things the child can learn to with satisfaction and approval. He must have lots of love and emotional security.

Even Play Togs are Elegant

Pick Them With Consummate Care

Left, kneeling, play suit in mineral ny glory print worn by Rosemary de Camp; right, doll white crepe short pajamas trimmed with navy yarn braid and worn by Ethyl Cannon.

By LISSETH

IT'S AN elegant season, from a style standpoint. And swim suits and play clothes are just as handsome as evening gowns. Beach clothes must be chosen with as great care, too, as the most elegant dress or suit in your wardrobe. There are swim suits for the slim and very young things; there are models more suitable for the young matron of slightly heavier figure; and there are the suits that give that slenderizing effect that the matron who is verging on the stout needs.

The romper type of play suit, worn by the kneeling damsel at our left, Rosemary Camp, is right for that pretty young person and for her younger sister. It is a morning glory print with halter front and suntan back. It is as neat as possible to display the young body to the healthful rays of the sun.

Equally Youthful

Equally youthful but not so revealing is the suit right, which consists of short dull white crepe pajamas or long shorts—which ever you please—and a blouse of the same material, with navy braid, and a navy halter top. This suit is suitable for tennis and other active sports as well as beach wear.

The brightest of colored knit suits is the one worn by this person. Soft, bright raspberry, plum, dusty pinks and royal blue make the sands rejoice with color. Many of the suits seen are in two or more contrasting colors, a vogue that is followed through all costume styling this season. Some of the suits are knitted in prints of Mexican and European designs, to match the popular peasant accessories.

Knitting Machines Versatile

The versatility of the modern knitting machine, as well as the modern hand-knitter, are cause for marvel in the ripple, rib and matelasse stitch used. That expensive hand-made look is very popular, and suits are frequently adorned with genuinely hand-crocheted flowers or peasant figures, much like the Tyrolean togs worn last winter at the skiing resorts.

The girls with the perfect figures naturally like the straight lined maillot, or one-piece. Many others prefer the new quarter and half-skirted suits. The classic full-skirted swim suit is enjoying popularity, and many new innovations in the way of adjustability and fabric.

There is hardly a suit shown this year that does not have some sort of self-adjusting device to make it fit well. Buttons and zippers are used for fastenings on both swim and playsuits. Square and oval necked suits depend upon shoulder strap arrangements for new effects.

Snow in summer just about sums up the look of things when one sees a sea of white hats. The white hat has just about captured the fancy, and is seen in big and small versions, trimmed and untrimmed, with white flower veil or ribbon trims.

Orientals Don't Live On Fruits

Exclusive Diet Idea Is Not Borne Out by the Facts

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"THAT SOME primitive peoples live on fruit or cereals alone and are thereby very healthy" is an idea that is given wide publicity by health faddists.

In one form this idea is that great races of Oriental people are more healthy, live to greater age and have lower blood pressure, less kidney disease and other of the degenerative diseases of middle age than the European and Americans of the western world. And all because these Orientals live on rice and fruit, vegetables and cereals, and never touch meat or animal protein like the Occidentals.

In the first place, it is not true that these people have more longevity or that they escape the high blood pressure and other "results of civilization". It is true that Chinese probably have, on the average, a lower blood pressure than the Europeans, but this is possibly a racial hereditary trait and not due to any difference in diet. By some it is ascribed to the placidity of the Chinese, the fact that they are far removed from the excitements of civilization. And that is true, we will probably soon find that Chinese have just as high blood pressure as their Occidental brothers, because lately they seem to be enjoying the benefits of civilization, too.

Supplement Diet With Proteins

In the second place, however, it is not true that Orientals obtain animal food and live exclusively on vegetables, even if they appear to do so. When one investigates the rice, cereal or vegetable almost exclusively. But "though rice is the staple food of many Oriental peoples, as bread is of western mankind, it is always supplemented by something with high protein content," says an authority who has lived long in the Orient. "All travelers remember the smell of Oriental cities, mostly caused by dried fish and other sea foods, which in the seaport may be almost palatable. In a nearby region silkworm pupae are the delicacy, the terrific oily taste of which was made known to me when I ate them myself. In the next region, to another part of the same region, the protein about a fresh cocoon of maggots of bumble bees, of which I still keep an unopened can." (Richard Goldschmidt—Insects—the Biologist's Story of Life.")

Long after that, life in the west, where protein comes in the form of Kansas City steak, looks pretty good.

Clear Iced Tea

It may surprise you to learn that cloudiness in iced tea may occur when the tea is bought on the market. It is caused by the fact that the tannin and caffein in tea are less soluble in a cold beverage, and therefore precipitate. So, the next time you like your tea clear and sparkling, add a little more tea for strength, the more it clouds.

This cloudiness does not affect the deliciousness of iced tea. But if you prefer it clear, try this: Make tea with cold water, using three teaspoons of tea for each three-fourths standard measuring cup of cold water. Let the cold water stand on the tea leaves in the refrigerator overnight or from 12 to 18 hours. Then strain off leaves, iced tea and serve.—Dorothy B. Marsh in Good Housekeeping.

Children Tire Of Nursery Songs

MOST PARENTS think music for children is distinct from music for adults. But the truth is record children don't like nursery songs, and those who do enjoy them for a time get tired of them, says Lois B. Murphy, who gives in Good Housekeeping a list of music records she has compiled for her children.

As the top of her list Mrs. Murphy puts "Dance Gypsy". Why? Because, she says, "it has been in demand ever since we discovered that our baby, at the age of six months, would stop crying from hunger or even a bad bump if we put on this record." Another very popular with the children is "In the Hall of the Mountain King," from Peer Gynt suite. The children loved the entire suite especially from the ages of two to four, says Mrs. Murphy. At this time they also enjoyed "And the Glory," from "Messiah," as well as "Hallelujah Chorus".

When they were a little older the "Walkure Fire Music" interested them, together with other music which stimulated their curiosity and dramatic feeling. The storm and rain parts of the "Beethoven Sixth Symphony" had this appeal.

"Response to gentler music and to the tender melodies sometimes associated with nursery years did not come until the children were well out of the nursery," says Mrs. Murphy. "It was not until we ourselves were four or five years old that we began hearing demands for the 'Moonlight Sonata,' 'Mozart's Lullaby' and the Schubert 'Unfinished Symphony.' When the response came it was strong and steady and did not interfere with the development of other favorites."

Little material but much smartness is a feature of smart summer dress. Linen in multi-colored plaids makes a sandal sans toes and without back. The straps are intricately draped.

If Arms Don't Suit You, Start Exercises at Once

These Routines Will Make Them Shapely

Claudette Colbert
Lucky pup to be held in such pretty arms

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

THERE HAVE BEEN world of requests for help in the past few days for treatments to reduce fatty upper arms. Don't worry, the plump upper arm is really no few days for treatments to reduce fatty upper arms. Don't worry, the plump upper arm is really no more "your" problem" that some of you think. It will give in to a slenderizing treatment as quickly as any other part of the body if you will concentrate on trying to work off that flabby excess weight. Here are some suggestions:

Special exercises done in conjunction with one of the homemade reducing lotions, which we mentioned in a previous column, will really do the trick. But if you want your arms to look their best in your sleeveless summer numbers, you had better start your reducing soon.

These exercises will reduce the arms, firm the muscles that support the breasts, and are also excellent for the shoulders. Stand erect, and raise your elbows to shoulder level. Then fling your arms sideward and backward ten times.

Repeated is the punching bag exercise. If you don't own a punching bag, suspend a pillow in a doorway and punch it as hard as you can. Do this for about ten minutes.

Third, stand erect and from your shoulders shoot your arms forward, upward and sideways. Do this ten times.

Fourth Exercise

Fourth, stand erect and extend your arms out at the sides, full length, and rotate them. Start making circles in the air with your extended arms and hands. Begin with small circles and increase to as large dimensions as you can without actually pulling the arms out of its original position. Do this for ten times, starting your circles forward and then five times starting them backward.

Fifth, raise your arms full length at your sides. Have them even with your shoulders. Start describing fair sized circles, then clap your hands alternately in front and in back of you as you bend the elbows.

Sixth, bend your elbows so that the tips of your fingers touch your shoulders. Move your elbows in until they touch in front, then bend them as far behind you as you can without pain. Repeat this ten times.

Seventh, lie face down across a chair or stool. Relax your body, with your hands and feet touching the floor lightly. Now straighten your body by stretching your arms and legs upward; then relax to the first position. Repeat these movements from three to five times, gradually increasing the number of times as you become used to the exercises.

Eight, stand erect with your clenched fists, and your elbows interlocked behind. Rotate the shoulders and stretch your hands down as far as you can bring them.

Of course you may feel that we have given you quite a number of exercises, but it isn't necessary to do all of them. Select the ones and concentrate on them for a day or two, adding another one or two as muscles become used to the exercises. Do some of them every day with enough energy to feel exhilarated and get results.

It deserves a prize, this adorable dance frock made of chevron bands of black cobweby lace and white organdine de sole over white taffeta. The slim bodice is strapless, the skirt is wide with a black lace hem. There is a short bolero of black lace.

Girl Wants To Attract Young Man

How Can She Make Him Care for Her, She Queries

By VIRGINIA LEE

A GIRL asks me how she can attract the young man who interests her very much. . . . I have been out in his company several times, but he does not seem to show me any attention,' she writes. "Could you please tell me how I can make this young man care for me?"

There just isn't any answer, in this case. I don't know the girl. Her letter tells me nothing except her age and her love for the man. Maybe she is the kind of girl who doesn't attract any male. More probably she simply doesn't interest this particular youth.

If he could be forced by circumstances to be constantly in her company, not only in their leisure time but all the time — such as living in the same house — she might be able to show him that she is such a nice girl, so companionable, fair-minded and square, that he would grow to care for her. Prostagully does a great deal for young folk. If a girl has admirable qualities they show in her day by day life. Her faults show up, too. I think I have told before in this column of the young couple I know — now happily married and parents — who were not at all attracted to each other at first. Circumstances, however, threw them together so that each learned the other's worth. She was an ordinary looking girl until you knew her, and then you grew to think she was beautiful. He was just a good looking, jolly kid, "kind to his mother" and all that—but not remarkable to look at, even until you knew him through daily association.

"Shows Faults, Too

Of course that sort of thing shows up one's faults, too, and may prove a person to be an utterly undesirable companion. That is that chance, so you have to be pretty good to "stand the gaff."

Possibly this suggests a hint to the woman who wants to attract a specific male will be helpful to this girl; John wrote an entertaining little book which he called, "Ladies, I Give You—the Way to His Heart".

"If you want to capture a specific male," says this expert, "the more of a social success he is, the more chances you will have of meeting one who is worth capturing."

So, my dear, after all this talk, try to be a "social success", which means as good looking as your physiognomy permits, as jolly and sympathetic as you can, as well allow, and generally interested in your fellow humans. I can advise you no better.

WHITE SUMMER SUIT STILL TOPS IN CHIC

By Central Press

TO SAY white is tops for summer wear is to be trite. But it is a fact that white suit worn by a charming lady it looks new and fresh and still is the smartest thing to wear in warm weather.

Loretta Young illustrates this theory better than words. She is wearing a novelty white wool suit designed for her by Orry-Kelly of wood.

Her accessories are colorful and consist of a blouse of bright canary yellow linen and a striped turban, bag and gloves in striped material is cotton on white, green and yellow.

Style Whimsies

A tiny hat with a huge flower is a very smart chapeau for the young women.

High-waisted summer nightgowns are the smartest for the trousseau of the 1938 bride.

Lilac shades are being worn on the beaches. Imagine lilac linen slacks with striped wool vest and pale gray green jacket.

For the summer evening frock you may choose lace marquisette with full skirt edged with a wide flounce. Sleeves are long sleeves, high neck with round yoke finished with ruffle, and the decoration of ruffles with such a dress, hair worn with bangs or a cluster of ostrich feathers worn over the forehead is quite like bangs, enhances the demure appearance.

One of the well-known cosmetic houses has remembered father on his day, June 19, and has on the market what it calls a "whisker". It is a neat little pocket comb that folds back half its length and slips into a black 'moire case. The case is edged with little bristles which will prove efficient in brushing father's shoulders when his hair has been combed.

Berries, Pancakes for Brunch

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Strawberries with Rolls on or Fresh Pineapple
Bacon Bran Griddle Cakes
Syrup Coffee

This is a Sunday morning breakfast or brunch. Have you ever eaten your Sunday breakfast out of doors, on the porch or in the yard? Some people build stoves in the garden and hold picnics there. I once made pancakes for a group of seven people on such a stove. Luck was with me, and they were good—"if I do say so as shouldn't." But if I didn't, you wouldn't know you know pancakes made with white flour are good, but it is a good thing to add a bit of "roughage to your pancakes as well as to eat dark breads now and then. It varies the taste and provides a vitamin which is lacking in white flour. You don't eat the strawberry hulls, you know. You hold the berries by the hull, dip them in powdered sugar and eat them-m-m-m!

Today's Recipes

BRAN GRIDDLE CAKES—Two eggs, one-fourth cup sugar, two and one-fourth cups milk, three cups flour, two tablespoons baking powder, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-half cup melted fat, one-half cup bran. Beat eggs and sugar until light and fluffy; add milk and mix well. Sift flour with baking powder and salt; add to first mixture, stirring until flour disappears. Add melted fat; cooled fat, mixing carefully. Fold in all-bran. Bake on hot griddle, turning only once. This makes 15 cakes.

Window Charm

You can achieve the quaint and colorful charm of early American living by a wide and sunny bay window filled with glass shelves. Such a window, properly treated, can be a color poem, with sunlight streaming through rich blues and ambers, crimsons and aquamarines, playing on ivy vines and potted plants, thin glassware and dainty pieces of china.

There is no trick at all to installing these glass shelves, as any paint or hardware store will cut the shelves to fit your windows, any size and any length you wish. And they will mount them for you, too, on good looking, inexpensive metal brackets.

Boston Red Sox In Second Place Ahead of the Yankees

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The old guy and the young one are rivals for the attention of baseball's followers this week.

The old guy, of course, is Babe Ruth, back in harness again as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He took the job Saturday at $15,000 for the rest of the season, appeared on the baselines yesterday and immediately regained his old spot as the main attraction on the ball field.

The young fellow is Cincinnati's remarkable Johnny Vander Meer, who couldn't make it three no-hitters in a row but came close enough to give Boston Bees a good scare when he let them down with four blows to win, 1-0. The victory pin the Reds in second place, a few percentage points ahead of Chicago.

It was the Babe some 38,000 Brooklyn fans were out to see but they also saw a couple of good ball games as Glenn Presnell's flinging and a shaggy fly, that ended when the old Yankee cluster fled right at Reese and Camilli for gaps a 6-3 opening triumph over the Chicago Cubs. Clay Bryant stopped the hitting, Detroit getting only one blow up to the ninth, and the Cubs won the nightcap, 4-3.

Hangs Up Record

Vander Meer, who pitched two consecutive hitless games, finally was touched in the fourth inning yesterday when Debs Garms singled. He made a new National League record of 26 2-3 consecutive no-hit innings, just short of Cy Young's Major League mark of 33 that has stood since 1904. And he went 32 innings before he was scored upon.

Boston lost a chance to win when the second game was rained out in the last half of the fifth.

Pittsburgh Pirates put on a terrific clouting spree to swamp the Phillies, 16-4 and 16-3. Three homers by Johnny Rizzo and two by Paul Waner marked their 36-hit attack.

Giants Beat Twins

New York Giants took a double beating, 8-7 and 4-2 their second of the season, and the Boston Bees made their lead cut to three games. A 12-inning single by Joe Stripp carried the Cards to an 8-7 opening victory and Lon Warneke the nightcap 4-2, behind Roy Henshaw although Mel Ott hit a homer in each game.

In the American League the Boston Red Sox moved into second ahead of the slipping New York Yankees by splitting a twin bill at Chicago, while the Yanks let one game and tied another at St. Louis.

Gee Walker's bases had given the White Sox a 3 victory in the twilight of Foxx and Jim Bagby paced the Red Sox to a 5-3 decision. The Yanks had 22 men left on base as they went down to the Browns 10-9, then lost a 7-6 ninth-inning decision hailed by darkness.

The league-leading Cleveland Indians celebrated Connie Mack Day by trimming Connie's Athletics 5-4. Washington's return of a first-inning heat Detroit, 10-6 and returned the Senators to fourth place.

KINGSTON PONIES NOW IN CELLAR

Jake Biddle of Oshawa Outpitches Pollar To Win By 4-3

Oshawa, June 20—Lefty Jake Biddle held Kingston Ponies to six hits here Saturday afternoon as Oshawa G-Men defeated the Limestone City crew to take second place in the Central Ontario Baseball League standing and drop the Ponies into the cellar.

Oshawa spotted the Ponies a two-run lead in the first inning when the visitors collected three of their six hits give Ed Pollar on the Kingston mound, a nice lead. It was not Pollar's day, however, and the G-Men kept after Kingston Yankee import, raking his offerings for eleven hits, scoring two runs in first run back in the first and knotted the count in the sixth. Biddle held the Ponies helpless, not allowing another hit until the eighth when a visiting player got over two hits for one run to take the lead for a second time.

Oshawa again tied the count in the last half of the eighth when Wallace doubled to left, and when Bennett let the ball go through his legs, pulled up at third. Biddle helped win his own ball game with a clean single to left to score Wallace. Oshawa won the game in the last of the eighth when Rodon and Bennett both singled and the former scored on Johnsville's drive to left field.

BABE RUTH HAPPY TO BE BACK IN GAME EVEN AS A COACH

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York June 20 (AP)—Three years ago in the twilight of his career the players were used to the sight of Babe Ruth at Ebbets Field the Dodgers stared at him with all their new coach, with their eyes popping.

He looked just as he always had, heavy jowled and paunchy, but he was glad to be back as a coach, a step, he said not much a long one, from the managership of the Dodgers. "I'll be showed it in everything he did. Yeah," and the Babe grinned, "I'll be glad to get back. But I'm not in shape—he slapped his enormous tummy—"stood up there and hit for five minutes and felt like I'd been doin' it all week.

"I'm just a coach now, not a player, and I like it more, more too. Besides I can't hit anymore. My right side's gone. There ain't been a last year I was with the Yankees. I dunno why, I just did."

Glad to Be Back

"Y'know," rumbled Ruth, "I didn't realize how much I'd miss baseball. I got this job 'Course golf is great—this will sure knock down out of my game—but it can't match the stuff.

The rumor runs the Babe is slated to get the Dodgers' managership at the end of the season. You told him and he laughed.

"Naw, that's crazy stuff. I'm just a coach this year. I'm not built for manager. Sure, I'd like to be a manager, here or anywhere else, but I guess I gotta wait a while."

Then the crowd of 28,000 saw his batting walk his huge shoulders, fix a shock out chewy after chewy.

Ruth was on the coaching lines the Dodgers had won 6-3 and lost 4-3, they were still cheering the Babe, running after him for autographs and he did slap his broad back.

As Tony Lazzeri of the Cubs said as he ducked into the shower, "It's good to see that fat old bum back, now ain't it?"

"BLUE STREAKS" SCHOOL CHAMPS

The "Blue Streaks" softball team, recently crowned champions of Queen Alexandra School are agog with pleasurable anticipation these days. For the youngsters by virtue of their gruelling schedule over the "Manoeuvres" last week, not only annexed the school title but won their coveted trophy, which was donated to the school athlete by the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

At that it was not until the sixth innings of the seven inning tilt that the ultimate winners put the game on ice. Trailing at this point 11-10, they smashed the offerings of the "Manoeuvres" pitcher for nine runs, that left no doubt in the minds of the fans of both squads as to the eventual winner.

The "Manoeuvres" however, fought back gamely but could not overcome the large handicap with the "Blue Streaks" pulling out with a handsome 19 to 14 win. The cress will be presented this week.

The teams:

"Blue Streaks", champions of the School and winners of the Kinsmen Cresta: R. Davis, B. Correll, E. Rosebush, D. Diamond, P. Laskaris, H. Simpson, A. Boyle, L. Cross, G. Aylesworth, P. Sly, D. Rosebush and H. De Rushie.

Manoeuvres, runners-up: Mon. crieff, Peever, Foley, Daverick, Jones, vans, MacGillicam, Gee, Thompson, Ketcheson and Wilson.

(Ed's. note: Owing to lack of space we regret it is impossible to publish a splendid play by play description of the game written by Kay Martin Church Street. Kay's description of this softball epic of his school is worthy of mention and was exceedingly well done).

McMASTER NETS BOTH COUNTERS

Delore, Ont., June 20 (Special)—With Ben McMaster, star centre forward of the Peterborough C.O.E. soccer squad netting both goals in the second half of a closely fought game, Deloro's eleven went down to their second successive defeat before a large crowd of fans here on Saturday by a 2-0 count.

The game was closely fought throughout, and the issue was in doubt until the second half was well on its way. McMaster netted the ball from a pass from Mitchell early in the second half, and repeated a few minutes later from a scramble in front of the Delore goal mouth to put the game on ice.

Delore were continually forcing the play after their setbacks but sterling defence work on the part of the Peterborough backs prevented any attempt at scoring.

Most people call moths "butterflies", yet there are about nine times as many moth families as butterfly families. Because butterflies fly by day, while moths are night-flyers, the former are common sights to the most casual observer. There are, however, numerous ways of telling them apart. Butterflies fold their wings high over their backs when at rest, while moths fold theirs down flat. Butterflies have club-shaped antennae, while those of moths are feathered.

3 RUN HOMER BY HEINIE MANUSH ASSISTS TORONTO

Even Split Gained By Leafs With Syracuse Chiefs

BEARS WIN TWO

Newark Now Eight Games In Front of Buffalo Bisons

(By The Associated Press)

With a little more than one third of the International League season completed, it looks more than ever as if Buffalo Bisons will be the club to beat, a chance to come anywhere near Newark Bears in the standing. And near, as Newark's Friends see it, is about where the second horse is when War Admiral is racing.

A couple of weeks ago the Bisons knocked off Newark three games in a row and were quite cocky about the whole thing. Since then the Bears have piled up eleven straight triumphs while Buffalo has won but seven.

They both won doubleheaders yesterday, which left the Bears just eight games in front. Newark tied off on Montreal Royals, who had been doing fairly well of late, and won 3-3 and 10-5. They had to come from behind to take the opener with the aid of some fine relief flinging by Martin Nelson. But in the night cap Bob Seeds socked his 27th homer with the bases loaded and Dave Ward's single to move to it. In all Seeds drove in eight runs to bring his total to 92.

The Bisons had more trouble whipping Baltimore Orioles, 7-5 and 5-4. They scored five runs in the ninth to take the first game after Jack Knott had held the second before Woodley Abernathy, former Dartmouth outfielders, won it with a home run.

Rochester Red Wings also won a doubleheader from the cripples of Syracuse Chiefs divided the Toronto Leafs broke even. Toronto made the first in a mound duel between Lefty Gomez and Ken Chase, former Toronto lacking the nightcap on Heinie Manush's three-run homer.

STILL SUBMERGED

the submerged sleeper, the forms became indistinct by the muddy water that filled the car. The sleeper's face was covered by the thread-like mass of hair.

Of the 24 persons injured who were taken into Niles City in a hospital train yesterday, 19 remained in hospital today, two of them critically injured.

At the Cleveland end at the Miles City morgue where relatives came to claim bodies, the scene was a tragedy and of heroism were told by the survivors.

Ten year old Anne Ladas, whose mother was dead and whose father was critically injured, related how she tried desperately to keep her mother's head above water in the flood.

Held Head Above Water

Anne told the mother, Mrs. Thomas Ladas, fainted from shock, the small girl grabbed her hair and held her head above water for several minutes.

Anne's brother, nine-year-old George, suffered a broken arm. Unable to swim, he clung to things he kept crying, "I want my mamma and daddy."

"But I don't haven't any mamma and daddy any more," the boy's sister told him consolingly.

One of the cars teetered on the creek bank and several persons forced it slid into the water with the others.

Seven Milwaukee railroad employees, who knew Custer Creek as a ravine filled with water, rushed no more than "a bucket of water," were riding the Diesel-powered passengers. They joined regular trainmen in helping save the survivors, and two of them telephoned first news of the tragedy to Miles City.

Mike Cain and Ed. Hamm, brakeman, engineer and fireman last pair of steel cars, made their way to Sturgis, a small station, and telephoned for help.

William Shearer, veteran Milwaukee trainman, said the railroad men were "chewing the fat" in the first day coach when the crash occurred.

"I thought we were just on the ground as first," Shearer said. "Then I realized we were in the air and said 'boys, we're in the old Yellowstone.'

"Below a few minutes before I found it was Custer Creek. Why, I've put a hundred over these tracks thousands of times, and I never saw more than a bucket of water in Custer Creek at once," Shearer said.

Piled up Every Way

"Well, we had a load of our coach. It was hard to see much. The mail, express and baggage cars which were between us and the locomotive, were piled up every way and I know the fireman jump out of a window she smashed. She floated down the creek in the pile of wreckage and I think she must have drowned.

"Her husband yelled for us to help her, but it was no use."

The locomotive leaped the bridge gap with such speed that it landed on the west bank of the creek, carrying Engineer Merrifield and Fireman H. E. McCarty with it.

The wreck was the first on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul lines in 30 years that cost a passenger's death.

Rev. Bacon-Phillips, who wrote his last from his deathbed started writing in the newspapers as a young man, and in 59 years he wrote more than 60,000 letters of which some 9,000 were published. CORNWALL BISONS IN SECOND PLACE

Justify Confidence of New Backers By Three Game Win Streak

(By The Canadian Press)

Given a new lease on life when local sportsmen grouped to repurchase the club franchise from the Can-Am League, Cornwall's fighting Bisons, in a three game winning streak, justified their backers' wildest hopes today by emerging from a crowded west end schedule in undisputed possession of second place.

Whitey Tudesz first served notice of the new order when he pitched three-hit ball and drove in two runs Saturday to down Gloversville, Johnstown 4-1. Bisons then demonstrated their ability to play both ends of a ball game by banging Malseed for 13 hits to take the finale 9-8.

Sarnia Challenges

Ogdensburg Colts became the next victims by bowing to Bison, 8 to 7 Sunday. The win moved Cornwall into undisputed place as Colts were defeated 14 to 7 Saturday by Amsterdam Rugmakers.

Rugmakers Meet Challenge

Rugmakers met the latest challenge to their supremacy, however, by taking a 6-5 count from Auburn Bombers for their second win of the week end. Rookery emerged winless, having dropped a 7-4 tilt to Utica Braves 3-2, Saturday.

Braves muffed a chance to pull out of the cellar when they were beaten 11 to 4 by Gloversville. Gordon pitched the win that kept Glovers in fifth position.

Oswego Netherlands and Rome Colonels pulled a new one from the Can-Am bag of tricks by playing a two-day stand in Oswego and Saturday's game to Rome for a night contest. Art Upper, the reformed outfielder, starred in the Rome game, which ended in a three game conquest by turning in a six-hit performance to take the opener 7 to 2. Thirteen innings were chalked up before Colonels eked out a 7 to 6 decision in the second game but a Rome's Arthur Upper, reformed outfielder, starred in six-hit performance to take opener.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

For once Tobey appreciated her stepfather's forbearance. Even though she knew it was purely selfish, published activity by the misfits for her and resentment of her presence among the place.

Nonetheless Tobey told herself blissfully that things might have been different if she hadn't been forced herself to be as Adam wanted her. Perhaps the present situation was her fault. She was only back in her own nature. But even if that were the case she couldn't help it. Her hatred of the man was too deep and too instinctive to be ignored, her distrust too ever-present to be forgotten even for a moment.

At the very first Adam Thomas had complained to Judie about the actions of her child, about what he termed her "slanderfulness."

"Look at it," he would say reasonably. "You'd think I was poison the way she runs away from me! Like a miserable little scared rabbit she is. So spiteful."

Julie would admonish her, "You shouldn't act that way, dear. Why, Adam's been very good to you. Want to love you and have you love him."

But Adam's voice would rise menacingly. "Look at the way she stares at me, as if I'd like to eat her up, mouth on her. Some day, young lady, I'll give you a chance to walk!"

And so she was careful, painstakingly careful, to obey him always in something as well as spiteful things. If she was very good, if she did her job, endure the hatefully painful proximity of her stepfather with what cheerfulness she could muster then he would have no excuse to punish her and no cause.

But she need not have worry when she could. That was the safest way.

CHAPTER IV

After a long time, shivering a little, Tobey climbed the steep stairs to her bedroom and let them talking.

Julie gave in at last, as she most always did to his face or his position. Perhaps she was a little afraid of what her new husband Adam, might do to her daughter whom he so violently disliked.

Tobey would stay with the Merriams. Mrs. Merriam was a woman, kindly and friendly to her and more children than she could begin to keep track of. There were had four high school girls in half as many years, but Tobey saw no cause for complaint.

She had taken care of Pickie, her little half brother, almost from the day of his birth. So she settled down to her new life gratefully, rising early each morning to help set about the house, hurrying off to school, and at the very last moment, hurrying back again in the afternoon to take up her duties where she had left off.

Saturday nights Julie and Adam drove in to Kingsley as was the custom of the farmers thereabouts and they would take Tobey along with them. Her Sundays were spent at the farm helping her mother, and since Adam never dreamed of offering to drive her back she tolerantly left the seven miles in to town on Sunday evening.

The boundless vitality that was her heritage from the gaunt man stood Tobey in good stead during those years when she was growing hard and studied so much and lived so little.

As she grew out of the painful awkwardness of late childhood into adolescence, some faint promise of the amazing beauty that was later to be her lot began to show in her. That infinitely disturbing loveliness elusive alien to any accepted pattern.

X X X

She was not quite eighteen and she would be graduated in June in spite of the fact that she had missed almost a month of school that winter in order to care for her mother when Baby Allen was born.

That earlier promise of unusual beauty was not actually gone. No longer was Tobey wholly dependent upon her parents for a ride out to town on Saturdays; no longer need she walk to town on Sunday evening.

Sometimes when her week's work at the Merriam's was done she would go with the boy or girl next to Manning's only movie, stopping afterwards at the Sweet Shop for sodas, driving out later in the boy's car in the hope she still thought of as her grandfather's. Almost always on Sunday nights a car waited on the ruined road drive until she was ready to go back to the Merriams.

Still Tobey hated men. The smoldering resentment that had been kindled long ago, flared high against love, against men and marriage, burned in her more strongly now.

Tobey liked sodas and movies, and one's indulgence in such pleasures is amusingly curtailed by an income of a dollar a week. She appreciated what they did for her these youthful classmates of hers, she even enjoyed their company. But the idea of marrying one of them never entered her head. She would never marry.

On an afternoon in May, Miss Macklin, teacher of Civics and History in the Manning Township High School, leaned up from her desk and saw Tobey Chandler passing along with Tobey had a red beret on her brown head and hooks under her arm, so Miss Macklin judged she was on her way home.

She went to the door and hailed her and the girl stopped and came back along the path to Miss Macklin.

"Yes, teacher?"

"Tobey, twenty minutes"

"Yes, sir. I thought I can get you there easily in five—which will leave us exactly fifteen minutes for the errand we got scheduled. And will you kindly stop wasting time with that? There are a lot of things I want to find out about you."

He went at it systematically enough, but there was surprisingly little to learn about Tobey. But Tobey learned a great deal about Miss Ted Collins. He was twenty-two.

He had been away to college three years, but it had grown increasingly difficult for his father to scrape up money for that, for he had been sufficiently interested to note the pretty dark-eyed girl would have enabled him to keep on with his studies.

"He got a job on a tramp freighter plying between San Francisco and Japan, and then he was called he worked in Bogota for a time, making his way homeward from there. He's been home for a spree to his father's repeated urgings.

CHAPTER V

"I've bummed around a lot," Red summed it up, grinning.

"Gosh, that's a record — exciting, being a bum," Tobey told him, her eyes shining. "And you've seen more, have seen, the experiences you must have had!"

"Don't you better not encourage me if I'm to get back on time. But how about Miss? You don't work all night, do you? How about a movie? How about a ride? You look pooped."

Tobey hesitated. "Well, not tonight, Red. I've got to get finished the frosting, and the Merriams played bridge with Wednesday evening, so she'd have to stay with the children. "But maybe—to-morrow at eight?"

Red Collins swung the little wooden gate about him and headed the right way. "Tomorrow at eight," he said positively, "and no alibis about it."

X X X

For the first time in her lonely hatred life, Tobey had a friend.

Their friendship was sheer joy, serious, satisfying, untroubled by doubts or petty jealousies.

On Red's every free evening when Red took her to the movies and afterwards for a ride under the scattered stars, he had parked where the Big Fork flowed for a short way, and on one of the trips Sam had slipped almost casually around Tobey's slim shoulders.

But when she drew away from him, stiffening defensively, he laid his clasp, sorry. No offense meant. Some girls expect it, and some don't. A fellow likes to know."

Tobey answered as simply, "Well you may know it."

And that had been the end of that.

Now they were friends. Now they understood each other as no two people ever have before. When they were together they talked avidly, intently, of life, of people, of places they'd seen or read about. Tobey told Red her secret and which he described to Tobey as dull and seemed to see them too.

Knowing Red, it seemed to Tobey that the world, the narrow world-like boundaries of her life, were pushed back in some strange fashion, leaving her room to grow, to breathe, to see out of the dirt drab present into the misty, beckoning future.

Only could even tell Red some of the bitter half-remembered experiences of her early childhood, could explain to him something of the terrifying effect life in the same house with her stepfather had had upon her.

"Those things have warped you a little, Tobey," Red told her seriously. "They've made certain ideas of yours, certain feelings, not quite —normal."

"Maybe so. But it's the way I am. I shall never fall in love nor marry. The whole idea is fantastic to me."

"If you don't you'll be missing something, Tobey. That part of living, too. I've never been to love myself quite really, But there must be something to it."

In spite of such confidences there was a quality curiously impersonal about the relationship of these two.

When Red inquired early in June, "Then you're going to your doctor From together, Tobey? Or are you ashamed of me?" Tobey could answer simply, without hesitation or embarrassment, "Not ashamed of you, Red. Ashamed of me—of my clothes, I mean."

"You look okay to me," Red said gruffly.

"Oh, I can get by ordinarily. But where would I get a dance dress, a party dress like all the rest of the girls will have?"

Tobey smiled and Red smiled too making the pity in his eyes.

"Then you aren't going at all?"

Tobey shook her head. "I haven't been to a Prom yet. Missing one more isn't going to make any difference."

But in some absurd manner it did! Never before had the cried herself to sleep over a dance she couldn't attend or a dress there wasn't the faintest possibility in the world of getting.

The next morning after Tobey had left for school, little Patty Merriam, who slept in the same room with her and violently to her mother, "Tobey cried last night."

"Cried? Tobey?" Mrs. Merriam sounded doubtful.

But Patty nodded her curly head in a manner almost conspiratorial. "She cried awful hard. I woked up and heard her."

Rather diffidently Mrs. Merriam broached the subject to Tobey when they were alone. "Patty says she heard you crying, dear. Are you worrying about something?"

Flaming color crept beneath Tobey's skin, but she managed a smile. "It wasn't anything really. Just that, I was feeling sorry for myself because I can't go to the class dance."

Mrs. Merriam's face grew under-standing. "On account of your clothes?"

Tobey nodded. "I'm not usually so silly."

"I isn't silly," the woman denied "It's natural." And then, an idea occurred to her suddenly. "Listen Tobey! I have a suggestion to you a graduation gift, something quite nice. You've been such a help to me. I thought I'd spend five dollars—and I'd so much rather get you something you really want."

Tobey stood there very still, listening not daring to believe even yet in such miracles as this.

"I could get you a dress just as well. We'll have some really nice material and I'll help you make it. Would you like that?"

Tobey could only say, "Like it! Oh, Mrs. Merriam!"

Never, Tobey was sure, had anything been so lovely, so entrancing, as that frock. Color of spring or of sunlight, artfully fashioned by Mrs. Merriam to fit a young form severely and cascade into swirling ruffles that touched the floor. On the night of the Prom Red brought her three gardenias, creamy and fragile on their silver ribbon, and Tobey fastened them near her throat with fingers that trembled with joy.

She had never seen gardenias before.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and pop was taking a walk before supper and pop said, I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to climb up on this shoeshine stand and have my shoes polished. I dont know what's a matter with me but I'm sure that's the very thing to make me feel better.

Meaning a shoeshine stand in front of a barber shop, and pop got in the chair and the shoeshine man shined his shoes. Being a colored shoeshine man with a gold teeth in front and maybe some more in back, and he shined them for about 10 minutes without stopping, saying: There you is, boss. Now then I am. And feeling better already, pop said.

Me and pop sat down and the shoeshine man whistled his clothes with a whisk, and then he shined him and we kept on going. pop saying: Nothing like a good shoeshine for a pair of shoes to make a man feel superior to his squals. It may not help your looks, but it's a visible and extra safe wonder at it, but facts is facts. Hey, for Pete's sake, keep off my new shine, will you? Walk on your own feet, he said.

Which I did for a while, and then pop said, There you go again, will you tell me why you've got to pick out just the time that I've got a nice new shine to go trampling over my shoes?

I dont, pop. I mean I proberly trample on them just as much other times too, only you proberly dont notice it when you haven't got any new shine to be jellus of, I said, and pop said, By golles, I believe you've got something there. The only thing happy man is the one who has just sufficient possessions for his comfort and no more, and I hope you'll remember that through life's grasping scrimmage, he said.

Yes sir, and for instants if I had a ice cream cone rite now I wouldn't need another thing for my comfort, I said, and pop said, Reasonable enough.

And he got me one at the next drug store.

Tweed

Tweed — Mr. Cecil Pipe, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pipe, of Tweed, has been appointed a Bank Inspector, duties to commence at once. For a number of years he has been a member of the Royal Bank staff at Ottawa. Prior to that time he spent several years at Barry's Bay. He entered the Bank of Montreal, Tweed, as a junior some ten or twelve years ago. His Tweed friends wish him every success in his new work.

Several changes in the Centre

WAR - - KIDNAPPING - - POLITICS - - DISASTER - -

BUT.... it's the LITTLE THINGS that count....

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable! What's a war in Illyria and another Arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where the real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of the daily Ontario Intelligencer in "inside page" stories—and in every ad too, for the ads in the Ontario Intelligencer are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's news about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Mercury climbing, is it hot enough for you this year? Three or four minutes? This rule, good as it was in the past, does not hold high elevations because the higher one goes the lower the boiling point of water, due to the decrease of air pressure. Incidentally, it was this rule one of the original experiments of Mountain Inn, on the top of Pike's Peak (14,108 feet) water boils at 192 degrees, while it does here in Washington at 212 degrees. So when camping in the mountains you may have trouble cooking. Some people use pressure cookers in mountainous regions. These are arranged so that the lids may be fastened securely, and so that the temperature may be raised above 212 degrees if it is desired to hasten the meal.

Investigation of Official War Secrets Act Ordered

World May Expect Quiet Period Of Radio Reception for Five Years

Ottawa, June 28—(AP)—The world may expect a comparatively quiet period for radio reception and other communications during the coming four or five years, Dr. Harlan Stetson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology predicted today, for the number of sunspots is decreasing.

Addressing the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its summer meeting here this Boston, Mass., astronomer declared that the next increase in sunspot activity reached its maximum about the year 1943, however. Dr. Stetson declared, and the rate would be considerably less than that of the maximum activity of 1870. He attached no particular significance to that fact.

SACRIFICES LIFE

Reports State War Has Bogged Down on All Fronts

Shanghai, June 28 (AP)—A "dare-to-die" Chinese flier was said today to have sunk a Japanese warship in the Yangtze River by deliberately plunging his burning, bomb-laden plane into the vessel's deck.

Chinese air force officers said the act occurred near Anking, 215 miles down river from Hankow, China's provisional capital, Monday, in air attacks that damaged at least three Japanese gunboats and destroyed six Japanese warplanes.

The Chinese pilot, they said, dived headlong in the gunboat's deck when Japanese anti-aircraft fire set his plane afire, "exploding his bombs and breaking the back of the vessel."

The officers pridefully called the deed "another case of Chinese flier heroically sacrificing his life

Judicial Separation, Then Divorce For Countess Reventlow Expected

London, June 28—(AP)—Married, Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow's second marriage—to Judicial separation but expected to end in eventual divorce—was indicated today.

The Woolworth heiress' Danish lawyer, Henning Rejadorph, was reported by the Daily Mail to have disclosed the first legal steps against her husband, Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, which he filed on this week.

The Countess summoned Herr Rejadorph to London to advise her on her divorce suit, the Mail reported, over the rearing of their two-year-old son, Lance. He was reported to have said the Count and Countess would go separate ways through judicial separation in "the near future" but that no steps would be taken until his return to Denmark.

The Countess' first marriage, to the late Prince Alexis Mdivani, ended in a Reno divorce May 13, 1935. She married the Danish Count the next day.

Unless a divorce is specifically applied for after a judicial separation, according to Danish law, the Count and Countess merely would remain separated, Herr Reddorph said the Mail reported. Legal steps to hold over the child and would be permitted to see him on holidays. He said the Countess would have custody of the boy until his 18th birthday.

With his army forced down on all fronts, most Japanese operations were confined to aerial attacks over south China.

Island Bombed

The island of Hainan off the coast of Kwangtung Province was bombed yesterday. No new sign of a major Japanese offensive in south China was apparent, however.

In Tokyo, the Japanese Foreign Office denied Japan had warned by France and Great Britain against occupying Hainan Island, strategically situated near French Indo-China and British Hong Kong.

(Richard Austen Butler, British Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, yesterday told the House of Commons a joint British-French warning had been issued to Japan to keep her hands off Hainan. He said the two powers were pledged to act together to meet any "complications" arising.

Devastating floods of the Yellow River, in Honan Province, have swamped Japan's siege of Chengchow and inundated wide areas of what was the main battle area of the conflict.

DETAILS OF GUNS CALLED MENACE FOR GIBRALTAR

Duchess of Atholl Claims Guns Are of German Manufacture

SPAIN TROUBLE CENTRE

London, June 28—(AP)—The Duchess of Atholl today gave details of what she said were guns "threatening Gibraltar" from insurgent Spain and issued notice she would ask Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons tomorrow what he intends to do about them.

The Duchess recently resigned the Conservative Whip and has been a frequent critic of the government over its Spanish policy.

The question of such guns, allegedly of German manufacture, has been raised repeatedly during the Spanish civil war. The government has taken the position generally that they are not a threat to Gibraltar, its fortress at the western entrance to the Mediterranean.

Number of Guns Related

The Duchess' question enumerates the guns in greater detail than any previous list. It cites:

More than 30 guns in nine armored emplacements, facing across the bay from Gibraltar, including seven 9.2 inch guns and 23 degrees. So when camping in the mountains you may have trouble cooking. Some people use pressure cookers in mountainous regions. These are arranged so that the lids may be fastened securely, and so that the temperature may be raised above 212 degrees if it is desired to hasten the meal.

He foresaw even greater saving to come with the completion of council during the coming year. The number of secondary schools for the township was also explained by the Thurlow Reeve.

Among other matters discussed at the evening's entertainment were, a solo by Earl R. Welsh, Mr. Robson was presided over by Miss Margaret Reynolds, president.

Plans for New Wing at Hospital Calling for 3 Floors, Basement Given Approval by W.C.A.

Addition to Belleville General Hospital Will House 36 Beds, Surgical, X-Ray and Other Modern Equipment

—Will Relieve Condition Which Has Existed For Some Years— Renovation of Hospital Proper Included in Plans.

Plans submitted by the Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital, that call for the erection of a new wing addition to the hospital proper were approved last night by members of the Board of Christian Association of Belleville who own the hospital.

The new wing will consist of a basement and three floors and will be erected at the west side of the main building and will provide for thirty-six additional beds and will include modern surgical and hospital equipment, such as a new X-Ray department, examining rooms, central sterilizing department, emergency department and other up-to-date facilities.

Entailing renovation of the hospital proper that includes entire interior decoration, alterations of kitchen facilities, as well as installation of a new pediatric department, which will be furnished by the Nurses Alumni Association.

Plans for the new addition were drawn up by Messrs. Sheridan, Ferguson and Lindsay, Toronto architects, who have had considerable experience in hospital construction. Work on the new project is expected to start within the next few months, hospital officials stated this morning.

Occupation Will be Relieved

The additional accommodation, provided by the new wing, will relieve the hospital congestion that has existed for years, it is pointed out. Heretofore it has been necessary at times to accommodate patients in the halls, where under such circumstances it is hardly possible to render the best type of service.

Will Provide Long-Felt Want

The new wing will provide a long-felt want in hospital and medical circles, as it is the first general facilities are insufficient to accommodate the large number of patients of this district that are seeking hospitalization daily.

The Hon. Dr. Forbes, Administrator of the hospital, stated today that the new wing would be of inestimable value and service to this district. Paying tribute to executives and members of the Belleville Christian Association, Mr. Friesen stated that too much credit could not be given them. "It is mainly through the efforts of this organization that this district enjoys the benefits and facilities of a modern hospital."

Sarajevo and 24 Years After

Bouquet of Carnations Withering on Grave of Youth Who Brought on June 28, 1914, Fired Shots Which Brought on the World War. — Prinzip Now Almost Forgotten.

'WAR' ON EVERYONE'S LIPS TODAY

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, June 28—(AP)—This Bosnian city, the scene 24 years ago of the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife the Duchess Sophia of Austria-Hungary, took little notice of the anniversary today of the incident that started the Great War.

A little bouquet of carnations withered on the almost forgotten grave of Gavrilo Prinzip, the youth whose pistol shots made Sarajevo historic.

A few tourists showed interest in the little bridge over the Miljacka river, marked now by a tablet, where the shots were fired June 28, 1914. That was all.

Hero or Misguided Youth

The anniversary served to revive the question that often is mildly debated in Sarajevo—was Prinzip a hero or only a misguided youth?

Dr. Milan Pfeiffer, who was Mayor of Sarajevo at the time and took the first statements from Prinzip after the slaying of Austrian Archduke.

Dr. Pfeiffer still lives here in a recent volume of reminiscences he described Prinzip as "a courageous and convinced the slaying was an act of the highest patriotism."

SAW MAN AT PEN

According to the evidence, a charge was laid against Dales when the body of the one-armed recluse could have inflicted the fatal injuries. The man's body was found wrapped in quilts on a bed by a neighbor, Alexander Craig, rural mail collector, Walter Reid, who testified he saw Dales "lying on the bed at an angle, face on the floor."

Reckless Driving Made Offence Even If No Accident Occurs

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)—Lurid magazine covers depicting shooting scenes would be banned if Hon. Ian Gladstone (Lib. Wellington South) had his way. In the House of Commons today he moved an amendment to the Criminal Code to make it an offence punishable by a fine of $100 or 30 days in jail to print, make or sell such covers.

The proposal came just after the House approved some 30 amendments to the code sponsored by the government but it did not get far. Justice Minister Lapointe said he appreciated the motive and the intention behind the proposal but thought it would not be much use to ban such pictures from the country and magazines as it was legal to print them inside.

The code amendments provided more severe penalties for highway accidents where death results. They legalized slot machines and gambling devices.

Under the bill reckless driving is made an offence even if no accident occurs and nothing is done. The maximum penalty is two years in jail or a fine of $1,000 or both. Action a person found guilty may be prohibited from driving for three years.

The original proposal of a term of one month or a fine of $50 for driving while disqualified under provincial law was changed to six months or $100. He said the heavier penalty was necessary because of the hope that to take place of the Garden Party.

ALD. CUSHING WOULD LIKE TO SEE LIFT PUT IN CITY HALL

Cost of installation of a small elevator or automatic lift for the convenience of city hall callers which improvement has been considered for some time past as to its practicability and cost, is estimated by Alderman Frank Cushing chairman of Market and City Property Committee to be in the neighborhood of $800.

The lift which would be self operating, and installed in one corner of the tower section of the City, left of the main building entrance, could be of the type easily used by one not familiar with operation of the more common lifts by Otis or other manufacturers.

Ald. Cushing's idea is a commendable one, developed locally by himself and Chief Cruickshank, and if the city decides to go ahead with the project, the work could be done by local workmen.

Liberal Member Made No Suggestion of Date Court Was to Reconvene

The story appearing in Monday's issue under the heading "Liberal Member Upsets Conservatives' Composure at Napanee Court" was taken from another paper which misreported the incident.

The true facts of the matter were that the remark credited to Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., suggesting that the court reconvene on July 6 was really made by the court by way of a friendly joke as the Conservative convention in Ottawa falls on this date.

There was really no intention that the court reconvene at that time.

Amateur Canoeists Get Ducking in Bay To Onlookers' Delight

Only to the comic sections of Sunday papers could such incidents happen as those observed by upwards of spectators at Victoria Park yesterday afternoon.

Sliding easily into the pier at the Bridge street park a canoe containing a young lady and a man, carried beside the wooden framework. The girl in an effort to get out of the canoe, braced one foot on the gunwale, the other on the pier. The canoe, unable to stand the strain, gradually drifted away, the space between widening as the apprehensive girl managed to retain one foot on the pier and one in the canoe. The end came when she slipped between the boat and pier in an inglorious splash.

Her companion in an effort to secure the canoe, had reached out, hands on the edge, leaning far out over the water from the pier. The current continued to push the canoe farther out, this incident ending when the man also followed the girl into the water. Observers liked man and girl out of the water, a swimmer rescuing the drifting canoe.

But a few moments later, a second canoe, containing a youth and a bathing companion also managed to tip, precipitating both into the water, through which they were able to swim ashore.

Citizens Invited To Use the Parks

Members of the Belleville Parks Commission invited citizens and organizations to utilize the facilities of Victoria Park and the Exhibition Grounds, for the use of private picnics during the fine weather, this evening held last night. The passing of accounts and routine business pertaining to the beautifying of city parks was the only business completed, leaving the meeting open for discussions of welfare in the matter of educating the public to be conscious of the various city parks, which are at the disposal of all.

"We have spent considerable money this year in an effort to make Victoria Park and the Exhibition Grounds enticing to the general public. As long as no property damage results, the public is not only invited to hold private picnics, but urged to utilize the facilities of our city parks for these purposes," stated Chairman Commissioner W. J. Woodley, as he added that new benches had already been placed at the disposal of the public on city parks.

Fire Destroys Farm House in Tyendinaga

Fire, believed to have originated from a defective chimney totally destroyed the house, and interior part of the contents, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hill, Tyendinaga Township Reserve on Saturday morning.

Loss was estimated at $1,400.

Breaking out shortly after ten o'clock while the family were in Belleville, the flames swept rapidly through the upper part of the building preventing any attempts on the part of neighbors to remove effects from this part of the blazing structure.

Some household effects, however, were saved from the ground floor rooms, as neighbors battled in an unsuccessful attempt to save the property.

Unaware of their loss, Mr. and Mrs. Hill returned at three o'clock Saturday afternoon to discover their home a mass of smouldering ruins.

Police Blotter

Two men, who police say are Fred Canon, address unknown, and Victor Whitely, Belleville, were arrested on Canadian National Railway property by C.N.R. police authorities last evening. Today Whitely was charged with vagrancy, while Canon stood charged with intoxication when the pair appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace. Both were remanded in custody until Saturday.

Friday being Dominion Day and a legal holiday, there will be no sitting of local police court, the court being adjourned for 24 hours, to be held on Saturday, this week.

Royal Canadian Air Force officials today notified civil police authorities of the loss of a truck marker license, Ontario number 923-C. The plate was found missing from an Air Force truck early today, it was announced.

A bicycle, the property of Lawrence Thrasher, 113 Canniffon Road, was reported stolen from its parking position on Station street last evening. Later the bicycle was found abandoned nearby, doubtlessly being taken by a joy rider, and returned to its owner.

TURNER VALLEY OIL FIELD IS ROTARY SUBJECT

Development Steadily Progressing But Facilities For Marketing Inadequate — Pipe Lines Needed

Turner Valley oil field in Alberta was the subject of discussion at the Belleville Rotary Club weekly meeting in Hotel Quinte Monday. The speaker of the occasion was Mr. Donald S. Boister, a native of Cobourg, who has spent a number of years in Western Canada, and been actively associated with the oil industry. The speaker was introduced by Ross Salsbury and Rotary appreciation was expressed by Orland Pinkston. A brief history of the Turner Valley oil field its development and possibilities was given by the speaker who visioned a great national asset in the oil resources of Canada, not only in Alberta but in other prairie provinces and Ontario which he said had never been given a thorough testing for oil. The Turner Valley oil field is located about sixty-five miles south and west of Calgary, and the first development produced gas in unlimited quantities, which gave the impression that it was a gas field entirely. This gas being wasted, great national asset which might be utilized in a pipe ing in flames night and day—not only wasted but being a huge drain on the crude oil wells. Compared with the United States oil develop., speaker said, "Ever in its infancy with only about two hundred wells in 39,000 developed, in the United States.

Pipe Line to Calgary

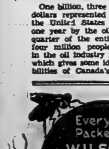
Sketching briefly the first gas well brought in, the thorough the various ups and downs and booms to the present methodical and steady development, the speaker predicted that this would be the greatest oil field in the British Empire. The present field under development of eight wells being by two miles wide where crude oil is being produced. Prospecting proceeds in other directions and many more wells could be brought in if there were facilities for handling a larger output. A pipe line extends to Calgary but is too small to meet growing requirements. Other and larger pipe lines should be provided and the speaker thought the Dominion Government should be interested enough in the field to provide pipe lines from Calgary to the east of the lakes and west. With the development of the western oil fields to anything like their capacity, every thirty million barrels in Alberta alone, enough to take care of double the demands of Canada, there would be a large revenue provided for the government as well as much employment given.

Discovery Well

In 1936 the first crude oil well was brought in in Turner Valley. Forty to fifty wells have been completed and many more are being sunk.

Cost of drilling an oil well approximates $150,000, and in very deep wells may reach a quarter of a million dollars. The depth of the first has to be drilled through various strata before oil is reached and the cost increases with depth as drills are operated at about $50 each and upward. Sulphuric acid is pumped down the pipe to clear the lime and other deposits from the sides of the oil.

A flow of 500 barrels a day can be reduced increased to 1,500 barrels with increased pressure provided.



Wells Widely Scattered

While Oklahoma oil fields have as high as ten wells to an acre Turner Valley may have one to twenty acres or more per acre. In fact one well has a spread of 160 acres, since there is ample room for expansion in the field, the great need being for facilities to handle increased production. the speaker's opinion being that nobody the Dominion or the provincial governments have become wise to the great possibilities of Canada as producing industries in Canada.

Why do the big oil companies not develop the field?, is a question often asked and the speaker said that the big companies had plenty of oil rather than developers, hence were best interested in producing than in buying and selling.

Billions in Taxes

One billion, three hundred million dollars represented the taxes paid by the United States Government in one year by the oil industry, one-quarter of the entire revenue and four million people are employed in the oil industry. The total country which gives some idea of the possibilities of Canada's oil fields only

Marmora

Marmora—Brinton football team, unbeaten contender for Peterborough and District Football League honors, journeyed to Bloora on Saturday afternoon, only to find that a game could not be played with the Smeltermen on account of rain. The Brinton team had assembled several players from the defunct Packer's team and it was noted the Downer Brothers as well as Wilf Curtis, who has done some neat goalkeeping here on former occasions are playing with the Brintons this year. The refree, Jack Heslop, who has not officiated at Deloro before, was welcomed by the Smelters, who were informed that he had given good satisfaction in the recent Brinton—Cobalt game. Wilf Jones accompanied the team and renewed acquaintances. Bill Brown, of the Smelter's club, was there. It is the first time in ten years that a visiting team arrived in Deloro to have a game rained out. Manager Wilson and his team can therefore count it better weather conditions when next they are scheduled to meet the Townsend squad.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton — Heat in ever-increasing waves poured down on this section in such quantities during the past several days that several prostrations have been reported Business during the afternoon hours has shrunk to a new low for the city. Only a handful of men on Friday afternoon one pupil is reported to have collapsed as a result of the extreme heat. Many school hours were shortened to let the kids go home early. Merchants and chants along the busier portion of the town, including the bank and trade, and farmers are equally loud in their complaints that berries are ripening too rapidly, that fast and peas are scorching and withering. Similar reports are reported from Wooler and Stockdale and Glen Miller on Friday but no damage remained unfreezed by any moisture.

Miss Margaret Bowen, a member of the staff of the Courier-Advocate, is also on the sick list after an illness extending over a period of days.

Returning to Trenton the week to complete an extensive two-week tour of southern states of the republic to the south of us, Mr. and Mrs Keith Hadley, Henry Street, related stories of many new and interesting sights, and of living conditions in some places quite unthought of by Canadians. Certain portions of the south have been hard hit by the so-called recent "business recession" and people are living in places that many hardly be called houses in many cases. Mr. and Mrs. Hadley travelled together in Mr. Hadley's automobile, a modern cycle, and covered more than 4,500 miles during their stay.

Apparently having failed to find any trace to speak of hereabouts the motor cruiser sent here by Captain Harry Redfearn has departed for places unknown. Several local excursion trips were planned but for some unknown reason it beat received little use, and now it seem, that the venture has been abandoned. If such is the case it seems a shame, for short water trips, particularly moonlight excursion, even as far as Belleville or Presqu'ile Point, would almost certainly have been popular here within a short time.

x x x

Tales of lake bass being laid up at ports all along the line are evidently only too true, and local men sailing on these lines are coming back home for a time at least. Captain Gordon Bowerman is at home until some further word is available regarding shipping, and Captain Bill Simpson at the transfer, of Gray and Derry.

NATIONAL BIRTHRATE

The importance of the birthrate in world affairs is indicated in the Hamilton Spectator, which refers to Sir Leo Chiozza Money's article in the Nineteenth Century, London, particularly with regard to Britain, whose population of 40,000,000 of today will have dropped to 34,000,000 by 1970 if the present rate of decline continues. In a century it may have declined to as low as [illegible] millions, according to his article.

"South Africa and Canada are more favorable in the almost purely British dominions—Australia and New Zealand. "It is true that the French-Canadians and the Boers who have a much greater fall in the rates of Canada and South Africa. Thus while the birthrate of Ontario (1936) was as low as that of Quebec was 24.3. Soon the population of Canada will fall below the British population."

Australia and New Zealand Sir Leo describes as small peoples of both these countries are dying out, their reproductive rate being far below replacement rate. "The British everywhere are in virtual decline."

The Spectator says: "Some impressive contrasts are then offered. Europe has 533,200,000 people, but the ten most populous nations—Russia, Germany, Britain, Italy, France, Poland, Spain, Rumania, Czechoslovakia Jugoslavia—account for 447,400,000 of them. Of these ten nations six have birth rates above replacement rate; Germany has made a fine recovery, and three nations—Britain, France and Czechoslovakia—are in serious decline.

"The population of Soviet Russia, for example, should grow—by present trends—from 180,000,000 to 250,000,000 in 1982. Germany has lifted her rate from 14.7 per thousand in 1933 to 19. in 1936, and Italy shows the same trend.

"Then Japan. The birth rate in that country is ten per thousand higher than is needed to maintain her existing population. In ten years Japan will add to her people a number as great as the combined populations of Australia and New Zealand. Moreover, the population of that country is predominantly young."

With the new political situation developed in Europe and Asia is to be considered this problem of the maintenance of population. The rise in the populations of Russia, Germany, Italy, Japan is one of the striking features.

DOCTOR'S 'DON'TS' FOR BERNARD SHAW

When George Bernard Shaw speaks his words are usually couched in such clever phraseology that any comment of his has for years won prominent position in the press of the civilized world, his readers including no doubt many who do not agree with him.

But Mr. Shaw is getting to be an old man. (He once wrote a very long play 'Methusaleh'.) And his doctor has issued orders which will be difficult for Shaw to follow but he really must, to be a good patient, follow them. He has been suffering for the past few months from what is called "a form of anaemia" and the orders have come from the doctor:

Don't talk to anyone about anything.

Don't read controversial topics in newspapers.

Don't answer the telephone.

Don't write articles.

Mr. Shaw is to many so delightful in controversy that one need not be surprised if the ban on reading controversial subjects is difficult to him. And he has such a gift in writing and in speaking and is so interested in life that all these bans cannot but be felt.

Mr. Shaw has carried his brilliant mind into old age. He will be eighty-two on July 25. But he has written a new play "Geneva" and is worrying more over the probability that he may not be allowed to direct rehearsals than over the illness itself.

The world whom Shaw has made his audience will hope that with the rest and restraints imposed by the doctor he will recover his strength and enjoy years of productive work.

EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN

New York Times

Perhaps a woman is more independent in an office taking dictation than she is in a kitchen making cherry pie. Most of us used to take it for granted that this was the case, much though we liked, and continue to like, cherry pie. But one begins to suspect that the work any one, man or woman, does is not half so important as the opportunity to make a personal choice of what the work shall be. The typewriter is no more a symbol of emancipation than is the electric range or the automatic refrigerator. Typewriting can be dull and slavish, and cooking can be a gay adventure, and conversely.

We can give real freedom to women or any other section of humanity; as a rule, all we can do is to take notice of the fact when people gain freedom for themselves. American women did precisely that, and they ought not to give the credit for it to a machine or any number of machines. They got where they are today by their own efforts and (except in subways, in elevators, in business guildings in Northern cities and in cases where we are bareheaded) we take off our hats to them.

HIGH AND HIGHER FINANCE

From the Land of Uneasy Money comes this tale of High Finance as explained by the professor to the primary class in the Higher Mathematics of How to Get Rich Quick by Making the Mind Work instead of the Body. The author's name has been lost in the shuffle, but the idea of financing a row in the modern manner as described bears striking resemblance to some of the methods alleged to have been practised by Frenzied Financiers of the Land of Uncle Sam. Stop! Look! Listen! Here Tis:

Ten men who were financiers chipped in ten dollars each and bought a fine cow that gave ten gallons of milk every day. The milk was divided at night and each man received one gallon as his share.

Soon the neighbors far and near heard about the wonderful cow and said to one another: "Think of getting a whole gallon of milk every day. What a wonderful return on a $10 investment? I wish I had a share in her."

When this talk was repeated to the ten men, they held a meeting and one of them said, "Let us give these people what they want. Our shares in the cow cost us $10 each, and we can sell other shares at the same price."

So they went to a printer and obtained one thousand sheets of paper bearing the legend "One share in the cow." Then they sold 500 of these shares at $10 each, (which brought them $5,000) and divided the other 500 among themselves as their reward for being smart.

Each of the ten now had 51 shares, whereas in the beginning each had but one.

But one of the men began to worry.

"Look here," he said, "Every fellow who bought a share in this cow will expect a gallon of milk to-night, and the cow gives only ten gallons. When the milk is divided into one thousand and ten parts, these new holders won't get a spoonful. Shares will drop to nothing. We'd better unload while we can."

So the ten men went out on the street to find investors and each of them sold the fifty shares that had been awarded to him and thus they obtained a second $5,000 to divide amongst them.

But night was drawing near and again one of the men began to worry.

"There will be a row at milking time," said he. "Hasten abroad and persuade each of the shareholders to sign a proxy, which is a joker authorizing you to cast as you think best the vote to which his share entitles him. Then return with the proxies and we shall do some voting."

At twilight the men met at the barn, and in their hands were 1000 signed proxies to represent the absent shareholders. And the ten men were entitled to vote in their own right, for each still held his original share.

"Now," said the one who did the talking. "We must re-organize. This Company needs a President, a Treasurer, and eight Vice-Presidents. That gives each of us a job. And since there are ten of us, and the cow gives ten gallons, it is moved and seconded that each of us receive a salary of one gallon of milk per day. All in favor say "Aye."

The motion carried without a dissenting vote.

And then they milked the cow!

SLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 28th, 1918.

On the evening of June 26th, an enjoyable and successful lawn social was held on the lawn at Point Anne School by the invited section of the Sunshine Knitting Circle. The band of the 15th. Regiment was in attendance and added much to the evening's entertainment. Mr. Thompson, M.P. for East Hastings, and Mr. Montgomery, County Warden, were present and gave interesting addresses on patriotic work. An attractive booths were well patronized and the goodly sum of $96.00, the net proceeds of the evening, will be given to the work of the Thurlow Red Cross of which the Point Anne Society is a branch. The money will be used to buy wool and other materials used in making articles for the boys overseas. The tapestry cushion donated by Mrs. J. Taylor, was drawn by Mrs. J. Sellon. The embroidered table runner donated by Mrs. Donald MacDonald, was drawn by Mrs. Geo. C. MacDonald, who generously gave it back and it was sold at auction.

That Col M. J. Hendrick for 15 years United States consul at this port, has during his residence here conducted the affairs of his office in such a way as to leave no cause for criticism or complaint, no one will deny, and that he has during that time made a host of warm personal friends, who respect him as a man and honored him as a worthy representative of the United States was made apparent at the farewell banquet at Hotel Quinte's when a number of representatives of the best people of Belleville met Mr. and Mrs. Hendrick and his departure for his new post of duty at Moncton, N. B. and to wish Mrs. Hendrick and himself god-speed.

An exciting game of baseball was played on the Foster Avenue park between the "Reds" and a team called the "Front Streets". The score was 20 to 13 in favor of the "Thistles." Mr. H. Corby's free excursion yesterday from Trenton, Sidney and Belleville to Massassaga Point caused an exodus of upwards of 2,000 persons to that popular summer resort. The steamer Quinte carried the Trenton band and many people from that town and made also a number of trips between Belleville and the Point. The steamers Nellie Culbert, Annie Gilbert and Oneida plied as rapidly as possible between the city and the Point and each trip (as late as 4.30 p.m.) carried heavy loads. At six o'clock the tide set in for home. Meals were served upon the grounds. A merry-go-round afforded amusement to a large number of persons both old and young. Fred Brousseau with his violin reaped a harvest of fun and five cent pieces for himself, and diffused happiness to a multitude of others, by furnishing candelite music, to which the boys and girls "hoed it down" to their hearts content. All in all the excursion was a great success and nearly 2,000 people have Mr Corby to thank for all the good the day and its privileges brought them.

That Body of Yours

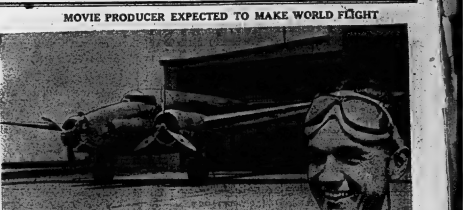
Value of Immediate Operation in Acute Appendicitis

In cases of acute appendicitis it is generally agreed that if the patient undergo operation during the first 36 hours there should not be more than 1 to 100 die. After this time the death rate increases rapidly in proportion to the delay before operation. This does not mean that all those not operated upon will die in fact most of them will recover although the after results may mean years of misery.

Some physicians keep an observant eye upon their acute appendix patients and feel that they would sooner take chances with the appendicitis than have the patient undergo the shock of operation.

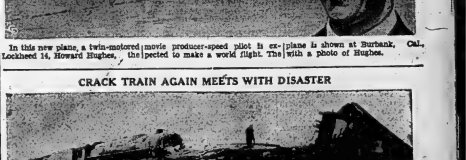
However, in the great majority of cases when the average, normal healthy individual is attacked by acute appendicitis the records show very definitely that his chances for life grow less according to the length of the delay before operation.



Some interesting figures are furnished by Dr. L. Lazzarini, who records his observations of 100 cases of appendicitis operated on at the General Hospital, Milan. Those cases were emergency cases, that is the condition of the patient demanded immediate operation. The record was made for the four years 1932 to 1935.

In 1932 there were 133 cases with 30 deaths (22.5 per cent.); 1933, 174 cases with 26 deaths (14.3 per cent.); 1934, 231 cases with 21 deaths (9 per cent); 1935, 362 cases with 19 deaths (7.26 per cent). In all the cases immediate operation was performed, in almost all the appendix showed areas of gangrene or perforation (had burst) and in more of the cases the patients had been ill several days and had been treated by purgatives and enemas.

Dr. Lazzarini emphasizes the importance of operating within the 48 hours from the onset of the symptoms.



The above figures showing a great decrease in the death rate within a period of four years means that patients and physicians realize more fully the necessity of early operation and also that in cases of a persistent acute pain in the abdomen it is unsafe to use a purgative and that even an enema may be dangerous.

PRESIDENT'S BROADCAST AROUSES STORM OF PROTEST

Here are four striking studies of President Roosevelt, made as he addressed the United States in a radio broadcast, from the White House, in which he bluntly announced his intention to fight all who opposed his policies, regardless of party affiliations. A storm of protest was immediately raised by anti-New Deal members of the Democratic, as well as Republican parties, who expect to bear the brunt of the president's proposed attack. Despite the protests hovering about his head the famous Roosevelt smile was much in evidence when these pictures were made.

Broiled Steak Is Tasty Main Dish in Menu for Diabetic

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Broiled Steak Green Peas
Sliced Tomatoes or Green Salad
Chopped, Buttered Beets
Grapefruit, or Melon Coffee

This is the sort of meal you would serve to a friend who is suffering from diabetes. Very little starches, but no sweets, except natural fruit sugars. The steak should be broiled as rare as the patient can eat it. French dressing is better than mayonnaise, and if you feel you must have bread, make it diabetic bread or rolls. Most bakeries sell it. Cheese and nuts may be added to the menu, in fact, you can serve a dessert of them instead of the grapefruit. You don't need any recipes with this menu. You can cook the peas and add some plain cream to them, but don't make cream sauce with flour.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Picnic Reminder

Everyone enjoys the "carefree-ness" of a day spent out of doors so why not start at the beginning of the season and plan your with a ready-for-sure, old-fashioned picnic?

Picnic Plans may be planned in two groups — those prepared at home and merely packed in a picnic kit for the occasion, and those prepared at the picnic spot. Which kind you choose depends on the equipment available and the inclination of the moment.

Picnic Lunch Box.

As suggestions for foods which say "at home" in the picnic lunch box are hearty cold meat sandwiches, a bowl of potato salad, fruit or fruit for dessert, and a thermos bottle of coffee or iced drink. Or perhaps you will want to prepare a meal all in one kettle, such as a delicious stew or a veal fricasee. When wrapped with several thicknesses of newspaper, this kettle will stay hot for a considerable length of time. A meat loaf, too, is suggested for the picnic meal, by Inez S. Wilson, home economist, and for a different meat loaf flavor, perhaps, you will want to add ground ham to the ground meat mixture for your next picnic loaf.

Camp Style Picnic

Broiled steaks are among the most popular meats for the camp style picnic, and for many out-door enthusiasts, there is nothing better than steaks broiled over the open fire. In fact, according to tradition, steaks were named because they were broiled on sides (steaks) over the fire.

To broil steaks out-of-doors, build a fire first and let it die down until it is a mass of red-hot embers. Place the steaks on a rack far enough from the heat that they will not cook too quickly. By the time one side is brown, the steaks should be about half done. Turn them, and allow them to broil on the second side.

The wire rack from the kitchen stove is a good utensil to use in cooking over the campfire. Large sized old-fashioned kitchen toasters with wire rack, on both sides are useful items of camping equipment.

Frankfurters held on green forked sticks or fastened securely in the toaster and heated over the fire are picnic favorites. As soon as they are heated through and purified with their own juices, have ready a spicy barbecue sauce. Dip them into the barbecue sauce and place in buns.

As a variation of the usual camp sandwiches, here is an idea. Lay a thin slice of mild cheese on a slice of soft bread. Over it place a slice of ready-to-serve meat or fish roll. Slip onion rings over the roll and toast until browned.

"Stolen Heaven" and "Change of Heart"

Olympe Bradna, hailed as Paramount's "find" of the year is now on the first time as the star in her first starring vehicle, "Stolen Heaven," the heart-warming story which brings out all the innocent charm and vivacity of the young French actress who is headed toward the top of the Hollywood ladder.

Blonde Gracie Fields, playing the lead opposite Olympe portraying her partner in crime and romance, Premiminent in the supporting cast are Lewis Stone, Glenda Farrell and Porter Hall.

The story deals with a pair of young lovers, played by Olympe and Raymond, who try to live down their dangerous past in a forest hideaway with a great musician who the world has long forgotten. This man, played by Lewis Stone, has so strong an influence on them that they give up their plans to escape the country and devote themselves to preparing for the old man's "comeback".

On the eve of the festival, however, their past catches up with them in the form of Miss Farrell and Hall, their former confederates, who arrive at the hideaway and spend with them for fee. The events that follow will be found most interesting and entertaining in its happy climax.

"Stolen Heaven" is an experiment in combining a dramatic story with sentiments of the most heart-warming and human kind, and judging from this picture is a successful one.

"Change of Heart". Funny

Once in a lifftime such a mirthful fun comes to the screen.

In "Change of Heart," 20th Century-Fox production announced as the associate feature on the same program, Gloria Stuart gives her funny bone Michael Whalen, by her hobby, golf.

Thus we find a green-eyed husband who believes a woman's place is in the home; an independent wife who believes a woman's place is on the golf links, and intervening, the playboy friend, who believes a woman's place is in his arms. They present a new angle in love.....you try to find a number one. The Belle News, of the day and Cartoon are on the same program. The last complete show starts at 2.30 p.m.

Prospective Grooms Presented With Gifts

Principals and staffs of Queen Mary and Bayside Avenue schools temporarily laid aside the worries of summer examinations and previous to leaving on Saturday afternoon when they honored two of their colleagues, Miss Dorothy Fairman and Harold Mott who are to become one of the latest to be benedicts with handsome gifts at a joint picnic held on the banks of the Trent River.

The presentations were made by Principals Frederick and Mary Ann following a jolly dinner served by the ladies of Bayside Methodist Wallace of Queen Ann School.

Blushing in a manner that would have done credit to their prospective brides, Messrs. Fairman and Mott, in brief appreciative addresses thanked their colleagues for the generous gifts.

Various forms of diversion, that included softball and other games formed the afternoon's entertainment, that was greatly enjoyed by all despite the fact that a party of would-be fishermen and ladies received an impromptu ducking when they were caught in a shower while rowing in a boat in search of the elusive pickerel.

The silvery look of a dirigible is due to an aluminum coating, which reflects light and thus lessens the interior cooler.

Lichens that grow in the woods on trees and rocks, rarely appear near cities because they are sensitive to gases and dust.

A recent German product is a glass that can be sawed, bored, milled or carved.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Sorry She Isn't Jealous Any More

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are an old married couple and have created our youth in being jealous of each other, spying and making recriminations. My wife was never a pretty woman, nor did she appeal to other men as I could see. But I couldn't help this jealousy. It was constitutional.

And to return I got a big kick out of her jealousy of me. No, I never appealed to the ladies but for a young and fair accusation put me on a little pedestal in my own estimation. Once she asked me to visit a niece say: "If Uncle Billy hadn't any niece, but the most unattractive couple I ever saw."

I couldn't resist telling this to my wife, who was furious with her niece, and now we aren't jealous but just something serene to have left out of our lives.

Ex-Jealousy

Well my dear sir even if the secret of jealousy has departed from your married life it must be a lot more peaceful. And here's hoping you catch up with some more nervousness you missed in those earlier years of spying and recrimination.

She's Disgusting That He Doesn't Trust

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been in love with this girl for a very long time, but when we started going together and I had a good job I couldn't take her out because I had to pay off an old debt. I never like to owe anyone money so I told her so. She didn't think I was joker. But now that the money is paid I have lost my job and she seems disgusted with me.

If I had a good job I'd marry her tomorrow, sometimes she is kind, so I don't quite despair.

P. M. H.

Whatever the girl may think, it was your duty to pay off that old debt rather than spend your money on expensive dates, when you probably need it to borrow who needed it. My advice to you is not to hide your light under a bushel, but tell the girl your reasons for expecting stingy. And you're looking forward to the time when you can take her out. This will also answer Steve.

Can See Him Four Days Out of Seven

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're planning on getting engaged this June. I'm 17, he's 21. But we don't expect to be married for a few years yet. My father thinks I'm getting too serious over this boy and will only let me see him on Wednesdays, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

I would like to know what I can do to make my parents understand that I love this boy very much, and positively will not break my word to them. He is a visitor, a nice say: "If Uncle Billy hadn't any niece, but the most unattractive couple I ever saw."

I couldn't resist telling this to my wife, who was furious with her niece, and now we aren't jealous but just something serene to have left out of our lives.

Ex-Jealousy

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Acknowledgements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother passed away last week and I am sending out personal acknowledgments of flowers and notes of sympathy. I do not know how they should be signed. I am married and have my father and a brother. Do I address the inside card too or just the envelope.

L—Should these cards be personal notes or formal cards?

G.

1—These notes of thanks to your relatives and close friends would be signed with your first name only. The ones to people whom you do not know very well, but who are close friends of your family, should be signed:

Very sincerely yours,
Claire Brown Williams

And there might well be those that would have to carry your formal name as well since you may be receiving a large number of acknowledgments to friends of your father and brother whom you personally might not know. If there are such notes sign them:

Very sincerely yours,
Claire Brown Williams
(Mrs. John Williams)

2—It is by far the best form to write personal notes for these acknowledgments of notes of sympathy and of flowers. Formal cards are frigid acknowledgments of such warm-hearted messages.

Thank-You-Notes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I received a lovely gift from a dear lady and her daughter . . . a shower gift. The latter was written from Mrs. R. and Mrs. G. Should I write two separate letters? How should the envelope be addressed? Should I be the correct wording for such a letter?

2—Is this letter-paper in good taste?

Reader

1—It would be better form to write a separate letter to each kind giver. Say how much you appreciate their kind remembrance, the wish to make you happy and how much you like the gift, how you plan to use it.

2.—Yes.

Calls

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When you return from our church calls, either in the case of sickness in the home or otherwise, should one return a card? When this wife is with him how should this call be returned?

2—Should one call and make an appointment before one calls or just take a chance that he and his wife will be at home?

3—What about the serving of coffee, tea or other lunch at such a time or when one has other callers?

Edith

1—When your minister comes to call alone, this call would be regarded more in the light of a professional call, and you would not return it. If he is accompanied by his wife, this gives the social aspect to the call and it would be gracious and appropriate for you to call on her as soon as you can conveniently.

2—Do not make an appointment, you make this call just take the chance that they will be at home. If they aren't leave your card.

3—It's one of the grandest habits that a woman—like the home can acquire, this being ready to serve tea to the unexpected, when visitors drop in. You can have this tea-serving so arranged that it will be simple and very easy to finish the preparation in a few minutes after the guest or guests have arrived

Presenting in Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When my father does not wish to give me away at my wedding, do you think it would be all right for my brother to do this, when my father is present at the wedding?

Wondering

Yes, it would be the reasonable thing for you to have your brother present you in marriage, since your father, for any reason, is not to take this honor.

Bridal Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have been having quite a discussion as to whether or not married women are invited to bridal showers. I can see no reason why, if these women are friends of the bride, they should not be invited, and have decided to ask you for your advice.

T.

I agree with you . . . there is no reason why married friends of the bride-to-be should not be invited to the bridal shower. If they are close friends of the bride-to-be I see no reason why they should be penalized for being married, by not being invited to the shower!

Undersized Girls Urged To Stretch, Drink Milk

By HELEN POLLETT)

THE SMALL GIRL does a lot of walking about her stature, but she doesn't get much sympathy. Compared to the tall woman her life is a "bed of roses."

Undersized girls who have not attained full growth can help themselves by drinking a quart of milk a day getting nine hours of sleep and taking vigorous exercises.

Stretching is recommended. Stand facing the wall on the toes, extend the arms straight over the head and let the fingers creep up the wall. Stay in that position while you count to ten, slowly. Chinning the bar is another good exercise. Grasp the bar, letting up the body until the chin touches it.

After full growth has taken place, one must help it. Every effort must be made to avoid overweight. If the small woman remains slender she will look young. She must keep her waistline trim. She should not want a lot to her. Youthful garments are her special dish. She can wear cute hats until she is 90.

Only a "ninety" will clip her eyelashes. Clipping will have no effect upon the growth. Clipping removes the delicate upturned point, causing the growth to appear ugly and stubby.

Exercise In Bath On Hot Day

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

IF HOT weather is discouraging you from doing those reducing exercises that you had made up your mind to continue, come what may —then try a new stunt. This is a brand new way to keep up your reducing routine and not get hot and bothered.

Do these exercises in your bath-tub. They should be taken in tepid water, and followed with a shower. Gradually the temperature of the shower. Have the water warm at first and let it subtly become cooler.

Priscilla Lawson.

A girl with a perfect figure

The grocery boy will naturally heat up your body somewhat, and a sudden cold shower would be too much of a shock to your system.

Here is the first movement. Sit Indian fashion in the tub with the your arms and legs crossed, facing forward. Turn sideways in the tub, keeping your original position. Bend to the right until the tip of your elbow touches the bottom of the tub. Then bend to the left until the tip of your left elbow touches the bottom of the tub. Alternate. Repeat this ten times on the right and ten times on the left. This exercises the waist, and strengthens the muscles of the back and shoulders.

Second — the bicycle. This is really the bicycle exercise taken in a semi-lying position instead of flat on your back as it is usually done. With your back practically resting on the sloping end of the tub and your feet stretched out, do the following:

Lift your right leg until your foot is on an even line with your shoulder. Bend your knee, drawing it straight back. The knee should be a deep bend. Lift your foot from this position and describe a circle as in pedaling a bicycle.

Increase Speed

Do the movements up to the pedaling slowly and go into action slowly. Then increase your speed, going faster and faster all the time. Always try to maintain the correct position in order to really benefit from your efforts. Repeat with your left leg.

This constant action and shaping of the body reduces and firms them. Flabby muscles are also strengthened.

Third, draw your knees up under your chin. Place your arms tightly around your knees. Hold the feet off the floor of the tub. Contract the muscles and proceed to "walk" or shuffle your body forward the length of the tub. You can feel the pressure on the cushions of fat. This is good for reducing the "derriere".

These exercises can be done every day if you like. They should keep your figure in shape. After your workout take a tepid shower and then a cool one and you'll be as fresh as a daisy.

Washable Dress, Shields

Nothing proclaims lack of daintiness in a woman more than a dress that is faded under the arms. Shields that are washable and that also offer the best kind of protection for dresses, can be cannot be tacked into the arm holes lightly so that they may be removed for use, and water treatments.

Emotional Factor In Digestion

Influence of Mind On Stomach Is Studied

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY we referred to the advice given a distinguished patient with ulcer of the stomach, by a distinguished clinic. Part of it was that he should free himself from "physical, nervous and emotional stress."

In other words, the clinic recognized the importance of the influence of the mind and the emotions on digestion. And that was in a case where the trouble was definitely organic. There was a punched-out place, an ulcer, in that stomach. How could it be influenced by the emotional state? Why, because the emotions can influence the movements of the stomach which irritate the tender focus, and they can influence the secretions of the stomach which might pour out, digest the edges and enlarge it.

Now, ulcer is only one of many forms of indigestion, but it is almost the only common one that is based on organic disease in the stomach. The others are functional and simply wrapped up in the emotional state of the patient.

In the psychological department of a large university there was conducted a set of researches in which the department on digestive diseases co-operated with the psychotherapist. All kinds of cases were examined. It was found that it was possible to describe the patient's emotional trends in the three elementary tendencies which apply to disorders or digestion: first, the wish to receive or take as related to stomach disorders; second, the wish to give or eliminate as related to the diarrhea cases, and third, the wish to retain as applied to constipation cases.

Infant Fed by Loving Hands

Taking the first one, it is pointed out that the infant's first desires are to be fed, and this is done by a loving and affectionate mother. In childhood always it is loving hands that prepare and serve food, that contribute to the satisfaction of hunger. In after life it would be quite natural that conflicts—the loss of that affectionate circle who once administered that basic need—would result in "temperamental indigestion."

Collins studies revealed another kind of conflict to be present in the mind—the idea that one had given so much to the world that he deserved to have rest and peace. This idea did not occur, engendered hate, and the intestinal disorder was the expression of that.

The constipated individual, on the contrary, had a pessimistic idea about receiving help from others, and retains everything for himself even to intestinal contents, which he does not want to give rid of. Bankers and millionaires are said to be very constipated.

The ideas of modern psychologists are still in a jumbled state, and these ideas may seem queer to many, but there is certain sense to them to suggest that many "anxiety dyspepsias" and "nervous colonics" would do well to have psychotherapeutic treatment.

Poems That Live

THE EARTH AND MAN

A little sun, a little rain,
A soft dew sinking from the west—
And woods and fields are sweet again
And warmth within the mountain's breast.

So simple is the earth we tread,
So quick with love and life her frame,
Ten thousand years, have dawned and fled,
And still her magic is the same.

A little love, a little trust,
A soft impulse, a sad-ten dream—
And life as dry as desert dust
Is fresher than a mountain stream.

So simple is the heart of man.
So ready for new hope and joy;
Ten thousand years since time began
Have left it younger than a boy.
—Stopford Augustus Brooke.

Oregon Clam Bake

Two loin pork chops, one medium onion, one egg, beaten; two cans (one pound each) tiny minced clams and liquid, two cups water, bread crumbs to thicken, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of black pepper. Cut flesh off bone, of chops. If there is much fat, discard most of it. Put meat and onion through medium knife or food chopper. Add beaten egg, minced clams and liquor, then stir in bread crumbs to thicken mixture and season well. Turn into buttered baking dish and bake an hour in moderate heat. Serves eight generously. This was the main dish served at a camp supper in Oregon during a recent cross-country trip.—Mrs. D. E. Sexton.

Train Youngsters Early To Observe Health Rules

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

IN THE EARLY years of the child, his health habits depend almost entirely on the nurse or mother. By the age of five or six, any normal child, if properly guided, can be taught to observe the following rule, of health and personal cleanliness:

Take a daily bath. Brush the teeth twice every day. Wash hands always after going to the toilet. Use own towel, washcloth and drinking cup. Sleep long hours in the open or with open window. Take rest after a night on chair or sir. Drink a quart of milk a day. Drink at least two cups of water between meals. Play out-of-doors every day with other children. Have a bowel movement every morning. Use a handkerchief properly, and always have one handy. Turn head and cover the mouth when coughing or sneezing. Keep fingers out of nose. Keep hands away from face and hair. Keep fingers and pencils out of mouth.

At the age of five we can reasonably expect the child to have learned in regard to food and eating:

Keep Goals in Mind

To take mouthfuls of suitable size. To chew food thoroughly. To eat food without haste. To empty mouth before taking a drink. To eat all food that is served, with-out comment about the food. To eat only at mealtime. To have no food dislikes.

Most of us parents would be very happy to observe such achievements. Though most of us may fail, let us keep on struggling, with these goals in mind.

Here are some health signs all of us can observe in our child: Eyes are bright, with clear vision. Hearing is good. Skin is clear, with good color, and no circles under the eyes. Hair is abundant, glossy and elastic. Flesh is firm. Muscle, also firm. Bones straight. Teeth in good condition (no cavities). Breath not unpleasant. Posture good—sits tall, stands tall, toes straight, practically no slouching. Good elimination, with at least one regular bowel movement daily. Good natured, happy, active mentally and physically. Does not tire easily, sleeps well, is free from headache's and colds, not susceptible to disease, and makes regular normal increase in weight and height.

It is a good thing for us to have our children checked regularly by a competent physician, even when they seem to be entirely well.

Girl Loves Boy Who Shuns Her

Undecided Before, Now She's Sure She Cares

By VIRGINIA LEE

I WONDER how many letters I have had from girls who were indifferent to the men who loved them until at the men had ceased to care, and then found they were desperately in love with said men. I am sure if such letters were laid end to end they would stretch a great distance.

A MISERABLE GIRL tells me her woes along this line. She went with a certain young man for a while, then they didn't see each other. Then they went together again and he told her he loved her. Her demure was that "sometimes" I loved him and sometimes I hated him; she says. Do I think that is love? No, I don't.

"When I'm with him I'm quiet, but I enjoy myself. He has the same taste I do."

But, now, as she writes, she is "so blue and lonely I'm nearly going crazy" because the boy isn't seeing her for a while and even told a girl friend that he may stop seeing her altogether. "The whole thing is a mixabell," she writes, "is that he told me he loved me, but I didn't know whether I loved him or not. Now since he isn't coming to see me, I'm worried and think I love him. What should I do?"

Wait to see whether your longing for him lasts before you do anything, my dear. After all, your pride may be the only thing damaged by his treatment. I don't believe from what you tell me that you have any grand passion for him. Why not adopt a fatalistic attitude and decide that if he is not "meant" for each other he will come back, and if it is just passing fancy with both of you, he won't and you'll be happier whichever happens? Do not write the young boy and don't stay home "blue and lonely". That is good economics and sense.

X X X

"Why Some Men Go Wrong" is the title of a letter from "one who says he is a married man and nearly grown up. He likes to work, works nearly every day, and when he comes home he works around the house. He doesn't drink and has no bad habits.

He has a nice home and good friendliness, but his wife cares very little for him. She won't say good-by to him when he leaves for work sometimes won't speak to him for weeks together; forgets to mend his clothes, so that he washes and sews them herself. He packs his own lunch and gets nearly all his own meals. She even seems to begrudge him money to ride to work. All his wife is interested in is to pay check, he declares. "So if I do sin for another woman she can't blame anyone but herself?" he asks.

Such a wife shouldn't be surprised if her husband finds a more appreciative companion. I should think. At the same time, you would like to know anything to bring disgrace upon your children, would you? As to the money part, you don't have to give her all you earn, do you? You certainly have a right to some money out of what you earn.

BLUE EYES has been going with one boy, but likes another. Which one to choose? Neither is sent to her going with the second. She is only 15. The first boy has been breaking dates on her recently. So what to do? she asks.

Do not go with a boy your parents don't like, my dear. At your age you should use their judgment rather than your own. Refuse a young to be going with boys, anyhow, so don't abuse the privilege.

Bookshelves

By RUBY DOUGLAS

C. Patterson Lomax was an interior decorator. It was suspected that the capital C. in the beginning of his name stood for Clarence but no one had been able to verify it.

C. Patterson as he was called by friends and colleagues was a very elegant person and a very successful practitioner of his profession. He was born up Boston way and he exaggerated his own type a little. He was also very fond of it. Such a decided individuality was a sort of bookmark.

He was ensconced at this moment among the lovely pumpkin yellows on the great couch in his studio. He studied a grouping of colors that he had arranged against the wall. The knocker sounded.

"Come in!" he called without moving.

A slim young girl opened the door cautiously and she resisted an impulse to giggle. She hesitated drawing in her quick glance at the beauty of the studio. She carried a large and awkward package that evidently was not heavy.

"Are you Mr. C. Patterson Lomax?" the girl asked timidly.

"I am that person" he said smiling.

"I came from way up in New England—near Boston—to show you this" she began. "I seem to have such a queer name for it."

"What is it?" asked C. Patterson, his curiosity aroused while his admiration remained.

"A little hanging bookshelf" explained the girl, "I have been making it for some time. I've always had a fancy for making things and I've been told that I have a talent for it. I've always wanted to be a decorator and I've studied at home.

Cleveland Indians Increase Lead in American League Race

Totally Unexpected Surge Of Cleveland and Cincinnati Makes Magnates Real Happy

Possible All-Time High Attendance For Year Will be Made

FELLER WINS AGAIN

Defeats Lefty Grove Before 10,000 by a 7-3 Count

By RED FEDER

Major league magnates, kindly souls who are in the game for the pure fun of the thing, with no thought of profit, are rubbing their hands in glee over the unpredicted way the current pennant races are unfolding.

While the experts "look for answers to the merry-go-rounds both leagues are putting on, the moguls joyfully estimate the size of the piece of pie they're going to slice up if the things keep up.

The totally unexpected surges of the Cleveland Indians and Cincinnati Reds in their respective leagues together with the sensational one-two picture presented by both defending pennant holders, have the turnstiles clicking at a tune indicating a possible all-time attendance high this season.

On the basis of a semi-official Associated Press survey today, ten of the sixteen big league clubs should go over their 1937 figures; three others, including the Yankees, who pulled 1,341,996 through the turnstiles last season, should finish with about the same attendance, and the whole set of clubs is a good chance of eclipsing the record "gate" of 10,-186,000 fans who made a banner year of the 1930 "depression campaign". Only the Phillies, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago White Sox look as if they may not duplicate or better their 1937 figures.

Pilfs Have the "Jitters"

Out-in-Cleveland, where the folks love baseball, but they're thinking of running Manager Oscar Vitt for public office, the Indians look like a cinch to have their season home attendance over the 1,000,000 mark. They've already topped out all last year in that already has attracted almost 421,000 to their games. Last week, they drew forty-four hundred to go.

Yesterday's record 10,000 turned out to see Monty Pelter hand it to Lefty Grove after Monty had won the first of the two games on the big league program. Young Bobby treated the fans to a seven-hit lineup job and fanned ten while his mates landed on Vernon Kennedy for three hits and a 7-3 victory. Jimmy Foxx hit his twenty-first homer of the year off Bobby.

In the only other game on the card, the White Sox took a 8-4 decision over St. Louis Browns in the battle for fifth place. Ted Lyons pitched a nine-hitter and Hank Steinbacher clouted a homer.

The Cleveland victory boosted the tribe's American League lead to four games over the Yankees, and dropped the Red Sox to 1½ games back of the New Yorkers.

DAPPER DAN HOWLEY QUITS AS MANAGER QUITE SUDDENLY

Toronto, June 28 (CP) — Irving John Burns, who has come through other baseball managerial jobs unscathed, is a task today as any in his eventful baseball career.

The 50-year-old veteran baseman who was called on in 1936 to fill in at that position for the then pennant-winning Detroit Tigers stepped last night to the top of the heap when he became International League club. His job two years ago was to replace Hank Greenberg, out with a broken wrist, and he did it by playing the best ball of his life. As manager of the last-place Maple Leafs, he succeeds one of the game's great leaders, Dan Howley.

But the sombre-faced, quiet-mannered first baseman has little time to lose at any rate. He has taken over a club that somehow has failed to click consistently despite youth, ability and aggressiveness. Some 5½ games from fourth place, the Leafs might get going now for Burns and reach the league's four-team playoffs.

Howley's retirement to a front office job came yesterday last night before Toronto began a home stand against Buffalo and followed on a prolonged road slump in which the Leafs slipped from a virtual fourth place tie to the cellar.

Howley, whose connections alone would make him a valuable baseball ager anywhere, left the ranks of the bench managers voluntarily, resigning an advisory post and the job of making player transactions. He has been ill much of the season but officials said that was not the reason for his decision.

Dapper Dan, who has widespread financial interests in Canada, is expected to have ended his active managerial career, which brought him the leadership of the Toronto club four times.

IT'S A HIT!

Crack! And there goes a 4-0 corny second base. Johnny Mize, Meer, sensational pitcher with Cincinnati Reds, is out there trying to mend matters, but he wasn't pitching eggs this game. Jimmy Ripple is the batter who's just delivered for a hit in the Reds-Giants series. Leonard Merrill catching. Ballantant umpiring.

Point Anne Club Now Leading Softball Loop

Minus the services of their ace mound-artist, Mervin Bawden, who was denied an O.A.S.A. transfer to Point Anne, made little difference to Skipper Frank Stokely's "cementmen" as they cuffed the offerings of two Booth-McCrae pitchers to all corners of the premises, and clomped the Red Sox to 1½ games back of the New Yorkers.

BUNNY AUSTIN MAY END CAREER AS TENNIS STAR

Great English Player May Retire if Defeated by Henkel

ONCE IN FINALS

Experts Agree Austin's Game Has Two Weaknesses

By SCOTTY RESTON

Wimbledon, Eng., June 28 (AP)—Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, for ten years Great Britain's model of classical tennis, may end his distinguished career on the center court tomorrow.

When this Wimbledon tourney is done, Bunny has indicated he will have no more of it. And this Wimbledon may be done for Bunny after tomorrow's semi-final against Henner Henkel of Germany.

Ever since Bunny Austin has been in Wimbledon's last eight. . . Five times in this stretch — 1929, 1932, 1936, 1937 and this year — he reached the semi-finals. Once — in 1933 — he reached the final.

The only trouble with Austin was that he was born in an era of great tennis players. He came up first when Henri Cochet was in his ascendency. He stayed until Ellsworth Vines came out of California and crushed him in that final in 1932. He taught Fred Perry until the pupil mastered the master. And by the time Perry passed along came Don Budge.

Technically his game has two weaknesses. The big boys hit his serving too many times. And overhead he definitely is not a big timer. Those are his weakened spots. On forehand and backhand shots he is a picture. He is graceful as a ballet dancer and mentally and physically he is a trigger-quicker.

Moreover Wimbledon's crowds accustomed to and fascinated by his extravagant shots. His public has come for years long before they became popular; his tea taken from the referee's table while changing courts; his brandy taken when the going was particularly tough.

Austin, however, has decided to take all the knowledge he gained at Repton and Cambridge and in tennis and put it all into writing pieces for the papers and plays for the stage.

That's how he's going to raise his two daughter—and that takes courage.

Norman "Baby" Yack Shows Real Form After Layoff

Toronto, June 28 (CP)—Norman (Baby) Yack of Toronto, Canadian bantamweight champion decisively outpointed Jimmy Webster of Buffalo in eight furious rounds in the 10-round feature of a boxing program at Maple Gardens.

Slow to strike his stride Yack solved Webster's somewhat erratic ward style in the fifth and from then on had considerably the better of it.

Yack struck a low blow in the ninth round but Referee Jack Dalton "fool" but Referee Jack Johnson issued only a warning.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Bobby Feller, Cleveland—Pitched seven-hitter and fanned ten, downing Red Sox 7-3.

Hank Steinbacher, White Sox—Hit homer and single, drove in two runs and scored three in 8-4 win over Browns.

CROWD STUNNED AS ANNOUNCEMENT MADE BOXER HAD DIED

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—A crowd of 4,000 fans cheered last night as Ralph Zeigler was announced as the final round of an amateur boxing tournament bout to win by a knockout.

A half hour later the crowd sat silent, stunned by an announcement that Cribari had died. The 18-year-old youth, carried from the ring to a nearby fieldhouse, succumbed without regaining consciousness.

Ring officials said no hard blows had been struck in the first two rounds. In the third Cribari went down with a left to the body and a right to the jaw.

The youths were boxing in the novice class of Chicago Park District Tournament. Grief stricken, Ray Maher, 16, the victorious boxer, fled from the fieldhouse.

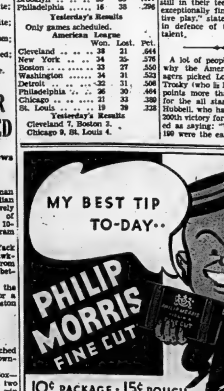
4 TEAMS ENTER GOLF TOURNEY

Quinte Golf Cup Draw Will Be Held at Belleville Club

The annual Quinte Golf Cup competition will be held over the newly extended Belleville golf club course on Wednesday, officials of the Belleville Club announced. The Quinte Golf Cup title has been held for the past three years by the Napanee Golf Club. Four clubs compete in this all-day golf tournament, that commences in the morning with two 18 hole games scheduled.



Picton Trenton Napanee and the Belleville Golf Club are the eligible contestants. The competing teams this year will be composed of nine players instead of the conventional eight of former years thus eliminating possible play-offs in case of tie matches. Calvin Captain Joe Legault stated today, all players competing must qualify for the tournament within his own club during championship play.

A draw for the contesting teams will be made in the morning of the day of play with two games to be duled. The ultimate winners of the morning will meet in the final series for the Quinte Golf title in the afternoon, all matches to be of 18 holes.

The officials of the Belleville Golf Club state they have extended their course considerably, making it a standard course of over 6,000 yards for the 18 hole play. Par for the course now is 35, greens No. 5, 6 and 7 having been lengthened sufficiently to bring the course yardage well over 2,000 yards for the nine holes.

Much interest is being taken at the Belleville Golf Club in connection with the forthcoming Quinte Golf Cup tournament, the "east end" club boasting of several rather proficient and extremely youthful golfers. "Some of our most consistent and higher flight golfers at the Belleville Golf are still in their teens and they show exceptionally fine golf in competitive play," stated one club official in defence of the club's youthful talent.

A lot of people can't understand why the American League batting ages picked Lou Gehrig over Hal Trosky who is hitting just about 80 points more than the iron horse for the all star team. . . . Ted Hubbell, who has just turned in his 200th victory for the Giants, is quoted as saying: "Well, boys, the first 199 were the easiest."

JACK BURNS IS NEW MANAGER OF TORONTO LEAFS

Howley Given an Executive Post in The New Alignment

WIN IN 11 FRAMES

Bobby Porter Drove in The Deciding Tally

It's a time-worn and often useless stunt for a losing baseball club to try to save itself by getting a new manager, but they keep right on doing it. The trick worked for Baltimore Orioles last season. It has brought considerable success to Syracuse Chiefs this season, and it may help the Toronto Maple Leafs, current cellar dwellers of the International League.

The Leafs shifted their allegiance from Pepper Martin to Jack Burns, veteran who has piloted them through many lean years, and, last, to the scrawniest younger Irving (Jack) Burns last night.

It wasn't a matter of 'off with his head". They like Howley in Toronto and besides it was Dan who went to a lot of trouble to get Burns for his team. The change was announced after last night's game by Club President Donald C. Ross, who said Howley would continue to divide his time between his extensive mining interests and a front office job which will include handling player deals and advising the new pilot.

Howley tried to retire once before, in the middle of last season, and manage the Leafs, but he was persuaded to return when the club was reorganized last year.

Task Charge Monday.

Burns, whom Howley brought from Toledo this season and who has been keeping Leafs alive with timely hitting, will have his hands full getting the Leafs then went out to gain an 11-5 victory over the Bisons at Hamilton Buffalo Bisons and, incidentally, do their best hitting job of the season.

Toronto nicked Bob Kline, who had relieved Lefty Gomez in the sixteen hits. They rallied twice to tie the score, evening it in the eighth, Porter came on three singles and an intentional pass. Toronto's own pinch-hitter won the decisive run when he bounced a single off Jimmy Ahns to send Joe Gantenbein home.

Montreal Royals won the day's only other game, turning back the Rochester Red Wings 4-3 when they clicked behind Ken Trinkle in the first two innings, then glared off a series of rallies. Del Wetherell finally came to the Royals' relieved Ed Chapman with none and two on, took the count to 3-and-2 and pitched hitless ball the rest of the way. The victory gave the Royals sixth place by a few points over Baltimore Orioles.

The double-header Newark and Jersey City-Syracuse games were set back to make double-headers some other and sunnier day.

Belleville Intermediates Expect to Increase Lead

Contending "Lady Luck" deliberately turned her face upon them and spread her choicest smile in the direction of the Belleville "Terrors" last week. Harry Doyle's Picton intermediate baseball squad will, in all the most drastic measure when the Prince Edward County town invades Belleville for the return of the season in a Bay of Quinte League fixture at the Belleville Exhibition Park on Wednesday afternoon.

Last week the Belleville "Orfuns" strutted into Picton and handed the Picton crowd a 10-5 trimming on their home ballwick, much to the disgust of Skipper Doyle, Don Church and Brock Hudgin. The Picton crowd arrived home just about sick and hot tricked them of any chances of a good showing against the Belleville "Orfuns" but the unexpected revenge would be their lot in Belleville tomorrow.

To date the "Orfuns" have lost only one game in the league and are playing a grand brand of intermediate baseball. "Speedy" Ellis, Jimmy "Lefty" Ward and, doubtlessly start on the hilltop for the home team, with Jimmy Ward, Ellis and "Friday" Dalnard are available for pitching service for Picton with the veteran Ron Church ready for relief roles.

Tomorrow is the long-awaited day of days when the school children put away their self-styled troubles and woes text books and school in general to launch upon two glorious months of vacation. "Oh Skinny Lee" is now in swimming and Skinny will soon be heard splashing against the water front. In conjunction with the closing of school tomorrow the East and West Belleville playgrounds will be officially opened on Thursday of this week. Playground Supervisor Geo. Laughlin is busying with the Belleville Senior Softball League to have two senior softball games played in conjunction with the opening of the Belleville Kiwanis playgrounds on the east hill and the other on the west. Secretary Harry Knell has been asked to cooperate and contact the softball managers relative to the suggestion.

Parents should make their children aware "playgrounds are instructing a slogan for our city's playgrounds hoping it would result in every home children, resident" stated Mr. Laughlin as he introduced the proposed slogan for parents to remember—"Play safe play at Belleville playgrounds." The equipment at the two local playgrounds was decided at this by the Kiwanis for the use and privileges of the children of the city of Belleville. Supervisors are employed and each kiddie must register, as accurate tabulation of attendance being kept each day.

Something new along the lines of city playgrounds may be attempted by the Kiwanis Club, in conjunction with the local recreational committee. Negotiations to transport the kiddies, who register at one of the city playgrounds, to the Sandbanks for a day's outing are being considered. The success of such an outing finally reaches the state of initiation and kiddies who have been registered and regularly attend the playgrounds will be given their Supervisor Geo. Laughlin stated. Parents of children should bear in mind the city playgrounds are officially open on Thursday night of this week, tomorrow.

Then there is the story of the ere who entered a Front Street restaurant last night and asked for a "Joe Louis sandwich." Queried as what such a sandwich contained the irrepressible one replied . . . "Punched kidney;it's a knockout."

Tomorrow one often reads to believe the Belleville "Orfuns" expect some serious opposition throughout the second half of the Bay of Quinte League baseball schedule. When Picton plays here on Wednesday afternoon, the game will mark the first appearance of the first half of the Quinte League baseball schedule. Belleville having met each of the other league clubs in a home and away series. Throughout the first half of the schedule, however, the "Orfuns" have been graced with some fine pitching as well as exceptionally good fielding and timely hitting, a combination hard to beat in any ball club. The latest rumours around the league is supposed to conclude from Picton will be a new effect a college quadtale pitcher is heading towards the Picton baseball camp next. This should be glad tidings to all "teen aged boys who are contemplating entering the annual Kinsmen's Club Kid Kar Derby on July 5th—"George Wilson, last year's Kid Kar Derby star of Canada, will not be a starter in the 1938 event. Wilson's car was good enough honors last year and will be entered in the race for classes this year. Incidentally all entries to date have been given a nasty jolt by the withdrawal of the sponsors. As there are only a limited number of cards, the potential entries should get their applications in at once and entered as soon as possible to avoid being disappointed when the stock of cards are out.

Age No Rule For Habits Of Play

It's Unwise to Shame a Child For Being "Too Old" For Toys

(By LISA GRENELLE)

GEORGE AT nine was still very much enamored of trains, liked to trucks and in playing traffic.

"Aren't you too old for such things?" his father wanted to know. Father himself at the age of nine had been an expert marble shooter.

Grandfather too, could remember his own boyhood, especially the nine-year-old part, as if it were yesterday. Grandfather had been an expert kit maker at George's age.

Mother, too, began uneasily to recall her own small brothers at George's age—kneeling things over with their slingshots, or shooting you with a water pistol.

Of course, maybe George wasn't meant to be that kind of a boy. Maybe he was cut out for a quiet, studious life. But George showed no instinct to bury himself in books poring over otherwise.

"Something ought to be done about it," his father summed it up.

"Those toy trucks are all right as far as they go, but at nine!"

"I'll give George a life," Grandfather offered.

"I'll teach him how to play marbles," Father declared.

"I suppose every boy should have a slingshot and a water pistol," sighed Mother, "even if it does mess things up."

But George wasn't too enthusiastic about the kits, the marbles, the slingshot or the water pistol. He flew the kits with Grandfather a few times, so as not to hurt his feelings. He tried to learn marbles, to please Father. But he never could learn to manage the slingshot, and after an hour of the water pistol George got bored and went back to his cars and trucks. Nor could a good book tempt George away from his favorite occupation.

The sight of George crawling about on his knees, endlessly pushing an endless line of miniature cars and trucks, began to get on Father's nerves, on Grandfather's, even on Mother's. It wasn't natural.

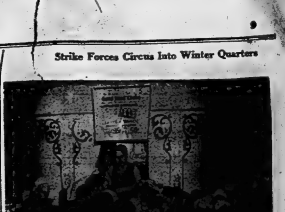
Finally the family could stand it no longer. So they began shaming him. "Only a baby plays with cars and trucks, Georgie. Only a baby and a sissy. You're too big."

It worked finally. George threw all his cars and trucks away. He bothered no more with traffic.

But he did not fly his kite, or play marbles, or become proficient with the gun. He didn't feel like it, he said.

Poor George wasn't ready for kites and such. Even though nine, he was not yet finished with the cars and truck stage. And shaming him, forcing him, couldn't change things. It could only hurt him, crush him.

It's good to introduce a new toy or occupation once in a while. But if the child discards it, it means he isn't ready for it, no matter what his age, and there is nothing to be gained by forcing him.



Messrs. Al Weill and Arnold Mead, their respective managers, may not know it, but Armstrong and Ambers are going to make Madison Square Garde scrap in the Garden bowl. . . . Both managers have sworn they'll call off the fight first, but they must have forgotten the bowl is specified in the contract. . . . Babe Ruth is pulverizing the ball so hard in batting practice, they may put him on the active roster as a pinch hitter. . . . All his friends here are hoping old Primo Carnera isn't going to let them kid him into coming back as a wrestler.

Ask Your DEALERS

The local merchant is the connecting link between producer and consumer.

His contact with the buying public is direct, intimate and personal. He knows his customers, their likes and dislikes; why they buy one product and refuse another; why one brand sells more rapidly than others.

It may be assumed, therefore, the retail merchant knows the best way to produce immediate sales in his locality, and it is significant that his basic advertising medium is the local daily newspaper.

In the first four months of this year the Canadian daily newspapers carried more than 40,000,000 lines of retail advertising—striking evidence of nationwide confidence in the value of the daily newspapers in Canada, as productive advertising media.

BUY NOW AND MAKE WORK

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

CHAPTER XVI

These last weeks hadn't been easy. They had been hell, or as near it as Red ever hoped to come. Days when he plunged into work, trying to steel himself against the need of Tobey. Nights when he pursued gayety and forgetfulness with an unflagging zeal, seeking to keep his mind away from the memories of which had been laid the night he stood on the sidewalk and watched Tobey drive away with Douglas Newman.

Red had hated her that moment. He had tried to hate her since. For all the things she meant to him, the fine and staunch and true things she had torn down and trampled into the dust by that one act. Considering Newman's record, his antecedents to the woman he had married.

He had tried to think things out clearly, pacing up and down his little room, smoking innumerable cigarettes, walking the lonely echoing streets of the city late at night.

They seemed fantastic, dream-like, now those dreary weeks those walks. A dream that had been dissipated by his father's letter, by the realization of why Tobey hadn't called him, by a disturbing awareness of what she was facing all alone in Manning.

Red released her hands and for a moment there was stiffened utter silence between them, an utter lack of words as if they were not casual strangers who stood facing each other in the darkness with the small creeping sounds of night all about them. And Tobey sensed that strangeness and was confused by it, not understanding why that should seem to put her off, to hold her impalpably away from him.

Now was asking, "It's all right —my coming here? I mean it won't disturb your mother or keep you from a thousand and one other things?"

Tobey shook her head. "She's sleeping. She's so much better now, Red. But it's been pretty hard."

"I know." There was sympathy in his voice, rich and deep and warm. "And I'm awfully sorry — about her illness, about everything. I asked every day, but the doctor said he didn't want a thing I could do, that I'd only bother you. I didn't want to."

They sat down side by side on the little car's running board, where Tobey could hear Judy, if she called, where the sound of their low voices would not carry to other voices. There was no sense in disturbing unnecessarily the many things asleep.

Tobey began, looking down at her face. "But how do you happen to be in Manning at all? That's what I've been trying to figure out all day, ever since I heard you were here."

Red asked gravely, "Didn't you know I'd come when I heard you were here? Your mother sick, your stepfather gone, and you left all by falling on your shoulders in addition to the things you'd forgot. I never exactly the sort of nasty reception that you gave me, Tobey, for you see I'd had my taste of the whole unsavory business. I came the very day I got your letter."

Tobey asked, puzzled, "You did? Then why didn't you? Red I've been weeks. Red, when I talked to your father. I mean I thought that Eileen could have told you, or the Kents."

The brief flash of his smile was barely visible. "Only I didn't ask." Red explained, his voice deliberate, went on slowly. "I happened to see you that night when you left Silvermont. It was none of my business, I suppose, but I was sore as hell. Could see that you were all through with him, that it was all over. And I thought you'd want—"

"I was through with him." Her voice was low and shamed and bitter. "I left him like me home that night because I had to be sure. Seeing him again, hearing him try to explain and fix things up — well, the one encounter made me realize I'd been overestimating the damage he'd done to my young feelings."

Red asked with a kind of wonder, "Tobey, you mean it? You don't care for him at all?"

She had to smile a little at his intensity.

"I couldn't have cared for him ever, in any important or lasting sense. That sort of feeling — I suppose it must always die as quickly as it flares up. And she added, revising with a little shock that it was quite true, "I haven't even thought of him in a long time."

Rather surprisingly, Red took her hands in his.

He said, "But that makes everything quite simple, Tobey. That's what's been worrying me all along. Enough can be settled easily enough."

"Simple isn't important either." Tobey told him out of a new-found maturity. "First I thought it was. I was pretty sunk over the whole thing. But when the life of someone you care for hangs so lightly in the balance, when death seems to move beside you all the time, having to be forestalled, outwitted, by one of things begin to seem trifling by comparison. Gossip" she shrugged and withdrawing her hands from Red's clasped them around her knees. "What does it amount to, anyway? Just ugly words with no truth in them."

Red said, "Of course, you're right. But I can't be so detached it. When it's your name they're dragging around, I can't be detached at all! If anyone has bothered you about it, made you unhappy—"

Almost too quickly Tobey denied it. Not wanting him to know how things stood and to be troubled by that knowledge. Since there was nothing he could do.

Scarcely a day passed that Tobey didn't see Red. He came as often to the farm, bringing fragrant garden flowers for Julia or producing, with the exaggerated stature of a magician who has just discovered a rabbit in a hat, some delicacy prepared by Hendy Hannah. Julia had to express purples of speeding the Indian's recovery — Chicken broth, warm and golden in a covered jar, steak, creamy custards, Jellies and preserves from the well-stocked shelves of the Collins' fruit closet.

When Tobey protested at the unending successions of culinary offerings, Red told her gravely that they were to discourage Hannah, child. It would be a pity to lose the genius for this sort of thing, but even genius grows a little rusty with disuse, and if I am not sick, so she has to keep in practice on someone else, Hannah, who is also a man subject to moods, will be confused by it, not understanding why that should seem to put her off, to hold her impalpably away from him.

Now was asking, "It's all right —my coming here? I mean it won't disturb your mother or keep you from a thousand and one other things?"

Tobey shook her head. "She's sleeping. She's so much better now, Red. But it's been pretty hard."

"I know." There was sympathy in his voice, rich and deep and warm. "And I'm awfully sorry — about her illness, about everything. I asked every day, but the doctor said he didn't want a thing I could do, that I'd only bother you. I didn't want to."

They sat down side by side on the little car's running board, where Tobey could hear Judy, if she called, where the sound of their low voices would not carry to other voices. There was no sense in disturbing unnecessarily the many things asleep.

Tobey began, looking down at her face. Red. "But how do you happen to be in Manning at all? That's what I've been trying to figure out all day, ever since I heard you were here."

Red asked gravely, "Didn't you know I'd come when I heard you were here? Your mother sick, your stepfather gone, and you left all by falling on your shoulders in addition to the things you'd forgot. I never exactly the sort of nasty reception that you gave me, Tobey, for you see I'd had my taste of the whole unsavory business. I came the very day I got your letter."

Tobey asked, puzzled, "You did? You didn't? Red I've been weeks. Red, when I talked to your father. I mean I thought that Eileen could have told you, or the Kents."

The brief flash of his smile was barely visible. "Only I didn't ask." Red explained, his voice deliberate, went on slowly. "I happened to see you that night when you left Silvermont. It was none of my business, I suppose, but I was sore as hell. Could see that you were all through with him, that it was all over. And I thought you'd want—"

"I was through with him." Her voice was low and shamed and bitter. "I left him like me home that night because I had to be sure. Seeing him again, hearing him try to explain and fix things up — well, the one encounter made me realize I'd been overestimating the damage he'd done to my young feelings."

Red asked with a kind of wonder, "Tobey, you mean it? You don't care for him at all?"

She had to smile a little at his intensity.

"I couldn't have cared for him ever, in any important or lasting sense. That sort of feeling — I suppose it must always die as quickly as it flares up." And she added, revising with a little shock that it was quite true, "I haven't even thought of him in a long time."

Rather surprisingly, Red took her hands in his.

He said, "But that makes everything quite simple, Tobey. That's what's been worrying me all along. Enough can be settled easily enough."

"Simple isn't important either." Tobey told him out of a new-found maturity. "First I thought it was. I was pretty sunk over the whole

BLACK and all shades of BROWN.

Tobey said, laughing too, "Santa Claus, I do believe you've wished those whiskers. Or would you rather Cinderella's fairy godmother in disguise?"

They didn't go in a pumpkin coach, however. Red had a familiar roadster suffused. Red had arranging everything just as he had said he would. Ellen Peters was delighted to have Tobey spend the night at the Peters' farm. Julia had offered no objection to their going.

"You see?" Red inquired, speeding along down the moonlit country road under a casual pattern of glass. "It's really pretty simple when you get to know how. I could kick myself for not thinking of it before."

This is like being released from prison. It's been so long since I've been anywhere. Such a relief to have anything silly and unimportant and gay to think about.

It was fun being in town again. This was Saturday night and the streets as crowded as the streets of Manning ever were. Little knots of people about, talking avidly, and wielding palm leaf fans, moving on at intervals to join other groups, shifting and changing. Most of the stores were open, their doors wide. Julia had worked so long ago. Kinkaid's Millinery, Hodson's Hardware, the Rexall drugstore piled with fans impressively. Red parked the car and he and Tobey moved along Main Street, speaking to people they knew, enjoying the casual furrows of aroused interest and speculation that sprang up in their wake.

It was close and humid in the Rexall. The electric fans were highly gay and amusing. Eli fans for sale at 10c each. Tobey hurried and they came out into the street once more the crowd was thicker, gathered about the farmers and their families and the older townspeople who were shopping. Mrs. Ben Sweet Shop was quite full and noisy with young folk and laughter. And as Tobey had hoped it would be, just as she remembered it, little had changed. She was excited. She and Red sat on tall stools at the fountain and Tobey moved along the row of they had never been away.

Red was glad to see her happy, so obscurely relieved because the Sweet Shop was the first place they couldn't be! Why shouldn't acquaintances, singly and in twos and threes on errands or even happy, but to live?"

"Did I say that?"

"You certainly did! You said it so convincingly you made me believe it."

"Then it must be true.—"

CHAPTER XVII

Now that Julia was stronger Tobey had insisted upon bringing Hannah Alice and Bonnie from the Peters' farm. The kindly, competent woman had already done so much more for all of them than mere neighborliness entailed.

So the children became even more an integral part of Tobey's responsibility. Now she had scarcely a moment's leisure from morning till night.

It was Red who remarked one day, regarding her narrowly, "You look kind of fed up, Tobey. Is work and no play beginning to get down you down?"

Tobey said ruefully, "Something like that. I guess I just can't help it."

"No one can indefinitely. Red assured her, "When you need's a night out. How about it? If I can arrange for someone to come in and take over for the evening, will you go with me? We'll go on a spectacular binge — or at least," he amended, grinning, "as spectacular a binge as the locality provides an opportunity for. We'll take a ride and see a movie and have a drink, maybe two sodas! You just be ready at eight o'clock and leave the rest to me."

Blindly Tobey made her way through the night to the privacy of Red's car. It was only a few moments before Red joined her, but still he could see by the little glow of the dashlight she was blind in a bright handkerchief across his knuckles. He pressed his handkerchief against it impatiently, saying nothing.

Then the car door slammed and Linda Street they sped away toward onto the road lined with poplars. The moon had risen and was a brighter than it had been.

Red brought the car to a sharp halt.

He said, "We can't have this."

He repeated.

"It's over. Finished. Let's not go back to that. Let's not even mention it. Forget and say about look ahead. Let's not even mention it."

Red interrupted, impatience that he had been hearing her at all behind a certain point. "She tried to play you. Re spoke to you after that — God, I'm glad I knocked him down! Dreamy or sober — I wish I'd killed him!"

Tobey murmured, appalled — "Red — Red!"

"And you didn't tell me, Tobey." The arms of the dark night closed now; somehow she seemed close. His voice was very quiet.

Tobey shrugged. "There didn't seem to be much point in telling you. I'm glad it's all over. There was nothing you could do."

"Still, I'm right in here. Don't you see that, Tobey? Can't you understand? We're in this together. We'll work it out beautifully — He leaned a little in the darkness. She could feel his gaze, very direct and steady on her face. "I'm not going to be content to ask you ever since I got back to Manning, ever since I've been wanting you, and Newman's very really washed up. I'm not going to be content with it very badly, but I haven't had much practice. You're the only girl I've ever cared for, Tobey. I've never wanted to marry — Yes, I've been sorry now and then, but Marriage. For the first time she realized that he was speaking of marriage without a fake, unconscionable shrinking of all her senses. For the first time she realized that it was what she knew Red as well.

Her heart leaped. Her little, quieting breath and Red troubled her. Red was so dependable and the life they could build. And she remembered poignantly a night in Silvermont when Red had kissed her and she had felt herself responding in every fiber of her being. Red had been frightened then, but now he was not frightened, and he was saying he once more the stirring sweetness of that kiss. Red was saying, "Tobey, you're not angry —

They cheerfully "CHIP-IN" to pay for the TELEPHONE

Reductions in telephone rates — local and long distance — in 1935, '36 and '37 have effected savings to telephone users in Ontario and Quebec of nearly one million dollars yearly.

This is the practice in many homes —the "working age" youngsters to whom the telephone is a social necessity — chip-in to pay for its modest cost. They never miss the few cents a day that telephone service costs—in fact they, and their parents too, simply couldn't get along now without the telephone.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and Pods Simkins was walking along and walking along, and we started to have a debate about which was the greatest invention, the telefone or the aireoplane, me saying the telefone and Pods saying the aireo plane, saying, Why good the telefone is nothing but talking, and people have been able to do that ever since the invention of their mouths.

Well then the aireoplane is nothing but flying, and the only reason people didn't always fly was because they didn't feel like it, I said. Oh no, how could they whether they felt like it or not?

By just betting a little too far out a window, that's how, I said.

They'd fly for a little while, wouldn't they? I said, and Pods said, Yes, but they wouldn't of been alive to brag about it.

Neither are a lot of people that go up in aireoplanes, I said, and then I said, Well Jimminy crickets, supposing somebody was about 2,000 miles away and you suddenly wanted to tell them something in a hurry. Holy smokes you could tell them in about a minute over the telefone but supposing you took an aireoplane to tell them how long would it take you? I said, and Pods said, Maybe it would, but supposing about a hour later you suddenly changed your mind about telling them. If you'd used the telefone it would be too late already, but you can always turn an aireoplane around and come back, he said, and I said Aw, aireoplanes are too expensive. Anybody can have a telefone, but what good's a invention that only a millionaire can own? I said.

Lots of good, Pods said. Anybody can have the measles too but you can't deny you wouldn't swap a measly case of measles for a expensive operation like a millionair has, he said.

Being a good answer and the end of the debate.

WALL STREET (CP)

New York, June 28 (AP)—The stock market ended today, but not materially at higher levels.

Offerings dwindled after early in the opening. A moderate amount of buying gave leaders a subsequent lift, but the turnover was relatively light. Transfers were at the rate of about 1,200,000 shares. Gains of fractions to a point or so predominated near the final hour.

Santa Fe issues were only moderately off on the vote of the company's directors to defer interest payment on the road's adjustment bonds for next month. A semi-annual dividend on the preferred stock, due at this time, was also deferred. Other earlier shares were slightly in arrears.

Despite the fact that many are looking for a correction in the market, after the very sharp advance of the past week it has so far failed to put in an appearance. Over the long-pull it is always best for the public if there is a correction and not too rapid and stocks are given a chance to consolidated themselves at higher figures. When the technical reaction does occur, it should not occasion undue nervousness and traders, and investors would be well advised to acquire equities on all sharp setbacks.

Drury & Thompson, in their Market Letter, state that the advance cannot be said to have taken close observers by surprise. Cash commodities, which led the stock market in the spring of last year, had been advancing for some time and Barron's Weekly and the New York Times business indexes turned up sharply last week. In addition the recent reduced volume within a very narrow range has indicated that the markets, more thoroughly sold out and in a position to respond immediately to any increased buying.

The present advance has all the earmarks of a genuine turn of the tide, and those who have been on the sidelines in recent months on account of the lack of confidence" in the present market will get out their cheque-books and if they wish participate. Once a real turn comes it is safe to follow all minor reactions to pick up stocks.

The rise in New York is attributed in good part to short covering as well as large-scale investment buying. Several investment trusts reporting late in July large surplus funds, have been watching the market very closely, and when a little activity appeared to have arrived last week, stepped into the market and, in the aggregate, took quite an active position materially. As yet, the public is not in the bull movement in large numbers, but a continuation of the current upward trend is bound to attract a large following.

On The Street

The British American Oil Company is making rapid strides in reducing its funded debt, $1,760,000 has been paid off in the past months during the last three years from earnings. The balance on account of the common.

Selling for American account is the explanation offered in some quarters for the rather severe drop in Noranda last week. It is a case of three points in an important market leader like Noranda and some recessions are. A number of large traders are hoping that they might have an opportunity of taking on a good-sized line.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sun changes color! Everybody has noticed that the sun is usually a whitish yellow. Also when it is hazy, or due to a cloud, or a dust storm, or dust, the sun may appear copper-colored. If, however, one travels upward the sun gets whiter and whiter and finally at great height becomes a greenish blue. This is because the air has the property of passing the red and yellow rays but absorbing or diffusing the blues and greens. Thus not only does the sun change color with the color of all objects changes slightly when carried from sea level to great elevations.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, June 29 (CP)—Pressure is low over the Canadian west and the Western Provinces and Rocky Mountain States, also off the Atlantic coast, and high over Hudson Bay, the region of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley. It has been cool in the Maritime Provinces but moderately warm elsewhere.

Robots at North and South Poles To Predict Weather Week Ahead

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH

Associated Press Science Writer

Chicago, June 29—(AP)—Establishment of automatic robot weather observers at the North and South Poles, on mountain tops, and on isolated islands to predict the weather for a week or more ahead was forecast today by Dr. W. R. Gregg, chief of the U.S. Weather Bureau.

Addressing the American Association for the advancement of science at its summer meeting Dr. Gregg declared a new era of international scientific cooperation is emerging between Democratic, Fascist, Communist and other forms of governments to make the earth's weather less of a hazard in carrying on human activities.

Practically all nations of the world are now working toward the perfection of weather information and its mutual exchange by radio, he declared.

The newest instrument for gathering weather data, now being tested in Canada, the United States, and in all major foreign countries, is the radio meteorograph, a device sent aloft by balloon which automatically registers its height humidity of the air and temperature as it ascends into the stratosphere five miles and more above the earth's surface, Dr. Gregg declared.

Had Said Toronto Zoo so Dirty it Was Only Fit For Hitler

STANDS BY STATEMENT

Mr. Kropp said he had been informed by Dr. Erich Windels, German Consulate-General at Ottawa, on German and Dominion government consent, to request that "the offensive remarks be withdrawn."

Informed of the protest, Alderman Croft said: "I never heard of anything so ridiculous in my life. As far as I am concerned the German Consul can go to Hitler."

You can tell him that yourself," the alderman told reporters. "If you give me his address I will tell him myself. Tell him the people of Toronto are free to do the goose-stepping for him or anyone else."

Mayor Day said he had told Mr. Kropp "the matter would be given consideration," and that he would make a statement after "considering what prominent citizens have."

Protests Expenditures.

Croft, a first-year member of the council, has been outstanding in the news lately because of his criticism of virtually every item that came before the protested grants of civic funds to public and private organizations and finally held that city was paying too much for the upkeep of Riverside Zoo.

On June 23, on his 46th birthday, the alderman visited the zoo and declared that the entire city council should be "arrested and charged

The Minister of Transport, however, might suspend the privilege under conditions of emergency.

Prior to being amended the bill empowered the Governor-in-Council to exempt tourists from the fee provided the tourist's home country accorded the same privilege to Canadians. Senators felt, however, that since Canada was the only country with a large tourist industry, complete exemption should be written into the act. Transport Minister Howe indicated the amendment would be accepted by the government.

Resounding Bombshell Propped by Duncan Sandys

OLD ISSUES RAISED

Sandys Ordered to Appear in Uniform at Hearing

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 29—(CP Cable)—Duncan Sandys dropped a resounding bombshell into the House of Commons today, Sensation followed sensation. The Chamber echoed to the bombshells.

From the Labor benches James Ede read passages from the Grand Remonstrance and the Bill of Rights, laying down the liberties of parliament, then raised again the old issues which led to civil war between parliament and King.

On Monday Mr. Sandys, a Conservative and the son-in-law Winston Churchill ,told the House that as a result of a letter he had sent Lieut.-Gen. Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, Alderney General Sir Edward Grigg had questioned him about the source of information contained in the letter, with an implied threat of proceedings under the Official Secrets Act.

School is Out—!

With two months glorious summer beckoning, crowds of delighted school children bade a temporary adieu to cloistered schoolrooms and the three r's today as public schools in the city and district opened the summer vacation.

Impatient youth suffered through a long morning today, awaiting anxiously the bell that would send them away to the long-looked-for holidays. Other than the arrangement of pupils in their classrooms they will occupy next term, and routine work preparatory to the opening of the fall session little actual work was done in city schools today.

Schools books were packed: desks were cleaned and goodbyes said as whooping carefree youth shook off the dust preceding, writing and arithmetic" and clamorous in glorious anticipation of the days to come.

The spirit of temporary unrestrained freedom however was not confined to pupils alone. Teachers likewise reflected a spirit of gladness that they too were to be relieved of classroom, some to attend the many summer schools and others to enjoy vacations in various homes and holiday spots.

"School is out" rang out joyfully from hundreds of childish throats as their owners packed up for the sunshine of a brilliant June day with the wonderful delights of weeks of freedom beckoning to them.

TWO - BARRELLED PROBE INVOLVES BROAD QUESTIONS

Opposition Calls Affair Instance of Attempted Repression

DEBATE MAY BE SHORT

London, June 29 —(CP)— A double-barrelled inquiry involving questions of broad political significance threatened to weave new strands into the already tangled web of Britain's defence and Spanish war problems today.

The House of Commons was worked up over the allegation of Duncan Sandys, Conservative, that Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, Alderney General Sir Edward Grigg had questioned Basil Liddell Hart, military commentator of the Official Secrets Act when the latter refused to reveal the source of information upon which he proposed to base a question concerning an alleged shortage of anti-aircraft guns.

Investigation Promised

Prime Minister Chamberlain immediately promised an investigation of the matter by a select committee. The motion for appointment of the committee will be debated tomorrow.

This committee's inquiry would be separate from one ordered by the Home Office "secret" by first test who gave Mr. Sandys his information. The war office inquiry will be military in character and will be presided over by General Sir Edmund Ironside.

Non-Stop Flight to Montreal for "Pick-a-Back" Plane from Foynes

Montreal, June 29 — (CP)— Leaving Ireland in plenty for the day of another flying boat, Mercury of Imperial Airways will speed westward from Foynes, Ireland, early next week on a non-stop flight to Montreal, Trans-Canada Air Lines and Pan-American Airways announced today.

Known as the "pick-a-back" plane Mercury is only half the size of either the Caledonia or the Cambria, both of which flew across the Atlantic last year. The Mercury will alight at Boucherville, 18 miles below Montreal on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, which was used by Imperial Airways as the first western base on experimental flights last year.

When lifted into the air on the back of the flying boat Maia, the Mercury's gross weight can be as much as 20,500 pounds, Trans-Canada Air Lines officials said, although its gross weight when riding on the water cannot be more than 14,500 pounds.

Department of Transport officials and Trans-Canada and Pan-American Air Lines in providing a landing base, mooring and buoys at Boucherville, where the Mercury probably will remain only long enough to refuel before proceeding on to New York.

With a flying range of approximately 3,500 miles at 5 speed over 180 miles an hour, the Mercury will carry 1,200 gallons of fuel and 1,000 pounds of mail and will be able to take a continuous 60 mile an hour headwind and still have sufficient fuel for the ocean crossing, Imperial Airways officers said.

Battle for Valencia Swinging to Flanks

Hendaye, June 29—(AP)— The battle for Valencia swung today from both flanks of a 50-mile front in eastern Spain, with neither the government nor the insurgents reported to gain a decisive advantage.

Inland, where another insurgent column threatened Valencia, General Jobe Mia's defence troops were more than holding their own.

Fresh troops and heavy artillery enabled the insurgents to push back the government militiamen in the Ebro Antana line of fortification protecting Rules and the highway to the west.

FRANCO IS URGED TO BE MODERATE IN SHIP BOMBING

Italy Approves of Ships Carrying Contraband Being Bombed

PERTH MEETS CIANO

Britain May Have Used Treaty as Means of Ending Bombing

Rome, June 29 (AP)—A spokesman for the Italian foreign declared today that Italy had advised General Franco, the Spanish insurgent leader, to use "moderation" in his efforts to prevent British and other foreign ships from carrying supplies to Government Spain.

The spokesman, who noted editor Virginio Gayda, said, however, that Italy approved of the bombing of vessels carrying contraband but disclaimed any Italian responsibility therefor.

In an inspired article in the Giornale d'Italia, Gayda declared the object of the conversations that might between the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador to Rome, and Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano.

Treaty Invoked

The editor said Count Ciano told Lord Perth that General Franco already had taken all the steps at measures to give the British government satisfaction with regard to the long list of bombings of British ships, against which London has protested strongly.

These measures, Gayda said, were: First, a declaration by Franco that British ships should not be attacked while navigating.

Second, he had ordered that the British flag be respected as far as possible in Spanish government ports.

Third, Franco was willing to name free ports in western Spain (Ingerest—held where "honest traffic would have free entry."

May End Accord

The Perth-Ciano conversations produced speculation that it might bring an end to the British policy of non-intervention in Spanish waters.

Some diplomatic quarters thought Great Britain might have made communication of her still-inoperative friendship treaty with Italy the price of continued air raids on her shipping. The treaty, signed April 16, was not to become effective until a "settlement" was reached in Spain to the satisfaction of Britain, but it sought to put the pact into force without delay.

Time Has Difficulty.

Political circles expressed belief Mussolini was aware of the difficulties he faced in getting the treaty for Prime Minister Chamberlain and considered it likely Mussolini intended to smooth Mr. Chamberlain's way a little.

Reports that Il Duce Monday had summoned his military advisers to find out if bombing of Spanish government arsenals would not subsidize effectively the insurgents' supply ships in government-held harbors tended to bear out this belief.

The raids thus far have taken the lives of 1,000 persons. Fifty more have been wounded and 39 ships have been sunk.

Gayda said the bombings were fully justified and asserted that

Belleville Beach To Be Enlarged to Twice Present Size

Continued improvement is being made at the Beach according to Reg Monckrieff and when all improvements have been completed at the end of the week, the area on the Beach will be twice as large as formerly. The older swimmers have been catered to in the building of a raft, thirty feet long and fourteen feet wide with a spring board at the end, also placed far out in the bay and swimmers can have real enjoyment in their aquatic pastimes. Closer to shore another raft, thirty feet long and four feet wide has been built for the kiddies. The bathing beach has been floored and blinds placed at all the windows.

County officials have granted the use of the grader at cost and the ground leading to the beach and the beach itself will be graded and 50 loads of sand will be dumped over the area. Monckrieff stated today an average of 500 made use of the beach in the evening and this number was expected to be materially increased, when the children were free from school duties.

Waupoos Woman Injured in Jump From Moving Truck

Panic-stricken when a horse in the rear of the truck in which she was riding, suddenly reared and brought its hoofs crashing down on the roof of the cab, Mrs. Wilbert Chamberlain, wife of a Waupoos farmer, leaped from the swiftly-moving vehicle and sustained serious injuries to her legs and body early Monday morning.

The horse was being transferred to Belleville, when for some unaccountable reason, it became frightened, rearing and crashing its forefeet on parts of the truck.

Mrs. Chamber was removed to a neighbor's house where her injuries were treated.

Farmer Wakens To Find Barn Afire

Wakened by the sound of a loud crash, Spencer Phillips, Marmora Township farmer, dashed outside early yesterday morning to discover his barn a mass of flames.

The building was a total loss as were a few tons of hay that were in the barn at the time. Cattle and other livestock were out in pasture at the time. It was not ascertained whether the barn was insured.

The crash of the roof falling into the blazing debris of the barn aroused Phillips, but the entire building was ablaze before neighbors arrived on the scene.

YEAR'S PEAK LOAD UPON HIGHWAYS IS ANTICIPATED

Hon. T. B. McQuesten Urges Courtesy to Week-end Visitors

Toronto, June 29—Confidence in the driving habits of Ontario's motoring population was expressed last night by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, in discussing the coming holiday week-end's heavy traffic.

"Our national holiday and the United States national holiday coming on the same long week-end marks the heaviest traffic loads in the year for our highways," the Minister said, "and all officials of the highways' department are hopefully looking forward to a good driving record over the holiday.

"Our safety campaigns carried on in the newspapers, coupled with the co-operation that has been given by editors and by the public, have seen to be having an effect in reducing the number and seriousness of accidents. Recent holiday weekends have been marked by fewer accidents than in other years and we do feel that the educational safety campaign has contributed greatly to an improvement in driving and walking habits, leading to fewer accidents."

The Minister appealed to motorists over the holiday week-end. "Courtesy towards guests is always expected," he pointed out, "and on this occasion the greatest courtesy we can extend visiting motorists is to give them 'all the breaks' while they are travelling on our highway roads. It is no more than we would expect, and appreciate, when we are 'visiting motorists' across the border.

"At the same time," he added, "Ontario expects reasonable cooperation from visitors and those who are not accustomed to our roads have an obligation to exercise special care in their driving to help prevent accidents."

Nearly every public-spirited safety and industrial organization in the province is working with this department, Mr. McQuesten said, in promoting safety on the highways, and he felt the whole-hearted co-operation coming from the people of Ontario was a definite factor in the general improvement of traffic conditions on the highways.

Police Blotter

County Constable James Lovelace, Bloomfield, reported the theft of a bicycle to local authorities last evening, requesting the Belleville police's assistance in the possible recovery of the 'bike'. The bicycle was described as a blue and white of Quinto make.

Mr. C. Wilson, 70 Alexander St., reported the loss of a child's four-wheeled play wagon to the police last night. The toy, owned by Wilson, said was seen in the possession of three teen-aged boys early last evening, but had not been recovered at noon today.

Activities have been quiet in and around local police circles thus far this week with only the usual tenants seeking a night's lodging at the station house last night.

Pianist and Monologist Present Popular Program

'Billie' Eckstein's Interpretation of Modern Music Delights Audience

MISS DUNCAN AMUSES

Elocutionist Particularly at Home in Several Comedy Numbers

Lovers of music and drama were afforded a fine evening's entertainment at the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium last evening when the Argyll Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire presented for local entertainment W. "Billie" Eckstein, internationally known pianist and composer, and Miss Muriel Duncan, Montreal monologist and elocutionist in a varied program of piano recitals and dramatic readings. Unfortunately due to the continued fine weather conditions, however, a rather meagre patronage was realized for such an unique event, which was sponsored by so worthy an organization.

Presenting arrangements and compositions of his own, Billie Eckstein, regarded to be the fastest human who manipulate the piano forte on this continent, delighted the audience with his inspiring

Early History of Tweed Linked With Hungerford

First Old Home Week of Community to Start Thursday

VERY PROGRESSIVE

Tweed (Special)—Tweed village will celebrate its first Old Home Week on June 30th to July 4th. The early history of Tweed is linked with that of Hungerford Township. The earliest recorded settlement of the Hungerford is that of Sugar Island on the south side of Stoco in the year 1796 when the first settler in Tweed village was Richard Woodcock, who in 1826 settled in what is now the southeastern part of the village, south of the C.P.R. tracks.

Indians, Mississauga and other tribes roamed the district fishing in Stoco Lake; named after their chief Stouggang, and making maple sugar on Sugar Island, from which fact the island derived its name. In the spring of the year the Indians paddled down the Saganaska (Moira) River to Myer's Creek Village, (the present city of Belleville) to dispose of their product.

Pioneer settlers who followed Owen Durkin, Martin Donohoe and Richard Woodcock include Robert McCamus, Felix Gadsonde, Alvah B. Way, James Martin; Henry Maynes; Mattahah Kerr and others. Most of these men held office in the first township council which according to the records available appears to have met in the home of John R. Way, Lot 7, Con. 7 in the year 1836. Subsequently the town council meetings were held in Caton's School House, at Chapman's Corner.

Divided Into Wards

In the year 1850 the township was divided into five wards. In the same year a by-law was passed at a meeting held at Hungerford Mills (Tweed) to erect a town hall at Georgetown, the name still frequently applied by old residents of that portion of Tweed village which lies south or the C.P.R. tracks. Felix Gasbourde donated a piece of land whereon to build the town hall.

Mr. M. Pitchette's residence is on the site of the old town hall. When the building was destroyed by fire a fine brick structure was erected at a cost of $2,500 and is still the meeting place of Hungerford Township Council.

Named by Scotsman

Tweed was named by Mr. James Jamieson, a Scotsman from the north side of the Tweed river in Scotland, who at one time owned nearly all of the land at present occupied by the village of Tweed. It was formerly known as Hungerford Mills, in the year 1901 it was incorporated with a population of 800.

The development of Tweed during the past half century has been steady and continuous. The population at the present time is 1300. The past two decades have probably witnessed more rapid growth than any similar period. For its educational facilities, the village of Tweed has no apologies to offer. Provision for elementary and secondary education as offered by the Separate, Consolidated and High Schools with their efficient staffs of teachers has attracted many students from outside points.

The spiritual needs of the community are well cared for by the Roman Catholic, Methodist, United and Anglican Churches and the Salvation Army.

Evidences of Progress

Outstanding among the evidences of progressiveness of this thriving little village are the covered rink, Tweed Memorial Park and Pavilion, an up-to-date waterworks and sewage system and the locally-owned Hydro system. All of these developments are the result of the vision of a number of progressive citizens.

Old Home Week visitors will note with interest these changes in the old home town.

Corbet read the following address:

Dear Rev. and Mrs. Nicholson:

It is with mingled feelings of happiness and sorrow that we are gathered together to say this farewell dinner, with you as our honored guests. Happiness because of your kind hand of friendship that has developed in our community under the guidance of your ministry to us and your sincere appreciation of our efforts in cooperating and sorrow, because of your departure to another community after the short two years of companionship with you.

To our people it means that Kemptville may become enriched both spiritually and mentally, as we feel that we have, during the past year, and that you may enjoy your membership with them as you seemingly have done with us. We ask you to kindly accept this gift as we bring you a slight token of our esteem and appreciation and may it ever remind you of the many happy hours we have spent together and may God give to you and your family a future filled with the happiness and prosperity you so richly deserve.

May the seeds that you are planting
In God's garden ever green,
Where each service is recorded,
Bold the unseen and the seen,
Grow with wonderful abundance,
'Till their fabulous fruits will tell
That in the Master's vineyard
Your task has been done well.

Signed: Sulphide Woman's Association.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Full of Pep

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons from the decaying food are absorbed into the blood. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere movement doesn't relieve you. You need the bile to digest the fats in your food. Carter's Little Liver Pills are famous to get bile flowing gently to the liver as well. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to make you feel like a million. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists.

KING GEORGE V MEMORIAL

It is largely as King George Fifth himself would have had it. The memorial to his memory in London will not mean the removal of several historic buildings but the modification of plans for a more compact and harmonious scheme. The executive committee has decided to have the memorial erected on a rectangular grass plot in the shadow of ancient Westminster Abbey, in that historic centre of the development of British history. Only one Georgian house has to be demolished. The original plan had met with opposition and an alternative lay-out suggested curtailing the open space and preserving the notable buildings. The committee stated that nothing could be more unfitting or ungracious than a public controversy over a memorial to so revered a Sovereign as the late King George Fifth. There will be no controversy.

This is but one phase of the Empire's tribute to the great ruler whose aim was peace. Hundreds of playing fields have been dedicated to his memory throughout the United Kingdom. In June of this year approval was given to 243 fields, 190 in England, 31 in Scotland, 18 in Wales, 3 in northern Ireland and 1 in the Channel Islands. More than 500 proposed schemes have also been registered. This phase of the memorial work would have delighted the monarch, so recently deceased, to see the young of the land happy at play where they can win health and development.

It would seem that the memorials having been decided upon, the work has been carried on in the spirit of the late King. The character of the ruler had so impressed itself on the people during his life that they knew what would have pleased this man, this father of his people as he once spoke of himself.

DRAMA IN THE NEWS

"The earth is fertile with stories which would fill a thousand newspapers of the size of this one every day if they had that touch of significance, of madness, something of relieving nonsense, which makes news. A nation swept with fear, a great disaster, or merely a cat up a tree, with the fire department trying to get it down—each of these, each receives our attention. And the wisest man who ever wore a green eyeshade can't always tell in advance what seemingly trivial event is going to catch on and make the audience sit up in their seats."

These words from the New York Times were used in connection with a story of a robin at Schenectady which died after twelve days of hiccoughing. The nation, says the Times, gave more attention to this one than an individual robin usually receives and "indeed it competed in a modest way with poor Max Schmeling's injured transverse process."

There is scarcely a day when stories which go through the press of a whole continent do not "break", not big stories necessarily, but little ones about the most insignificant thing if only it has a touch of romance, which of course lends "significance."

But while many of these stories come to light, others are never heard, never receive the light of publicity or of being told in the newspapers. An albino robin gets its picture in the newspaper, but many a little robin is eaten by the pussy cat on the lawn in those three or four days trying to parent birds when the fledglings cannot fly at first, when they use their wings to help them over the ground, when they learn by nature's great urge to climb a tree and before they gain their skill at flight, which is the perfect expression of movement.

Those many which fall into the cat's paws are never heard of but let a robin do something unusual and it is news.

One does not have to go into the animal and bird world to find these stories. In any human community drama is played on the infinite combination of chords which tell the story of existence. Some of them are infinitely sad, some are touching in innocence, or terrible in their savagery. Some reach publicity which shakes man's faith in man, some inspire mankind. There are millions of acts of kindness and love that never reach the news, but they too are the very web and woof of life.

Newspapers are read largely for the drama of life they present, little scenes from life's great carnival theatre. In that even a hiccoughing robin may play his little part until he dies or recovers, for mankind is the spectator and loves to watch the eternal stream of life's action.

"The complexities of our modern life have brought into play rules of conduct which demand for their enforcement new machinery."—Charles E. Hughes.

THE MUSICIAN

She knew none of your city ways,
Save what she saw in books;
But oft by grassy banks had heard
The music of the brooks.

Sometimes she tuned her little song
To beating of the rain;
Or in the moaning of the wind
Found a congenial strain.

Twelve years had gone before she trod
The street of any town—
And then, to hear an organ play,
She in a church sat down.

And as the master swept the keys,
Her soul in wonder knelt;
The surging tones awoke in her
Emotions never felt.

Caught up in seraphic mood,
Deep calling unto deep,
Her head she bowed in her hands—
She could do nought but weep.

What wonder was it that when Art
Helped her in touch and word,
Life's deepest feelings to express,
Our lethargy was stirred?

JOHN STREET CHURCH WILL SOON BE A MEMORY ONLY. Workmen are now demolishing this edifice which contained so many pleasant memories for Belleville residents. Originally a Presbyterian church John Street entered the United Church fold, and after a long and useful history fell prey to flames and for some time has been a forlorn spectacle of gaunt and blackened walls, silent memento of the fierce fire which spelled finis to the activities of the church. John Street Presbyterian Church and John Street United Church is no more but there are many who will cherish kindly memories of its work and usefulness.

"FLYING WHALE" IS LATEST VISION IN AVIATION, an aircraft which will be capable of cruising 'round the world in seven days. Jules Verne's "Round the World in Eighty Days", once scorned as the distorted dream of a visionaire, has become a commonplace, and was beaten all hollow by Nellie Bly of the New York World who skipped around the world in less than thirty days, while others have beaten her record badly. But, gosh all hemlock! who wants to rush around the world in seven days—you would simply finish on the spot you started on, barring accidents —and what could have been seen at that dizzy speed. Passengers would have to keep awake night and day to know what country they were passing over, what day it was, and what time it is. A speed-crazy world bids fair to go balmy by the time the seven-day world cruise is possible. Remember when Grandfather hitched up the oxen and did a good day's work between sunup and sundown?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 29th, 1918.

Two fast games of playground baseball were played at the West Belleville playground. The first game was between Wrix's Giants and Clarke's Beavers. The fast going Beavers defeated the Giants 20 to 6. Wrix's team seemed to be weak on the field and a lot of hard luck attached to them; but when they have the experience of a few more games they will make the Beavers go some to beat them. The following composed the teams: Giants, Cleary, Weeks, Croft, Sinfield, Weir, Turney and Brown. Beavers Turner, Hodge, Swayze, Brant Clark, Ashley and Glen. The second game was a hair raiser between Lakefront's Eagles and Keller's Maple Leafs, the final score being 13 to 10 in favor of the Maple Leafs. The following composed the teams: Eagles, Weeks, Oliphant, McKnight, Latchford, Weeks, Hodge and Brown. Maple Leafs, Buck Andrews, McKnight, Elliott, Haylock, Hilbert and Munroe. In the evening the same two clubs played a game between the Tigers and the Canucks. This proved to be an exciting game, the final score being 16 to 15 in favor of the Canucks. The following composed the teams: Tigers, Curry Ketcheson, McPherson, Norseo, Wilber, McKeipin, Scott, Boyer, Josh and Townsend. Canucks, Jeffery, Arnott, Moffatt, Hurley, James, Wims, Arnott, Ketcheson, Reid and Bongard.

A feature of the proceedings at Bridgeway St. Methodist Church Sunday School was a vote by ballot taken by the teachers and pupils of the Sunday School on the question, "Should the cigarette traffic be stopped?" One hundred and ninety eight ballots were cast, the vote standing: 197 in favor of the abolishing of the cigarette and only one in favor of the cigarette.

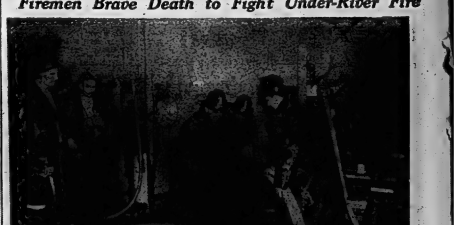
Asthma Is Often Due to Sensitiveness to Certain Substances

A farm boy living 40 miles from a large city found that during his visits to the city, lasting two or three days to a week, he was absolutely free of asthma, and an examination of his chest by a physician in the city revealed no trace of asthma; yet on the farm asthmatic attacks were frequent and severe. Skin tests were made and it was found that horse dander was the cause of his asthma. Similar cases are often seen now and the offending substances are found to be cat's fur, pollen grains and gases in the air, and even certain foods.

Drs. Stanley R. Dorst and Ethel L. Hoppban, University of Cincinnati, in Ohio State Medical Journal, point out that asthma is an individual problem and define asthma as a spasm of part or all of the air tubes going down to the lungs. When the spasm occurs the air, of course, cannot get out of the lungs, vaccines of these substances used for a certain length of time will cure half the cases and cause improvement in one-third more.

Thus air remains in the lungs that should come out and naturally as it is not so it is called "air in the blood" the blood circulating in the lungs does not get properly purified.



The cause of the spasm that closes or partly closes the air tubes and causes the violent coughing in an effort to get a free passage of air is often sensitiveness to foods, pollens, extracts used on the skin, gases in the air and bacteria in small organisms.

Drs. Dorst and Hopphan report 62 cases which were extensively studied. All the patients had well established asthma of at least two years' duration before treatment was given. As all cases of asthma are not due to this sensitiveness to certain substances each of these cases had been given skin tests and shown to be sensitive to a particular substance and then treated by vaccines of that particular substance—food pollen, bacteria—for four to eight months.

Thirty of the forty-two patients were improved, twenty-two were distinctly better that is they had a slight attack of asthma occasionally, and ten cases showed no improvement. The thirty patients who are well had an average period of treatment lasting over fifteen months. Of the twenty-two who are improved but not cured a large proportion did not continue treatment for over three months because they felt so much better.

The point then is that a certain number of asthma cases are due to sensitiveness to substances and

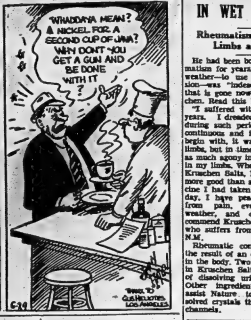
HON. T. AHEARN DIES IN OTTAWA

President of The Ottawa Light, Heat And Power Company

Ottawa, June 28 (CP)—Hon. Thomas Ahearn, 88, pioneer Ottawa businessman and industrialist, died at his home here Tuesday. After enjoying robust health most of his life, Mr. Ahearn took ill about a year ago and has been ailing since. In 1926, he was made a member of the Privy Council.



MEMBERS OF GUILD ENJOY PICNIC

The members of St. Georges Guild motored to Melville on Wednesday afternoon and spent a delightful time at Mrs. W. Parry's cottage. 1800 C. N. R. Shop Workers See Possibility of Jobs In Turning Out War Goods

Minister of National Defence Tells of Surveys to Determine Suitability of Power Shops to Manufacture War Equipment—Stratford Shops Are Considered For Tank Manufacture.

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)— Fresh being surveyed by his department to determine their availability and suitability for turning out war goods.

During the great war huge quantities of war supplies, chiefly shell castings, were produced in the shops of the railways now comprising the Canadian National System.

Size of Orders

Mr. Mackenzie emphasized that the Defence Department survey was concerned only with production for the Canadian defence forces and he warned there was no prospect of these orders being large enough to keep the C.N.R. shops busy.

It was learned, however, that there is a possibility, if not an immediate prospect of orders for munitions, and war supplies from Great Britain being placed with the C.N.R. shops.

Because of traffic volume reductions the C.N.R. has been forced to order a 26 per cent reduction in working crews at its car and motive power shops stretched from Atlantic to Pacific. It is hoped that employment of these men may be continued by munitions and armament orders.

Leaning Over Shops

Mr. Mackenzie's announcement that Defence Department inspectors had already looked over some C.N.R. shops came after he had heard a suggestion from a Stratford, Ont., deputation that a tank might be made at the C.N.R. shops there. Mr. Mackenzie said an inspection would be made immediately at the

HE SUFFERED AGONY IN WET WEATHER

Rheumatism Attacked Limbs and Body

He had been bothered with rheumatism for years. The pain in wet weather—so he says in his own expression—was "indescribable." But all that is gone now—thanks to Kruschen. Read this letter:—

"I suffered with rheumatism for years. I dreaded wet weather, for during such periods the pain was continuous and indescribable. To begin with, it was confined to my limbs, but in time I began to suffer as much agony in my body as I did in my limbs. When I began to take Kruschen Salts, I found it did me more good than all the other medicine I had taken put together. Today, I have peace and freedom from pain, even during wet weather, and can heartily recommend Kruschen Salts to anyone who suffers from rheumatism."—N.M.

Rheumatic conditions are often the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients in Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients in these Salts assist Nature to expel the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

Stratford shops.

In 1931 the Stratford motive power shops employed more than 1,000 workers, the deputation headed by Mayor Thomas Henry told Transport Minister Howe and Labor Minister Rogers. With the present layoff of 209 workers, 92 per cent of them married men, there would be only 641 men reporting for work next week.

Situation at Stratford

The relief burden on the western Ontario city threatened to become unbearable, the deputation said. Mr. Howe and Mr. Rogers referred the deputation to Mr. Mackenzie and the brief presented to him said in part:

"There is a growing sentiment in Canada, in our opinion, that the manufacture of military equipment and munitions of war should be in the hands of the Dominion government in larger degree than at present.

Supply of Tanks

"It is our understanding, for example, that the Department of National Defence lacks an adequate supply of tanks. In our opinion, tanks could be produced efficiently in the C.N.R. shops at Stratford. Probably other equipment also could be made in railway shops — and skilled workmen are at hand."

After the interview with Mr. Mackenzie the deputation saw Lieut.-Col. L. R. LaFleche, Deputy Minister of National Defence.

As the deputation visited the Ministers, word came from Montreal, that representatives of the unemployed shopmen were in that city urging railway officials to bid on armament orders.

A triumph is again reported by Molyneux, this time in the form of an ensemble gown. It is of pale blue faille with a flaring, gored skirt, and a fitted bodice covered entirely with matching blue sequins. It is worn with a reversible coat, faille one side, sequins on the other.

Women in white always attract attention. That is why so many women are choosing those short-sleeved, collarless town frocks of white silk jersey with intricate draping. Nice with deep black accessories.

Pretty useful in a week-end bag is a flannel blazer striped in blue, yellow, red and white. Nice with slacks or over a sports frock or for golf with an easy skirt.

Dear Evelyn and Clarence,

Although not being in our community very much during the last year, you were always welcomed back and never forgot to attend our meetings. THE BRIDE who will spend her honeymoon traveling and sightseeing will need a summerweight wool tweed suit. This type of suit in a deep color is a trousseau "must".

For motoring, on board ship, flying, or on cool days in foreign parts the smart drape-of-wise jacket costume illustrated left will be neither too sporting nor too formal for any daytime occasion, in town or out.

Topping a slim skirt, the wrist-length fitted jacket has a smart high front closing, with an interestingly rounded turn-back collar and fashionable broad shoulders. A slit pocket and a flapped cue at each hip are attractive details. A matching narrow leather belt is trim and military looking.

Accompanying Hat Noel

The neat little round hat with its lighter banding is just the right "dot" for the suit and for the bride, with her gardenia corsage and white gloves.

Especially fashionable as well as exceedingly comfortable for traveling is the light cape suit, right. A lavish use of fine fur adds distinction to the original styling of this unlined cape costume in fine lightweight wool tweed.

It is high style in town or out, and, because of its sturdy fabric, completely correct for sporting country wear. This unusual style is almost a trousseau in itself. It is worn over a loosely knitted chiffon wool blouse with front button closing.

It would be equally delightful with a frilly lingerie blouse for town, or draped crepe for formal wear.

Accessories Interesting

Such a suit, while useful and designed especially for summer, reminds us of the trends for autumn. Schiaparelli has a slim black wool coat with fastenings in the shape of tiny black deer, saddle pockets, waist, and slim skirt.

and ermine shawl collar.

The accessories she chose to accompany this coat also are interesting—as indeed anything this designer makes always is — a dolllike hat of felt, and velvet ribbons, and a square black bag banded with handles caught to the frame by gold and black leaves.

Furs are used discretely in the suits being shown for fall wear. Balenciaga, another Paris couturier, shows a gown suit of black woolen, trimmed with narrow bands of Persian lamb with which is shown a muff of the same material trimmed with the same fur. The suit has broad shoulders, tiny

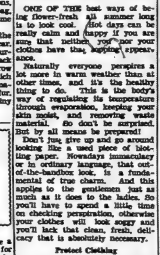
NO NEED FOR GIRLS TO APPEAR WILTED EVEN ON SULTRY DAYS

BY JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty



ONE OF THE best ways of being flower-fresh all summer long is to look cool. And days can be really calm and happy if you are sure that neither you nor your clothes have that dreaded, repulsive odor.

Naturally everyone perspires a lot more in warm weather than at other times, and it's the healthy thing to do. This is Dame Nature's way of regulating its temperature through evaporation, keeping your skin moist, and removing waste matter. So don't be surprised. But by all means be prepared!

Don't jog give up and go around looking like a used piece of blotting paper. Nowadays immaculacy is in ordinary language, that out-of-the-handbook look, is a fundamental of true charm. And this applies to the gentlemen just as much as it does to the ladies. So you'll have to spend a little time on checking perspiration, otherwise your clothes will look soggy and you'll lack that clean, fresh intimacy that is absolutely necessary.

Protect Clothing

Fabrics are generally damaged by perspiration than is commonly known, according to the reports of the research bureaus of the textile mills. This "tendering" is very often not apparent until after a garment has passed through a cleaning and pressing process. So checking perspiration actually prolongs the life of your fabrics. And in these modern times there is no excuse to ruin your fine new clothes or to offend your friends by lack of fastidiousness.

There are several excellent antiperspirants on the market, in cream, powder and liquid forms that have been recommended by doctors as harmless to you, and commended by cleaners as clothes protectors.

Checking perspiration locally is quite harmless if you use a reliable product. It acts like an astringent and gently closes the pores so that the secretion is routed to other parts of the body where it is less noticeable and objectionable, and where it can be more readily evaporated. The total perspiration of your body is not in any way reduced, so these great helps toward daintiness have no effect on your health.

All of these products are easy to use. They have directions for applying that are simple, and using them will take only a few minutes of your time.

If you prepare noticeably on the back, on the hands, at the nape of the neck, or under the arms, pick a reliable preparation and depend on it. The knowledge that you smell sweet and look as cool as a daisy will make you more self-confidence soar, and you'll find yourself on the preferred list of old friends and new acquaintances

EXERCISES PUT HIPS IN TRIM

They Should Be Shapely But Not Fat

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

THOUGH BILLOWING skirts are seen on many a pretty girl, the form-fitting robe is still in favor. It snugs in under the arms, hugs the waistline, is skin-tight at the hips, follows the line of the thigh to the knee; after that it goes romping freely.

BLANCA VISCHER

Exercises to keep her hipline graceful

A frock of this character is stunning; it hits the sartorial "bull's-eye". But it takes the perfect figure to wear it. If the lady whose hips are "nigh and wide but not handsome" yearns to wear it she must get active. The best way to make hips do a disappearing act is to roll on the floor.

One should lie on her back, legs rigid, lift one foot high, roll in the opposite direction and touch the floor with the toes. The leg must be stretched; it is the pulling on the muscles of hips and thighs that wins the war against adipose padding. Pressure of the weight of the body on the floor is a factor.

Hips aren't being reduced as much as they have been in the past. It is essential that they supply a graceful, natural curve between the waistline and the thigh. While the fashionable figure is no longer reedy, it is not supposed to have more than normal displacement.

Many a girl who is supporting a roll or two of silky threads atop her head has found that it takes time to train the hair to the new arrangement. Hair is fussy and temperamental.

Before putting the strands on curling rods, give each one a rousing upward brushing. When they are dry brush vigorously over the finger, anchor them in place with bobby pins. Be careful of the kind of hats you buy. What with crowdless one can do to uplifted ringlets is something terrible.

Hair dyeing has become an art. There are beauty operators who specialize in this work, do nothing else.

Home dyeing is seldom satisfactory. One must find the right medium; a coloring agent that suits one head will wreck another. The applications must be made properly. Proper and salt hair is particularly difficult to dye.

One saves time and trouble by seeking the services of an experienced and conscientious specialist.

Young daughter should be taught to put her clothes on hangers, her shoes on trees, gloves in the glove box. Early training remains with one all through life.

The slovenly girl never has that fresh look that makes radiant the young lady who is not only fastidious about her person but takes fastidious care of her wardrobe. Beauty is always in the making, and the "making" should start

Wife Has Sulky Mate

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I have a husband who sulks sometimes for days at a time. He will be very nice for almost a month and then sulk, and we don't know why he does it.

We have children growing up, and I often hear them whisper to each other, 'Daddy's mad again!' He is very good in other ways, but he is sulky. I have tried every way to get him to snap out of it, but nothing seems to work. I have tried to ignore it and go on as if he was his normal self, but when I speak to him he either grunts or will not answer at all. I am so fed up with it all. ANNABELLE.

His really is a case for a psychiatrist, Annabelle. Your husband cannot feel very happy when he sulks for weeks on end. But why does he do it? Maybe it makes him feel important, satisfies that inner thing, his ego.

It might, of course, be incipient dementia praecox, or schizophrenia. Have you ever consulted a physician about it? Sometimes folks are ill and we think it is devilishness, and then again, sometimes they are ill and we think they are ill.

The only thing I can think of that might help is to be so nice and companionable to him when he is normal that he won't be tempted to relapse into the sulks. Make him feel he is centre of your existence. You and the children do everything you can think of to make him happy. And if all fails —well, "what can't be cured must be endured," but I'd even study psychology or consult with someone near to you who has before I'd give up. It is miserable for you and for the children. Talk with his mother, if she is living. You may get a clue to his behaviour from her that will help.

JUST DONE: After a boy has been introduced to a girl she speaks first, and may talk to him at a dance. However, she is usually go up to the girl if they want to talk, although she greets them first. Yes, it is perfectly proper to wear a wash dress at a house date.

WORRIED: The thing to think of now is to protect the coming child and to do whatever you can to bring real disgrace upon your families. I think marriage is the best course, for you love each other. You will have to tell your parents, of course .

x x x

THANK YOU and a first cousin to Dr. Watson, both in love. The girl's parents opposed to the match and the relationship. I think you two should wait until you have finished college before you think of marriage. You were planning on that anyway, were you not? Then you have time to get toward each other at the end of that time. you should consult a physician. If you are healthy and there are no inheritable diseases in either family, it may be best that you remarry somewhere that the law permits.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

Ring-brace for fruit trees

Too bountiful a crop of fr... will often cause a fruit tree to split at the crotch. This is an ever-present danger during a wind storm when the tree is heavily laden. Sometimes limbs of a tree bearing an extra heavy amount of fruit are propped up with planks or timbers to prevent breaking where the limb joins the trunk.

Less unsightly and more efficient than the use of planks or timbers for bracing a fruit tree is the ring-brace shown in this garden-graph. This can be placed effectively where three or more limbs need bracing.

The ring is placed midway between the branches, and heavy wire is run from each branch to the ring, as...illustrated. Where the wire goes around the branch it should be run through a section of rubber hose so the wire will not cut the bark.

Curb Child Who Seeks Own Way

Proper Training Is Factor in Making Young Obey

By GARY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

"DEAR DR. MYERS: — Our adopted six-year-old boy is very headstrong. We have had so many scenes with him, when we find out, that we find it easier to let things slip by and let him have his own way, rather than make him do as we want him to do. He bothers us and talks back and then goes into a tantrum. We have spanked him, but it is no more than it seems to hurt him. If we are riding and he wants to go a certain place or if we are out visiting and he wants to go home, and we don't care to, he makes such a scene and fuss that we simply have to do as he wants. This is only one occasion. We are having them all the time."

This is one of the most vivid accounts of a common problem I have ever read. My answer to this mother, in part:

One simple rule, if you can follow it in the letter, will by-and-by help solve your problem: Never do a thing which your child, by his anger, tries to force you to do. You will find this rule very hard to follow, I suppose few parents observe it wholly. Put yourself into that child's place. Probably you do just as he does. He has learned that when you do not let him have his way, he can, by effecting a scene, force you to his bidding. Should you continue so to obey him you will have a sorry time of it later.

Work on Yourselves

According to your account, your main problem is not to work on the child but on yourselves. "Try never to back or yield at him. Think through ways of reducing commands, therefore punishments. Clearly draw the line between the things he is to do. Except for a things he is to do. Except for a few routine matters, do not try to get him to do things by force; do not even command him; request. Instead, and set the stage so he will choose to co-operate. Be very heartily approve him when he does. But when you say "No" or "Don't," be very sure you should say it, show you mean it by your character, have a spine. Be ashamed to be a jellyfish. If "No" or "Don't" mean that he should not be doing something and he doesn't cease promptly, immediately meet the punishment should follow. By this time you should be able to find effective substitutes for physical pain, such as isolation or assignment to do dull routine in a certain place where he can be seen (to be discouraged from further mischief) for an hour or so.

I do wish I might persuade parents to make the child the exacting of NO about as soon as he begins to toddle, when this matter settled permanently.

THE WORLD'S WANDERERS

Tell me, thou Star, whose wings of light,
Speed thee in thy fiery flight,
In what cavern of the night
Will thy pinions close now

Tell me, Moon, thou pale and gray
Pilgrim of Heaven's boundless way,
In what depth of night or day
Seekest thou repose now

Weary Wind, who wanderest
Like the world's rejected guest,
Hast thou still some secret nest
On the tree or billow?

—Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Use Diet in Treating Diseases of Kidneys

Clendening Outlines Special Menu to Be Served Victims of This Ailment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SUMMER MONTHS are good ones for the kidney invalid because the skin takes the burden of the kidneys to a certain extent. Some forms of kidney disease have been cured by going to a desert climate such as New Mexico or Arizona or to Egypt. Summer climate in the United States closely approximates Egypt, so the nephritic may feel more comfortable at this time.

In the dietetic treatment of kidney diseases, the principle considerations are to control the intake of salt, fluid and protein. In some cases the kidney cannot excrete salt or water and dropsy results, and in many cases there is a distinct disturbance of protein nutrition. When the kidney is unable to excrete nitrogen it is natural that we should cut down the nitrogenous foods in the diet. This means very largely the protein foods, such as meat, eggs, etc.

Nowadays the salt-free diet, in which no salt whatever is used, is thought to be extremely rigorous and is substituted by a salt-poor diet. It is almost impossible to make up a diet which excludes salt entirely.

Diet in Severe Phase

In the fairly phase of treatment of severe nephritis a diet is allowed is used, which is as near dry, salt-free as high, protein-free as is safe to give:

BREAKFAST: One-half slice toast, one egg, one tea spoon sugar.

LUNCHEON: One-half slice toast, two-thirds cup cream soup, one-half square butter.

DINNER: One-half slice toast, one glass milk, one pat butter, one egg.

Later a diet such as follows can be used with benefit in practically all cases of kidney damage:

BREAKFAST: Grapefruit juice, French toast (dry), syrup, baking powder biscuits with jelly, coffee with sugar but no cream.

LUNCHEON: Brown bread, baked lima beans, head lettuce salad with Thousand Island dressing, stewed fruit, milk.

DINNER: Fruit cocktail, chicken en casserole, mashed potatoes, beet, hot rolls and one pat butter; green salad (or vegetables) with French dressing, bananas and cream, milk.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

O. B. A.: "(1) Is it an indication of serious kidney disease when urine, looking at it with the naked eye, looks somewhat cloudy and contains numerous tiny hair-like particles and tiny white specks and other fine sediment? (2) Would it be extremely rigorous kidney cause such a condition?"

Answer: (1) Cloudy in the urine are physiological under certain dietary conditions and do not indicate any kidney disease whatever. The substances for which the doctor tests for disease in the urine are albumin and sugar, do not appear to the naked eye. The kinds of things which you describe you speak suggest a bladder or urethral disorder rather than kidney trouble. (2) Dropped or fallen kidney does not usually cause any change in the urine whatever.

Job Increase for Women Seen

By Dental Press

MRS. CATHERINE FILENE SHOUSE, chairman of the board of directors of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, predicts that jobs will be available for 25 per cent more college graduates desiring positions before the end of this year.

Mrs. Shouse believes that the present day girls are realistic and are looking at work as a career. They are constantly investigating opportunities for women in all branches—artists, creative; scientific, marketing and mechanical. Some graduates are fitting for a desired, according to Mrs. Shouse, by securing a broad background of knowledge concerning organizations doing such work. They can expect increasingly definite results, but are willing to work up gradually to their coveted goals.

Of interest to women between the ages of 25 and 45 in business is the statement of Mrs. Shouse, who says that there are more women of this age in industry today than younger women. Contrary to the belief that it is difficult for the older women to obtain employment, skill and experience are recognized in the business world, and there is a constant demand for this type of worker. The young woman seeking her first job, on the other hand, must meet and overcome the lack of experience handicap.

Any college-trained woman, however, declares Mrs. Shouse, can always find a job to suit her services, if she tries. It may be necessary for her to begin in a low-paid position, and she should be prepared to do this, pointing out to the prospective employer exactly what goal she has in mind and how she is gaining experience which will build toward the job she wants eventually.

TRY CURRIED SHRIMP AS JAVANESE EAT IT

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Host

Curried Shrimp — Javenese Style
Green Salad
Coffee Ice Cream Fresh Fruit
Cheese Crackers

This recipe was given us by Mary Margaret McBride, writer and radio columnist. She thinks women easily get into cooking ruts and that they should often try out new and unusual recipes for the good of their souls and the family appetites. This is a recipe which she or one of her friends picked up on a recent trip enjoyed, perhaps, in some out of the way restaurant.

Today's Recipes

CURRIED SHRIMP — JAVANESE STYLE — One-half onion, one tablespoon butter, one-half tablespoon curry powder, one small tablespoon flour, one cup milk, one can shrimp or equivalent amount fresh. Brown onion and fry in butter until golden. Add curry to this, then flour. Blend and cook a few minutes. Add one cup of milk, simmer until thick and smooth. Add shrimps, heat. Serve in timbale style, which is made as follows. One tablespoon bacon fat or substitute, one-half cup raw rice, one small onion, one-half tomato or canned equivalent, salt, water. Melt fat in aluminum frying pan. Add raw rice and stir until pale yellow. Add small onion and tomato cut up. Stir and then add boiling water. Add salt to taste. Don't stir any more. When water is absorbed, add more. Cover and let simmer. If necessary add more water until rice is tender. Keep warm until needed.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Buying Fish

To determine the freshness of fish, see that the gills are red, the skin clear and tight, the eyes clear and bright and the flesh free from too strong an odor, the flesh looks clear and is firm to the touch.

Summer Curtains

Many women like to give their windows a new, cool look for summer. For those of you who like to sew, here are some timely suggestions from Good Housekeeping Institute for making up your windows for summer.

Nothing looks cooler than crisp chintz or linen. And nothing is more practical than the new cottons that are sun-and-tub fast.

In making draperies for a standard window, use one and one-half times the length for each drapery. For a window about 30 inches wide, use a length of 45 inches. To obtain this measure from the top of the casing to the floor and then add you allow for one hem and heading.

If your house is well shaded, you may like your curtains more opaque. But if it gets strong sun, be sure to line the draperies to protect the fabric.

A decorative and inexpensive finish is obtained by the use of pale white voile, with a draped valance of plain chintz. Trim both the valance and the curtain with the same ball fringe. A still simpler treatment will need three yards for each valance. Be sure to hang the valance on a separate board.

Marshmallows Tell

If you are giving a party announcing your own or your friend's engagement, take the marshmallow for each guest and on it paint the face, using colored pencils. Slightly dampen the back of the marshmallow and place it on folded paper doll. Arrange veil of tulle and write announcement on inside of card.

Poems That Live

SUMMER INVOCATION

O gentle, gentle summer rain,
Let not the silver lily pine,
The drooping lily pine in vain,
To feel the, first sweet touch of thine,
To drink thy freshness once again.
O gentle, gentle summer rain!

In heat and landscape quivering late:
The cattle pant beneath the tree
Through parching air and purple skies
The earth looks up, in vain, for thee!

For thee—for thee, it looks in vain
O gentle, gentle summer rain.

Come thou, and brim the meadows streams,
And soften all the hills and mist,
O falling dew! From burning dreams,
And Earth shall bless thee yet again.
O gentle, gentle summer rain
—William Cullen Bennett.

Danny's Shopping

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Danny had always been a most generous brother but he was a little shy as far as girls were concerned and Enid supposed that when he did fall in love it would be very very hard fall.

Notwithstanding his many and varied gifts to Enid she was surprised beyond bounds when on a certain day in early spring an assortment of feminine apparel arrived such as would quicken the heartbeat of any young man.

"It's nothing" he told her, "just a few duds. Your wardrobe was a bit shabby—wasn't it?"

Enid was speechless. Some of her gowns were scarcely a month old.

"Johnnie was telling me that his wife sells all the smart-set clothes—so—" Danny stammered and turned red.

"To whom?" prompted Enid, sympathetically, as she knew how hard it was for Danny to get out any of his good ideas in words.

"Well—a—there's a Miss Marlow who—who has a set of girls that do concert work. They go out as guests to dinners, receptions and musicals and have to look very good on appearance, Johnson thinks they are a rather deserving Dock," added Danny.

A day or two later Miss Marlow arrived to look at Enid's costumes. She was tall and fair and seemingly a most capable girl. Enid liked her at once. She was interested in her work and explained her about it.

"I have six lovely girls," said Miss Marlow, "all as clever as can be. We work on the co-operation plan, sharing profits. I buy all the clothes, as I have good taste, they say, and we all have to put up as good an appearance as we possibly can and on a little money.

"We have a splendid engagement tomorrow night," Miss Marlow confided. "All of us are going to Lady Vanalstart's big dinner— just as guests, you know—but of course we will each do our little number before the evening is over."

"Oh!" exclaimed Enid. "I am so glad. My brother and I will be there. You will be sure to introduce me to your little beauty!" she added.

Miss Marlow smiled and said she would be delighted. They completed their bargain and it was not until Enid watched the girl signing a check that she knew that Danny had met the girl whom Danny had set his heart on. Miss Marlow were a wedding ring.

When Danny arrived home she told him all about Miss Marlow and said many flattering things about her.

Danny listened with a pleased air, absorbed everything, and seemed to be extraordinarily buckled up by the encounter.

"I wonder why she calls herself Miss Marlow and wears a wedding ring?" questioned Enid.

"Well—it seems she is married to a chap who is quite willing she should carry on until she gets her little band successfully launched. They need a leader for a few months yet.

"Danny," said Enid affectionately "I wish you could be finding some nice girl—like Miss Marlow. I could be much happier in marrying Tom if I knew you were settled in the girl way."

Danny only smiled.

ONLY LOVE LASTS

By Rosamond du Jardin

Dr. Graham's face was wide to the world. It openly had its problems, the progress of his patient there was satisfactory; but the recovery only a matter of time. But he happened to be in the neighborhood, and, providentially brought to mind the girl, Tobey. A fine girl, the doctor reflected.

Yet, when young Collins asked him, so precipitately, about the news of the girl, wanted to know how soon he could see her, he had felt that this was over, or at least in the form of being himself. He had never dreamed that he could have gone concerning those two. If that boy wasn't in love with George Livermore Graham down too old and ugly for anything else symptoms.

And Tobey's own manner done much to confirm his opinion of romance. He could forget the way her eyes lit up when he had first met her in town. And the way she had questioned him, eagerly, breathlessly, hanging on his answers. But apparently nothing had come of it. Nothing important, at least.

He had known Ned even longer—Edward Tobey, well enough, certainly, to be sure that Ned wasn't in the habit of going around starring fights if there was any honorable alternative. In only one minor respect did the doctor condemn the boy. He might, it seemed to the older man, have picked a less pugnacious girl. But perhaps he had had no choice in the matter either.

It wasn't until later that Doctor Graham heard Red Collins' version of the fight. He had left Mandy in the str o'clock train. So his departure had been quite as prejudiced as his arrival, if not more so. The doctor scowled reflectively, nudging his dusty coupe in between the battered gateposts that Richard Tobey had set back a century before.

Tobey was hanging clean wet garments out on the stretched across the yard and she glanced around inquiringly at the sound of his arrival.

The doctor hailed her cheerfully and went on into the house to see Julia. When he came out Tobey was taking the last pegged sheet from the hair that had fallen across her forehead in a bright cascade.

"Your mother's fine," he assured her. "I was over at the Hillside" and thought I'd pop. We'll have her up and around in no time."

Tobey smiled, but it was a rather small tired smile. There were faint shadows under the dark eyes. She said simply, "I'm glad."

For just a moment the doctor hesitated. He didn't like to pry, but he was tremendously interested in Tobey. His patients were also his neighbors and friends; he could feel his duty only half accomplished when he had ministered to their physical welfare.

His tone grew bantering, but his eyes probed Tobey's with kindly earnestness. "What kind of a reception did you give your young man, anyway? First he digs my footsteps, waiting a whole hour as can see you. Then no sooner do I get rid of him by giving him my permission than he cuts out of the house and runs off with the

"But there's his job in Chicago," Tobey pointed out. "He couldn't just stay away from that indefinitely."

"The doctor said thoughtfully, "No-o, I suppose he couldn't stay away from his work. That might hardly occurred to me. To tell the truth, I was kind of inclined to believe that Pracas he had Saturday night might have had something to do with his sudden departure."

CHAPTER XIII

"You mean—" Tobey's eyes widened incredulously and, it seemed to George Graham, were actually on the verge of emitting little sparks of scorn and indignation—"you mean you thought for a moment that Red was afraid of Artie Wilson?"

The doctor, who had thought nothing of the sort, did not take advantage of the slight pause to deny it.

And Tobey went on. "Oh, but that's too absurd! Why should you think anything so ridiculous? That had nothing to do with Red's going—nothing whatever! I was the one who told him to. There was nothing, really, to keep him here. There was no—no reason for staying."

So that was the way things stood! Abruptly and with uncanny accuracy the doctor began to understand. And with understanding came ungrudging respect. Red had wanted to stay. He had probably wanted to marry her. But she hadn't been willing to compromise with life even to the extent of letting the man who loved her take over the responsibilities she felt were hers. That was very young and gallant and foolish.

No hint that sudden comprehension had been vouchsafed him allowed in his demeanor. He managed to sound a trifle sheepish, admitting that he should have known better than that." And he added, his tone narrowing a little, "You had a good time, though, didn't you? Seems to me I heard that somewhere."

Tobey nodded, unable for the moment to speak. Vestalia's face, the thick gray carpets, the shining showcases, the orderly spaciousness and beauty of the store swept over her in an overwhelming tide. She closed her eyes and opened them again on a blurred world. Her smile wasn't quite steady, but it was there. "I guess you could—didn't stay away from it indefinitely, either."

The doctor nodded that he had suspected something of the sort. "Well, I'm glad of that. You think you can line up something else?"

There was such sincere interest and sympathy in his manner, such kind friendliness in his smile, that Tobey found herself with something akin to relief pouring out the whole story of her troubles. Telling him things she wouldn't have dared tell Julia. Things that had been on a blurred world. Her quills wasn't quite steady, of course, but the words—could

Presentations Made To Newly Married Victoria Couple

Mr. And Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse Recipient of Lovely Gifts

Victoria—On Sunday evening June 14th a large miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Waterhouse in honor of their son and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse. About one hundred were present when after the opening of the gifts both Florence and Gordon thanked their friends for the lovely presents. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows." Following is the address:

How happy we all feel as we gather here tonight to offer congratulations and best wishes to two of our most popular young people.

How glad we are too that your wedding has not taken you from our midst but rather added a new home to our neighborhood.

You, Florence, were born, went to school and Sabbath School in our midst and we cannot speak too highly of the many services you have rendered the community. Your bright and sunny disposition, your willingness to help others and your sterling qualities as a daughter in a home have all been noticed by the community.

We have known and respected you Gordon and we feel that you are to be especially congratulated upon your choice of a wife.

We all feel that success and happiness will be your good fortune and we hope and pray that God's richest blessings may be showered upon you in your future life among us. May you also once were two and now are one, find in your love a higher, nobler purpose than ever since has conception of.

May life by ten your griefs divide Since bravely you are two to bear them

And joys be ten times multiplied For cheerfully you two will share them.

With these wishes we ask you to accept these gifts each one carrying with it a little message of love and hope and good cheer for a bright and happy married life.

Signed on behalf of the community, Margaret Fox, Kathleen Montgomery.

The same evening the Victoria Athletic Club also made a presentation of a lovely silver tea service.

Address follows:

Dear Florence and Gordon: ,

Once again the members of the W.A.C. have met together to extend our congratulations and best wishes to two of the most valued members.

We feel Florence that we owe a great deal of gratitude to you and your family for the wonderful times we have so often spent in your home and as long as we have known Gordon he has always in true sportsman like manner tried to promote the welfare of our club.

This happy occasion has an extra ray of gladness in the fact that you are to make your new home so near the very spot where the first organized athletic club was organized.

As a slight token of our appreciation of you both as members we ask you to accept this gift trusting it may ever bring back pleasant memories of the wonderful times we have all spent together and we are still looking forward to having you often with us in our social gatherings.

Wishing you all kinds of good luck happiness, and prosperity as you

Fine Choice of Attractions Offered by Nearby Centres On Dominion Day Holiday

Perhaps for the first time in a decade, residents of the city and surrounding district will have a variety of entertainments to amuse them over the Dominion Day holiday.

While it is expected that a large number will pursue their ordinary holiday diversions at camp and stream, the greater majority will avail themselves of the attractions offered in nearby centres. Tweed is holding a mammoth Old Boys' Reunion that will extend until July 4th inclusive, with sports, civic functions and a general entertainment will cater to the many thousands of "old boys" and residents of the district who will no doubt attend the function.

Brighton is staging a similar event, and has gone to great expense in furnishing a suitable reception for its man- sons and daughters who are expected to return to the scenes of their childhood for the occasion.

Perhaps the outstanding attraction, at least to lovers of nautical sports and aquatics, will be the Gold Cup race being held in conjunction with the annual Regatta staged on Friday by the Prince Edward Yacht Club in the waters of the Bay of Quinte off Picton.

Outstanding speed-boat drivers, some of whom hold world records will compete in this racing classic of the waves.

With the weather-man expected to co-operate with some real summer weather, residents of the city and district will in all likelihood forget the affairs of state, world and other minor worries and avail themselves of the opportunity to celebrate the Dominion holiday in royal style with so many forms of entertainment and diversion to choose from.

Farewell Sermons Delivered by Rev. R. R. Nicholson

Tweed (Special)—Rev. R. R. Nicholson, pastor of Tweed United Church for the past six years, who leaves early in July to take up his new work in Kemptville, Ont., preached on the theme "What I See," Sunday, June 26th. There was a good attendance at each service.

At the morning service the pastor preached on th ethem "What I Believe". Clearly scholastic of his years and preceding generations believe in the Fatherhood of God. Behind all the natural phenomena there is a master mind. This universe of which our earth is but a tiny fragment did not come into existence by chance. It is the result of a divine plan and a divine planner. God is far above us but He is very near to us, and has revealed himself to us through His son.

At the evening service Rev. Nicholson preached on the subject "Why I believe in Jesus Christ". He referred to the fact that six year ago he began his ministry in Tweed United Church, preaching on the theme "The attractive power of Christ", and desired to conclude his ministry using a similar theme, "I believe in Jesus Christ," said the preacher, "because of the perfection of His character, because He bestows the gift of eternal life and because He satisfies the desires and longings of the human heart."

Good congregations were present at both services. The choir at the morning service sang "I came not to call the righteous", solo by Audrey Joyner; at the evening service "The day is past and over," duet obligato Mrs. Dales, Mrs. Grier. The ladies' trio, Mrs. Dales, Mrs. Connor, Mrs. Grier sang "Saviour breathe an evening blessing."

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tyendinaga East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. S. E. Winters on the afternoon of June the thirteenth. With the president in charge the meeting was opened by singing the Ode followed by repeating the Lord's prayer in unison.

The roll call was answered by "Where I Met My Husband," and five new members joined. The minutes were then read and approved and Mrs. R. Tucker and Mrs. J. Kimmerly were appointed delegates to the District Annual Convention to be held at the Tyendinaga Mohawk Reserve. It was also decided that those who had made articles from a yard of cotton were to take them for the display.

A very interesting demonstration "The Milky Way" was given by Misses Geraldine Mowers and Helen McKeown. The current events were read by Mrs. R. McMath. Mrs. J. Mowers took charge of the program consisting of a humorous reading, "Joe's Relations," by Mrs. O. E. Ashley; a paper on health was read by Mrs. A. Waddingham followed by a poem, "Old Mothers." Misses Doris and Delma Kimmerly sang, "The Yellow Rose of Texas," and two more readings were given, "So Long as There Are Homes," by Mrs. F. Kimmerly, and "Poets are Needed a Lot of Loving," by Mrs. R. Tucker.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess and a dainty lunch was served.

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch? Soup? Dessert? Bread, meat, potatoes? Then you're getting constipated! You probably don't get enough "Bulk" And "Bulk" is the part of the stomach you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps a bowel movement.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great stomach-tonic, vitamin B. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and stay regular! Sold by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

Under the Stars is the place for a charming evening ensemble of white plaque dotted in black. The rounded bolero has a black velvet collar, the dress is cut low in back and front and has a clutter of yellow daisies as a corsage. The skirt is very full at the hem.

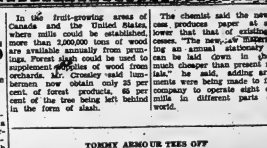
GET NEW PAPER FROM PRUNINGS



Chemist Experts Promise Good Product From Forest Slash Too

Toronto, June 23—(CP)—Development, of what is termed a new and revolutionary paper making process, in which fruit-tree prunings and forest slash are used, in announced by three Toronto research workers. A superior type of paper suitable for cigarettes, at present manufactured from linen rags, is produced under the new process.

T. L. Crossley, consulting chemist, and his co-experimentalist, H. B. Petersen and R. J. Hart, said in making the announcement that pulp from fruit-tree prunings and forest slash is peculiarly adapted to making the highest grades of paper. Details of the process were withheld but Mr. Crossley said that in semi-commercial production tests the wood was pulped without barking, chipping or grinding.

The chemist said the new process produces paper at a cost lower that that of existing processes. The new material, using an annual stationary crop can be laid down in the mill much cheaper than present materials," he said, adding arrangements were being made to form a company to operate eight of the mills in different parts of the world.

Increase Lead in American Loop to Four And One Half Games

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It probably would be considered treason to mention such a thing in Rhineland, but there is a strong suspicion abroad in National League circles that Cincinnati Reds might not look quite so good if their sport had not embroiled with the slumping of New York Giants and Chicago Cubs.

There's no detracting from the feats of Johnny Vander Meer, who won his ninth straight yesterday when the Reds whipped Pittsburgh 8-3 and who pitched one of Charlestatti's most persistent lizzies right out of Forbes' Field at the same time. The Reds had lost 21 straight in the Pittsburgh Park before they chalked up their first victory there since August, 1936. And, like Johnny, such young fellows as Frank McCormick and Jeal Goodman have done a lot toward changing the Reds from a half-baked outfit into a pennant contender.

On the other side of the argument however, are these facts: Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh six times since June 4. The Reds fifty then, have won 14 of their last 20 games and have climbed to a spot only 1 game behind the League-leading Giants.

New York's best spurt was right at the start of the season. 18 victories in the first 21 starts. The Giants may lie in a June slump and lose four. If either could get the pace they set during those streaks, Cincinnati hardly could be in the running. But while the Reds were on the upgrade, the Giants have been playing about .500 ball while the Cubs have won 7 of their last 12.

Both of these slumps can be fairly explained by injuries. The Cubs didn't get the old Hack hoped from Dean and is addition have had to get along for a time without "Sparkplug" Pepper Martin. The Yanks season of Burgess Whitehead and the permanent injury to Joe Moore of the Giants plenty of which the acquisition of Jack Kampouris and Babe Dahlgren may have settled.

While Vander Meer was pitching his six-hit ball at Pittsburgh yesterday and McCormick, Goodman and Ival Goodman were supporting him with heavy hitting, the Cubs were battering from Bill Lee's offerings and dropped 1 1-3 games behind the Reds.

Lon Warneke limited Chicago to seven blows while the Cards bombed fell on Tex Carleton for seven runs in the third, when Pepper Martin blasted a homer with two aboard.

In the American League, Cleveland's Indians increased their lead to 4 1-2 games over the idle New York Yankees as they eked out a 5-4 decision over Detroit. A five run blast including homers by Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner, got the game in the second.

An exciting ninth inning in which Marvin Owen stole home and Odell Hale Rip Radcliff batted in homer with two aboard enabled Chicago White Sox to beat out St. Louis Browns in the day's other game.

The Eastern Clubs in both Leagues were rained out.

NAT. GROCERS WIN IN OVERTIME OVER NAPANEE

Victory Places Grocerymen in Third Place in Loop

GAME GOES 10 FRAMES

Three Hurlers Used by Winners in Tight Tussle

Coming from behind Hal Kemp's National Grocers nine turned apparent defeat out of the fire in the Napanee Mic Macs with a belated ninth inning splurge, that netted them three runs, and continued into overtime to win over the Napanee nine by a 12 to 11 score in a Belleville-district softball loop tussle at Coleman Park last evening. The victory elevated the "grocery lads" into sole possession of third place in the standing.

The Mic Macs pounced on the offerings of three Belleville moundsmen to move into a comfortable lead early in the game and were out in front to the tune of 9 to 2 in the seventh. A five run rally in the eighth, coupled by a trio of runs in the ninth, elevated the "grocery boys" into a tie, Ed. Denis' timely hit in the tenth giving the homesters the much coveted run and victory. Skipper Kemp sent Rosenson, former Lindsay hurler to the mish but Manager Killorin's Napanee swatsmiths showed little respect for his offerings, as they did for Jim Hunter's, who followed him, Freddie Vaisi finishing the piece and getting credit for the home town victory as the "grocer boys" teamed up on the hickory in the latter stages to drive Hawley and Rombough, the starting Napanee hurlers from the hilltop, while Gord Curry, the third visiting moundsman for the Mic Macs had the untimely luck of forcing in the tying run, after he had been filled to capacity by the homesters in a batting spree.

St. Denis Leading Hitter

St. Denis was the leading hitter for the hobnesters, while Henn, St. Louis, Bevings and Binfield came through with timely thngles in the latter innings. Stinson, Groome and Callaghan wielded potent bats for the visitors, as they assumed the offensive in the early frames. Four games are scheduled for the remainder of the week in the league, this evening the Cotton A.C. meeting the Belmonts at Coleman Field and then journeying to Napanee on the morrow. The National Grocers meet Point Anne this evening, while tomorrow night the Big Book-McCray vs Belmonts.

The line-ups: Napanee—Grooms, Miller, Stinson, Murphy, Geo. Curry, Thompson, Callaghan and Hawley, Rombough, and Gord Curry p. National Grocers—St. Denis ss; Henn 3b; Bevings 2b; St. Louis c; Tuttle and Poitner c; Jenkinson lf; Hannah lb; Sandfield rf; Robeson. Hunter and Vaisi p.

"WEST ENDERS" WIN KI-Y TITLE

Defeat Tuf-Benders in Final Game For Juvenile Championship

The "West Enders" were crowned the city Ki-Y League juvenile softball champions as the result of their 15 to 14 victory over the "Tuf-Benders" in the finals of the Juvenile Ki-Y softball played at Queen Mary School grounds last evening. The "Tuf-Benders" won the "A" section of their respective group while the "West Enders" took similar honors in the "B" group which necessitated a group playoff of which the "West End" nine emerged victors and city juvenile pitchdelers.

The squads battled at practically even terms throughout the early stages of the game only to have the West End nine push six runs across the home plate in the sixth frame to take a commanding lead. Facing a 13 to 5 disadvantage in the last inning, however, the "Tuf-Benders" rallied to score nine runs in the ninth inning only to come out one short of knotting the count in a last ditch rally. Fergus Hall hurled for the now-champion "West Enders" while Mike Tomaso pitched for the "Tuf-Benders." The game terminated the current season in Ki-Y softball circles, other group winners having been declared without play-offs having been necessary.

The lineups:

West End: Rouse, Ellis, Scott, Hall, Bennett, Ingram, Sword, Burns and Reddick.

"Tuf-Benders": Tumaso, Lepore, A. Cracy, Burley, Moon, Brennan, W. Crosby, Thompson and Gibbons.

Score by innings:

West End	040 106 102—15 runs
Tuf-Benders	100 000 003—14 runs

New York, June 29.—(AP)—If there is any doubt in your mind as to which punch really did for Schmeling take another look at the fight pictures . . . They'll convince you Max was just about out when Louis belted him into the ropes—Several seconds before the much-discussed "kidney punch" landed . . . Carl Hubbell's kid brother, (he's a right-hander) has sprouted a soup strainer and is doing all right with the Reds of Davids . . . Golfer Ralph Guldahl's wife makes him walk the family pets every night after dinner . . . How these Giants are missing Jo Jo Moore!

Everybody is giving it the old Collitch try. Tony Galento (knocking out Nathan Mann) said: "I done it for my kid". . . Max Baer says he'll finish Louis for his. . . . An Navy "done it" for their coach . . . Joe Louis, an out and out pug is the only one who'll admit he did it for the cold cash—approximately $400,000 worth. . . .

Nine straight for Johnny Vander Meer and try to match (ten off) . . . Don Giovannia, a Greek heavyweight, flew in yesterday on an Italian passport . . . He wouldn't consent to change his front handle to Johnny for sports page purposes . . . Since Hubbell joined the Club back in 1928, he has seen 119 pitchers come and go on the Giants.

Los Angeles yesterday entered the bidding for a Louis-Baer joust in the fall . . . Promoter Tom Gallery is working through Mead Manager of Henry Armstrong . . . The coasters are willing to guarantee Mike Jacobs a "cut" of $200,000 but Mike probably will have to have more than that.

Johnny Vander Meer, Reds—Set back Pirates, 8-3, with six hits, fanning six and walking only two for ninth straight victory.

Rip Radcliffe and Marv Owen, White Sox—Radcliff hit ninth inning homer with two on and Owen stole home as Fox edged out Browns 10-9.

Pepper Martin and Lonnie Warneke, Cardinals—Martin drove in while Warneke tamed Cubs, 9-3 four runs with homer and single, with seven hits.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

"If he, hi he, it's off to work they go" and we don't mean the Seven Dwarfs, but we have in mind the senior aerials clubs in the Bay of Quinte League are about to give the Bellville entry, what is commonly known as "the works." The rumour is rife, that the "Y" is out to effect the elevating of the Belleville baseballers into an intermediate "A" rating. Although our operator No. 22 down Picton way was not informed as yet, we cannot imagine the story or at least the originators made its what is commonly known in the sports realm as a Cockeyed Yarn. Hapless Frankly the entire story reminds us of a child about to get a licking from big daddy and commencing to blubber and cry before the god he owes so much as applied to the conventional vulnerable spot.

Our grapevine service from Picton goes on to say that the Cobdenville outfit has already approached Picton relative to absorbing the latter. Belleville Bay of Quinte League cleverly, the O.B.A.A. the only remaining "A" circuit with the remainder being similar to the type would relish their intermediate "B" rating. When the Bay of Quinte League was formed during the Belleville entry was the lone representative in the senior league set-up and even today is the only senior club operating in the baseball realm owing to lack of interest and inadvertance before the Bay of Quinte League. At any rate read without fear of contradiction the Sunday issue of a prediction—"any attempt by the Kingston Elmers or Picton clubs to elevate the Belleville intermediate at this particular stage of the game will result in the local club taking up its baseball offering and donning the golf togs forthwith." If such should be the case, Belleville baseballers would be dealt the final knockout punch, and would be counted out for years to come.

The sponsoring of a baseball club in Belleville this season has been anything but a successful venture, only a few interested persons really taking an interest. There has been the hopes and visions of a faithful few to see Belleville return to the Canadian Senior ranks and it is with this thought in mind some of the older baseball fans' dreams have clung tenaciously to the cause. Belleville was really represented in the junior ranks in 1937, but has endeavoured to tackle the comeback trail with the Hayes Bros.' team of veterans and untried Juniors in the Quinte this season.

Just because the local nine happened to get off to a fairly good start and the cream of the crop of five games does not mean they are or will dominate the league. The best of schedules is half over as yet and there is a league play-off to look forward to and almost anything may occur. Its only two of the former players now played in the Quinte loop have there been any signs of verbal differences in the respective clubs competing, or why all the belligerent bellyos at this early stage. If there is any? From this corner it would sound like pitcher Bob Bell, the heralded Wellington mainstayman who took up residence in Belleville last winter, lived up to expectations, there would hardly be an interval between rumours circulating around the Quinte league. In the meantime the clubs would be well-advised to play their baseball on the field and endeavour to forget the "ballyhoo" and "bunkum" and adopt a better brand of baseball, if possible.

Reports emanating from the Picton Yacht Club would lead one to believe some real high class power races can be expected in connection with their annual Cold Cup races. Incidentally something of a struggle is expected in the 22S class, between Cooper's craft and the Grey Goose. It seems the genial Cadieux back to a race held between these craft at Florida last winter, in front of 20,000 is expected to attend. Belleville could have been equally as good an attendance had the Canadian championship motor-cycle races been contested.

We understand Frank Sedore has been doing considerable fast think-ing since the O.A.B.A. denied Johnnie Bawden a transfer from Belleville to Point Anne. All the "remembrance" have to do is rename their club the Canada Cement Company Club of Belleville, where they receive their official mail, and affiliate with the O.A.B.A. though the Belleville and District Softball League to play intermediate "A" softball as a club and not only retain Bawden, but possibly sign other Belleville ball stars who are on the loose. And that's exactly what Skipper Sedore and his cohorts have done we hear.

Bill Cook of hockey notoriety, and Lew Hyman of Argo football and Toronto baseball fame, have been added to the "faculty" of the Ontario Athletic Commission's summer athletic camp at Lake Couchiching. They will teach the theories and elementals of their respective games to pastimes to gathered speeches, Vice-chairman Col. Critchley announced yesterday.

Yolande Vendey Mour, Czechoslovak's sensational pitching find, tacked his tenth consecutive win to the Local League victory to the most at the expense of the Pittsburg Pirates yesterday. It is recalled that the Reds won 4-3 yesterday. Vendey Mour's mound mate Bill Kachuke has convinced young Vendey Mour that he is quite able to pitch. McKechnie talked to Vendey Mour and Manager Bill Dutch made eventually convincing him that the lady of fancy is the "goat" of the opposition batters. Apparently Vendey Mour does not have to live in the footsteps of the Dean brothers and Paul Derringer Hayes all of whom were pitched out by hard and consistent batting efforts in attempts to establish pitching records which will eventually take the place of the Deans.

Now that "Dr Moyle" is in the hospital ex-champion Jimmie Braddock says he is willing to meet the Black Uhlan and come out of retirement. That's queer only a year ago Braddock sidestepped Schmeling actually writing and signed contract. In the meantime Max Farr is looking for a return bout.

CHARLEY SHEERIN PACES TORONTO TO 6-5 VICTORY

Infielder Has Five Hits, Four of Them Being Doubles

WINGS CLOSE IN

Bisons in Danger of Losing Their Third Place Slot

It's an old baseball maxim that a pennant contender must win the close ones, and if those Buffalo Bisons don't start winning a few extra-inning ball games, they're liable to find themselves not only out of the race for first place but out of the International League's first division as well.

The Bisons, who threatened for a while to give Newark Bears a run for the league leadership, lost their sixth straight game, five of which have been extra inning contests, when they were beaten 6-5 in ten innings last night by Toronto Maple Leafs.

The defeat dropped the Bisons 11½ games back of the Bears who have rained out of their game with Baltimore. It also endangered their runner-up position as the third-place Rochester Red Wings blanked Jersey City 3-0.

Charley Sheerin was the cause of the Bisons' woes last night. The Toronto infielder, who was benched for not hitting came back against Ken Ash and Fatty Pacoda and walloped five hits, including four doubles, to pace Leafs to victory. His fourth two-bagger came with two out in the tenth and scored Flea Clifton from second with the winning run. Player-manager Jack Burns helped the Toronto cause with a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

The Red Wings moved within 3½ games of the Bisons as the veteran Al Johnson scored his sixth victory of the season. Johnson limited the Royals to seven hits and fanned five. He had a shutout until the eighth inning when Joe Benning tripled Sammy Bell home from first.

The Chiefs, who are only a half-game astern of the Red Wings, broadened their lead over the fifth place Giants to 1½ games. Earl Cook pitched two-hit ball and fanned ten while-vanishing the Giants.

SEA BISCUIT MAY NOT BE STARTER

Suffolk Downs' Racing Strip is Sea of Mud For Handicap

Boston, June 29 (AP)—Suffolk Downs' racing strip was a sea of mud today, and only the weatherman could say whether Sea Biscuit would start in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap this afternoon against War Admiral and eight others.

A continuing drizzle that has poured nearly four inches of rain fall on Boston since Sunday gave no sign of stopping, and the Biscuit's owner C. S. Howard reserved decision until the latest possible moment.

Rain or not track officials prepared for a crowd of 50,000 when the horses go postwards (about 4 p.m. E.D.T.).

Samuel Riddle's War Admiral, with Charley Kurtsinger up, was the favorite for the mile and an eighth route.

The Biscuit's owner was "on the fence." "If it keeps raining and the track remains sloppy, we'll run," he said, "but if it stops and track becomes hooking and sticky, he won't be in. Sea Biscuit can't do himself justice on a heavy track."

War Admiral and Sea Biscuit—the later with George Woolf in the saddle, replacing the injured Johnny "Red" Pollard of Lexington—each assigned top weights of 130 pounds each.

HERSHEY CLUB IN INT-AM LOOP

New Setup in Hockey League Has Eight Teams

New York, June 29 (CP)—Officials of the International-American Hockey League finally have decided to go along as one united circuit rather than as two loops combined for mutual convenience.

Reorganization of the circuit along conventional lines and formal admission of the Hershey, Pa., club, were the main items of business transacted at a league meeting here yesterday. Hershey tentatively accepted last spring, was given its franchise and made a member of the "western group," thus giving the circuit two four-club divisions.

When the old International and Canadian-American Leagues joined up a couple of years ago they retained their own sets of officers. Yesterday they picked Maurice Podoloff, of New Haven, Conn., former eastern division head, as President of the whole league, and elected John Digby Chick of Windsor, Ont., former International-League President, as Vice-President in charge of referees.

One other move was the appointment of former veteran winger Marty Pavelich of the Detroit Red Wings, as manager of the Pittsburgh Hornets, Detroit farm club. The league heads also decided to advance their season one week, starting the 1938-39 campaign Oct. 29 and ending it March 13.

MERE BAGATELLE IS BIG HISTORY

French Gardens Ready For Royal Visit Can Tell Many Tales

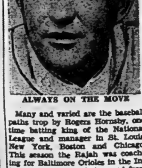
Paris, June 29 (CP)—Bagatelle, of course was the only possible choice for the garden party offered by Count and Countess Pozay Elisabeth by the French government for the visit to France now postponed owing to the death of the Queen's mother, to July 19.

Edith's Queen Victoria ask especially to be entertained here when she paid visit to Louis Philippe. The good Queen knew what she was about too, for no more beautiful, indeed, can be found in Paris. The 200-year-old reputation of Bagatelle's gay parties half of which were not so decorous as the modern affair promises to be) adds something to the glamor.

Bagatelle (which means trinket, or bauble) is an appropriate name for the beautiful little 18th-century chateau, which, except to other royal chateaux, is not much more than a pavilion. It proved expensive for Marie-Antoinette however, whether just 100,000 pounds to the Count d'Artois when he won his bet with her that he could rebuild the palace in two months. It was immediately named "d'Artois' folly," a name which sticks to this day.

With a good deal of cajoling the Bagatelle went into eclipse for many years until the Count d'Artois prepared that he could restore it in 64 days. It appeared as absurd to everybody that the whole court wagered he couldn't. He hired 300 workmen and scandalized Paris by grafting a regiment of Swiss guards to aetse all the vehicles transporting quarried stone and building materials on all the main routes to Paris, paying for it on the spot.

During the revolution Bagatelle housed a garrison of soldiers and later was turned into a "popular" amusement park. Finally in 1904 Bah nobleman, Sir Richard Wallace, bought the property, restored it in a magnificent "English garden" and willed the whole to his illegitimate son Sir Richard Wallace (who gave the celebrated "Wallace Collection" of French art to London).



Wallace lived there until his death in 1890 when the French government bought it back as an historical monument.

One claim to fame is the magnificent rose garden. Every year an international rose competition is held there and roses come from all countries of the world; even a few flowerpots from Canadian backgardens being sometimes entered.

"Cocoanut Grove"

There will be some fancy hi-links going on down at the Belle Theatre, for the new film, "Cocoanut Grove" is the swing-boy and slightly screwy story of how "name" bands are born.

Fred MacMurray heads a large cast of tried and proven favorites that include Harriet Hilliard, the radio thrush, as his romantic lead, Ben Blue, the Scandal Club Boys, Rufe Davis, Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiian Orchestra, Billy Lee and Dorothy Howe. The focal point of the story is the success of all young band leaders, the actual Cocoanut Grove in the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles, long called the "springboard of the stars". MacMurray leads a swing-crazy crew of musicians right across the continent, picking up talent here and there, until he finally makes the grade at the Grove.

Both MacMurray and Miss Hilliard play parts in the film that are almost the exact phototype of their real lives. The tall star actually barnstormed the country for several years before he was "discovered" by the movies, while Miss Hilliard, of the same name, is the wife of Ozzie Nelson and sings with his band. And that is why the new film is different from the usual musical comedies. It's a down-to-earth screwy, but at the same time sincere story of the swing bands originate.

"Cocoanut Grove" has plenty of jitterbug stuff with Ha four new songs, "Says My Heart", "You Leave Me Breathless", "Cocoanut Grove" and "Dreamy Hawaiian Moon", the last named two composed by Harry Owens, the songster who wrote last year's hit number one, "Sweet Leilani", plus plenty of romance and heart appeal in the plot.

"Breathless Moments"

Twenty-five minutes of the world's most startling thrills are revealed in "Breathless Moments", a startling and highly entertaining film, with the running time description, details by the one and only Grahach McNamee, famed radio announcer on "I Likes Babies and Inflinks" will be presented on the same program.

"Stolen Heaven" Pleasing

A love-story of two young lovers caught in the cross-currents of their past indiscretions is at the Belle Theatre tonight and Tu s. "Stolen Heaven", Playing the leading role is Gene Raymond in Olympe Bradney, Paramount's vivacious importation from Paris, who is being hailed as the "first star of 1938".

"Change of Heart", 20th Century-Fox comedy hit which proves marriage 18 a laughing matter, is announced for the suspenseful feature attraction on the same program. A fine cast headed by Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, include Lyle Talbot, Delmar Watson and Jane Darwell. Wednesday and Thursday Day will be presented on the same program.

ROBOTS

With such data assembled from a number of observation stations it is already possible to make much more accurate forecasts than ever before.

Plans are already being made, he declared, to set up robot weather observatories in the South Seas and Poles, on mountain peaks, and on distant islands, near the equator to obtain data for forecasts for weeks in advance. Observations and send them by radio to Belleville for immediate retransmission to all parts of the world.

Automatic Weather Stations

Such automatic weather stations, which would make continuous records of atmospheric conditions, would be "steered" by electric battery, and would require only rare inspections by passing ships or airplanes visiting the Greys and Poles.

By the use of such instruments it would be possible for a radio weather station hundreds of miles away to contact the automatic weather observer, set it in action, and record its observations almost as easily as dialing a telephone number in a large city. The American meteorologist said.

Perils of Instruments

Should such an instrument be drifting on an ice floe or on a special platform or boat, in which case the atmospheric conditions during hurricanes or other storms —never before fully recorded—might be observed, it would be simple to determine its position at sea almost exactly by observing the directions from which its signals come at two or more stations on land, Dr. Gregg said.

BENNETT OPPOSES

The opposition leader also denounced the treatment accorded General Ormond appointed during the last Conservative regime as Superintendent of Penitentiaries. General Ormond was not a political appointment, he said, but was selected by an independent committee appointed by the civil service commission.

The commission had taken evidence from scores of convicts against Ormond without the latter knowing, who had testified against him. Later Ormond had been "grilled" for eight days by "three astute lawyers" who had recommended he be immediately dismissed, Mr. Bennett said.

Commission "Ventured"

In the Buck case the commission had "ventured" five years after, to say the inquiry conducted by three penitentiary officials. General Ormond, inspectors J. D. Dawson and W. H. Craig, had been "dishonest." The report of the Royal Commission had been reached without hearing examined any witnesses of the men present at the rioting. Mr. Bennett said, and in the face of recorded evidence by Buck himself that at the time of the shooting he was making speeches that might be translated to urge on the rioters.

Mr. Bennett asked the Minister, how he could expect the House to act on a report that would charge with dishonest three men who had risked their lives in the way of duty in the Kingston riots, without having examined any witnesses of the actual event.

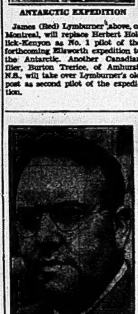
Border Plan Imperils Chaco Peace Parley



The collapse of the Chaco peace conference, which has been striving for three years to settle differences between Paraguay and Bolivia arising over the Chaco frontier, is feared, following the refusal of Paraguay to accept the settlement made by the conference. Delegates to the conference were fearful that the breakdown would lead to a fresh outbreak of war between the two countries. In a counter-proposal Paraguay has suggested a settlement which would give her the entire disputed area. The inset map shows (in black) the Chaco in relation to the surrounding countries.

Drew Demands Airforce Probe

Col. George A. Drew, right, has flung a challenge to Hon. Ian Mackenzie, left, Minister of National Defence, to hold an inquiry into Canada's air defences. In his challenge Col. Drew charged that Canada's war airplanes were obsolete and that present training methods employed by the R.C.A.F. were producing inadequately trained pilots.

BREAKS SPEED RECORD

Piloting a specially constructed airplane, built by aviation students, Clarence McArthur, above, famous speed and stunt flier of Tampa, Fla., established a new world's speed record of 307.077 miles per hour. The former record, officially clocked by the National Aeronautics Association, is for airplanes in the first category of light land crafts. The former record of 308.112 m.p.h. for 100 kilometers (62.1382 miles) was held by Maurice Arnoux, of Paris, France. McArthur flew the record-breaking airplane in his bare feet. This, he said, enabled him to get the feel of the ship's speed.

GUESS WHAT'S HAPPENING?

The dust flies as Ken Keltner, rookie third baseman of Cleveland Indians, slides into home plate, only to be tagged out by Gene Desautels, Boston Red Sox catcher, seen standing back with the ball in his hand and an odd expression on his face. There was quite an argument over the decision, and no wonder with a base like that floating around. However, the poor old umps must see through everything.

WIN OR LOSE, IT'S PRETTY HOT!

Petra and Demestreas, French dou bles team, and Make and Budge of United States, leave courts after a hard match.

Following a disastrous slump on the part of Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League, during which they slid from fourth to last place in the standings, a surprise move was made by the management when it was announced that Jack Burns, left, first baseman, would succeed Dan Howley, right, as manager of the club. Howley is only out as manager, however, and will be retained in a business capacity. Burns, a former major leaguer, whom Howley went to great lengths to secure this spring, will have full charge of the team on the field.

It Pays To Advertise

Another PROSPECT

● All the countless thousands who buy newspapers every day are potential customers of those who offer goods for sale to the consuming public.

Practically every merchant in Canada will lose customers in 1935—a law of business. This loss must be replaced or his business will die. The trader who loses customers, even to the danger point, can find them again and increase his turnover by good merchandising linked with advertising in the daily newspapers.

People are reading daily newspapers as never before, not from curiosity, but from need to know today the best things offered to supply their daily wants.

Lost markets, which are only other words for lost customers, are now being regained by you or acquired by others. You owe it to yourself and to your business to keep in touch through the newspapers every day with the Canadian buying public.

Notice, for instance, what she reads and what interest she takes in advertisements. You will probably find that, like a majority of home-makers, she gives close attention to the advertisements in her daily newspaper. Women want to know not only what to buy but where it can be bought and how much it costs. The daily newspaper advertisements give this information.

Remember, when you consider advertising for your business, that the majority of women buy from newspaper advertisements.

Hay, Gi, that's rite, Sid said.

And he yelled to Bert, Hay Bert, do you want to skate out to the park with us?

Sure, Bert said. And he skated down and Bert said That's fine, you can help us carry stones home, we're going to collect about a ton, and he'll help to carry them, wont we, Benny?

Creamery Print Butter Advances

Toronto, June 29. — Prices of the creamery prints moved ahead to feature trading at the opening of the Toronto produce market. Graded eggs strengthened.

Butter quotations to the retail trade jumped 1c to 2c per pound in creamery prints yesterday. No. 1, from previous range of 27c to 27½c, advanced to 28c; 28 score was quoted at a straight 27¾c, and 27 score, leading its past range of 26c to 25½c, went forward to 27c.

Dealers, offering Ontario No. 1 butter solids at 26½c, and colored at 26¼c, reported bids becoming increasingly scarce. This was attributed to better purchasers being well stocked up, because they have believed that better values were sound. Little or no business was done in solids yesterday.

Warm weather was said by a reliable Toronto authority to be currently bringing a few more 3's into the egg market here, but receipts were taken so well that quotations were kept about on the previous day's basis. Supplies showed a slight decline and bounced back to 22c for 3's and 31c for Cr's. Graded eggs sold readily at 20c. Total receipts for all classes of eggs were light.

Cheese Declines at Montreal

Montreal, June 28 (CP)—Cheese prices were lower while butter and eggs were steady on open produce markets.

Butter was 36c a pound for No. 1 Quebec in cartons or less, with lots to retailers at 36¼c to 36½c, and 35¾c and 37¼c for prints. Receipts: 4-360 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in cartons to us were 24½c for A-large, 23c for A-medium, 24½c for A and 22c for C. Receipts: 1,223 cases.

Cheese was 14½c a pound asked for Ontario white and colored, and 14¼c to 14 3-16c for Quebec white and colored. Receipts: 1,929 boxes.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford

By Financial Service

Many people are looking for the inevitable reaction and are staying out of the market until it takes place. The action of the market indicates, that, for the present at least, reactions will be short-lived and those who expect a severe setback from current prices may be grossly disappointed. It would appear as if the list as a whole will move higher before a technical decline will result.

Sentiment has definitely changed for the better and today traders are taking on commitments largely because they believe that the upward trend is upward. An active list has always attracted the "in and out" trader. In view of the tremendous volume done in the past eight or nine months, the advance in prices, in some cases of appreciable proportions, could cause no surprise.

The Trader in Barron's states that the momentum afforded by the recent rise in stocks is a noteworthy thin market, that bad ne weeks displayed a significant tendency to harden, that thereupon stampeded a rush of idle funds. The old Wall Street truths always indicated a policy of careful accumulation and distribution by market operators, specialists trust put close to $1,000,000 into stocks, cherry Montgomery Ward, by mid-week By then the "mysterious" advance pronounced under selling that was the more effective in the absence of formidable selling.

The explosive character of the rise and the abnormal volume of trading are the most unhealthy symptoms of the market. Not in the past has the first swing in a dynamic bull market got under way at such fashion. Too much too soon may have been discounted, because the public and the stock market has been saying that it wants stocks at any price. Sentiment in the market that would not go down could go up; however, that it has gone up, it must have solid meat on which to feed in the shape of unadulterated, bullish news.

It seems likely that world production of gold will gradually increase until it reaches a rate of 40,000,000 ounces annually—virtually twice the rate prevailing in the decade from 1920 to 1930.

English Viewpoint

A well known financier from London is now making a periodical visit to Canada, particularly in Canada. His contracts are the best and his knowledge of conditions is sound as our industries. Yesterday, he was discussing the paper industry with another man and I was listening in conversation, as happened to mention that he favoured the Abitibi Fire per cent. bonds and Howard Smith common as the pick amongst the paper securities.

FAMOUS JAN-RU TOMATOES BEING GROWN IN CITY

Despite reports to the contrary, there are specimens of the famous Jan-Ru tomatoes being grown in this district, according to William Fry, of 211 City Hall, who claims to have six well-developed plants in his garden. Seeds from this species at 244 William Street, that give indications of a bumper crop.

The new tomato reported to be the culmination of ten years' research work, is said to be almost seedless, and can be preserved in their entirety.

Planting in the latter fields the yield of which will be used in special canning purposes.

Local Bailiff Serves Papers Despite Ducking

The time-recognized phrase of "they always get their man" conventionally is used in connection with Canada's law enforcement body known as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, but Belleville still another arm of law enforcement apparently comes under that category, in the person of Alfred Harrow, local bailiff, who apparently holds no fear of his quarry, as was recently demonstrated when Bailiff Harrow braved a dousing of water and cool crack on the head before successfully serving process papers to a North Front Street resident.

Instructed to make a seizure on behalf of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, upon the above referred resident, Bailiff Harrow, accompanied by Constables Tommy Thorne, arrived shortly after sunup at the place of their destination, only to be greeted by buckets of water, thrown by the householder from the upstairs window upon the authorities. Mr. Thorne was the first to sprinkle the ducking, which was met with merriment on the part of the bailiff's crew, until he was recipient of a much larger quantity of water, that not only drenched the official, but knocked him down with its force, Mr. Harrow recovering a nasty bump on the head as he fell against the building.

Later, however, when supplemented by a local policeman, law enforcement body gained entrance to the home, and the bailiff's papers in question and seized household goods as instructed.

POLICE COURT

Five local young men appeared in the local police court room, Thursday morning, having been summoned by the non-payment of their 1937 poll tax, and waited in vain until Acting Chief Constable Harrison informed the quintette there would be no session of police court today owing to the absence of His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. The rate payers were thereupon instructed to return and face the above mentioned charges on the following day.

Two local men, who were arrested on a Toronto warrant issued on a charge of tampering with motors, in the non-support of their families, appeared before Dr. H. Bell, local justice of the Peace, and remanded in custody until Saturday's police court sittings, Acting Sergeant Fred Ioan brought the pair from Toronto on Wednesday afternoon, however.

No other arrests were necessary in the city during the present week, however.

FRANCO IS URGED

"the Spanish command has not been "Spanish" since it abandoned the rule that the flag covers the merchandise certainly cannot prevent in a struggle which has for its end the life and fortune of an entire people.

The Fascist spokesman denied that Lord Perth had "promised" that in any war or brought up the question of "Italian responsibility for Spanish war."

No doubt, said Gayda, the British Ambassador talked about Spanish affairs "with calm words" and "invited" the Italian government to help in finding a way to a understanding General Franco to change his aerial war policy."

BILL OF RIGHTS.

Minister Chamberlain will move to morrow.

The Army Council also has appointed a board of inquiry under Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, to investigate the source of the leakage of information.

This afternoon, Mr. Sandys, rising again to ask the Speaker, Captain R. A. Bernay, for guidance, said the astonished House that "in my capacity as a territorial officer I have received orders" to appear in uniform before this military court martial, to give an account of giving evidence."

"The question of how far it is permissible to compel a member of parliament to divulge a source of information which is being used by this House," Mr. Sandys added, "in these circumstances I submit to you, Sir, that it is a gross breach of the privileges of this house that I should be summoned to give evidence before this military tribunal. I accordingly ask you Sir, whether I have not made out a prima facie case of breach of privilege."

Present Age 70 And 65

The present age for compulsory retirement in the civil service is 70 for males and females though voluntary retirement may take place any time after 65. There is also provision in the present act for extension to 75 years by order-in-council.

Use of influence by civil servants to further ambitions of relatives for jobs in the service was also mentioned in the following recommendation: "No official or employee in the civil service shall make any direct or indirect recommendation or reference by letter or otherwise on behalf of any relative by blood or marriage, to have any direct or indirect participation in any competition, temporary or permanent appointment, promotion, classification or reclassification in which such relative is an applicant."

No Use of Maiden Name

Other recommendations in the committee's report were:

No married women shall be employed even temporarily—under her maiden name.

That the preference granted to war veterans shall apply when such persons are British subjects, are dependents of British subjects and who Great War.

GERMAN CONSUL

with cruelty to animals." He referred to the lions as "mosh eaten" despite the fact they "are better fed than Toronto's relief families."

When he reached the beavers' pool he remarked the "mosh exciting" part in them would be Hitler".

Mr. Kropp, after lodging the protest with the mayor, was reluctant to discuss the matter, other than to say: "Presumably Alderman Croft visited the zoo, a civic property, in his capacity as alderman. Presumably he spoke in that same capacity."

Council Cannot Act.

Commenting upon the protest, W. C. Angus, acting city solicitor, said that in his opinion the onus of correction or withdrawal of the remark does not rest with the civic administration but with Alderman Croft. "Council as a body has not made its remarks and is not an expression of council and is not an official matter," Mr. Angus said. "Therefore, the onus of correction or withdrawal would rest on the alderman himself."

Croft should "at least retract his statement," Alderman George Grandmaison said. "As long as we are associated with Germany we shouldn't insult their officials. Alderman Croft should see a doctor and get himself examined."

Liberal Member Comments.

"It's just a well-headed attempt by Hitler to stifle opinions about the persecution of Jews in other countries," said J. J. Glass, Liberal member for the city in the legislature for Toronto St. Andrew. "If Hitler did less disagreeable things in Germany nobody would refer to him in such a manner."

The remark was "very dirty", Hans Hesse, president of the German Club Harmonie proposed. The German Croft "roughly to take back." But Alderman J. R. Salsberg said he would put Chancellor Hitler "in a gorilla or monkey cage".
